NO EXACT LINE IS TO BE DRAWN AS HELP TO HITLER

SEP 13 1941

Washington Implies Berlin, Rome Warcraft Are in Danger Everywhere

TERM "DEFENSE AREAS" MIGHT COVER GLOBE

U. S. Definition Likely to Be Guided by Developments

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP)—High officials indicated today that Axis warships are in peril of attack by the United States Navy in any quarter of the seven seas to which they may extend their depredations.

No Exact Line Drawn

Indirectly but unmistakably, they made it plain that no exact line will be drawn on any chart to help Adolph Hitler decide where his submarines may operate with impunity and where their mere presence may invite the retribution promised in President Roosevelt's address of last night.

In that speech, the chief executive said he had instructed the Navy to sink on sight any Axis U-boats or surface raiders encountered in waters considered important to the defense of the United States. He did not say where the zones began or ended.

He did say that attack had followed attack and that the incidents were not isolated "but part of a general plan."

He had new evidence today. The State Department informed him that another ship had been torpedoed near Iceland, the freighter Montana, owned by an American firm, but registered in Panama. The latest reported sinking, it appeared, occurred about 12 hours before Mr. Roosevelt enunciated his policy of sinking on sight any Axis raiders.

Raiders are sinking ships in "widely separated areas," he asserted—and by this phrase let it be known that "defensive water" zones could not be narrowly defined.

Today, reporters plied Secretary of State Hull with questions on that point. He replied that Germany, by her actions, would herself determine the boundaries of those zones. The Nazis, he said, were engaged in a movement for world-wide conquest, and the problems of American defense had to be regarded from that point of view.

He spoke obscurely and did so with obvious intent. Nevertheless, his words were plain warning to Berlin that attacks on the shipping of any flag anywhere on the globe held possibilities of American retaliation.

It was the equivalent of saying that the American government was reserving judgment as to where its defense zones may lie, and that its decisions on that point would be guided by future developments and what may be considered the progress and direction of the Nazi program of conquest.

In effect, it made all the navigable waters of the world a potential American defense zone, in which U-boats will operate only at their own peril.

Consequently, it aroused excited conjecture as to whether American naval vessels had been ordered to search out and destroy German submarines in the battle area between Iceland and the British Isles; whether they would now convoy ships all the way to England.

The President has been emphatic in asserting that the survival of Britain is the first essential of American safety and that to survive Britain must have the war materials and food supplies America is shipping to her. From this and from Hull's statement many considered it logical to suppose that as defined by the Administration, an American defense zone might stretch all the way across the North Atlantic from the United States to England itself.

An American ship was sunk recently in the Red Sea while carrying supplies for the British in the Middle East. The developments of last night and today raised the question whether vessels plying that route would be provided with armed protection.

Another point raised was this: Since help to Russia was now considered vital to American defense, would the passages between Japanese islands through which Vladivostok must be approached be considered American defense zones? Japan's resentment at such shipments is now a subject of conference table discussion.

Only yesterday, a Dutch East Indies ship, bearing strategic war supplies to the United States was reported sunk by a German raider on the Pacific. Were American vessels already combing the seas for the marauder?

But beyond Hull's guarded statements, the Administration was saying nothing for the present. At the White House, Stephen Early, the President's secretary, declined to answer questions about the situation of the defense zones.

He did say, however, that Mr. Roosevelt had received 1600 messages commenting on the speech overnight and that of that number "only 150 were unfavorable." He said, too, that a Columbia Broadcasting Company survey showed the address was heard by the second largest audience of American radio listeners. It revealed, he said, that 67 per cent of a potential audience of 60,000,000 was listening. A similar check had indicated a 70 per cent rating for the President's speech of May 27, in which he declared an unlimited national emergency. The surveys took no account of foreign listeners. Both addresses were carried directly or in translation to the farthest parts of the world.

At the Capitol, much of the continuing comment on the President's address turned on that question of what waters would be regarded as essential to American defense.

Connolly's View

Asked his opinion, Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee replied:

"I don't think the President meant the waters around England, Scotland or the Azores, or those of the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. I don't think, for instance, that we will send destroyers to police the Red Sea."

The North Atlantic, Connally added, held possibilities of "important developments" depending on what policy Hitler followed there.

"If Mr. Hitler continues to defy all laws of the sea and humanity and attacks our ships," he said, "there may be serious trouble. The future in that regard is in his hands."

On another phase of the President's address, Senator Aiken (R.-Vt.) said it was significant that Mr. Roosevelt had ordered the Army as well as the Navy to keep the sea lanes clear.

"That means the President might dispatch an American expeditionary force without a declaration of war or consent of Congress," he declared.

Generally, it was presumed the order to the Army had reference primarily to patrol planes based on Atlantic outposts.

Several senators who have been active in the so-called "anti-war bloc" suggested that the President submit a declaration of war to Congress.

"I know that Congress would not declare war as yet," said Senator Bulow (D.-S. D.), Senators Aiken, Van Nuys (D.-Ind.) and McCarran (D.-Nev) expressed similar views.

But Senator Thomas (D.-Utah) said the President's action was "several weeks overdue."

"Piracy anywhere," he added, "should be driven off the high seas, and driving pirates off the high seas is an act of necessity."

Senator Overton (D.-La.) said that the entire speech was "conducive to peace. I think the firm warning that the President gave Hitler will prevent a series of incidents, such as the Greer case, that might lead to shooting war."

Nazis Raiding Convoy, List 22 Ships Sunk

Atlantic Attack Still On; Answer to Roosevelt Is 'Lies' and 'Hypocrite'

Nazis Attacking Convoy

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's military headquarters, offering with a radio trumpet fanfare what some quarters called an answer to President Roosevelt, reported today one of the heaviest submarine attacks on British shipping in the history of sea warfare, and an authorized German spokesman subsequently dismissed the President's speech of last night by saying: "All Roosevelt's contentions are lies. The President of the United States is a hypocrite."

In a great sea action still under way the high command asserted, twenty-two ships aggregating 134,000 tons have been sunk from a strongly protected British convoy of forty somewhere in the North Atlantic. Two other vessels totaling 11,000 tons have been torpedoed and almost certainly destroyed, it was added, and the surviving ships are being hunted down.

The convoy, said a news dispatch, was en route from North America to England.

(The British officially admitted that a small British merchant ship had been damaged in an attack in the North Sea on Thursday night, but acknowledged no other German attack at sea.)

The Foreign Office organ, Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, followed the same line of attack as the authorized spokesman.

Korrespondenz disclaimed that Germany "is seeking a quarrel in any manner" with the United States.

"On the basis of his newest falsifications, the American President is attempting to lay claim to mastery over all the seas and to 'eliminate' those who do not suit him there," it said.

The commentary described Mr. Roosevelt as "the great mad imperialist."

Dienst Aus Deutschland, another commentary which is close to the Wilhelmstrasse, said that beyond today's authorized comment and newspaper reaction there would be no further German answer to the President's speech.

The German spokesman broke a prolonged silence which had been reflected in the fact that the Berlin evening press did not so much as mention Mr. Roosevelt. The spokesman took up one by one some of the principal points in the speech, in which the President disclosed that the United States Navy had been ordered to fire at sight on Axis warships appearing in certain waters held here not to have been clearly defined. (Mr. Roosevelt defined the waters as those essential to American defense.)

Mr. Roosevelt's reference to freedom of the seas, this authorized German commentator said, was "the peak of hypocrisy."

The President, he said, "bears the responsibility for all the consequences," and he asserted that Mr. Roosevelt had, in fact, issued orders months ago for American warships to fire on German craft. He hinted that Germany would now take the initiative in such action.

"What happens now?" he was asked.

"Not Mr. Roosevelt, but we, will determine that," he replied.

Concerning the case of the United States destroyer Greer (which the President declared was attacked by a German submarine without warning in American defensive waters), the spokesman repeated the Nazi assertion that the U-boat fired only after the Greer had dropped depth bombs.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement that last July an American battleship was trailed by a German submarine with hostile intentions, the spokesman described as "pure invention."

As to the American ship Robin Moor, he said she was sunk in the southern Atlantic in accordance with the usages of international law, and asserted that she carried contraband.

Of the American ship Steel Seafarer (which went down in the Red Sea), the spokesman declared that if she was among the ships sunk by German planes it was in an area declared by both Germany and Italy to be a zone of war. He asserted, too, that she was loaded with war materials for the British in the Near East, and stated that in night attacks it was most difficult to ascertain the nationality of the ship involved.

Concerning the sinking of the American-owned freighter Sessa off Iceland, he said the Sessa was flying the flag of Panama and "Roosevelt is not the protector of Panama."

He thus summarized the attitude of the Wilhelmstrasse to Mr. Roosevelt's statements as to these five ships: "That's a lie. The President of the United States is a hypocrite."

Blames Roosevelt for the War

He contended that Mr. Roosevelt was responsible for the failure of appeasement since Munich, and described the President's speech last night as the latest step in what was termed his war policy.

The British-Soviet agreement, he added, was "born in Washington, blessed in Washington."

Reverting to the theme of freedom of the seas, the spokesman cited the British blockade of the European Continent. "If Roosevelt wants freedom of the seas," he went on, "let him turn to England."

The President, he concluded, "wants to lead his country into war against the Axis by all means. He wants to appear on the defensive. All his contentions are lies—the Axis never thought of aggressive measures."

During the day the German people were wholly in the dark concerning the new tension in German-American relations. The evening newspapers did not even mention that the President had spoken, and the radio, domestically, also avoided the subject.

German Press Gets No Text

D. N. B., the official news agency, provided no text or abstract of Mr. Roosevelt's address to the German press. But in the service which the agency prepares for circulation abroad there was a summary of the speech and some foreign comment. These foreign opinions were Japanese. Emphasized were Japanese assertions that Mr. Roosevelt "practically declared war" and a challenge to the President's declaration that German U-boat warfare was piracy. For, it was argued, piracy implies seizing booty.

Also quoted in the German news agency's foreign service were the statements of certain American commentators that Mr. Roosevelt was engaging in "unauthorized war."

While no official German source contended that the extraordinary submarine action against the British convoy had anything to do with Mr. Roosevelt's sharpening of American policy, it was remarked informally in some quarters that here was Germany speaking with deeds and not words.

Aside from this offensive, German bombers were declared to have sunk three British merchantmen aggregating 21,000 tons in the English Channel last night and to have damaged a light cruiser and a 2,000-ton merchantmen. (This was denied by the British.)

The German high command announced that three British speedboats of a group attacking a German convoy in the Channel had been sunk by Nazi naval and shore gun action.

SEP 13 1941

Italy Reports Two Sinkings

The Italians also reported sea successes yesterday, asserting that an Italian submarine had sunk a large oil tanker in the Atlantic and that a 5,450-ton freighter had apparently been destroyed by a torpedo hit. Presumably these incidents occurred some time ago.

Nazis Claim Big Bag.

Berlin, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The German High Command countered President Roosevelt's no-trespass speech today with the announcement that U-boats have sunk at least twenty-two ships out of a Great Britain-bound convoy of forty, while an authorized spokesman declared: "All Roosevelt's contentions are lies."

The U-boat attack was, perhaps, the greatest single submarine action against commerce in history and many observers took that fact, in itself, as an eloquent answer to President Roosevelt. The tonnage sunk was put at 134,000.

A spokesman later asserted, however, that the president's reference to freedom of the seas was "the peak of hypocrisy" and declared that he must bear responsibility "for all consequences."

There was no amplification of the High Command's terse account of the submarine attack, which has been going on for several days in an unspecified zone of the North Atlantic, but the High Command and other commentators said that scattered vessels still were being chased. Late dispatches disclosed that the convoy was intercepted on its way from North America to England.

[The President's orders applied to Axis raiders sighted within waters "the protection of which is necessary for American defense."]

The spokesman, who gave Germany's first official Roosevelt reaction, contended that the presidential order to fire on German craft had been issued months ago.

"What happens now?" he was asked.

"Not Mr. Roosevelt, but we, will determine that," he retorted.

The spokesman took up point by point the President's allegation of German design against American shipping.

Concerning the United States destroyer Greer, he reiterated that the German submarine fired only after the Greer had dropped depth bombs.

The President's statement that a submarine had followed a United States battleship last July, he called a pure invention.

As to the Robin Moor.

The merchant ship Robin Moor was sunk in the southern Atlantoc in accordance with the usages of international law, the spokesman declared, contending that she was carrying contraband.

If the American merchantman Steel Seafarer was among the ships sunk by German planes, he contended, she was in a war zone declared by both Germany and Italy and was loaded with war materials for Britain in the Near East.

[Mr. Roosevelt said the Steel Seafarer, sunk six days ago, was sent down by a German plane in the Red Sea 220 miles southeast of Suez while bound for an Egyptian port.]

The spokesman explained that it is extremely difficult to establish the nationality of a ship in a night attack.

Concerning the sinking of the steamship Sessa off Iceland by a submarine, he said the vessel was under the flag of Panama and "Roosevelt is not the protector of Panama."

German Reaction Delayed.

There had been two press conferences in which the strictest silence was preserved on German reaction before the spokesman made his statement hours later.

But foreign correspondents hardly had reached their offices from the first meeting of the conference than the radio informed the world of the convoy sinkings—seemingly as though Germany were replying with action instead of words.

The following announcement was made on the German radio, preceded by the blaring of trumpets customary for such broadcasts:

"Submarines in the North Atlantic attacked a large convoy heavily protected by accompanying corvettes and destroyers. The convoy consisted of more than forty ships.

"After heavy fighting, submarines have sunk up to now twenty-two steamships of 134,000 tons. Two other steamships of 11,000 tons were torpedoed and may be considered lost.

Cruiser Reported Damaged.

"In the fight against British supply shipping, the Air Force last night sank three freighters comprising 21,000 tons from a protected convoy southeastward of Great Yarmouth. Bombs damaged a light British cruiser in the same waters and another merchantman northeastward of Alnick."

The High Command also announced today that British speedboats had made repeated attacks on German convoy in the English Channel, but that three of them were sunk by Nazi naval and shore-gun action and the rest driven off. The convoy reached its destination intact; it was stated.

Called "Provocation"

The German radio, in a broadcast directed overseas rather than to Germany, and heard by NBC in New York, said:

"Roosevelt's provocations with which he tries to slap Germany in the face naturally leave Germany cool and calm. Roosevelt even dares to assert that Germany transgressed international law . . . he who has overstepped all boundaries of ethics and historical concepts. His speech was an attempt to burden Germany now and for the future with all guilt."

Berlin's leading afternoon newspapers made no reference to the Roosevelt address, even failing to mention it was made.

Big Attack Not Admitted.

London, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—An Admiralty communique admitted tonight that one small British merchant ship had been damaged during an attack in the North Sea last night, but naval sources declined to comment on the German report of a successful attack on a great British convoy in the Atlantic.

The communique denied flatly a German claim of sinking 21,000 tons of shipping in a British convoy in the North Sea southeast of Yarmouth. No British ship in the convoy was sunk, the statement said.

"It is now known," the communique said, "that in addition to an enemy bomber shot down by H. M. S. Vimiera in an air attack on one of our convoys in the North Sea last night, a second enemy aircraft was damaged.

"One small merchant ship was damaged, but is now safely in harbor and one man lost his life in another merchant ship.

"Several attacks were made by the enemy, but the majority were driven off by the fire of escorts and defensive armament of the merchant ships in convoy.

"The German High Command communique today claims that the German air force last night sank three freighters totaling 21,000 tons out of a strongly protected convoy southeast of Yarmouth. In fact, no ship was sunk and the ship damaged was of under 3,000 tons."

British naval sources declined to comment on the German report of a successful attack on a British convoy in the Atlantic.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Saturday, Sept. 13—The authorized commept denouncing President Roosevelt's speech, read to foreign correspondents last night, failed to appear in this morning's press as the Nazi spokesman had promised.

Italian U-boat Claims Victories

Tanker, Freighter Reported as Victims

ROME—(AP)—Italian submarine in the Atlantic was credited by the high command today with sinking a large oil tanker and probably also destroying a 5,450-ton freighter with a torpedo hit.

A new exchange of air blows, the British bombing the Sicilian port of Palermo and the Italians raiding Haifa, Malta and Cyprus, was reported by communique.

It said British bombs damaged several buildings at Palermo, killed four civilians and injured 12.

Italian planes, it said, bombed oil refineries at the Palestine port of Haifa, air and naval bases on Malta and an airfield on Cyprus.

ATTACK WAS BEFORE ROOSEVELT ADDRESS

Therefore Is Not Viewed as Axis Reply to Speech

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP) — Torpedoing of the 1700-ton American-owned freighter Montana off the coast of Greenland was reported to the Government today less than 24 hours after President Roosevelt ordered German and Italian war raiders sunk on sight if they ventured into American defensive waters.

Near Sessa Attack Scene

A State Department announcement said the Navy Department had learned that the vessel, under Panamanian registry and en route from the United States to Iceland with 1,500,000 feet of lumber, had been attacked at 8:45 A. M. (EST) yesterday only 40 miles from where a sister ship, the Sessa, was sunk Aug. 17.

The Montana's crew of 26, none an American, was said to have taken to the boats. All were believed saved, the State Department added.

Since the attack occurred before President Roosevelt's momentous address of last night, it was not regarded as an Axis reply to his warning that their war vessels must keep clear of waters this country regards as essential to its defense.

The disposition in official quarters appeared to be that it was, however, accumulated evidence that the attacks on American shipping were not isolated incidents, but, as Mr. Roosevelt charged, part of a Nazi plan to secure domination of the ocean.

The State Department's announcement gave few details and the Navy declined to elaborate upon it.

There were indications, in fact, that this Government's information was limited to a preliminary report from British sources.

The Navy advised the State Department that the ship was observed by an airplane to be torpedoed at latitude 63 degrees, 40 minutes, north and longitude 35 degrees, 50 minutes west.

This plane was described in the official announcement as non-American, but Secretary of the Navy Knox told reporters he thought it was British.

Asked whether American warships or planes were in the vicinity, Knox said the scene was rather remote and that he did not know for sure.

The State Department said only that the vessel was torpedoed—not that it was sunk. For this reason, and since the ship was loaded with lumber, there was speculation that it might be still afloat.

Although the crew was said to have taken to the boats, there was no word whether or not they had been picked up.

The Montana was one of the Danish ships requisitioned and put into service recently by the Maritime Commission. Formerly the Paula, she was under charter to the Marine Operating Company, New York City. She sailed from Wilmington, N. C., Aug. 29, and her cargo was assigned to the Icelandic government.

Among her crew were 18 Danes, five Norwegians, one Greek, one Belgian, and one Spaniard.

In addition to the torpedoing of the Montana and the Sessa, the unsuccessful attack by a submarine on the U. S. Destroyer Greer took place in the same general area.

Says Axis Ships May Attack in Self-Defense

ROME, Sept. 12 (AP) — Virginio Gayda declared today that no formal declaration of war could add to "this open, direct aggression preannounced by Roosevelt's speech."

The only course left to Axis warships, said the editor of Il Giornale D'Italia, who often reflects official Fascist opinion, is to fight, if necessary, in self-defense.

"It is evident," he wrote, "that after the precise announcement given by the White House every Italian and German ship, knowing itself exposed to deliberate aggressive action of American warships, must attack for self-defense if it lacks the possibility of escaping attack."

Nothing appeared, however, to indicate that Italian warcraft might go in search of incidents that might provoke open war between the United States and the Axis.

Instead, Fascist commentators attributed that aim to Mr. Roosevelt.

Il Lavoro Fascista, an extremist Fascist paper, called the speech "the next to the last step on the long road followed by President Roosevelt to enter in conflict with the Axis powers."

Rome

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 12—Italian and German warships, exposed now to "deliberate aggressive action of American warships," must attack in self-defense if they cannot escape, Virginio Gayda declared today.

"It is evident," declared the authoritative Fascist editor in the newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia, "that after the precise announcement given by the White House every Italian and German ship, knowing itself exposed to deliberate aggressive action of American warships, must attack for its self-defense if it lacks the possibility of escaping attack."

Roosevelt Denounced

Political circles denounced Mr. Roosevelt's announcement as a "deliberate, flagrant violation of neutrality which, juridically, the United States of America has not abandoned."

Gayda said, "No formal declaration of war could now add any new or different element to the reality of this open, direct aggression pre-announced by Roosevelt's speech."

A statement issued in political circles said Mr. Roosevelt's speech showed a desire for "aggressive occupation of strategic points outside American waters" and charged the President with having arranged to "exploit the slightest incident."

"This ensemble of acts and manifestations is received with calm and without surprise in Italy but with renewed and deliberate firmness of the will to continue the war together with Germany and other allies until victory," the statement concluded.

"As you know, the speech was awaited and foreseen from the conspicuous preliminary English and American propaganda which was made concerning it," correspondents were told.

War-Mongering Charged

"Wherefore, there is no surprise in this spectacular manifestation of President Roosevelt's war-mongering. The will and the proposal to increase provocations capable of making the American nation slide evermore toward war was manifest."

Gayda said that "it is evident that in the legitimate defense of the Axis imposed by the declared American aggressive plan, President Roosevelt would like to seek simulated justification for pushing forward his armed forces. . . .

"The Axis powers do not dispute the freedom of the seas with the United States, but they expect the United States to consider it (freedom of the seas) as a neutral nation."

Halifax Calls It Heartening.

London, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Lord Halifax the British Ambassador to Washington, said today that every Briton has been greatly heartened by President Roosevelt's no-trespass warning to Axis warships and submarines.

Speaking at an aircraft factory, the Ambassador, who is in London for consultations, said Mr. Roosevelt's speech was the "most practical example of the help in practical form that the United States is prepared to give us, and those fighting with us."

"They realize over there," said Lord Halifax, "just as clearly as we do what issues are at stake and how true it is that their values just as much as ours are menaced by Nazi domination.

"I am quite certain that the people of the United States will never, come what may, allow Hitler to achieve his ambition of placing himself in the position of mastering the world—only to exist, as the President puts it, 'by his condescending grace.'"

Leahy Lays Its Text Before French Chief of State.

Vichy, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The American Ambassador, Admiral William Leahy called on Marshal Petain today for a conference concerning his week-end meeting with two other American envoys, Alexander W. Weddell and Myron C. Taylor, in Barcelona.

Mr. Taylor fresh from conferences in Washington, had stopped off at Barcelona on his way back to Rome as President Roosevelt's personal representative at the Vatican. Mr. Weddell is Ambassador to Spain.

Admiral Leahy took with him the full English text of President Roosevelt's speech last night announcing that German and Italian war vessels entering American defense waters would be sunk on sight. The Ambassador also outlined the progress of the United States defense program.

Bogota Inquiry Fails to Reveal Secret Airfield

Colombia Won't Concede Existence of One Cited in Roosevelt's Speech

BOGOTA, Colombia, Sept. 12 (AP).—Foreign Minister Dr. Lopez de Mesa said today, in a speech in the Senate, that the Colombian government, despite repeated investigations, had been unable to find any evidence of clandestine airplane landing fields in this country.

[President Roosevelt, reviewing alleged Nazi activities in this hemisphere, said in his speech Thursday that secret airfields had been discovered in Colombia within easy range of the Panama Canal.]

Lopez de Mesa said Colombia was an ardent advocate of inter-American co-operation and mutual loyalty, but the nation was "unable to accept (as a fact) that there are secret airfields in Colombia."

"The belligerent White House is seeking a pretext for intervention. Lindbergh's speech throws down all of Roosevelt's threats, which are built on false suppositions."

Colombia Checks Up

SEP 13 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Bogota, Colombia, Sept. 12—President Roosevelt's assertion in his speech last night that secret landing fields had been discovered in Colombia within range of the Panama Canal brought a Colombian Government announcement today that investigation of properties owned by German nationals was under way.

The statement said that Colombia "is in condition to remove any possible dangers immediately" and "prevent the success of any enterprise against Colombian sovereignty or against the loyal policy of Pan-American solidarity that this Government maintains."

Reports recently were given the Government, the announcement disclosed, of the probable existence of "unauthorized landing fields on the property of German citizens situated in a zone between Barranquilla and Cartagena," Colombia's two leading port cities on the Atlantic. Both are within easy airplane distance of the Panama Canal.

President Eduardo Santos said recently that the canal was "vital to all of the Americas" and that an attack against the waterway "never would be permitted" from Colombian soil.

Spain Lets Lindbergh Rebut Roosevelt's Talk

MADRID, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Spanish evening press said unanimously today that "Lindbergh's address is the best comment we could make on President Roosevelt's speech," and carried reports of the two speeches side by side.

Typical comment was that of "Informaciones," which asserted:

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12 (AP). — White House Press Secretary Early today likened Charles E. Lindbergh's Des Moines speech last night to the "outpourings of Berlin" in recent days.

Asked to comment on the speech in which Lindbergh charged that "the British, the Jews and the Roosevelt Administration" were the "three most important groups which have been pressing this country toward war," Early said:

"You have seen the outpourings of Berlin in the last three or four days. You saw what Lindbergh said last night. I think there is a striking similarity between the two."

Silent on Defense Zones.

Early declined to answer questions about the defense zones in which the President said the Navy had orders to shoot on sight.

He did say, however, that Roosevelt had received 1,600 messages commenting on the speech overnight and that "only 150 were unfavorable." He said, too, that a Columbia Broadcasting System survey showed the address was heard by the second largest audience of American radio listeners. It revealed, he said, that 67% of a potential audience of 60,000,000 was listening.

To a query as to what the President meant when he said British and other friendly vessels on legitimate voyages would be "protected" by American warships in the American defense waters, Early replied:

"Everybody knows what protection means; every school boy who 'knows English.'"

America First Group Urges Congress To Put Curb On President

Wheeler Says Speech Shows Willingness To Take U. S. Into War

SEP 13 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 12—The executive committee of the New York chapter of the America First Committee issued a statement today charging that President Roosevelt was "a deadly peril to the peace of this nation" and calling on Congress "to vindicate our American system of government, to restore the Constitution, to rebuke the President and restrain his lawless acts."

The statement said: "The President's speech Thursday night was an amazing move to arouse hysteria and plunge us into a foreign war, unwanted by the people as he knows, and needless for national defense."

Senator Says Two Vessels Had Contraband Cargoes

Kalispell, Mont., Sept. 12 (AP)—Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.), non-interventionist leader, declared tonight "the President's speech of last evening proved what his worst enemies have been saying about him—that he would take this country into war."

The Senator charged that President Roosevelt "in effect said to the people of the United States: 'I am going to take you into a shooting war as far as the navy is concerned, without submitting the question to the Congress.'"

Says Point Was Omitted

The Montanan assailed the speech for "failure to mention" that the torpedoed ship Robin Moor "carried contraband of war" and whether the sunken ship Seafarer "carried munitions or other contraband."

"He tried to leave the impression," Wheeler asserted, "that all sinkings were in violation of international law."

The Senator said that while he himself deplored the fact that Germany should fire upon or sink any American vessels, "I also deplore the fact that the President is putting the nation in position where we are subject to attack."

Foreign Office Advocates Joint Action in Approving President's Speech

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 12 (AP)—Immediate preparation of a joint defense plan for the Americas was urged today in a note issued by the Mexican foreign office commenting favorably on President Roosevelt's "shoot first" speech against Axis sea marauders.

Growing Proximity

Measures announced by President Roosevelt "reveal to the Americas the growing proximity of war," the note said. "They lead us to think that immediate events, which will last for no one knows how long, are events of a war of continents."

The nations of the Western Hemisphere, under these circumstances, the note said, "should prepare a joint economy and common defense with the utmost rapidity."

President's Speech Repeated for Whole World.

Boston, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The powerful beams of two Boston short wave radio stations—WBOS and WRUL—circled the greater part of the globe today carrying President Roosevelt's speech in more than a dozen languages to nations of the European Continent and Latin-American States.

French, German, Italian, Russian, Polish, Yugoslav, Norwegian, Dutch, Czech, Slovak, Spanish, Portuguese, Turkish, Persian and Arabic interpreters, working in relays, poured out over the airways the text and abstract of the speech.

The broadcasts were to continue at intervales until late tonight, and were to be resumed tomorrow with excerpts of foreign comment and other reactions.

Roosevelt 'Shoot First' Order Had To Come, Legionnaires Say

Early Arrivals For Milwaukee Convention Point To Implications In President's Stand

[By the Asso

Milwaukee, Sept. 12—Early arrivals for the American Legion's national convention pointed today to the implications in President Roosevelt's shoot first order, but many took the position that it had to come.

The address, the European war and national defense crept into conversation wherever the legionnaires met. Little groups holding impromptu reunions prior to next week's business sessions and parading usually swung to discussion of serious matters soon after exchanging greetings.

Col. John Thomas Taylor, for twenty-two years the chief lobbyist of the organization, declared the President's address was "one hundred per cent. all right."

"We have been in the war all the time," he said upon arrival from Washington. "We're in it now. Let's not kid ourselves about this. The Nazi program envisions the destruction of the United States, both economically and ideologically. And we have to stop them. Now."

Edward N. Scheiberling, of Albany, N. Y., a candidate for national commander, saw the speech as putting "us close to entry into the war," but said American commerce would be maintained and that the "important thing is that the United States must be united."

Lynn Stambaugh, of Fargo, N. D., another candidate for commander, expressed the hope that "the warning contained in the speech will be sufficient."

The national commander, Milo J. Warner, and the president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Louis Lemstra, declined comment because of the convention's imminence.

Nazi Claim 22 Vessels In British Convoy Sunk Is Reply to Roosevelt

Berlin Spokesman Also Says All President's "Contentions Are Lies"; Comment in Other World Capitals Follows Usual Pro-Axis and Anti-Axis Lines

SEP 13 1941

WNUATED FOR FOREIGN REACTION

By The Associated Press

Official invective and a statement that U-boats have sunk 22 ships out of a British Atlantic convoy in a continuing attack constituted Germany's reply last night to President Roosevelt's announcement that the United States Navy will shoot at Axis sea raiders and submarines on sight.

For most of the day the Germans kept silent, letting the special high command communique about the convoy stand as their only reply to the President.

Finally, an authorized spokesman burst out in a statement climaxed with: "All Roosevelt's contentions are lies . . . The President of the United States is a hypocrite" and his position on freedom of the seas is "the peak of hypocrisy."

Mr. Roosevelt, the Nazi said, must bear the responsibility "for all consequences" and Germany will decide what happens next.

Germany's chief Axis partner, Italy, replied to the President through Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor who wrote that every Italian or German warship must attack first "for its self-defense" if it cannot escape American attack.

The Japanese, who had looked forward to the speech as an answer to questions on Far Eastern trends, expressed disappointment that it contained no word on progress of Japanese-American talks.

The Japan Times and Advertiser, English language organ of the Foreign Office, said the President disclosed "the initiation of undeclared war in effectively blockaded zones. The newspaper declared that President Roosevelt "created his own law and now defends it on a new principle of freedom of the seas—freedom to attack any foreign warship if he thinks it intends to attack American ships."

Despite the Vichy French government's decision to collaborate with the German conqueror of France, French circles commented sotto voce that the Roosevelt stand was "both logical and straightforward."

An authorized Vichy source said the speech was "destined to prepare American public opinion for the need to run new risks," but a spokesman explained the absence of full official reaction by pointing out that Roosevelt had not mentioned France or her colonies.

The Spanish newspaper ABC predicted "new serious complications" because, it said, Germany could not permit maintenance of the supply route to Iceland and President Roosevelt had abandoned "the last fictions of neutrality."

Lord Halifax, British ambassador to Washington, said in London that Mr. Roosevelt's warning to the Axis "greatly heartened" every Briton and was "the most practical example of the help in practical form that the United States is prepared to give us and those fighting with us."

The London press hailed the speech.

S. A. Lozovsky, Russian spokesman, said: "The President took a firm, energetic stand against German piracy on the seas. This is not only a serious political blow, it is something much greater."

Other reaction around the world:

Free French: The Brazzaville radio said Roosevelt had "thrown down the gauntlet and it is now up to Germany to decide whether it wants war with the United States or not."

British Empire:

There was no official Canadian reaction, but unofficially it was said that the United States had taken another step toward active participation in the war and that at the very least Britain now could leave patrol of the Atlantic west of Iceland to America.

"The American Navy now has become a virtually belligerent ally," said the Montreal Gazette.

Australians, as a result of several days of advance speculation, said they had expected something more definite, but the Australian stock exchanges showed gains.

Far East:

Japan, Axis partner of Germany and Italy, kept officially mum, but the Japan Times and Advertiser said Roosevelt's comparison of Axis submarine warfare to piracy was wrong because pirates sought loot, whereas Germany had made no profit from the ships she had sunk.

Netherlands East Indies papers said the United States was now on a war footing against Germany, and a qualified Dutch observer remarked: "In case of actual war, Germany will stand alone, because Japan decidedly is not joining."

The newspaper Javabode said: "Germany has to bend or break. Either way Hitler and his accursed system will burst."

In Chungking, capital of fighting China, commentators foresaw U. S. entry into a shooting war as likely at any moment.

Latin America:

Colombian papers displayed Roosevelt's assertion that secret landing fields has been found in Colombia in range of the Panama Canal. The Government announced it was investigating properties owned by Germans and was "in condition to remove any possible dangers immediately." President Eduardo Santos previously has said an attack on the Canal "never would be permitted" from Colombian soil.

Brazilian papers noted that President Vargas already had proclaimed a state of armed vigilance and said Roosevelt's speech was "the decision of America."

In Argentina, the Buenos Aires paper El Mundo called Roosevelt's speech "the first step toward militancy."

Cubans hailed the United States position as a necessary step in defense of democracy, but there was no official comment.

Authorized Argentine sources said the President's speech was considered to be a "statement of facts."

In Montevideo, Uruguay, the newspaper El Pais, which heretofore had opposed Uruguayan government's pro-United States policy, said the step was "defensive war" on the part of America and added:

"All American republics should now join the United States in clearing their waters and territories of pirates, corrupt spies, Quislings and traitors."

SOVIET ADMITS FALL OF CITY IN KIEV AREA

Chernigov Captured By Germans In Thrust From Gomel

Moscow, Acknowledging Withdrawal, Insists Main Lines Hold

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Saturday, Sept. 13—Russians acknowledged early today that their forces have retreated from Chernigov, on the lower central front, in the face of German forces pounding southward in a renewed effort to loop a noose about Kiev, capital of the Ukraine and a major Nazi objective.

Chernigov is west of the Desna river, some eighty miles northeast of the point where this stream joins the Dnieper at Kiev. The Germans struck southeast from Gomel through Chernigov with the apparent aim of sweeping down between the two rivers to the Ukraine capital.

Red Ring Around Kiev

The Red army, however, was reported covering the approaches to this still unattained Nazi prize with an unbroken ring of artillery and infantry defenses like those protecting Leningrad and Odessa.

By reaching Chernigov, which is on the edge of the transitional forest-steppe zone, the Germans threatened to outflank the hitherto fierce Red defense of Kiev.

The area between Kiev and Chernigov is all marsh land, but should the Germans swing southeastward they would reach the vital Kiev-Bryansk road.

City Of 34,000

Chernigov is a river port, milling and manufacturing city of more than 34,000 population. It is south of the Gomel-Yelnya area on the central front, where the Russians have reported they were hurling the German armies back toward Smolensk.

The early morning communique reported bitter fighting all along the front, with the evacuation of Chernigov the only announced change.

Nazis Complain of Weather

[The German high command told of difficulties caused by rain and terrain in eastern front operations, which were progressing "well," but dispatches reported two new Red Army counter-attacks on the central front. German quarters emphasized the role the German air force was playing in the conflict, telling of widespread operations from the Leningrad area to the Black Sea.]

Far to the north in the besieged Leningrad sector Russian Baltic fleet units were reported in dispatches to be shelling German troop and tank concentrations ashore and at the same time keeping the German Navy at a distance.

Several hundred Germans were drowned when Soviet naval forces rammed and sank four German cutters and two barges in the Gulf of Finland, where the Germans were trying to land troops on Russian soil, the communique said. Soviet news dispatches earlier had reported that Russian warships sank two German destroyers, a monitor and a transport.

German bombs crashed into Leningrad Thursday night when a few high-flying Nazi planes penetrated the city's defenses after repeated attempts, the Soviet Information Bureal said. Several resulting fires were quickly extinguished and eleven German planes were shot down.

Reports Record Nazi Losses

S. A. Lozovsky, Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs and official spokesman, declared the German losses at the approaches to Leningrad were greater than Germans "ever before" had suffered. "The struggle has assumed such a character and dimensions that the Germans cannot conduct it long," he said. "The Germans want a quick decision but they cannot obtain it."

Official reports also told of a guerrilla army springing from the Estonian swamps and disrupting German communications 150 miles behind the Leningrad front. The Germans were said to have been unable to establish telephone or telegraph connections between field headquarters and a large area about Pskov, near the Estonian border.

Concerning German reports that Leningrad had been cut off, Lozovsky asserted that "this is a considerable exaggeration."

In a three-day action a Russian destroyer was said to have halted the German advance on Leningrad at one point by blasting at barges with which the Germans were attempting to cross a river, sinking one, damaging another and finally silencing German coastal batteries and dispersing a German concentration.

The fleet was disclosed to be maintaining a base on Oesel (Saare Maa) Island, at the mouth of the Gulf of Riga, 250 miles from Leningrad. This island, which Russia leased from Estonia before the war, dominates the approaches to the Gulf of Finland.

The Russian counter-attack on the central front was reported progressing steadily, and a new counter-offensive was said to have started in the south.

On the southern front, Lozovsky said Odessa "remains an impregnable fortress," with the besieging Rumanian forces "not even within shelling distance." He said more than half the sixteen Rumanian divisions hurled against the city have already been cut to pieces and that constantly arriving reinforcements were meeting the same fate.

Dispatches from the southern front said the Russians had crossed the lower Dnieper at four points, captured the island of Hortitsa between Zaporpzhe and Dnepropetrovsk, and taken the villages of Voyskovoye and Federova on the west bank.

Colonel I. Khitrov, in a dispatch to the army newspaper, "Red Star," told why the Russians had been able to advance so rapidly—seven to ten miles a day—on the central front. He said the German lines were thinly held, consisting of unconnected bases. Constant Russian artillery fire, he wrote, had kept the Germans from any deep organization of defense zones and silenced the German artillery.

Reds Gain at Center.

On this the eighty-third day of the Nazi invasion, the Russians reported the recapture of the village of Olkha as their latest success in the continuing westward thrust against the invaders on the central front. According to the Red Star, the army newspaper, a platoon scouted the village in advance and then a tank charge threw the Germans out. More than 100 dead, seventeen field guns and ten mortars were reported left behind.

Fighting extended all up and down the central zone, the Red Star said, adding that the Germans were being driven back upon Smolensk at the rate of seven to ten miles a day.

In the new counter-attacks along the lower Dnieper, where the Germans have made their greatest gains, the island of Hortitsa was captured from German and Rumanian forces who lost 500 slain, the Red Star said, and the villages of Voyskovoye and Fedorovka on the west bank fell to a surprise attack by Russians who blew up a bridge to cut off the foe's escape.

Reports Tank Units Smashed.

Meanwhile today the Soviet Information Bureau reported that the Forty-seventh German Tank Corps, reinforced with artillery and infantry, suffered heavy losses in a Russian pincer operation patterned upon the very tactics the Nazis have emphasized since the invasion of Poland.

REDS REPORT DNIEPER CROSSED FOUR TIMES

Island and Two Villages on West Bank Claimed by Russians Who Also Tell of New Successes at Center.

SEP 13 1941

Moscow, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Counter-attacking Russian forces crossed the lower Dnieper at four points today and claimed the capture of an island and two villages from the Germans even as new reverses in the bloody Smolensk central sector dashed whatever hope Adolf Hitler had of equaling Napoleon's eighty-three-day march to Moscow.

Russia's Baltic Fleet operating in stormy seas joined the Red Army in the defense of Leningrad, shelling German troop concentrations and tank columns, intercepting German sea transports and covering a Red Army retreat in that sector. A navy dispatch said the Red Fleet was still holding Oesel Island at the mouth of the Gulf of Riga, using it as a base for attacks on German land and sea forces.

The battle for Leningrad "has assumed such a character and such dimensions that the Germans cannot conduct it long," S. A. Lozovsky, Vice-Foreign Commissar, said tonight.

"The Germans want a quick decision but cannot obtain it," he said "The fierce, unprecedented struggle going on on the approaches to Leningrad has resulted in German losses greater than ever before."

A supplement to this afternoon's communique said later that a Russian air squadron destroyed twenty-two out of fifty planes on an enemy airdrome at the approaches to Leningrad and set fire to fuel tanks and buildings.

"Taking into pincers the enemy tank regiments which at several points wedged into our lines," a communique reported, "Soviet troops cut them off from the infantry and systematically annihilated them part at a time."

2,500 Germans Slain

In one engagement alone, it said, Soviet tank crews destroyed 79 German tanks and 32 guns and killed 2,500 Germans.

(Horse and foot troops of Napoleon took Moscow on the 83rd day of their campaign launched east from bases through middle Poland and East Prussia in the summer of 1812. Today is the 83rd day of Hitlers' drive to the East, which started June 22.)

While Russians pictured fierce Soviet attacks along a 400-mile front from Gomel to Velikie Luki, approaches to the defense zones of both Leningrad and Kiev were said to be carpeted with German dead.

Baltic fleet naval pilots were said to have joined Red army fliers in the defense of Leningrad, which has been under 123 air-raid alarms. Russians said, however, that German raiders reached the city proper for the first time Tuesday.

Northern Drive Repulsed

In the Far North, where snow now covers the Khibin Mountians, Soviet troops were reported to have repulsed a Finnish-German attempt to cut the Murmansk-Leningrad Railway.

Guerrillas were said to be active behind the German lines in support of Soviet frontal operations, and the early-morning communique said a Soviet trick involved two Nazi infantry units in deadly fighting between themselves.

The Soviet band, the communique said, involved one units— a detachment of three platoons—in a hot skirmish near the town of Dunayevo and then ceased fire and disappeared when a Nazi infantry company appeared.

Hitler Makes Appeal For Funds To Carry War Into Winter

Bad Weather Anticipated By German Leaders, Says Berlin

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Saturday, Sept. 13—DNB reported today that Odessa, Soviet Black Sea port which has been withstanding German and Rumanian siege for almost a month, was subjected to a heavy Nazi aerial bombardment Thursday. The news agency said harbor facilities and other objectives were attacked with "good results."

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 12—The mud, rain and bad terrain of Russia were emphasized tonight in German high command reports of fighting on the Eastern front, but the invasion campaign was declared still to be making good progress.

Hitler, in a written appeal for the annual winter relief fund, said the success of German soldiers' "sacrifice in blood, sweat, worries and privations is unheard of in world history."

Now, the statement said, "he is fighting from northernmost Europe to the shores of the Black Sea against an enemy who is not human but is made up of beasts."

Appeal For Help

Contributions, Hitler wrote, will "strengthen the front in the consciousness that the entire German people stands behind them and that their fight is not in vain."

Germans said that the present obstacles of weather were the sort which military leadership anticipates and DNB said the Russians knew they would receive "still more heavy German blows before winter comes."

Reports from the front said the defenses of Leningrad still were being battered, the Germans advancing despite "stubborn resistance and widespread minefields."

DNB said that fires were started in an armaments works during today's nazi air raids on the Soviet city.

Say Reds Were Thrown Back

In taking one town and two Russian field positions, one German army corps reported disposing of 6,700 land mines in two days. Military quarters said the Russians were thrown back with heavy losses when they tried to cross the Volkhov river at three points north of Novgorod. The river flows from Lake Ilmen to Lake Ladoga.

On the central front, stronger Russian concentrations were reported under the fire of German artillery, but it was from the south, along the lower reaches of the Dnieper, that news of the most spectacular action came.

Luftwaffe Active

The Luftwaffe, ranging east of the Bug river, bombed Soviet troop concentrations and columns, scouted all the way to the Crimean peninsula, and reported it destroyed twenty-nine railroad trains.

A number of strategically important railway stations were bombed and several lines were severed, it was added.

The smashed trains included a dozen which were carrying troops, an armored train, and others carrying oil and supplies, the German report said.

NAZIS ADMIT MUD HAMPERS DRIVES

Berlin Reports Stronger Red Forces Dispersed in Central Sector.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The German high command admitted today that rain and mud were making the Nazi invasion of Russia difficult, but insisted operations were nevertheless "progressing well."

"Stronger" Russian troop concentrations in the central sector yesterday were taken under "effective fire" by German artillery, DNB said, resulting in the dispersing of Soviet units.

Bitter fights were reported in the northern area, where Berlin informants said the German forces advanced despite "stubborn resistance and widespread mine fields." One army corps reported cleaning up 6700 mines in two days while taking Soviet field positions and one town, military sources said.

Soviet losses in this area were estimated here at 1200 prisoners, 12 tanks and 60 artillery pieces. At another point in the same sector DNB said the Germans made further territorial gains as well.

Germany military sources, declaring that many fires set by bombs and shells were raging in Leningrad, said they expected announcements soon of Wehrmacht victories along the southern and middle sectors of the Russian front. The high command long has been silent as to eastern front details.

DNB declared that the Germans counter-attacking with Luftwaffe support, "hurled the Bolshevists back" when Soviet tanks and artillery attacked a German division.

In addition to a loss in men, the Germans asserted that 20 Soviet tanks were destroyed.

Speaking of the approaching winter, army men said there would be two more months of good fighting weather, even on the northern front.

(The Italians were said to have occupied bridgeheads on the river's east bank, according to the report, which was from a special correspondent of the Stefani News Agency. The Russians were reported to have suffered heavy losses.)

Italians, Too, Claim Crossing.

The German radio today broadcast a Rome report stating that the Italian Pasubio Division had crossed the Dnieper River in southern Russia in a district which hitherto had not been attacked.

FUEHRER ASSERTS ARMY SUCCESSES ARE UNEQUALLED

Asks Germans to Donate Extensively to Fund for Winter Relief.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Success "unheard of in world history" has rewarded the German soldier's sacrifice "in blood, sweat, worries and privations," Adolf Hitler told the German nation today in a written appeal for contributions to the winter relief fund.

Hitler reminded the Germans he was appealing for the ninth time and told them their contributions would strengthen Germany both at home and at the front, giving the nation's soldiers evidence "that the entir German people stands behind the and that their fight is not in vain.

Says Europe Is at Stake

"Our armed forces," he told the nation, "in these historic days are fighting in a gigantic struggle for existence or non-existence of the German nation, yet, more than that, for the maintenance of that Europe which for thousands of years was the benefactor of culture and civilization of humanity and shall be so again in the future.

"As once in the interior, so today in the hostile outside world, Jewish capitalism and Bolshevism have united in an attempt to destroy the National Socialist German Reich as a strong bulwark of this new Europe and, above all, to wipe out our people.

Calls Russians Beasts

"For two years the German soldier has offered his blood and life for the protection of our precious homeland and our people. Just now, united with our Allies, he is fighting from northernmost Europe to the shores of the Black Sea against an enemy who is not human but is made up of beasts.

"The success of his sacrifice in blood, sweat, worries and privations is unheard of in world history.

"May the German homeland, by its support and its own sacrifices, show itself worthy of the heroic deeds of its sons. Your contributions will strengthen our National Socialist interior community and strengthen the front in the consciousness that the entire German people stands behind them and that their fight is not in vain but made effective with the help of the great National Socialist community ideal.

"The world can see, therefore, that the front and the homeland in the German Reich are in a faithful, sworn unity and for that reason cannot be defeated."

Finns Claim Destruction Of 454 Russian Aircraft

Helsinki, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Finns reported officially tonight that 454 Soviet planes and balloons have been put out of action and 80 vessels have been sunk by Finnish forces since the start of the conflict with Russia.

In land fighting the Finns said their forces have captured nearly 25,000 rifles, 2,000 light machine guns, 1,000 heavy machine guns, 600 trench mortars and more than 800 guns of various other calibers, and destroyed or damaged 669 tanks.

A Finnish naval communique said that of the Soviet ships accounted for, 55 were sunk by naval craft, 14 by coastal batteries and 1 by planes. In addition, it listed 5 ships captured.

Claim 10 Sunk In Lake

On Lake Ladoga, it listed 10 Russian ships sunk, including 1 gunboat and 6 big transport lighters loaded with troops and supplies. Forty-two vessels were reported captured on the lake, chiefly motor boats.

From June 25 to September 11, the Air Minister reported, Finnish fighters and anti-aircraft guns destroyed 120 Soviet bombers, 231 fighters, 23 reconnaissance and other planes and 5 observation balloons. It said an additional 19 planes and 6 barrage balloons were captured, making a total of 454.

U. S. Moscow Mission Won't Linger in London

London, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The United States Moscow Mission headed by W. Averell Harriman may not remain in London any longer than a day, an informed American source said today, because of Russian urging for prompt arrival in the Soviet capital. The mission is expected here early next week.

Russ Captives To Get Food Inferior To That Of Other Nazi Captives

Berlin, Sept. 12 (AP)—Russian prisoners of war will receive food inferior to that of prisoners of other nationalities, the high command and the Reichsministry of Food and Agriculture decreed tonight.

This unusual measure was declared to be based on the fact that Russia did not sign the international agreement of July 27, 1929, covering treatment of war prisoners and that in the high command's opinion "there is accordingly no obligation to grant Soviet war prisoners rations corresponding to said agreement as regards quantity or quality."

AMERICAN AID TO RUSSIA WILL BE FULL, QUICK

SEP 13 1941

To Continue Until Hitler Is Crushed, Is Word From White House

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP)—American aid to Russia will be full and quick and will continue until Hitler is crushed—this was the word that came from a conference today between President Roosevelt and his newly-appointed supply mission to Moscow.

Final Instructions

The mission, which called for final instructions before leaving shortly for Russia, let it be known that all kinds of war supplies from planes to raw materials would be transported over routes to Vladivostok and the newly-opened line through the Persian Gulf.

A hint that this aid was expected to enable the Russians eventually to take the offensive for a crushing blow at the Nazis came from W. Averell Harriman, chairman, who discussed the mission's general purposes after the White House conference.

Asked whether Russia's needs would be considered from the standpoint of immediate requirements or long-range assistance, Harriman replied there would be no time limitations on aid furnished; that it would continue until "ultimate victory."

When questions arise as to whether the British or Russians should get certain goods first, he said, the decision would be in favor of "where they would do the most good in the plan of ultimate destruction of Hitler."

President Roosevelt, immediately after his conference with the mission, received Constantine Oumansky, the Soviet ambassador, who is returning to Moscow himself soon to make a full report on American production and the extent to which he believes Russia may benefit by it. Oumansky, who has been urging officials here to furnish more and speedier assistance to the Soviet forces battling the Nazis from the Arctic to the Black Sea, called to present three leading members of the Russian technical mission which flew here from Moscow.

Secretary of State Hull told reporters a little later that the United States was doing all it could at present to assist Russia and that these efforts would continue.

Harriman said the "whole problem of Russian aid" would be discussed in Moscow after the five-man mission had talked first in London with a similar British mission headed by Lord Beaverbrook. That was as far as Harriman would go in disclosing the mission's route. He would not say how or when it would go, except that "it won't be long now."

Russia is expected to pay in cash or raw materials for American supplies for the time being, although loans or lend-lease aid may be extended when her gold supply runs low.

Some supplies already have gone to Russia, including oil across the Pacific to Vladivostok. Although the Persian Gulf route was only recently opened by British and Russian occupation of Iran, this body of water has never been made a combat zone under the American Neutrality Act and American vessels are said to have been putting in at Basra—at the head of the gulf—right along.

There will be eighteen in all in the mission, including the five principal members and thirteen technical experts. Those calling on the President today besides Mr. Harriman were Major-Gen. James H. Burns, executive officer of the lease-lend program; Admiral William H. Standley, retired, former chief of naval operations, and William L. Batt, director of the materials division, Office of Production Management.

The fifth member of the mission, Major-Gen. George H. Brett, Army Air Corps chief, is now on a special mission to Great Britain and the Middle East in connection with deliveries of American aircraft. Gen. Brett will join other members in London before the trip to Moscow.

Mr. Harriman said that a permanent staff headed by Col. Philip Faymonville, an ordnance officer, and former military attache at the American embassy in Moscow, would be left in the Russian capital after the mission finishes its work.

Immediately after today's White House conference, the President received the leading members of the Russian technical mission to this country. They were presented by Constantine Oumansky, the Soviet Ambassador.

Mr. Oumansky, it was learned, will return to Moscow in the immediate future to make a comprehensive report to his Government on United States aid.

Replying to questions on Russian aid at his midday press conference, Secretary of State Hull told newspaper men the United States was doing everything possible to facilitate all available help to Russia and would continue to do so.

Reich Suffers 2 Economic Blows

Ankara, Sept. 11 (Delayed) (AP)—Weather and British buying have dealt two light but stinging blows to Germany where it hurts—in the supply of food and clothing.

Unofficial reports say that the Turkish wool crop is just fifty per cent. of normal. Leaving just enough for home needs and little for export. Germany normally has bought the bulk of the export.

The British have just closed a contract for the cream of the fig and raisin crop at prices sixty per cent. above those of last year. The deal was closed just as a German buying commission arrived.

Furthermore, the Germans not only use figs for fruit, but use them as one of the main constituents of ersatz coffee.

R. A. F. Reports Firing Ship

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 12—The R. A. F. attacked a German convoy off the Dutch coast this afternoon and set on fire one of the larger ships, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

The attack followed night raids which ranged from Norway to France, concentrating on northern Germany, including Kiel, site of the German naval base, and the Baltic port of Rostock.

SEP 13 1941

Large Fires Seen

The Air Ministry said that despite bad weather "considerable forces" left large fires burning at both Kiel and Rostock.

Bomber command aircraft also attacked the docks at Le Havre and Boulogne, on the French coast, while aircraft of the coastal command bombed docks at Haugesund, Norway, and a Norwegian airdrome near Stavanger.

Vital Rail Center Hit

The Air Ministry said three bombers were missing.

Rostock, an authoritative source said, is a vital rail center serving a large area of Germany and providing train ferry service to Copenhagen and Sweden. It was assumed here that supplies had been transported to Finland over this route.

Reliable observers also said it was reasonable to assume that Rostock was a base from which the German high command had been supplying its forces in the Leningrad sector.

Destroyer Gets Bomber

The Germans sent only a few night raiders against England. A Government announcement said a small number of persons was injured and a little damage done by bombs dropped mainly in coastal areas of eastern England.

The Admiralty announced that a German bomber "which attempted to attack one of our convoys was promptly shot down in flames by H. M. S. Vimiera," without damage or casualties among the convoy or its escort. The bomber was said to have been the third downed by the destroyer Vimiera while on convoy duty.

On the same night a French Alpine village not far from the Italian border was attacked, and anti-aircraft guns opened fire on a British plane which flew over Vichy itself. The bombing at Cannes, which is thirty-five miles from the Italian border, caused no casualties or damage, it was said.

VICHY RUSH FORTIFYING OF AFRICAN PORT

Threat To Britain's Freetown Seen In "Bracketing" Move

Work At Abidjan Under Way Since June, Report Reveals

By T. J. Lor Henry

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 12—A French announcement said tonight that fortifications were being rushed at Abidjan, on the African Ivory Coast, which with those at Dakar would bracket the strategic British port of Freetown.

The announcement said Abidjan would be transformed into "one of the most secure natural harbors in the world." Work on the fortifications were said to have been started in June.

The controlled press of Paris, meanwhile, openly hinted that a German-Italian offensive in the Western Mediterranean (possibly in Spain) might be brewing.

No Small Diversion

An article in Le Jour-Echo de Paris said the attack would be a "principal operation" and not a diversion, which surprised political circles who had heard no talk of German moves through Spain since the beginning of the war against Russia.

When work on Abidjan is completed, the biggest ships may base in the sheltered lagoon to which a broad channel is being cut.

[In New York the Associated Press heard yesterday that France, Germany and Spain had worked out elaborate plans for joint defense of West Africa. Fear that the United States and Britain would some day try to seize bases in the French, Spanish and Portuguese possessions motivated the plans, it was said.]

Big Sum Allotted

The announcement on Abidjan harbor by an official news agency followed allotment of 128,000,000 francs largely for the improvement of the Dakar base, to which Foreign Legion reinforcements were recently sent.

French sources said the work on the new harbor ought to be finished in "two years at the outside."

Dakar is already much larger than the Sierra Leone port of Freetown, vital link in the British life line soon to be flanked by French bases.

An Important Port

Freetown is a port of call for British shipping on the Cape of Good Hope route now used for supplies and reinforcements to the Orient. The route would be the only passage from England to the East should the Suez Canal be lost. It also is the terminus for American supply planes on the short South Atlantic hop from Natal.

Abidjan is next door to Liberia and close to the communication lines of the "Free French" outlet, Pointenoire.

More than half a billion cubic feet has been excavated from the sand bar a mile and a half wide and a channel has been dug past the half-way mark. The channel will be 375 yards wide and more than fifteen feet deep at low tide.

A Big Harbor

Ships passing through the new channel will find themselves in a sheltered body of water parallel to the sea, seventy-five miles long, two to four miles wide and sixteen to twenty-five yards deep.

They will anchor before the Abidjan station of a railroad tapping a rich hinterland producing cattle, sheep, oil, coffee, cocoa, woods, minerals and ores. Quays and piers are being rushed to completion.

Abidjan is now connected with the sea by a rail line running to a pier at the small port of Boue.

Vichy Hints At Nazi Attack Via Spain

SEP 13 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 12—It was openly hinted today in the controlled press of the unoccupied zone that a German-Italian offensive in the western Mediterrean (possibly in Spain) might be brewing.

An article written in the Jour-Echo de Paris, which often has been suspended for its anti-German sentiments, said such an attack would not be a diversion but a "principal operation."

The article surprised political circles where there had been no talk of German moves through Spain since the beginning of the war against Russia.

Talk Of Stabilizing Gains

There were reports, however, in neutral military circles that the Germans were considering stabilizing their gains in Russia and establishing a front for the winter.

The article was signed "Pierre Lefranc," a pen name for the writer who is close to well-informed circles in Vichy.

Nazi Clubbed in Paris.

Vichy, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Informed spokesmen reported today another attack on a German Army man in Paris as reprisals led to counter-reprisals between the occupying authorities and opposition forces.

The German was clubbed by an unidentified assailant as he was leaving the Les Ambassadeurs Theater in the Champs Elysees district after a Maurice Chevalier performance. He received first-aid treatment for skull injuries and was sent to his quarters.

[The Germans shot three hostages last Saturday in retaliation for attacks on Germans in occupied France, and arrested more after two attacks which followed within twelve hours of the execution.]

assailant fled before he could be identified.

Five Sentenced To Death

Five officers were sentenced to death and two non-commissioned officers to life imprisonment today in a campaign against acts against the regime. The seven were sentenced for their relations with foreign powers.

There are now 34,000 persons held in French prisons for various crimes, according to an announcement made in Paris by Joseph Barthelemy, the Minister of Justice. This figure does not include those in concentration camps in which the bulk of the opposition as well as Jews and foreigners are held, and it was not clear whether the total included those in three German prisons in Paris and others elsewhere.

Large-scale sabotage at the Renault works in Paris, which led to a three-day stoppage, was reported today by the Moscow radio, heard here by CBS. Moscow gave recent travelers arriving in Geneva from France as its authority for the damage to the works, which are producing large quantities of munitions for Germany.

Authoritative sources here denied that any such broadcast originated in Berlin.

Stockholm Hears Situation Is Grave With Giant Conflict Due Soon

Mass Arrests Called Step To Halt Spread Of Revolt Spirit

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Sept. 12—The Germans are resorting to mass arrests in an attempt to halt the spirit of revolt racing across Norway and forestall a threatened gigantic conflict within the next few days, border advices said tonight.

Angered by repressive measures to block a general strike and the execution of two labor leaders Wednesday, Norway's 350,000 trade union members were said to be fanning opposition to the Quisling puppet regime.

Situation Termed Grave

Although official accounts said strikes had been halted and "there were no episodes of any kinds," a dispatch received in Stockholm said the situation was grave.

SEP 13 1941

"Everyone seems decided not to submit to the Quisling mastery and everything indicates a gigantic conflict in the next few days between the opposition and the Quisling rule," said a message from a Norwegian journalistic source.

Ludvig Buland, vice-president of the labor federation, was sentenced to death and then pardoned by Joseph Terboven, Nazi gauleiter for Norway.

Many Arrests Reported

Border advices said "a great many persons" were arrested at many places.

Among those sentenced in Oslo were the famous skiers Asbjoern Ruud and Olaf Oekern, sent to prison for twelve years each. All local trade union membership lists were taken by authorities and trade union funds were confiscated. All Boy Scout organizations were dissolved.

In Bergen, Trondheim and Stavanger, authorities threatened to proclaim a state of civil siege such as exists in Oslo if there were any signs of agitation. Didrik Arup Seip, president of Oslo University, was removed on undisclosed charges.

Nazis Minimize Unrest

German sources in Berlin insisted that Norwegian strikes were of a localized nature and said that affected industries now were operating normally with non-striking employes.

A dispatch from Berlin also quoted the Oslo Nazi paper, Fritt Folk, as declaring "elements in private business, banking, insurance companies and other concerns hostile to National Socialism must be cleaned out."

Stockholm, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Reports from Oslo today said a spirit of revolt against the German-supported Quisling Government was growing rapidly in Norway and a gigantic conflict was indicated in the next few days with the trade unions leading the opposition to the Nazis. The unions have about 350,000 members.

A great many persons were reported arrested at a number of places in Norway yesterday. Ludvik Buland, vice-president of the labor federation, was sentenced to death and then pardoned by Josef Terboven, Nazi gauleiter for Norway, as official accounts stated that "Labor peace was restored and there were no episodes of any kinds."

University Head Ousted.

Among persons sentenced in Oslo were Asbjoern Ruud and Olaf Oekern, famous skiers, both being sent to prison for twelve years. Didrik Arup Seip, president of Oslo University, was removed from office. Nature of the charges against these men was not stated.

In yesterday's extensive actions against trade unions all over Norway, all local funds were confiscated and membership lists were taken by the authorities. All Boy Scout organizations were ordered dissolved.

Special correspondents for the Stockholm papers reported everything was so quiet in Oslo that the town was "dead" after 8 o'clock every night, but that the executions of Wednesday inflamed the undercover spirit of revolt and led to the preventive steps taken by the quisling regime yesterday.

Authorities in Bergen, Trondheim and Stavanger threatened to proclaim a civil siege such as exists in Oslo if there were any signs of agitation.

(A dispatch from Berlin quoted the Oslo Nazi paper, Fritt Folk, as warning the public that additional heads of organizations would lose their positions "if they are not more reasonable."

(The threat followed the disbanding of many organizations and seizure of properties in the wake of a strike in the iron and shipbuilding industries, the German dispatch said.

(It quoted the paper as declaring, "elements in private business, banking, insurance companies and other concerns hostile to National Socialism must be cleaned out.")

Peace Restored, Berlin Says

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (AP).—Labor peace has been restored in Oslo, where a state of civil siege was declared by Commissioner Terboven two days ago, D. N. B., the German official news agency, reported today.

"No more incidents have occurred," the agency said in a dispatch from Oslo. Other German informants asserted that drastic repressive action against Norwegian labor unions was the German answer to months of hostile subterranean activity.

The Oslo Nazi paper, Fritt Folk, was quoted here as warning the public that additional heads of organizations would lose their positions if they are not "more reasonable." Bombing Of St. Clement's Breaks Second Heart

SEP 13 1941

By Eddy Gilmore

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

London, Sept. 12—They plated the ashes of Mrs. Louisa Pennington Bickford, widow of the rector of St. Clement Danes, beside those of her husband today beneath the bomb-burned altar of their famous church.

According to evidence presented at an inquest, the widow, 76, threw herself from the window of a children's holiday home last Monday, dying, like her husband, of a broken heart.

Parishioners said the rector's death in June was due to the fact that bombs finally ruined his beloved church in a raid in May. The church, designed by Sir Christopher Wren in 1681, was a landmark in the center of the Strand.

Lives Wrapped In Church

The Pennington-Bickfords' lives were wrapped up in the "oranges and lemons" church ("Oranges and lemons, say the bells of St. Clement's," an old rhyme goes).

Mrs. Pennington-Bickford's father was rector before her husband. After her husband's death, her friends say, she prayed nightly for death.

On London trips after her husband's ashes were interred beneath the church she gave instructions that she must never be driven past St. Clement's.

"Everything Has Gone"

Last week her driver took a wrong turn.

"Never mind," she said wearily, "I can close my eyes."

When she got back to the country that night, the servants said, she repeated over and over again, "everything has gone."

The next day she gave instructions that if anything happened to her, her blind dog, Nipper, was to be destroyed.

Then she wrote notes to her domestic staff giving each small personal presents.

Then she died.

Nipper is dead, too.

Biggers Says U.S. and Britain Can Outproduce Axis in 1943

Calls Mechanized Challenge 'Right Up Our Alley,' Predicts First Peak in December; Shows Charts in London Revealing Defense Strides Here

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 12.—John D. Biggers, American lend-lease director in London, said today that the combined efforts of the present programs of the United States and Great Britain, "properly synchronized, will out-produce the Axis by the middle of 1943."

"When Hitler chose his mechanized war effort," Biggers said, "he certainly chose an effort which is right up our alley."

Biggers said he was aware of British criticism of United States production, but declared he was positive the "first major wave of United States production will be harvested in December of this year."

He exhibited production charts which he said had not yet been made public in the United States. They showed:

Machine tools—Production now four times its previous peak.

Merchant ships—A modest acceleration, followed by a big jump in August of this year.

Military aircraft—Here Biggers said he could give actual figures: "One year ago we turned out 500 planes a month. In July, 1941, the figure was 1,455, while in August it was 1,854. By December it will be above 2,000."

Military rifles—Production twice what it was a year ago; modest increases expected from now on.

Smokeless powder—Four times what it was a year ago, and will increase 20 per cent between now and December.

To Double Tank Output

Tanks—"A good many hundreds are being produced each month," Biggers said. "And the total will be doubled between now and December."

20 and 37 Millimeter Guns—No production a year ago. Fair production now, which will be doubled by December.

"I know there has been disappointment about American production," Biggers said. "But you must remember the very nature of mass production means you consume a lot of time getting started. Once you line up your industries you get your harvest of effort."

Biggers estimated the United States will be turning out a ship a day next year. He said he brought with him to Britain two machine tool experts—Adolph Foerster of Cincinnati and Charles Moore of San Francisco.

Small-arms ammunition—Production now double what it was a year ago; by December present production will be doubled.

Machine guns—present production high, but will be almost doubled by December.

Aluminum—No increase until after January, 1942.

Magnesium—More than doubled in the last year.

'Real Curb On Japan's Army'

By Russell Brines

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

Manila, Sept. 12—Establishment of national defense headquarters directly under the Emperor of Japan evidently represents an important victory for Japanese Liberals in their long fight to check the imperialistic campaigns of radical army officers.

The new organization indicates the extent to which Japan is feeling United States and British economic pressure, and the increasing awareness of dangers from the Far Eastern military preparations of American, British, Chinese and Dutch forces.

Japanese Liberals are hoping for a deal with the United States under which Washington will at least relax the order freezing Japanese credits and other economic pressure.

Control Called Essential

To insure any success in this plan, it is absolutely necessary to tighten control over militarists in Manchoukuo and Indo-China. The army began the Manchurian incident and the China affair without orders from Tokyo under conditions of internal unrest far less grave than those of today. Hence, there is an ever-present current danger of such independent action by the army.

The fact that the censor passed the Associated Press report of the new organization indicates that the bureaucratic Government of Japan is attempting to convince the United States that active measures are being taken to eliminate this duality which has been responsible for numerous American representations.

The concurrent arrival of Prince Chichibu in Saigon suggests that the Emperor's elder brother is taking the ruler's personal order to military commanders in Indo-China to avoid an untoward incident. Prince Chichibu has acted in a similar capacity in the past.

In view of the reverence with which the Japanese regards their Emperor, the new headquarters under the throne provide a closer control over the fiery Kwangtun (Manchouko) army. This would tend to check any unauthorized move against the Soviet Union and simultaneously tighten internal control to prevent an uprising in the event of any deal with the United States.

Such a deal is bound to be unpopular with Nipponese expansionists because it would halt the spread of Japanese imperialism and probably mean substantial Japanese concessions.

Gen. Otozo Yamada, commander of the new headquarters, has a substantial following in the army.

CHILE SEIZES 21 GERMANS; ARMS TAKEN

Prominent Reich Citizens Held In Plot; Embassy Aide Implicated

Women's And Men's Organization, "Valuable" Data Bared

[By the Associated Press]

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 12—Chilean police investigating activities harmful to domestic security tonight announced the arrest of twenty-one alleged Nazi leaders in Chile and the seizure of arms and ammunition in raids at Antofagasta.

Confiscated documents also disclosed the existence of both a women's and men's Nazi organization, police said. Other "valuable documents" were said to have been found in a beehive on the farm of one German citizen at Osorno.

Are German Citizens

Those held are German citizens prominent in society and Chilean commerce. They are charged with engaging in activities threatening Chile's domestic security.

The women's outfit is the Sportsgruppen with units located in the principal cities, Santiago, Valparaiso and Concepcion, investigators said.

Walter Boettger, German Embassy commercial attache, was described as head of the groups, but investigators said his diplomatic functions placed him "outside the reach of justice."

Chile Seizes 10 More Germans

[By the Associated Press]

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 12—Ten more German citizens charged with engaging in activities threatening the domestic security of Chile were detained by police last night for investigation.

This brought to thirteen the number held since an investigation of anti-Chilean activities was begun Wednesday. All those held are closely associated with commerce in Chile. An announcement said that Walter Boettger, German Embassy commercial attache, was head of the group, but his diplomatic functions "place his person outside the reach of justice."

Buenos Aires, Sept. 12—The executive branch of the Argentine Government was reported by informed sources today to favor action leading to removal of Edmund von Thermann as German Ambassador to Argentina.

The conservative bloc of the Chamber of Deputies unexpectedly indorsed last night a resolution demanding that von Thermann be declared "personna non grata" on grounds he abused diplomatic privileges.

"Personal Matter"

It was understood, though, that the Administration preferred to have Von Thermann removed by the Berlin Government. The sources said Von Thermann's removal was considered a "personal matter regarding him and his behavior and not a break with the German Government."

The Chamber adjourned last night after hours of debate without voting on the resolution and planned to bring it up again today.

A report by a Congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities charged that Von Thermann was at the head of a Nazi political organization, disciplined by Storm Troops and secret police and financed by assessments against the pay checks of German workers here and their Argentine-born sons.

Buenos Aires Gives Von Thermann Protest

Buenos Aires, Sept. 12 (AP)—German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann cracked back tonight at Congressmen seeking his removal from Argentina, sending the Foreign Office "most energetic protests" against what he called "calumnies" expressed in the Chamber of Deputies debate.

The Nazi envoy announced his action in a formal statement issued while his dismissal was being demanded on the floor of the Chamber in a series of speeches on a resolution presented by a special committee investigating anti-Argentine activities.

"Overstepping Bounds"

That resolution accused von Thermann of "overstepping the bounds of a diplomat and abusing his privileges."

Von Thermann's statement said his protests were based on statements made in debate last night alleging "blackmail" on the part of Nazi leaders in Argentina to obtain money for the National Socialist party.

Sinarquistas' Offer Accepted

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, Sept. 12 — President Manuel Avila Camacho announced last night his willingness to accept an offer of the semi-military Sinarquistas to colonize deserted regions of Lower California.

The Sinarquistas have been opposed bitterly by all of Mexico's labor organizations, as well as the Government party of the Mexican revolution, which have accused them of being Nazi-Fascists, a charge the Sinarquistas deny.

The Sinarquistas offered recently to demonstrate their patriotism by tilling the land in the deserted regions of Lower California, organizing industries and building projected Federal roads at fifty per cent, of the total amount earmarked for the work in the Government budget.

The President said he accepted the offer in principle and asked that detailed plans be submitted.

Output Of Defense Units In Canada Hit By Strike

Oshawa, Ont., Sept. 12 (AP)—Production of military units at General Motors Corporation of Canada plant here came to a standstill during the night because of a two-day-old strike of employes of McKinnon Industries, Ltd., at St. Catherine's, Ont., an official said today.

J. B. Highfield, General Motors plant manager, said the reserve supply of parts obtained from McKinnon Industries, a subsidiary, ran out during the night and he had no idea when production of military units might be resumed.

More than 200,000 food and clothing dealers are likely to be affected the board said, reporting the action had been under consideration for several months.

The licenses will be mandatory for any person engaging in the businesses covered.

Numbers Increasing

They still are coming across the border, as the casual observer can see from the increasing number of uniforms with the U. S. A. identification, and from newspaper stories of interesting individual volunteers.

They are not, however, coming over in sufficient number to make up the deficit in strictly Canadian recruiting.

The midsummer recruiting campaign was successful enough. The army asked for 32,000 men for replacement purposes in the overseas forces, and the campaign ended with 34,625 signed up for service. For a while the volunteers were coming in at the rate of as high as 750 a day.

In the last month or so, however the stream has dwindled to the point where army men are becoming uneasy and, in private at least, definitely express their dissatisfaction.

Reasons for Slump

They mention three principal reasons for the recruiting slump:

1. The fact that Canadian forces overseas have not yet participated in any land battles.

2. Over-emphasis of the urgent need of weapons rather than men. Young men read the recruiting posters urging them to enlist, but at the same time they read or hear speeches suggesting that every available man is needed in war production.

3. Dispatches from the Russian front, telling of the many millions of men involved in the farflung carnage and usually emphasizing the thought that Soviet Russia has more than enough men to win, if only war materials enough can be shipped from this side to keep her going.

The Ministry of Defense has appealed, to employers to encourage workers to enlist, even if that means irksome problems of readjustment and replacement added to the other worries of management.

Advocates of conscription, however, argue that such appeals are only postponing an issue which has to be faced sooner or later.

An editorial in the Gazette, Montreal, suggests that employers are being asked to function as a sort of unofficial selective service organization, taking upon themselves a responsibility properly belonging to the government.

"Employers of labor are being asked, almost in so many words," says the newspaper, "to determine what men can be spared and then, virtually, to send them into the army."

From the beginning of the controversy over conscription for overseas service, opponents of the volunteer system have contended it is unfair to let the more patriotic sections of the population carry all the burden which should be shared by the whole community.

is not required to swear allegiance to the king, and he knows that his Canadian uniform will carry, in plain sight, the identifying letters U. S. A.

In the Royal Canadian air force about 10 per cent of the air crew personnel and an undisclosed percentage of ground crew are citizens of the United States. That could be anywhere from 3000 to 10,000 men. How many there are in the Royal Canadian Navy is not disclosed, but the number is said to be very small compared to the other services.

As Dominion Recruiting at Home Dwindles, Yanks Still Are Volunteering

OTTAWA, Sept. 12 (The Special News Service)—The Yanks have been coming into Canada's armed forces for some time now, and the latest authoritative estimate is that there are about 8000 United States citizens in the Canadian active Army.

Many Earlier Falsified Residence

Precise figures are not given; for in the earlier stages of the war, when it was technically unlawful for a United States citizen to join a foreign army, many a volunteer from south of the border gave his home town as Winnipeg or Toronto or Vancouver and became, statistically, just another Canadian soldier in training for overseas duty.

Now the volunteer from the United States has an openly recognized status on both sides of the line. He is

This argument, of course, is given added weight by the revelation that some Canadian families have as many as four sons overseas, while others have none in uniform, even at home.

The War Interpreted

By Dewitt MacKenzie

President Roosevelt's order to the fleet to shoot on sight whenever Axis raiders invade America's "defensive waters" brings one to the obvious conclusion that a shooting war might develop.

SEP 13 1941

The Chief Executive's statement on this policy, however, makes it clear that we do not seek war and that "there will be no shooting unless Germany continues to seek it."

That puts the future squarely up to Herr Hitler. Berlin thus far has given no indication of what is in his mind.

What we do know is that up to this juncture the Nazi leader has studiously avoided war with the United States If he now forces the issue it will represent a complete change in policy and one which it would seem hard to justify from the standpoint of German strategical needs, since the last thing he can desire is to have the American Navy cut loose against him.

POSSIBLE ATTACK ON LONDON

Still, it's possible that if the Fuehrer believes he can liquidate the Russian danger in the near future, he may contemplate another quick all-out assault on Britain. In that case he might attempt to cut England off from American aid by attacks on our shipping.

There is small doubt that there will be further "incidents" which will involve shooting. However, while it is certain that each one of these is fraught with the danger of war, it strikes me that if they were only occasional they might continue long before precipitating general hostilities.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement is a very sweeping declaration of freedom of the seas. The definition of our field of operations as "in the waters which we deem necessary for our defense" would seem to be very flexible. That field may be altered according to the circumstances of the moment.

It is clear in any event that we intend to send our merchant ships wherever we deem necessary in order to bear aid to those who are waging war against the Axis. Those waters certainly include the Atlantic pathway to Iceland and the route through the Red sea to Egypt, both of which have been declared danger zones by the Axis powers.

CONSIDERABLE LEEWAY

This doesn't mean, of course, that the United States proposes to invade belligerent waters where hostilities are in progress — the English channel, for example. Thus Herr Hitler has a very considerable leeway to avoid trouble if he wants to.

The President's omission of any reference to Japan was taken by some observers to have special significance, as indicating a desire not to say anything which might influence the very delicate conversations now proceeding between Washington and Tokyo in an effort to reach an accord over the Far Eastern situation.

Equally notable was the statement in Tokyo by Koh Ishii, Japanese cabinet information bureau spokesman, who said Japan adhered to the general principles of freedom of the seas. That is particularly striking in view of the fact that Nippon has been up in arms over our shipment of war supplies to the Russian port of Vladivostok.

All this would seem to speak well for the progress of the negotiations, or at least indicates a real desire to reach an understanding.

NAZIS ASKED DATA UPON U. S. DEFENSE

Hamburg Gestapo Demanded Information From Agents In This Country

Spy Trial Testimony Discloses Operation Of Radio Station By F. B. I.

BY ROBERT MCGRADY

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 12—The overwhelming concern of the German espionage system for American production of airplanes and their delivery to Britain in 1940 gave way in 1941 to a desire for information about the American air force itself and charts of American waters, it was disclosed today at the trial of sixteen men charged with espionage conspiracy.

In 1940, according to the messages exchanged by headquarters in Germany and a "spy" radio station on Long Island, the Hamburg Gestapo station demanded information ranging from weather conditions (which were asked to be broadcast daily) to plane and parts production of all the leading aircraft companies. Deliveries to Britain were stressed.

Asking Defense Strength

About the time agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation cracked down upon the spy ring—into which they had planted themselves firmly through counter-espionage measures—Hamburg was demanding information about defense strength in Canada and the United States, sizes of forces amount of equipment and shipyard locations and production.

One message dated June 11, 1941 received by the station here said: "How much money do you have left? It interests us for the sake of the condition of the deposit.

"What has happened to air reports? We urgently need reports on condition American air force, industry and detailed accounts about falling off of production in factories, including machine tool factories through strike agitation."

Always in recent months, the messages indicated, there was a desire on the part of Hamburg to keep agents here supplied with cash, and to prod them for still more information about American defense forces and production.

Two More Stations

Hamburg also suggested, near the end, that two more radio stations be constructed—one in the North and one in the South—and made suggestions as to their operating personnel. Whether the F. B. I. built the stations, as they did the one through which more than 500 messages came, was not disclosed.

That the F. B. I. sent little information to Hamburg was made evident in the handpicked 200 samples of messages read at the trial.

On June 13, 1941, the F. B. I. (through its counter spy) advised Hamburg: "I have asked friends (of Germany) for air-force information. They say it is difficult to get. Do you want newspaper articles?"

The last message read today sent from Long Island June 24, said simply "Have received $6,000. Greetings."

Interest Intensified

In February of this year, the messages indicated, Germany's interest in shipments was intensified. Hamburg asked particularly about war materials being sent to Africa and wondered whether the consignees were friendly or inimical to Germany.

William G. Sebold testified earlier that the German Gestapo assigned him to build and operate the station and to transmit information handed him by spies here.

He said he turned the assignment over to the F. B. I., which has continually supervised spy activities, managed their financial affairs with their German employers, transmitted that part of their information as they saw fit, supplied Germany with whatever misinformation they deemed necessary and then arrested the thirty-three alleged members of the spy ring, seventeen of whom have pleaded guilty.

Minimized Information

From the messages placed in evidence, it appeared that the F. B. I. specialized in minimizing or denying information about which the Hamburg station had inquired.

Thus, the F. B. I. said that the aircraft carrier Saratoga was stationed in the Pacific and had not, as the German headquarters had heard, delivered planes to Halifax.

Obligingly, the F. B. I. carried out an assignment to "observe" the French liner Normandie, which has been tied up to her New York pier for about two years.

Gave Bombsight Plans

Often asked was information on the "new bombsight," details of which Harold M. Kennedy, United States Attorney, charged had been given Germany by one defendant.

Some of the requests were for military journals, but there also were demands for figures considered secret on the monthly production of Grumman, Republic, Curtiss, Bell, Lockheed and other fighting craft, the rate and manner of delivery to England, and any new devices that might have been used.

Hamburg also wanted minute specifications of a new steel and rubber armor plate, hydraulic devices and other industrial and military equipment.

Data On Fake Passport Ring In Havana Offered

Miami, Fla., Sept. 12 (AP)—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., said today he had offered to the United States Attorney General "conclusive evidence in Cuba of a fake passport ring operating chiefly for the benefit of Nazi spies and Gestapo agents."

Vanderbilt declared the ring's ramifications would extend to high Cuban and United States politicians.

"And I mean they are top-rankers, too; not small fry," he said. "We got names, pictures and even obtained a number of the forged passports, which we have forwarded to the State Department in Washington."

He said that after leaving Havana

last night "on advice from high sources," he telephoned Francis Biddle, Attorney General, and that Biddle asked for a complete written report.

Vanderbilt said Miami had become the clearing point for most of the refugees coming to the United States from Europe and the port of entry for most of the Nazi spies and Gestapo agents assigned on quick missions.

PICTURE BUSINESS HELD CUTTHROAT

Willkie Tells Investigating Group Producers Engage in Fiercest Competition.

Washington, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, defending the motion picture producers from "monopoly" charges voiced before a Senate committee, asserted today the movie makers were engaged in "the fiercest cut-throat competition of any industry in the country."

The 1940 Republican Presidential nominee told reporters that instead of co-operating in a calculated program to instill war propaganda into films, the motion picture companies were "cutting each other to pieces" in their efforts to put over box-office successes.

Charges Monopoly

Willkie is representing the movie industry in hearings before the Senate interstate commerce sub-committee on a resolution by Senators Nye, Rep., N. D., and Clark, Dem., Mo., to investigate reports of propaganda in films.

John T. Flynn, newspaper and magazine writer who testified yesterday, urged the committee to act toward breaking up what he charged was a monopolistic combine operating a private censorship against the dissemination of peace appeals while working to involve this country in war.

Not Made By "Big Four".

But Willkie said that the films against which Flynn chiefly complained were not even produced by the "big four" companies.

Willkie listed those companies as Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Warner Brothers and Loew's, which controls Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"This talk of monopoly is laughable," he declared. "Competition in the motion-picture industry is the fiercest of any industry in the country. Instead of there being a monopoly, there is cut-throat competition."

Willkie said he hoped to call the heads of the four large companies to the stand next week to deny the propaganda and monopoly charges.

Meanwhile, Chairman Clark, Dem., Idaho, said the committee probably would arrange to see uncut versions of some of the pictures within a few days to permit members to determine for themselves if they contained war propaganda. Earlier, the committee had rejected the suggestion of Senator McFarland, Dem., Ariz., that the committee recess and see all the pictures questioned.

Says Nye Posed For Film

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—Sponsors of March of Time films said tonight that Senator Nye (Rep., N. D.), who denounced March of Time before a Senate committee inquiry into war propaganda, himself took part in a short subject in 1935.

Louis de Rochemont, producer of March of Time, said the Senator had a role in a specially staged film re-enactment of the proceedings of a Senate committee investigating the activities of munitions makers. Senator Nye at the time, he said, was waging a vigorous campaign against "the international racketeers who re-armed Germany."

De Rochemont reported that Senator Bennett Clark (Dem., Mo.), another taking part in the investigation, also posed before March of Time cameras.

Five Die Before Reaching America—Even Lifeboats Serve As Beds

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 12—Dirty and weary after more than a month at sea, 769 European refugees arrived in New York today aboard the Spanish freighter Navemar, originally built to accommodate fifteen passengers.

Not many among the French, Polish, Czech, German and Russian passengers spoke English, but their expressions seemed to second the remark of Ernst Lachs, 37, a former Vienna city employe, who said:

"It will be wonderful to be here, where a man is free."

Three Die At Sea

En route from Bilbao the Navemar disembarked 330 passengers at Havana and fourteen at Bermuda. During the voyage three died at sea. One more died in Bermuda, and another in Havana.

To reach America, the refugees slept in double-deck cots in the hold, on the decks, and even in lifeboats.

"We could not wash ourselves," said Lachs.

"The drinking water was too warm to drink. The food was spoiled. After Lisbon it was better, but still insufficient. The ship was dirty. The dishes were dirty. The waiters were dirty.

Sleep On Floor

"Some women slept on the floor because the beds were too dirty, and it was hot—so hot they couldn't breathe. They never changed linens, even for sick people."

Forty-one passengers were kept aboard ship because they were running temperatures.

Six head of cattle were taken aboard ship at Lisbon for meat, passengers said, and were slaughtered on deck.

weeks and I am not downhearted."

Clapper said he was amazed at the normalcy of life in England.

An hour after the American Clipper's arrival, the Dixie arrived with three British labor leaders, invited to the United States by William Knudsen, director general, and Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the Office of Production Management.

They were Will Lawther, president of the Mine Workers' Federation; George Isaacs, general secretary of the Printers' Federation and a member of Parliament, and Jim Kaylor, executive officer of the Amalgamated Engineering Society of England.

Acting as spokesman for the group, Lawther said the three have come to "learn everything we can in relation to production" and not to give advice.

Asked what he would say if American labor representatives pressed him for counsel, Lawther replied:

"Brother, I would say, we have no strikes."

U.S. Woman Was Unwilling Hostess to German Soldiers

SEP 13 1941

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—An American woman, who was the unwilling hostess to German soldiers in her home in Biarritz, France, arrived today aboard the American Clipper after a 20-year sojourn in Europe.

Mrs. Jane O'Malley-Keyes, 51-years-old widow and mother of five children, said that a German officer in charge of the first detail of soldiers to occupy her house told her that her American citizenship did not matter.

One group of soldiers resided in her home from last November until last January, Mrs. O'Malley-Keyes said, while a second group arrived three days after the departure of the first group. She said she was not paid for the rooms.

Among the passengers on the Clipper were Maj. Gen. Robert Millville Danford, chief of field artillery, U. S. Army, and Raymond Clapper, newspaper columnist.

Maj. Gen. Danford, who was observing artillery practices in London, said he had "a very interesting three

"Two motor cars of French police drove up to the hotel," he related. "We were told later that the cars flew Swastika flags, though we could not see them from our home.

"Mr. and Mrs. Thyssen were moved without being allowed to take any of their personal belongings. Later, someone came for their toilet articles and night clothes.

"The Thyssens were known to keep the means of committing suicide on their persons at all times. Later, the manager of the hotel, a man named Tamn, said the Thyssens had killed themselves."

Thyssen left Germany November 15, 1939. His whereabouts since that time have become one of the major mysteries of the war.

A native of Convent, La., Plaisance was a member of the University of Michigan faculty before going to France to teach at Montpellier.

DEFENSE OUTPUT WILL BE BOOSTED

Increase In Next 4 Months Due To New Power Available

By CHARLES HARTER

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 12—United States armaments output will be boosted sharply in the next four months, it was disclosed today, by placing in operation at that time 2,500,000 kilowatts of new electric power generating capacity.

It will be the greatest boost in the history of the world, power industry experts estimate, and will give the United States electric plants with output equal to all the rest of the world combined.

The new plants are being built and will go into operation in virtually every section of the country. A survey of the industry shows dozens of these units nearing completion.

Linked With Defense

Their building is directly linked to defense industry and, in most cases, would not have been undertaken at this time had it not been for the Government's request for all-out arms production.

The electric industry itself is building 2,000,000 kilowatts of the new power, and private manufacturers are building the other 500,000 kilowatts.

By far the largest proportion of the electric industry's construction is being undertaken by public utility companies, with Government agencies contributing several hundred thousands of kilowatts added capacities.

This program will round out construction, in 1941 alone, of 4,500,000 kilowatts of generating capacity, of which the electric industry will have contributed 3,500,000 kilowatts capacity and private manufacturers the remaining 1,000,000 kilowatts.

Half Of World's Total

With these additions, the electric generating capacity of the United States will reach this winter the tremendous total of something more than 63,000,000 kilowatts—probably half the total of the whole world.

The power industry already has on order plants which will add 6,400,000 kilowatts to the nation's capacity in the next two years, but many Washington officials, forecasting a spiraling rise of defense activities, say they are fearful that even this will not be enough.

Plans already are in formulation for a lessening of electric consumption in non-defense uses. These include cutting down on street-lamp use, darkening electric signs, seeking householders' cooperation in electricity use.

Capacities Lowered

Perhaps the destructiveness of World War II already has lowered European and Asiatic power capacities below the maximum levels estimated here.

It seems certain that the Royal Air Force, in its recent severe raids on Germany's industrial areas, has wiped out some of the electric power capacity of the nation which formerly ranked next to the United States in electric production.

Back in 1937, when the United States already produced one third the world's total electricity, Germany was second in production with 10.6 per cent. of the total.

But those comparisons today are obsolete. The United States in peacetime was building power faster than other nations can under wartime pressure and the exigencies of the present emergency have doubled and trebled the construction efforts of American power men.

The changing power picture can best be seen by a comparison of manufacturing methods during World War I and World War II.

In 1914, United States plants were rated at 5,250,000 kilowatts. By the time the war ended, they represented 9,000,000 kilowatts. Only about 15 per cent of industry used electricity in its work. Now 85 per cent of all industrial output is powered by electricity.

But the utilities' organization say they are extending every effort to stay ahead of the growing demands. Operating companies of the North American Corp. system, for example, are increasing their capacities 37 per cent in a program which already has added 100,000 kilowatts of power to Washington, D. C., and, just today added 60,000 more kilowatts to the manufacturing area of Cleveland.

Other great new power increases included 147,000 kilowatts at Chicago 75,000 in Detroit, 100,000 in Georgia 50,000 in Philadelphia.

This increase in production, just at this moment, is due to the fact that the big generators require from 16 to 24 months to build. When the administration called for high-pressure industrial activity in June, 1940, the utilities companies placed orders for their new power plants. These orders are in process of completion.

Restrictions on Gasoline Remain Despite Report of Investigators

SEP 13 1941

Washington, Sept. 12. (AP)—In the face of a Senate committee's report that the East has a sufficient gasoline supply for motorists, the Defense Petroleum Coordination Office made no move today to lift restrictions on sale of motor fuel.

Acting-Petroleum Co-ordinator Ralph K. Davis said he stood pat on his previous appraisal of the situation, adding "the necessity for public co-operation continues."

"To the co-ordinator's office, the admittedly low condition of peroleum stocks on the East coast continues to mean shortage and the necessity for appropriate action," Davies declared after the committee released its conclusions yesterday.

Preliminary Report Filed

Stressing that the report was merely a preliminary one, Senator Maloney (D-Conn), sub-committee chairman, had asserted that "the shortage, as we see it, is a shortage of surplus and not a shortage of products, or a lack of facilities to transport them."

The Senate group saw no danger of a lack of fuel for domestic heating or for operating defense industries, and said "with proper conservation motorists should find it possible to acquire the gasoline and oil products which they need."

Present restrictions on gasoline sales along the Eastern seaboard include nightly closing of filling stations, and a retail gasoline supply reduced 10 per cent below the July level. The curtailment program was invoked after Harold L. Ickes, petroleum co-ordinator, foresaw an Eastern shortage as an aftermath of the transfer of 50 American tank ships to Britain. The tankers formerly carried oil from Gulf ports to East coast terminals.

Threatens New Inquiry

Reliable sources declared today that unless Ickes and other officials removed the sales restrictions, the Senate committee would resume its public hearings to find out why. The committee remarked, however, that it did not feel that the subject of the nightly filling station curfew fell within its province.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 12 (AP)—The following communiqué was issued by the State Information Bureau tonight:

Until the beginning of September the following war matériel has been catalogued from the large amount captured by our troops:

Nearly 25,000 rifles, nearly 2,000 light machine guns, nearly 1,000 heavy machine guns, nearly 600 trench mortars, more than 800 guns, including 150 heavy howitzers, ninety light howitzers, 180 light guns, 350 anti-tank guns.

In addition, 669 tanks and sixty-seven armored cars were destroyed or damaged. Among the tanks, 150 have been inspected and catalogued and among the armored cars twenty-five can be reconditioned by light repairs.

Our troops also have captured 300 tractors and 1,250 motor trucks. Most of these were damaged by the enemy and will have to be repaired before they can be used.

After relatively simple repairs several hundred trucks can be put in first-class shape. The rest will yield valuable scrap, spare parts, tires, etc.

The number of locomotives captured is about thirty, the number of railway cars about 600. Most of the rolling stock was damaged. In this connection, it may be mentioned that two armored trains and railway gun batteries were captured.

The number of captured horses already is nearly 8,000, including some very good specimens. About 1,500 horse-drawn vehicles so far are listed.

Special attention is merited by the considerable stock of fuels and oils captured. No information can be given here as to their extent.

Engineering and signaling material, explosives, building materials, food, cattle and clothing were captured in large quantities. A considerable part have been reserved for use of the local population. Rags, scrap iron, etc., later will be transported to the rear for industrial use.

The Finnish Naval Ministry issued the following:

Up to the present our naval forces in action in the Gulf of Finland have destroyed seventy enemy vessels totaling 100,000 gross registered tons. Of this total our ships have sunk fifty-five vessels, our coastal artillery fourteen and our air force one. An additional five vessels and two aircraft have been captured.

In fighting on Lake Ladoga we have so far sunk ten enemy vessels. Of these one was a gunboat and six were big transport lighters loaded with horses, guns, armored cars and other war matériel and carrying a large number of troops.

The Finnish Air Force issued the following:

Our fighters and anti-aircraft arm have shot down the following number of enemy aircraft in the period June 25-Sept. 11: 120 bombers, 281 fighters, 23 reconnaissance and other aircraft, and five observation balloons, altogether 429. In addition nineteen aircraft and six barrage balloons were captured, making a grand total of 454.

The above fighters do not include damaged aircraft or aircraft destroyed on the ground. It may be mentioned that at Taeckton Airport, Hangoe, there were about fifty fighters at the beginning of the war of which, according to information given by a prisoner of war, our artillery fire has damaged twelve.

MOSCOW, Saturday, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué today:

In the course of Sept. 12 our troops fought the enemy along the whole front.

After stubborn fighting our troops evacuated the town of Chernigov.

On Sept. 10 fifty-three German planes were destroyed in air combats and on enemy airdromes. We lost thirty-two planes.

On Sept. 10 our armored cutters sank several German cutters and two barges carrying infantry in the Gulf of Finland. At night the enemy ships tried to steal up to our coast and land troops. Soviet navy men thwarted their plans.

At full speed Lieutenant Eskoff's and Lieutenant Unguskoff's armored cutters began ramming the enemy ships and sank four German cutters, one after another.

Hearing no firing the Germans sent out two barges with tugs after the cutters. Our commanders decided again to ram them without opening fire. The armored cutters struck powerful blows at the tugs and then at the cutters. Being rammed through, the barges also quickly went to the bottom.

Several hundred Nazi men and officers found their graves on the bottom of the Gulf of Finland.

On Sept. 11 the German fascist air force repeatedly attempted to raid Leningrad but every time was driven off by our air force and anti-aircraft artillery fire. About 11 P. M. isolated enemy planes broke through to the city and dropped incendiary and explosive bombs.

The several fires that broke out in dwelling houses were extinguished. In air combats Sept. 11 at Leningrad approaches and over the city our air force and anti-aircraft artillery, according to incomplete figures, destroyed eleven German planes.

British

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP)—The British Admiralty issued this communiqué today:

An enemy bomber which attempted to attack one of our convoys was promptly shot down in flames by H. M. S. Vimiera (Lieut. Comdr. A. A. MacKenzie, R. N. R.)

No damage or casualties were suffered by the convoy or the escort.

This is the third enemy aircraft which has been shot down by H. M. S. Vimiera while escorting convoys.

The Admiralty issued the following:

SEP 13 1941

It is now know that in addition to an enemy bomber shot down by H. M. S. Vimiera in an air attack on one of our convoys in the North Sea last night a second enemy bomber was damaged.

One small merchant ship was damaged, but is now safely in harbor, and one man lost his life in another merchant ship.

Several attacks were made by the enemy, but the majority were driven off by the fire of escorts and defensive armament of the merchant ships in convoy.

The German High Command communiqué today claims that the German air force last night sank three freighters totaling 21,000 tons out of a strongly protected convoy southeast of Yarmouth. In fact, no ship was sunk and the ship damaged was of under 3,000 tons.

The Air Ministry issued the following early today:

Last night aircraft of the Bomber Command attacked objectives in Northern Germany, including Kiel and Baltic port of Rostock. The weather was not good but considerable forces bombed targets at both places and left large fires burning.

The docks at Havre and Boulogne were also bombed.

Aircraft of the Coastal Command on patrol last night bombed docks at the Haugesund airdrome near Stavanger and enemy shipping off the Dutch and Norwegian coasts. Two enemy ships off the Dutch coast and another off the coast of Norway were hit. Three aircraft of the Bomber Command are missing.

The Air Ministry issued the following tonight:

Early this afternoon Bleinheim aircraft of the Bomber Command escorted by fighters attacked an enemy convoy off the Dutch coast. One of the larger ships was hit, set on fire and left with a heavy list to port.

Aircraft of the Fighter Command this afternon carried out offensive operations over the North Sea and the coast of Holland. In the course of these one enemy fighter was destroyed. One of our fighters is missing.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries said today:

Last night a few enemy aircraft flew over the eastern side of England, mainly in coastal areas.

Some bombs were dropped, causing little damage and injuring a small number of people.

The Air and Home Security Ministries tonight issued the following:

Single enemy aircraft dfopped bombs in the northeast coastal district this morning. Only minor damage was caused. No casualties have been reported.

CAIRO, Sept. 12 (AP)—The British Middle East Command issued the following communiqué today:

Libya—Both at Tobruk and in the frontier area there was some exchange of shellfire.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Italian High Command said today:

Air and naval bases of Malta were effectively bombed last night by units of the Italian Air Force. Others of our planes hit refineries at Haifa, causing considerable fires there, and the Larnaca Airport on the island of Cyprus.

The enemy carried out a new air raid on Palermo, with four dead and twelve injured among the population and several buildings damaged.

In North Africa, on land fronts, activity of artillery and advanced troops was reported.

Italian and German planes attacked depots and defense works at Tobruk and Matruh. They scored direct hits on outlying aviation fields and railroad installations at Fuka. Considerable destruction was caused.

British airplanes dropped several bombs on Bengazi. There were no casualties.

In East Africa attemped enemy attacks in the Culquaber sector were promptly frustrated.

In the Atlantic one of our submarines commanded by Commander Carlo Feciani Cossat sank a large oil tanker and hi with a torpedo a 5,450-ton steamer, which certainly may be considered lost.

Russian

Moscow, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued the following communique today:

During the night of September 11 our troops fought the enemy along the whole front.

At dawn on September 8 Senior Flight Lieutenant Ossivov of the air force commanded by Colonel Toropchen, operating at the approaches to Leningrad, discovered an enemy airdrome with fifty Junkers 87's and Messerschmitt 109's. At 10 A. M. a group of our aircraft suddenly attacked this airdrome. By direct hits and machine-gun fire the Soviet pilots destroyed twenty-two Fascist planes.

One group of planes of Major Blaroveshchensky's unit again attacked the enemy airdrome. As a result of this bombing, a big fire broke out. Airplanes, fuel tanks and buildings burst into flames.

The same day flyers of this air unit destroyed fifty enemy trucks and several anti-aircraft guns.

In air battles at the approaches to Leningrad the same day Senior Flight Lieutenant Gavrinetz particularly distinguished himself. He attacked a group of enemy planes and brought down one Messerschmitt, and then made for another Fascist fighter and rammed it. The Fascist plane crashed. Gavrinetz was uninjured.

Ever since the outbreak of the war the artillery regiment commanded by Major Didenko has been courageously fighting the German Fascist hordes. The regiment is at present repulsing all enemy attempts to force the Dnieper.

On one day's hostilities alone this artillery regiment destroyed several enemy batteries, a column of motorized infantry and a transport column, and sank three enemy cutters with men and twelve heavy machine guns aboard.

The leading gunner of Chuguyev's battery silenced three Fascist guns. After his first salvoes the German artilleryme nfled into the forest. German tractors presently were seen approaching the disabled guns. Two salvoes and they, too, were destroyed.

On September 5 six German tanks attacked our infantry, moving under cover of Chuguyev's battery. From behind a railway embankment they opened fire at our infantry. Our battery disabled four of the enemy tanks, the others taking to flight.

The Gdov guerrillas, by their resolute operations, are disorganizing the enemy's rear and ruthlessly exterminating enemy manpower. For three weeks the Germans have been unable to maintain telephone and telegraph communications between Grov and Pskov and army headquarters.

Gas 'Shortage' Real: Ickes

SEP 13 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 12—Secretary Harold Ickes, at variance with a Senate committee on the question of petroleum supplies, believes "persons in the East who contend there is no gasoline shortage may have to eat their words six months from now."

This, Ickes suggested to interviewers, will be the situation if the gasoline available at present along the Atlantic seaboard is expended recklessly without a thought to the other uses to which transportation facilities may be put.

Conservation "Essential Now"

Conservation is essential now, he declared, so that when carriers are required to haul fuel oil this winter, there will still be sufficient gasoline stocks on hand to meet all needs.

"If we should wait until there is an acute shortage before we begin to conserve supplies, there would be a loud outcry from the public and from some of the people in Washington, D. C., as well," he said. "Our job is to see that no acute shortage occurs. In order to do that we have to keep up storage."

Cites Aluminum Experience

Advised that a Senate committee had found no evidence of gasoline shortage in the East, the Interior Secretary and Petroleum Coordinator said the committee's report could be likened to the shortsightedness of industrial and governmental leaders who allowed the aluminum crisis to develop.

He recalled that there were persons in the East who wouldn't admit an aluminum shortage until it became so obvious no one could deny it.

"I think we have the same thing here," he commented.

Mr. and Mrs. Ickes are returning to the Capital by train today after a vacation in the Olympic National Park, in northwestern Washington.

CHEMIST SEES TIRES RATIONED

Says Defense [illegible] Tighten Regulations

Atlantic City, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The possibility of rationing tires to motorists was forecast to the American Chemical Society rubber division in a special symposium, which closed the society's annual meeting today.

E. G. Holt, chief of the rubber division, Department of Agriculture, told the country's leading rubber chemists at last night's session that regulations may have to be extended to actual final consumption of rubber goods. This, he declared, may affect motorists.

It is already questionable, he added, whether the rubber available will supply both military and civilian needs.

Imports Increased Sharply.

For more than a year an attempt has been made to build up a supply of natural rubber by increasing imports.

This stock pile in August this year reached 288,000 tons, and there are hopes it will mount to nearly 600,000 tons by the first of the year.

The latter figure is 140,000 tons less than estimates of the amount of rubber the nation is using this year.

"Rubber," said Mr. Holt, "is the United States Achilles heel in war defense. Foreign governments know this better than the average American."

Rubber chemistry experts pointed out that not only does defense require huge extra amounts of rubber, but that virtually all industries in the nation must use more rubber in speeding up business.

SEP 13 1941

Synthetic Production Pushed.

This year's production of synthetic rubber in the United States is only 1.5 per cent of the nation's needs, reported E. R. Bridgewater, manager of the du Pont company's rubber chemicals division.

He predicted that by the end of 1942 the United States would have capacity for making 5,800 tons of synthetic rubber a month, which he said is believed to be more than Germany makes.

That would make the nation's supply reasonably secure, he added, but if imports of natural rubber should cease abruptly, the United States would have to dispense with rubber for all except the most essential needs.

In its report, the committee said the way the situation had been handled had created "unnecessary alarm." In the opinion of the committeemen, "this was caused by over-enthusiasm on the part of those charged with the direction of the petroleum situation."

3 From Italian Ship To Be Given New Trials

Trio Was Found Guilty Of Sabotage Aboard Vessel In Hampton Roads

Norfolk, Sept. 12 (AP)—A new trial will be given Capt. Paul Stefano Saglietto, former master of the Italian freighter San Guiseppe, and two of the ship's firemen, who were found guilty of sabotage aboard the vessel by a jury in Federal District Court June 27, under an opinion and order by Judge John Paul sustaining a defense motion to set the verdict aside.

Captain Saglietto and the two firemen were found guilty of having had a part in the destruction of the San Guiseppe's main engines in March while the vessels lay at anchor in Hampton Roads, and Captain Saglietto also was found guilty of an additional count of conspiring to commit the sabotage.

In his opinion, Judge Paul held that the damage committed aboard the San Guiseppe was not a violation of Section 502, Title 18, of the United States code annotated, the Federal statute under which the three were brought to trial.

Five Merchant Ships May Go To Coast Guard

Would Release Six Cutters From Atlantic Weather Patrol For Other Service

Washington, Sept. 12 (AP)—The Coast Guard and the navy are considering a plan to use five merchant vessels for Atlantic weather patrol, thereby releasing six cutters for service where their armament and speed would be more useful.

The cutters, which now are at two mid-Atlantic weather stations, are the Tampa, Mojave, Bibb, Spencer, Hamilton and Duane.

The ships which would be taken over by the navy and released to the Coast Guard, are: The Aetna Detroit, Mid-West Tronsportation Company; The John Gehm, Buffalo, N Y., Bison Steamship Company; the J. Floyd Massey, Jr., Duluth, Minn., Steel Products Transportation Company; the Lake Chelan, Buffalo, Lake Chelan Steamship Corporation; the Saginaw, Wilmington, Del., Saginaw Dock and Terminal Company.

Italian Seamen Leave New York For Home

17, Interned After Seizure Of Ships, Board Spanish Liner Marques De Comillas

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—Seventeen Italian seamen, interned in a Montana camp after the seizure of Italian ships in New York harbor last spring, boarded the Spanish liner Marques de Comillas today for the first leg of a journey to their homeland.

Immigration authorities said the men were over military age, crippled or ill and had been guaranteed safe passage home by Great Britain.

There are between 800 and 900 interned seamen at the Missoula (Mont.) camp and immigration authorities said they believed most of the men in the above three classifications have been returned home.

TO ESTABLISH NEW AIR LINE TO AFRICA

Pan American Granted Authority By CAB To Operate To Southwest Africa

Flights Will Be Made From Miami, Via Puerto Rico, Trinidad And Brazil

SEP 13 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 12—The Civil Aeronautics Board today granted Pan American Airways authority to establish a new commercial air line between Miami, Fla., and "a point or points" in Southwest Africa.

The commercial air line will operate via San Juan, Puerto Rico; Port-of-Spain, Trinidad; Belem and Natal, Brazil and thence across the South Atlantic.

The certificate for the route will expire in five years, or six months after the Secretary of State has notified the board that the continuance of service is no longer required in the interest of national defense.

Separate From Air Ferries, Inc.

The commercial line is seperate from Air Ferries, Inc., organized by Pan American to ferry warplanes from the United States to the West coast of Africa and from there to the Middle East.

Another company recently organized by Pan American, Airways-African, Ltd., will carry passengers, property and mail entirely within Africa, and also carry spare airplane parts to the Middle East and assist in returning ferry personnel.

Morgenthau's Stand Assailed

SEP 13 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 12—A group of Senators protested in a joint statement today that Secretary Morgenthau favored use of "the Government surpluses of wheat and cotton . . . as a club to hammer down farm prices."

The statement from the office of Chairman Ellison D. Smith (Dem., S. C.) of the Senate Agricultural Committee, carried the names of Senators Smith, James O. Eastland (Dem., Miss.), William J. Bulow (Dem., S. D.), Lloyd Spencer (Dem., Ark.), Hattie W. Caraway (Dem., Ark.) and Roger C. Peace (Dem., S. C.). The six Senators, all from farm States, declared that a small group in Washington was trying "to control prices by the indiscriminate and ruthless use of these surpluses."

"Outside His Jurisdiction"

Senator Eastland said the protet was framed after the Secretary of the Treasury had asserted earlier this week that release of Government loans stocks of cotton and wheat could prevent a "damaging rise in prices."

"Since when have the duties of the Secretary of the Treasury been so extended as to now include the broad field of agriculture?" The statement asked. "It would seem that the duties already assigned him are fully capable of taking up his time."

Debt At New High, Interest At All-Time Low

SEP 13 1941

Washington, Sept. 12 (AP)—With the public debt at an all-time high of nearly $51,000,000,000, Secretary Morgenthau reported today that the interest rate on it was at the lowest level since the beginning of the first World War.

The computed interest rate of the public debt last month was 2.48 per cent., a drop of .04 per cent. from July. This compared with the all-time high rate of 4.339 per cent. in the 1921 fiscal year when the debt was $23,737,000,000.

The reduction in the rate during August resulted from the sale of $1,074,000,000 of series B tax anticipation notes which bear an interest rate of .048 per cent. The B series runs from $100 to $1,000,000. In addition, the Treasury sold $20,000,000 of series A notes which bear interest of 1.92 per cent. This series runs from $25 to $100.

Rules Britain Must Pay Taxes In Connecticut

State Attorney General Points To $500,000 To Be Due From Defense Plants

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 12 (AP)—The British Government will have to pay about $500,000 in taxes on $24,600,000 invested in defense plants in five Connecticut cities, despite its request for exemption, Francis A. Pallotti, Attorney General, ruled today.

"I agree with the view that all possible aid should be given to the British Government at this time," Pallotti said in an opinion to Charles J. McLaughlin, State Tax Commissioner.

"However, our sympathy with their cause and our national policy cannot avail us in the absence of treaty or statutory provisions," he said.

The office of Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, on July 19 wrote to the tax commissioner saying that "it would be unfortunate if the authorities of Connecticut should undertake to enforce payment of the taxes in question, by interference with the property of a foreign sovereign."

AMERICAN LOST AGAIN

Passaic Man Missing After Release Was Promised.

Washington, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Dr. Witold Putowski, war-stranded native of Passaic, N. J., has been lost again in the German invasion of Russia, although the way was believed cleared recently for him to return to this country.

Representative Gordon Canfield, Republican, of New Jersey, in a House speech last June demanded that Russia act on the American Government's repeated requests for the release of Dr. Putowska from Lwos, Poland. Shortly afterward the State Department told Mr. Canfield it was informed by the Soviet ambassador that Dr. Putowska had been released and would be given an exit permit.

In a new report to Mr. Canfield the State Department advised that the American Ambassador at Moscow was told by the Commissariat for Foreign affairs that on August 15 no information could be obtained on the whereabouts of Dr. Putkowski.

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (AP)—German military headquarters issued the following special communiqué today:

In the North Atlantic submarines attacked a large convoy of more than forty ships, strongly protected by corvettes and destroyers.

The submarines, in a persistent day-long fight, up to date have sunk twenty-two steamers totaling 134,000 tons. An additional two ships amounting to 11,000 tons were torpedoed and their loss also is apparent.

The attack on the enemy convoy is being continued.

Today's regular headquarters' communiqué said:

Offensive operations in the East are progressing favorably, despite bad weather and difficult terrain.

As announced in a special report, submarines in the North Atlantic attacked a large enemy convoy of more than forty ships, which was strongly protected by corvettes and destroyers.

In persistent battles, lasting several days, submarines to date have sunk twenty-two steamers totaling 134,000 tons. Two additional ships amounting to 11,000 tons were torpedoed. Their loss also is assumed. The attack on the enemy convoy is being continued.

In the fight against British supply shipping the air force last night sank three freighters totaling 21,000 tons from a protected convoy southeastward of Great Yarmouth. Bombs damaged a light British cruiser in the same waters and another merchantman northeastward of Alnwick.

Other bombers attacking from low altitudes scored heavy-caliber hits on a blast furnace plant near Middlesborough and on port facilities on the east coast of the isle.

Patrol boats on convoy duty in the English Channel repulsed repeated attacks of British speedboat units on a convoy under their protection. They sank three of the attacking speedboats.

Naval coastal batteries participated in the skirmish and drove other boats away. All of the convoyed vessels reached their destination unharmed and undamaged.

British planes last night attacked a Northern German coastal region with little effect. The civilian population suffered a number of dead and wounded. Anti-aircraft batteries brought down two enemy bombers.

BUENOS AIRES, SEPT 12-(AP)-THE INFLUENTIAL NEWSPAPER LA NACION TOLD ITS READERS TONIGHT TO EXPECT A UNITED STATES-JAPANESE AGREEMENT TO KEEP WAR OUT OF THE PACIFIC BECAUSE IT SAID PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH MEANT AN EVENTUAL CLASH WITH THE AXIS IN THE ATLANTIC.

"TO EMBARK ON A STRUGGLE IN THE ATLANTIC," THE EDITORIAL SAID, "IT IS NECESSARY TO FEEL MORE OR LESS TRANQUIL IN THE PACIFIC."

THE PRESIDENT'S ORDER TO THE NAVY WAS INTERPRETED AS A DEVICE TO AVOID LONG CONGRESSIONAL DEBATE WHICH WOULD BE ENTAILED IN A FORMAL DECLARATION OF WAR, AND THE MOVE AGAINST HITLER WAS COMPARED WITH PRESIDENT JEFFERSON'S ACTION AGAINST NAPOLEON.

TOKYO, SATURDAY, SEPT. 13-(AP)-JAPANESE NEWSPAPERS SAID TODAY THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S ORDER TO SHOOT AT AXIS SHIPS IN AMERICAN DEFENSE WATERS WAS "INITIATION OF UNDECLARED WAR IN EFFECTIVELY BLOCKADED ZONES" AND LARGE HEADLINES CALLED IT AN ATTACK ON GERMANY.

DISAPPOINTMENT WAS GENERAL OVER THE PRESIDENT'S FAILURE TO MENTION THE ORIENT OR INCLUDE SOME PHRASE DISCLOSING WHETHER THERE WAS PROGRESS IN TALKS BETWEEN SECRETARY HULL AND JAPANESE AMBASSADOR KICHISABURO NOMURA.

THE JAPAN TIMES AND ADVERTISER, ENGLISH-LANGUAGE ORGAN OF THE FOREIGN OFFICE, SAID THE SPEECH "STRIKES THE FAR EAST AS A VERBAL ANTICLIMAX."

THE ORGAN COMPLAINED THAT "THE WORLD WILL HAVE TO WAIT EITHER FOR HIS STATEMENT OF POLICY TOWARD JAPAN OR PRACTICAL EVIDENCE OF SUCH A POLICY APPLIED WITHOUT A PRELIMINARY SPEECH."

THE SPEECH CONTAINED NOTHING NEW, THE NEWSPAPER SAID. IT CONTINUED:

SEP 13 1941

"THE PRESIDENT DESIRED TO REGULARIZE ACTIONS ALREADY TAKEN BY A CLEAR DEFINITION OF POLICY TO WARRANT FURTHER OPERATIONS ON AN EXTENSIVE SCALE, AND THEREIN DISCLOSES THE INITIATION OF AN UNDECLARED WAR IN EFFECTIVELY BLOCKADED ZONES.

"CONSEQUENTLY HE REAFFIRMS A DECISION ALREADY MADE KNOWN BY WORD AND DEED--THAT THE UNITED STATES NO LONGER SUBSCRIBES TO LAW AND PRECEDENT. ROOSEVELT HAS CREATED HIS OWN LAW AND NOW DEFENDS IT ON A NEW PRINCIPLE OF FREEDOM OF THE SEAS--FREEDOM TO ATTACK ANY FOREIGN WARSHIP IF HE THINKS IT INTENDS TO ATTACK AMERICAN SHIPS."

DECLARING THAT PROTECTION OF LINES OF SUPPLY BY THE UNITED STATES NAVY MEANS ACTIVE PARTICIPATION IN NAVAL WARFARE, THE NEWSPAPER ASSERTED THAT THE TERM DEFENSIVE WATERS WOULD WARRANT FLEET OPERATIONS ANYWHERE. IT FORECAST ACTIVE CONVOYS BY THE AMERICAN NAVY.

CHUGAI SHOGYO, ORGAN OF BIG BUSINESS, TOLD ITS READERS THAT ALTHOUGH THE PRESIDENT HAD OMITTED MENTION OF JAPAN THIS DID NOT MEAN HE WOULD REFRAIN FROM SPEAKING ON THE ORIENT AT SOME FUTURE TIME.

SUBS, PLANES BATTER CONVOY; 8 SHIPS LOST, BRITISH REPORT

3 Separate Attacks Made In Atlantic; Fourth Eluded

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 13—Battered by two U-boat attacks and an air assulat in a raging storm, and just missing a fight with a German surface raider, the bulk of a British convoy in the Atlantic nevertheless reached port with the loss of but eight ships, the Admiralty said today. Three ships of the convoy were sunk by torpedoes and four by bombs. One ship damaged by a bomb later foundered in the gale, it was said.

The Admiralty, highly praising the conduct of the convoy's men, gave credit in large measure for bringing the majority of the craft through the hazardous situations to Lieutenant Commander G. A. Thring, D.S.O., in command of the senior escort ship.

U-Boats Attack First

Far out at sea the convoy was attacked first by U-boats, and two ships were hit and sunk in a few minutes, according to the British account.

The steamer Brandenburg picked up nearly all of the men from one of the torpedoed ships, while the sloop Deptford lowered a boat to rescue the other crewmen and went to hunt the U-boat. Later the Deptford picked up her boat loaded with survivors from the second torpedoed ship.

An air attack by six four-engined German bombers came twelve hours later. One merchant ship was sunk outright, and two others sank soon. The engine room of a fourth was wrecked and the ship had to be abandoned.

A fifth ship was struck by a bomb, but signaled that she could go on. Boat crews rescued the survivors of all the bombed ships.

Another Sub Assault

The second U-boat attack was made the following morning. The Brandenburg, with more than double her own complement aboard, was hit and sank at once. Only one man was saved.

Two ships attacked the submarine and possibly damaged it, the British said.

Finally The Gale

A day later the convoy was warned that a German warship was in the vicinity. Lieutenant Commander Thring changed his course and the Deptford prepared to cover the convoy with a smoke screen, but the raider did not appear.

Running into bad weather, the convoy was forced to heave to in a fierce gale for almost two days and nights. It was then that the ship damaged in the air attack sank. The entire crew was saved in extraordinarily rough seas.

Fierce Gale Combines With Torpedoes To Plague Freighters

Admiralty Lauds Heroism And Judgment Of Naval Officers

BY RUSSELL LANDSTRO

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 13—The Admiralty in an unusual announcement tonight disclosed that a large British convoy had clashed with German submarines and four-engined bombers in a running battle which began in mid-ocean and continued for three days, the British losing eight ships and, it was indicated, scores of lives.

The majority of the convoy has now arrived safely, the Admiralty said, but it told a spectacular story of a bitter battle at sea in which the weather combined with German torpedoes and bombs to plague the long string of merchant vessels.

Rescues Under Fire

It was a story of gallant rescues under fire of men whose lives were only to be lost a few hours later in subsequent attack.

The Admiralty as usual failed to specify the dates of the attacks and was silent on the number of ships in the convoy, but qualified sources insisted it was impossible that this convoy could have been the same which the Germans claim has lost thirty-one vessels, including three warships, under their attack in the last few days.

Extraordinary Circular

The Admiralty never has been known to disclose anything relating to convoys until a number of days after they have reached port and have been unloaded, whereas the Germans reported their big attack was continuing Friday.

Briefly it was a story of three ships being sunk by submarine torpedoes, four by bombs from the air, and an eighth, damaged under fire, going down in a gale.

The details were told by the Admiralty in a circular of a type used only in extraordinary circumstances.

Two Escorts Mentioned

The Admiralty account mentioned only two escort vessels, the sloop Deptford and the destroyer Velox, each of 990 tons.

This is the story as the Admiralty told it:

"Two attacks by U-boats, one attack by Focke-Wulf aircraft, a terrific storm and a narrow escape from a German surface raider were the experiences of one convoy in the Atlantic.

Naval Officer Praised

"Although three ships of the convoy were sunk by torpedoes, four by bombs and one damaged by bombs later foundered in a gale, the majority of the convoy got safely through.

"This was largely due to the organization and ability of the naval officer in command of the senior escort ship.

"At one time this officer (Lieut. Com. G. A. Thring, D. S. O.), commanding the sloop Deptford, was faced with the imminent danger of a lone fight against a German raider of greatly superior armament. Luckily the German raider failed to find the convoy.

Marked By Gallant Rescues

"The story of this convoy also was marked by gallant rescues carried out in difficult and dangerous circumstances by men of the merchant navy.

"It was far out in the Atlantic early one morning that the first attack was made. This was by a U-boat. Two ships of the convoy were hit and sank in a few minutes.

"Without a thought for her own safety, the steamer Brandenburg hauled out of the convoy and went to the rescue. She picked up nearly all of the complement of one of the torpedoed ships.

Boat Is Lowered

"H. M. S. Deptford lowered a boat to rescue the crew of the other torpedoed ship, while the sloop went on hunting for the U-boat. Later she picked up her own boat and the survivors from the lost ship. The convoy sailed on.

"About twelve hours later came the air attack. Six four-engined German aircraft swooped down on the convoy. Although the escort as well as defensively armed merchant ships put up a fierce fire, the Focke-Wulf Condors pressed home their attack.

"One merchant ship was sunk outright. Two others were so heavily hit that they sank soon afterward. The engine room of a fourth ship was wrecked and she had to be abandoned.

Fifth Ship Hit

"A fifth ship was hit by a bomb, but sent a signal to say she would carry on with the convoy. A German aircraft which was reported to have crashed later in the day is believed to have been one of those which attacked the convoy and was badly damaged.

"Immediately after this attack three ships of the convoy hauled out of line to rescue survivors. The destroyer Velox (Lieut. Com. E. G. Roper, D.S.O., R.N.) stood by the rescue ships. Still the convoy sailed on.

"It was early the next morning when the Velox and three rescue ships caught up with the convoy. A few hours later came the second U-boat attack.

"The steamer Brandenburg, which had carried out such gallant rescue work at the time of the first submarine attack and had a large number of survivors on board, was hit and sank immediately. Only one man was saved.

" 'The tragic loss of this ship with more than double her own complement on board after her gallant work of the previous day is one more page on the roll of honor of the men of the merchant navy who died doing more than their duty,' said a report made by Lieutenant Commander Thring.

"The Deptford and the Velox attacked a submerged submarine and possibly damaged it. Still the convoy sailed on.

Course Is Altered

"A day later came wireless messages showing a raiding German warship was in the vicinity. It was possible she might appear over the horizon at any minute. Thring made plans accordingly.

"The course was altered and the Deptford prepared to cover the convoy with a smoke screen while she engaged the enemy should the raider appear. But the raider did not find them.

"Now the weather was getting bad. For the best part of two days and nights the convoy was hove to in a fierce gale. This was too great a strain for the ship which had been damaged in the air attack. She began to sink.

Another Stands By

"Another merchant ship stood by her. By an extremely fine feat of seamanship the whole of the crew of the sinking ship were rescued in the face of the mountainous seas running at the time.

"In commenting on this the commodore of the convoy said, 'How they did it I do not know, but it must have been magnificent work.'

"After the gale had subsided the convoy proceeded to port without further incident.

"When the full reports were received the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty sent a leter of appreciation to the masters and ships' companies of the steamers Iceland and Coxwold for their rescue work after the air attack.

Posthumously Commended

"The master of the ill-fated Brandenburg (Capt. William Henderson) was posthumously commended for his services in rescuing the complement of one of the ships sunk in the first U-boat attack.

"Lieutenant Commander Thring, who had dealt so ably with the series of difficult problems, won high praise from the men in the ships he had brought through.

"The retired admiral who was commodore of the convoy, stated:

" 'Throughout an anxious time I can think of no occasion on which the escorts Deptford and Velox could have done more than they did do. I have the greatest respect for the judgment and constant zeal of the captain of the Deptford.' "

Nazis Claim Four More Ships In Convoy Sunk

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 13—U-boats, still slashing at a Britain-bound convoy in the North Atlantic after President Roosevelt's shoot-on-sight orders to the United States Navy, have sunk four more merchantmen and three escort vessels, the German high command declared today.

The new bulletin raised the toll claimed from the convoy to 28 merchantmen, totaling 164,000 tons—31 ships altogether, including the three war vessels. Two merchantmen, totaling 11,000 tons, reported yesterday as probably sunk, were included in this newer, unqualified claim.

First announcing the assault on the convoy in a special communique yesterday, the high command said it included forty ships heavily escorted by corvettes and destroyers.

Unlike the original announcement, which said the chase of scattered ships of the convoy was continuing, the communique today merely reported:

"In renewed attacks against the enemy convoy mentioned in yesterday's communique, submarines sank an additional four merchantmen, totaling 19,000 tons, as well as three convoying vessels.

"Thus the enemy lost twenty-eight merchantmen, totaling 164,000 tons, from this convoy."

Three British Ships Sunk, Nazis Say

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (AP)—The D. N. B. official news agency quoted German reconnaissance pilots tonight to the effect that three British merchantmen damaged by Nazi bombers off Great Yarmouth last night now had sunk.

The agency said that in the same attack a British destroyer was damaged on the bow by a bomb.

Nazis Report Thirty-one Sinkings

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (AP).—Germany asserted today that twenty-eight merchantmen and three warships were sunk in a convoy of forty Britain-bound ships during an attack in the North Atlantic, which began before President Roosevelt announced his shoot-on-sight orders to the United States Navy and persisted thereafter.

In all, the German high command declared, 164,000 tons of merchant shipping was destroyed, besides three warships of its guard of corvettes and destroyers.

Following President Roosevelt's declaration of policy, which the Axis has taken as a challenge, warfare by German air and U-boat forces against Great Britain and Russia has dominated German reports.

The war at sea attracted particular attention in Berlin because of President Roosevelt's "shoot first" order. Germans were quick to observe that Mr. Roosevelt's speech was hardly made before the Reich was scoring another success in its war on British commerce.

Authorized sources presented what they called a carefully prepared but unofficial summary of German achievements from Sept. 6 to 12, showing forty-nine British freighters sunk in six days.

Submarines scored most effectively against the British shipping, accounting for twenty-eight of the vessels said to have been destroyed in the six-day period. Surface warvessels were credited with sinking five. The air force was reported to have destroyed sixteen. The Germans estimated they inflicted losses totaling 273,000 tons on British shipping.

It was further indicated that the air force has seriously damaged ten freighters in English blockade waters.

Merchant Ships' Arming By U. S. Predicted

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 13—The arming of American merchant ships was described in authoritative quarters today as a step likely to be proposed by the Administration, supplementing President Roosevelt's orders to the navy to shoot first at Axis warcraft in American defense waters.

Discussion of such a move intensified with news of the torpedoing of an American-owned freighter carrying lumber to Iceland—an attack which occurred Thursday morning but which was not announced until yesterday.

Requires Neutrality Change

The arming of merchantmen was reported to have been discussed briefly at the White House conference at which President Roosevelt gave Congressional leaders a preview of his Thursday night radio address. One legislator said he came away with the impression that it was only a matter of time until the suggestion would be put into concrete form.

Such a step, it was pointed out, would require Congressional repeal—or at least revision—of the Neutrality Act, since that law prohibits American commercial vessels from carrying other than small arms.

Another problem would be to obtain the necessary guns, in view of the keen demand for such weapons by the army and navy, and by the British as well.

The Latest Attack

The latest reported attack on an American-owned vessel took place before the President told the world that he had ordered the navy to defend shipping against Nazi raiders.

The State Department said the navy had learned that the 1,700-ton freighter Montana, of Panamanian registry and with a foreign crew, had been torpedoed off Greenland, at latitude 63 degrees 40 minutes north, longitude 35 degrees 50 minutes west. The twenty-six-man crew was believed to be safe after taking to lifeboats.

Few details of the affair were released. Whether the Montana sank was not disclosed.

May Seek War-Cargo Okay

Congressional leaders were declared to be analyzing the Neutrality Act carefully, with the idea that Congress later might be asked not only to authorize the arming of merchant ships but to permit them to carry war materials into belligerent zones as well.

One highly placed legislator forecast bitter opposition to the latter proposal if it were made. He thought there would be less objection to installing guns so that American freighters could protect themselves to some extent from submarine, surface raider or aerial attacks.

World War Guns May Remain

As for the problem of obtaining the guns that would be needed for any such large-scale program, arsenals are now busy turning out cannon for the warships being built by the navy, and it was considered unlikely that many of these weapons or of the anti-aircraft guns sorely needed by the army, navy and the British could be spared.

However, there was a possibility that an inventory of naval warehouses would disclose a number of suitable weapons left over from World War days. In addition, naval officials told Congress early this year that some of the 3-inch anti-aircraft guns on combat vessels of the fleet, being replaced by 5-inch dual-purpose guns, would be suitable for merchant ships.

One legislator said that many naval experts believed an increase in the number of warcraft on patrol would give more protection then guns on merchantmen, which at best could offer only limited resistance to a strong surface raider or to bombers.

S. S. Arkansan Hit; Expect Roosevelt To Ask Guns for Merchantmen

BATTLE LOOMS

SEP 14 1941

WASHINGTON,

Sept. 13 (AP).—The S. S. Arkansan, struck by shell or bomb fragments during an air raid on Suez, was added tonight to the growing list of American ships lost or damaged in the sea war and, at the Capitol, there were reports that the Administration might ask authority to arm merchant vessels.

A brief report to the State Department from the legation at Cairo said the 6,897-ton Arkansan, engaged in trade between United States ports and the Red Sea, was hit and her plates pierced the night of Sept. 11.

The communication said nothing of the extent of damage, or of casualties among her crew of 36 American, one British and one Dutch seamen.

DAMAGE SMALL.

Presumably, however, the damage was small as a British communique issued at Cairo Sept. 12 told of an Axis raid on the canal area the previous night and said no damage was done to shipping.

The Arkansan, owned by the American Hawaiian Steamship Co. of New York and San Francisco, sailed from New York July 19, reached Port Sudan on Sept. 5, and left for Suez, town at the Red Sea entrance to the canal, on Sept. 8. Presumably she was lying in port to discharge cargo at the time of the raid.

While the U. S. legation's communication spoke of the missiles striking the Arkansan as "shell fragments," officials here said the official who sent the message was not a military man and concluded that the vessel might have been hit by fragments from a bomb, an anti-aircraft shell, an aerial torpedo, or from a shell fired by a cannon-carrying plane.

The department was seeking further information.

ARKANSAN CREW.

The crew list of the S. S. Arkansan as announced by the Maritime Commission included: William C. Lewis, 440 Wyoming ave., Buffalo; Joseph R. Vasi, 907 E. 221 st., New York.

Also Perry C. Hinckley, care of Bertha Colville, 16 High st., Little Falls, N. Y.; Leo C. Dietz, care of Rose Horwan, 428 W. 23rd st., N.Y.; James McKee, care of Erma Hayes, 231 W. 16th st., New York.

Also Antonio A. Munoz, 233 W. 19th st., New York; Robert F. Trost, 9715 Linden blvd., Ozone Park; Gariel W. Schwartz, 783 Beck st., Bronx; James J. Butler, 349 W. 17th st., New York.

Still another communication from Cairo advised the department that Joseph M. C. Suka, third officer of the American-owned S.S. Steel Seafarer, had made an affidavit that the plane which bombed and sank his ship in the Red Sea on Sept. 5 was "a Junkers 88 or, at any rate, a German plane."

Both the Arkansan and the Steel Seafarer presumably were carrying supplies for British forces in the Middle East.

BATTLE IN CONGRESS.

With incident piling on incident, many legislators felt that an armed ship bill was in the offing, and with it a prolonged congressional battle further embittering relations betwen supporters and opponents of the President's foreign policy.

In quarters usually well informed it was said that the Administration was likely to present a proposal to arm merchant ships as a supplement to President Roosevelt's announcement that naval vessels would henceforth sink Axis submarines on sight in waters considered important to defense.

The legislation would take the form of an amendment to the Neutrality Act. That law now forbids American merchant ships to carry any arms other than the small arms usually on board for the enforcement of discipline.

Swears Nazi Plane Sank U. S. Ship

Washington, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—"A Junkers 88 or, at any rate, a German plane" was blamed today in a sworn statement of an officer of the steamship Steel Seafarer for the sinking of his ship in the Red Sea September 5.

The State Department issued the affidavit, by Joseph M. C. Suka, third officer of the American-owned vessel, who swore to it at Suez yesterday. Suka's statement followed reports from British sources in Cairo that the attacking plane was a German bomber based in Greece.

Becker Urges Delivery By Navy of Arms to Allies

N. Y. Young Republicans' Head Would Repeal Neutrality Act

CAROGA LAKE, N. Y., Sept. 13 (AP).—Repeal of the neutrality act and "safe delivery by our naval forces" of arms to Axis enemies were urged today by Ralph E. Becker, of Port Chester, president of the State Association of Young Republican Clubs.

Speaking at the annual outing of the Young Republican Club of Fulton County, Mr. Becker declared: "We are Americans, believing in democracy as our form of government. We unalterably oppose false ideologies of all kinds—Nazi, Communist or Fascist."

"We believe that to strengthen our defense effort the neutrality act should be rescinded," he continued. "We believe in the safe delivery by our naval forces of merchant ships carrying implements of war, merchandise and food to nations fighting the Axis powers."

LAND ASKS SHIPS GET TOP PRIORITY

Maritime Commission Head Urges Action To Win Battle Of Atlantic

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 13—Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, said tonight he believed American merchant shipbuilding should have "the highest priority so that we can win the battle of the Atlantic."

He made the statement at a dinner-dance of the American Pilots Association at which he was guest of honor.

Letter From Roosevelt

Recent events and the effect of President Roosevelt's Thursday night speech necessitated gearing merchant shipbuilding to an even higher pitch, he said.

Capt. John Delano, of Baltimore, president of the association which has been discussing coastal defense plans at closed meetings for the past three days, read a letter conveying President Roosevelt's greetings and his hope that the convention would inspire participants "with a renewed sense of the important part which they can play as individuals and as an organization in promoting national defense."

Guests Of Pilots

Other guests of the harbor pilots were:

REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM P. COLE, JR., of Maryland.

UNDER SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR JOHN J. DEMPSEY.

MAYOR JACKSON, of Baltimore.

SENATOR RADCLIFFE, of Maryland.

SAMUEL D. SCHELL, executive director of the Maritime Commission.

REPRESENTATIVE LANSDALE G. SASSCER, of Maryland.

The harbor pilots come from thirty-three United States ports.

Sea War On, Germans Say

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 13—Reflecting the general attitude of Germany's controlled press, the Hamburger Fremdenblatt said today that President Roosevelt had "fired the starting gun in undeclared sea warfare" by issuing "shoot-first" orders to the United States Navy.

The comment, appearing more than twenty-four hours after the President's broadcast warning Axis warships to keep out of American defense waters, came as the German public received its first hint of the new turn in German-American relations.

"No Further Answer"

Excerpts from the President's speech were printed in morning papers under headlines which branded his words lies.

Dienst aus Deutschland, commentary close to the Foreign Office, indicated that now that the public had been informed of the situation the curtain could be rung down on further discussion.

"One can assume," said Dienst, "that no further answer to the speech will follow."

Editorial writers did not touch on an earlier statement by a Foreign Office spokesman, who told foreign correspondents that "what happens next" will be determined "not by Mr. Roosevelt, but by us."

The press made much of an allegation that President Roosevelt had given the United States Navy orders to fire months ago, but the text of authorized comment on his address, which was read to foreign correspondents, did not appear in morning newspapers as a Government spokesman had promised.

"It will be expedient then that the Axis powers revise their positions and adjust their legitimate defense to the plan of declared American attack."

U. S. War Entry Predicted

Fascist observers took American entry into the war for granted.

Gayda reiterated that Axis warships would fire on American ships if necessary. "If there's occasion to fire, we will fire," he said.

Foreign Minister Ciano's newspaper Il Telegrafo, of Leghorn, declared "naked force" could be the Axis' only answer to the President's speech.

Tokyo Press Hits Roosevelt

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Sept. 13—Japanese newspapers continued today to comment on President Roosevelt's "shoot first" broadcast, virtually all interpreting it to mean that the United States was closer to war with Germany. All assailed the President's position on freedom of the seas.

Nichi Nichi expressed the opinion that the broadcast was an attempt to incite an unwilling American public to war.

Hochi said: "Roosevelt in his speech, as customarily enunciated by his self-complacent policy, is behaving as though he thought all the world belonged to him. America indulges its traditional ambitions to take complete control of the seven seas and a place in the world secured under monopolistic hegemony."

"Violating Sea Freedom"

Chugai accused the United States of breaking her own principles, saying, "Since she is doing everything within her power to aid Britain short of sending fighting ships and men to Europe, the United States must be regarded as violating freedom of the seas."

Ashai asserted that the "freedom of the seas which the United States claims is synonymous with the exercise of sea power by the United States and Great Britain and by no other nation."

"Germany In Old Blind Alley"

Istanbul, Turkey, Sept. 12 (Delayed) (AP)—The first Turkish comment on President Roosevelt's shoot-first address came today from the official radio, which declared:

"Germany finds herself in the same blind alley as she did in the last war. The important thing is—how will Germany react?"

'De Facto War Move': Gayda

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 13—Virginio Gayda declared today that the United States had issued a "de facto declaration of war" and Italy and Germany would adjust their war plans to meet what he called a threatened attack by the United States in any part of the world.

(In this sense, Gayda apparently meant a declaration of war actually but without legal status as contrasted with a formal or de jure declaration.)

"The world is faced with a de facto declaration of war by the Washington Government, whose confines are not specified and whose fundamentals are not determined," the editor wrote in the newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia.

"Axis Sought To Fix Limits"

"While Italy and Germany have sought to fix the limits and conditions of their war, American war-mongering leaves the door open for its war in all parts of the world," he declared of President Roosevelt's shoot-first order to United States warcraft in American defensive waters.

British Still Praising Speech

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 13—British editorial writers continued today to praise President Roosevelt's "shoot-at-sight" broadcast, and the Daily Mail interpreted it to mean that the United States had "sailed into action . . . which . . . looks very like war."

The speech was the greatest and most momentous the President has ever made, the Mail declared.

The News-Chronicle said the President's declarations, "put simply, mean . . . the second largest fleet in the world has been added to our resources."

Report On Dakar

SEP 14 1941

Cape Town, Union of South Africa, Sept. 13 (AP)—Two Danish soldiers who reached here after escaping from Dakar in a rowboat said that the fifteen submarines based at that French West African strongpoint flew the French flag but some of the crew spoke German.

The Danes, prisoners at Dakar for a year, said they had been confined in ships there.

They said that the French were holding thirty Allied ships there and that submarines frequently came and went. Warcraft in the harbor also included the battleship Richelieu, three cruisers, two destroyers and three gunboats.

SUBS SAID TO USE DAKAR FOR BASE

Escaped Seamen Add Crews Of French-Flag Craft Speak German

Two Danes, Reaching Cape Town, Tell Of Nightly Goings And Comings

[By the Associated Press]

Cape Town, Union of South Africa, Sept. 13—A story of mysterious nightly comings and goings of fifteen submarines at Dakar whose masts fly the French flag but whose crews speak German was told today by two Danish seamen who have just reached Cape Town.

The seamen, Kari Nielson and Carl Peterson, said they escaped from their ship at Dakar, French port on the west coast, the night of June 23 in a 12-foot row boat. They said they had been held prisoner for a year.

They were picked up by a British patrol boat.

Number Of Submarines Rose

"Many strange things happen at night in Dakar harbor," one said. "The submarines are always coming and going. In the daytime they fly the French flag. Yet many of their crew talk German.

"When we arrived at Dakar in June, 1940, only two or three submarines were based there. When we left there were about fifteen."

[Capt. Edward W. Myers of the American ship Robin Moor, torpedoed and sunk in the South Atlantic, May 21, said after his rescue that he believed the attacking submarine was based at Dakar.]

In addition to the submarines, the two seamen said, are the 35,000-ton warship Richelieu, three 7,600-ton cruisers, the Gloire, Georges Leygues and Montcalm, each armed with nine six-inch guns, two destroyers and three gunboats, all French.

Richelieu Repaired

"The Richelieu has been temporarily repaired," said the seamen. "In the absence of drydock facilities, the best the French and Germans will be able to do is to use her as a floating fort. We were told there is a hole one hundred feet long below her water line."

The Richelieu was disabled when the British exploded depth charges under her in Dakar harbor on July 8, 1940.

Nielson and Peterson said that at the time of their escape nearly thirty Allied ships were held in Dakar with most of their crews.

26 Towns Retaken: Reds

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 13—The Red Army was reported today to have rolled back a great German offensive on Bryansk, 220 miles southwest of Moscow, to have recaptured twenty-six towns and villages, and inflicted a loss of almost 10,000 Germans in a long, bloody battle.

The German drive was reported made by twelve German infantry divisions (about 180,000 men) and two tank corps.

Dispatches said the Forty-seventh and Twenty-fourth German Tank Corps were routed and estimated that the Germans lost more than 260 tanks, 600 vehicles and hundreds of field guns.

They said the Red army had defeated the Seventeenth and Eighteenth German tank divisions, crushed the Twenty-ninth Motorized Regiment and severely beaten the Thirty-first and Thirty-fourth divisions.

13-Day Counter-Offensive

The Germans broke through toward Bryansk, midway on the Kiev-Moscow Railway, late in August, according to these reports, but were defeated by a Russian counter-offensive which began thirteen days ago.

In the sector about 150 miles northwest of Bryansk persistent Red army counter-attacks were said to have recaptured Setolovo, a village in the vicinity of Smolensk. Two German regiments were reported broken through in these counter-attacks.

Near Russian - recaptured Yelnya, within fifty miles of Smolensk, these reports said, the Germans failed in another "psychological" attack.

Attacker Reported Dispersed

Two hundred shooting, wild-riding Nazi motorcyclists, they said, sped across a field toward Red army positions, but the Russian infantry held their fire until the attackers were within close range, then scattered them with rifle and machine-gun fire.

Dispatches from the Bryansk front indicated Russian infantry, artillery, tanks and planes, working in close harmony, were carrying out pincer movements against armored Nazi wedges and destroying them piecemeal.

Arms Reported Captured

In the past week alone, these reports said, the Russians captured 238 tanks, 135 guns, 9 armored cars and 28 mortars, and the Germans left 3,800 dead on the battlefield.

Tank units themselves were estimated to have destroyed or captured 79 tanks and 32 guns and to have killed 2,500 Germans in a single battle.

In attacks on Nazi-held airdromes near the towns of Orsha, Mogilev, Roslavl and Bukhov, behind the broad Bryansk-Smolensk zone, the Red air force was said to have downed 50 German planes in one week and destroyed more than 200 tanks and 500 trucks.

Nazi forces were reported to have been pushed back westward from the Desna river by the defenders of the Bryansk sector in a violent battle of the steppes at the approaches to Trubchevsk, sixty-two miles southwest of Bryansk.

In the same general zone, however, was the Red army withdrawal from Chernigov.

A new Russian counter-offensive was reported to have started south of Kiev, with Soviet troops crossing the Dnieper to take the island of Hortitsa and recapture the villages of Voyskovoye and Federova on the west bank.

Armored Soviet naval cutters were declared officially to have sunk several troop-carrying German cutters and two barges by ramming operations in the Gulf of Finland Wednesday night.

"Several hundred Nazi men and officers," a communique said, "found their graves on the bottom of the gulf."

The Soviet information bureau declared fifty-three German planes were destroyed Wednesday, against a Russian loss of thirty-two.

Eleven high-flying raiders were reported shot down by Leningrad's defenders Thursday night and a communique said several bomb-set fires within the city were extinguished quickly.

Reds Claim Nazi Threat To Moscow Pushed Back

Report Driving German Panzer Units 10 To 12 Miles After Stopping Dozen Divisions

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 13—The first snow of the season has fallen in the Leningrad area, the British radio reported tonight.

"It is a warning to the Germans that time is running short before the dreaded winter begins," the British announcer said in a broadcast heard here by CBS.

Berlin, Sept. 13 (AP)—Manufacturers of skis and snowshoes as well as dealers were ordered today to offer their stock to the nearest army ordnance offices. The sale of skis, snowshoes, ski sticks and bindings were forbidden except to the ordnance offices or to the army quartermaster headquarters.

A decree to this effect, appearing in the official gazette, reflected extensive preparations the German army is making for a winter campaign in Russia.

BY HENRY CASSIDY

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sunday, Sept. 14— Red armies of the western front, ushering in the thirteenth week of the war with slashing counter-attacks, erased a new threat to Moscow by throttling a giant German oensive 20 miles southwest of the Soviet capital and hurled the Nazis back ten to twelve miles, the Russians reported today.

These massive operations capped a two-weeks' battle near the important rail center of Bryansk. Front-line dispatches said the Germans still were in retreat westward before the ceaseless hammering of Red infantry, tanks and planes. Twenty-six towns and villages were declared recaptured in bitter fighting.

Panzer Expert Led Nazis

The Russians reported the Forty-seventh and Twenty-fourth German Tank Corps, commanded by the Nazi Panzer expert, Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian, were routed on this front by Red forces under Gen. Jacob Kreuzer, a hero of the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Information Bureau, itself silent on details of the fighting, reiterated early today only that the fierce struggle continued without letup along the entire western front.

It credited the Red air force with its second raid upon Bucharest within a week. The latest attack on the Rumanian capital was carried out Friday night and the previous one on Monday night.

In the Baltic Sea, speedboats of the northern Red fleet sank a large German transport and a coast guard vessel, the communique said.

Say Nazis Lost 10,000

The battle for Bryansk, a rail and communications center 150 miles southeast of Smolensk and about midway on the main highway between Moscow and Kiev, was estimated by the Russians to have cost the Germans nearly 10,000 officers and men, more than 260 tanks, 600 vehicles and hundreds of field guns.

Tonight the Russians were reported hot on the pursuit of the Germans west of the Desna river, the Nazis' plan for a Blitzkrieg capture of Bryansk having failed despite the fact that they pushed twelve infantry divisions (about 180,000 men) and great tank and airplane forces into the battle, the Russian dispatches stated.

Began September 1

The Germans broke through in the direction of Bryansk late in August, the dispatches said, and the Russian counter-attack began September 1, the opening major encounter apparently being fought on a plains in the approaches to Trubchevsk, sixty-two miles southwest of Bryansk.

Russian correspondents said the Germans concentrated their Forty-seventh Tank Corps and three infantry divisions for an assault toward Bryansk, and then added another tank corps and many planes and built the infantry force up to twelve divisions.

Red army infantry, artillery, tanks and planes combined to rout the German forces, executing pincers movements against armored wedges and destroying them piecemeal, the Soviet accounts said.

List 3,800 Killed In Week

During the last week alone the Russians were reported to have captured 238 tanks, 135 guns, 9 armored cars and 28 mortars, and the Germans were said to have left 3,800 dead.

Russian tank units alone were estimated to have destroyed or captured 79 tanks and 32 guns and to have killed 2,500 Germans in a single encounter.

The Red army was reported to have defeated the Seventeenth and Eighteenth German Tank divisions, crushed the Twenty-ninth Motorized Regiment and the Thirty-first and Thirty-fourth Infantry divisions and severely beaten other units.

Pound German Airdromes

The Red air force bombed German airdromes near the towns of Orsha, Mogilev and Roslavl, behind Smolensk, from which the Germans apparently were operating the planes in the battle.

The Germans were reported to have been rolled back far from the Desna river, burning villages as they went to raise a wall of fire, but the Red army was declared to have advanced through the flaming settlements, mopping up remnants of enemy resistance as they went.

The Germans were said tonight to be attempting to build a new line of fortifications, but under the fire of Russian artillery, tanks and planes.

The Russians seized a number of German documents, including maps of Moscow, the Russian correspondents reported.

Plains Scene Of Fierce Fight

The plains outside ancient Trubchevsk, which is situated on the banks of the Desna 115 miles east of Gomel, were said to have been the scene of a fierce battle in which the Germans tried to break through to the city.

After the battle raged for four days, the Soviet dispatches said, the Germans began to retreat through village after village, followed by Russian tanks, motorized infantry and artillery across fields soaked by heavy rains.

As the western Red army persisted in its counter-attacks it was reported tonight to have taken the village of Setolovo, in the direction of Smolensk, breaking through two German regiments.

Try Psychological Attack

The Germans were said in one instance to have tried a "psychological attack" in the direction of Yelnya, forty-five miles east of Smolensk, in an effort to block the Russian advance. The Germans, the dispatches said, sent 200 motorcyclists shooting wildly and riding at high speed across a field toward the Red army positions.

The Russian infantry, in was reported, let them draw near and then routed them with machine-gun fire.

This apparently was one of several actions in which the Russians were counter-attacking in the central sector northwest of Bryansk toward Smolensk.

Battles continued at the approaches to Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa.

Say Kiev Will Be Held

Maj. Gen. K. Dobroserdov said in an article in Izvestia that "the order of Defense Commissar Stalin not to yield Kiev to the enemy is to be fulfilled." He wrote that the enemy was at the city's gates a month ago but that four infantry divisions had been routed and "the strength of our defenses is growing daily."

Kiev has not been bombed, the officer wrote, although 130 German planes have been destroyed at the approaches.

Air battles continued at the approaches to Leningrad. A single Russian squadron was reported to have downed fifty-eight German planes in seventeen days near the city.

Soviet dispatches said that the Germans were using the most modern equipment against Leningrad, including their newest pursuit planes, a Messerschmitt-115, one of which had been shot down.

Besieged Cities Reported Raided

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 13—The German high command, again silent on detail reported today that "offensive operations on the Eastern front proceed planfully and successfully."

Odessa and Leningrad, Russian ports at either end of the front, were reported under heavy Luftwaffe bombardment.

The high command announced last night that because Soviet Russia did not sign the international agreement of July 27, 1929, covering treatment of war prisoners, captured Russians will receive food inferior to that of other prisoners.

Rations for the Russians, however, "are, in medical opinion, adequate," it was said.

Nazis Claim Mastery Of Air Over Leningrad

Berlin, Sept. 13 (AP)—German war reports today asserted they had won air mastery over Leningrad as well as "considerable gains in territory" on the central sector of the Eastern front.

Dispatches from the front gave prominence to the Luftwaffe's assaults in the Leningrad area. One report said "fortifications are being softened in preparation for storm assault."

Dive bombers were said to have played a conspicuous part in the attack.

Say Defenses Failed

German flyers said that after their first attacks in waves, the Russian defenses almost ceased to function.

Dispatches indicated the air force was still hammering at the outer defenses rather than the heart of Leningrad.

In the central sector, the Germans claimed to have taken almost 3,000 prisoners in capturing two hotly defended villages.

List Six Days' Damage

Authoritative sources listed losses they said had been inflicted on the Russians in the six-day period ended September 12.

On land, the summary indicated, the German army took 35,000 Russian prisoners in the six days, while the air force claimed destruction of fifty-five railway trains and three tanks. The army was also reported to have captured or destroyed 470 tanks and 460 cannon.

At sea this summary showed Germans in the Baltic and Black Sea areas had destroyed six Russian merchantmen, three transports, five cannon boats, two speedboats, three submarines, three patrol vessels and two "other craft." Damaging of five additional freighters was claimed.

Finns Claim Booty.

Helsinki, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Vast quantities of war material have been captured, 454 Soviet planes and balloons have been put out of action and seventy vessels, totaling 100,000 tons have been sunk by the Finns since the start of the present war with Russia, it was announced officially last night.

A communique claimed capture of 25,000 rifles, 2,000 light machine-guns, 1,000 heavy machine-guns, 600 trench mortars, 800 guns of other calibers, 300 tractors, 1,250 motor trucks, 30 locomotives, 600 railway cars, 8,000 horses and about 1,500 horse-drawn vehicles. In addition 669 tanks and 67 armored cars were reported destroyed or captured.

The Finns said that of the ships sunk fifty-five were sent to the bottom by naval craft, fourteen by coastal batteries and one by planes. Five other ships were captured, it was said, in addition to forty-two vessels, chiefly motor boats, on Lake Ladoga. On the lake ten Russian ships were reported sunk, including a gunboat and six big transport lighters loaded with war materials and troops.

Soviet Declaration of War Against Bulgaria Is Seen

Axis Forecasts It as Step to Block Nazi-Turk Trade

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Sept. 12 (Delayed) (AP).—Axis political observers here said today that a Russian declaration of war against Bulgaria in the near future is a strong possibility.

One such source said: "There may be reason to expect such a declaration soon, because the Russians are anxious to destroy the Bulgarian ports of Varna and Burgas to prevent their use as bases of German trade with Turkey."

Bulgarian officials expressed anxiety over the Russian note this week detailing alleged German and Italian military and naval activities in Bulgaria. These sources denied reports that Bulgaria has purchased warships from Italy.

(Such a purchase might permit introduction of vessels of the Italian fleet into the Black Sea. Italy, as a belligerent, is not permitted by Turkey to send her warships through the Dardanelles.)

Finn Province Freed From Reds

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Sept. 13—The Finnish radio announced the "liberation" of Aunus (Olonets) province from Soviet Russian rule today with the raising of the East Karelian flag over Aunus in a ceremony in which Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim participated.

The East Karelian flag dates back twenty years to the unsuccessful war for Karelian independence after the World War in which Finland gained her freedom.

The province lies between Lakes Ladoga and Onega to the northeast of Leningrad. The Finnish army announced occupation of the provincial capital early this week.

Berlin, Sept. 13 (AP)—An indication that German has naval designs in the Black Sea was disclosed tonight by publication of a picture of Grand Admiral Erich Räder in Adolf Hitler's newspaper Völkischer Beobachter showing the naval chieftain "in the southeast."

Admiral Räder was pictured in conversation with Bulgarian officers in the midst of a group of adjutants on an airfield.

Predicts Italian Ship Move

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—The British radio broadcast an Ankara report tonight that an attack on Axis-besieged Odessa by German-manned Italian warships is imminent.

The B. B. C. advices f. .i the Turkish capital as saying Italian warships are being sold to Bulgaria so that the latter, being a neutral country, could take them through the Turkish- controlled Dardanelles to the Black Sea and turn them over to the Nazis for the assault upon the besieged Soviet port.

The broadcast said these warships also were intended for an attack on the Soviet Black Sea fleet. It said another Istanbul report told of the movement of a large number of ast German torpedo boats down the Danube to Bulgarian Black Sea ports, ostensibly to take part in these operations.

The B. B. C. broadcast was heard here by N. B. C. and C. B. S.

Americans May Ferry Planes To Russia

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 13—The flow of British and United States-made planes to the Russian war front is expected in well-informed quarters to be increased soon through a ferry manned, in part, by Americans, it was disclosed tonight.

The ferry service, similar to that which now brings made-in-America bombers across the Atlantic to Britain, is likely to be considered among problems to confront the forthcoming British-United States-Russian Moscow collaboration conference, it was said.

W. Averell Harriman, head of the American mission, is expected in London within the next few days and will go on to Moscow with the British delegates after the briefest talks here.

Great Numbers Of Warplanes Soon To Be Ferried To Soviets

Speed In Task To Be Discussed Shortly At Moscow. Non-Combatants To Fly Craft

BY ROBERT BUNNELLE

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 13—American and British flyers soon will be ferrying greatly increased numbers of warplanes to Russia, informed sources here said today.

Expediting the planes, which Russians say are among the foremost of their needs, will be one of the principal matters to be discussed shortly by the British and American missions to Moscow, these sources said.

Some Already Sent

The R. A. F. already has ferried to Russia a number of the hundreds of planes which Prime Minister Churchill said two days ago were to be sent.

These pilots, however, will be needed for Britain's projected winter bomb offensive, so the ferrying job is to be handed over to non-combatants such as those now ferrying planes from Canada to Britain. Many of those are from the United States.

Could Go To Murmansk

It was pointed out here that bombers and other long-range types of aircraft could be flown from the United States to Murmansk or elsewhere in northern Russia via Nova Scotia or Newfoundland and Iceland.

Planes from Britain can fly around or over northern Scandinavia.

[A German broadcast said Nazi Stukas engaged in a heavy dive-bombing attack on fortifications west of Murmansk Friday.]

A warplane ferry service already is being organized from the United States to West Africa and thence to the British Middle East. Thence planes could go to southern Russia via Syria and Iran.

By Persian Gulf

The United States is expected to ship some short-range planes via the Persian Gulf. Others could hop to Alaska and thence to Siberia.

The British are said to have air force ground crews "in fairly large numbers" already in Russia to help service the planes. Sources here said the Russians themselves have been doing all the combat flying in Russia.

British Again Raid Rhineland

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 13—Frankfurt industries and other objectives in the German Rhineland were attacked by a considerable force of the British bomber command last night, the Air Ministry said today, and R. A. F. fighter planes roared across the English Channel shortly after dawn in an around-the-clock offensive.

The Rhineland raid was said to have been executed despite unfavorable weather.

French Docks Blasted

Docks at Cherbourg and St. Nazaire in German-occupied France also were bombed, the Air Ministry reported, and a Germ n supply ship of medium size was hit off the Frisian Islands.

"From these operations," a communique said, "two aircraft of the bomber command are missing."

Only a few Nazi night raiders were reported over Britain and two of these were shot down, a communique said. A few casualties and some damage were acknowledged at one point in the northeast.

but scanty opposition, according to reports, all the British planes returning after shooting down one Messerschmitt fighter.

Two night bombers were lost in the forays. Several German bombers penetrated some distance inland from the British southeast coast tonight.

R. A. F. Losses Listed By Nazis

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 13—The R. A. F. lost more than 1,600 planes on the Western front between April 1 and September 8, military sources said today.

Their compilation, listing numbers of fortress planes, other types of bombers, scouts and fighter planes, said the losses were more than three times those admitted by Britain.

Report 3 Ships Smashed

Wide-ranging German bombers attacked a convoy off the east coast of Britain last night and damaged three mercha t vessels totaling 25,000 tons so heavily they probably failed to make port, the Germans said today.

Other Nazi night raiders were said to have bombed airports and other military targets in southeastern England.

Plane Crashes On House

British bombers killed and wounded a number of civilians and damaged apartment houses in overnight raids on southwestern Germany, it was announced today. No military damage was done, German sources declared, and one bomber was shot down.

The raider crashed on the roof of an apartment house and three of the crew who parachuted to earth were captured, the Germans said. Tenants of the apartment house, the location of which was not disclosed, were said to have escaped injury.

CAIRO, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Royal Air Force reported today the probable destruction of three merchantmen and severe damage to others in attacks on an Axis convoy in the central Mediterranean yesterday and the previous night.

A communique said the Fleet Air Arm delivered a night torpedo attack which left one ship sinking and another emitting clouds of smoke and steam. Yesterday the remainder of the convoy, consisting of six destroyers and four large and two medium-sized merchantmen, was attacked again by the R. A. F. One of the large ships was left a mass of flames. A second large ship also was hit directly by large bombs, it was said.

Bombing of the harbor at Palermo, Sicily, with large bombs straddling a ship in drydock, and an attack on a munitions plant at Licata, Sicily, also was reported. The R. A. F. further told of attacks on a tanker tied up at the mole at Bengasi and on motor transport in Libya.

2 American Airmen Lost

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, Sept. 13 — Sergt. Bruce Adams Coukell, of High Bridge, N. J., was listed as killed in action, and Sergt. Robert Thomas Wood, of Dallas, Texas, as missing today on the Sixty-ninth Royal Canadian Air Force casualty roll. In all, fifty-one R. C. A. F. members were named as dead or missing overseas and in Canada. The list raised to 710 the number of R. C. A. F. casualties since the outbreak of the European war.

Australia Pushes Planes

CANBERRA, Sept. 13 (AP).—Starting from scratch last year, the Australian aircraft industry has produced 1,000 planes, and next year it is estimated production will be doubled, the Australian Aircraft Commission predicted today. Australia is working toward complete self-sufficiency in aircraft, the commission said.

Not Dead At All, Avers Easton Flyer With British

But He Did Have Narrow Escape From Burning Plane, Writes Edward Streets, An "Eagle"

Easton, Md., Sept. 13 (AP)—An Easton youth who was reported killed in aerial action with the American Eagle Squadron in England has written a friend here saying it wasn't so—he merely had a narrow escape.

The flyer, Edward Streets, sent the letter to William Triffis, chief mechanic at the Tred Avon Airport, where he learned to fly and for some time acted as an instructor.

Streets joined the Eagle Squadron several months ago and has been serving in Scotland. In his letter, he indicated that a mishap in which his plane caught fire and he was forced to parachute to safety, might have been responsible for the report of his death.

Streets said he had been flying one of the latest type British fighter planes, and despite its great speed, handled as easily as some of the training planes he used at the air field here.

The only censored portion of his letter dealt with the speed of the fighter planes.

Flyer Who Captured U-Boat Tells Of Feat

By Eddy Gilmore

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

London, Sept. 13—Squadron Leader J. H. Thompson, described by the Ministry of Information as the only man ever to capture a German submarine by air in midocean, said today that its Nazi crew had professed not to know the meaning of the word "scuttle."

"While the navy was standing by after we sighted the submarine," said the mustached, pipe-smoking Thompson, "they sent word not to try to scuttle her."

Thompson said the Germans signaled back: "Don't know what you mean by scuttle."

Warship Fired On Sub

The airman said a naval vessel fired on the U-boat, in the belief that it was about to submerge.

"His Majesty's ship fired a volley intended to be across her bow," Thompson said, "but waves and so on apparently made the aim bad. The shot tore off a bit of the conning tower. I'm afraid some Germans inside were damaged."

The Admiralty announced on Thursday that a German submarine had been captured in the Atlantic following an attack by an American-built bomber.

Thompson's story was:

"We knew some submarines were in this area and suddenly the second officer of my plane called out: 'There's a U-boat!'

"I then saw it. It was on the surface.

"We dived in for the attack with machine-guns going, and dropped bombs. Great columns of water went up. Then we saw the sub come up higher in the water.

Five Attacks Made

"We attacked again, and then hatches of the sub flew open and men poured out. We didn't know what was up. We thought they were going to man guns. We attacked again. In all, we attacked five times.

"There was great confusion on the sub. Men ran back into the conning tower. Others were trying to come up. All jammed in the conning tower.

"They held up something like a white chart.

Says Nazis Damaged Sub

"We ceased fire and went down to fifty feet. We realized they had had enough of it."

He said the German crewmen spent two nights and a day on the U-boat from the time they were sighted until they were taken off and that they had time to damage it "very effectively."

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 13—Dispatches reaching Vichy today said five British planes machine-gunned French fishermen off Cherbourg peninsula.

Another British plane crashed in flames at Yvetott, in Normandie, it was said.

The crashed plane was a Halifax four-motored bomber whose motors were disabled by German anti-aircraft fire. The seven R. A. F. crewmen were taken prisoner by German soldiers.

One fisherman died from the attack at sea and two others lost their arms, it was reported.

1,000 Reported Seized In France

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 13—Reports reached here via the Paris radio today that "some 1,000" persons were arrested yesterday at La Rochelle in mass police raids on cafes and restaurants.

Vichy itself was without direct information on what had happened. It was not specified against whom the raids were directed, but those arrested presumably were opposition elements.

Death For Arming

Persons possessing firearms illegally will be subject to execution by German firing squads, Lieut. Gen. Ernst von Schaumberg, commander of occupation forces at Paris, announced today.

The occupation command also has ordered penalties increased for illegal possession of "war material of any sort." Offenders will be tried before German military courts and will be liable to execution.

Plot Nipped, Vichy Says

Earlier the official French information office reported that terrorists in the unoccupied zone had attempted to blow up the prefecture at Limoges, administrative capital for the Haute Vienne department.

The office said a bomb which had been planted in the prefecture was discovered in time to foil the attempt.

At the same time, but without an apparent connection, French sources said police had rounded up about fifteen followers of Jacques Doriot, Rightest leader, in the unoccupied zone at Perigueax, Marseille and Limoges on charges of unlawful assembly.

The French Information Office declared that "since the start of the Russo-German war communists are multiplying incidents all over the country." It referred particularly to acts of railway sabotage endangering hundreds of thousands of peaceful travelers. The increasing number of the attacks, coupled with agitation, it said, showed "the existence of a veritable communist plot danger which must not be underestimated."

A decree published in the official journal ordered reopening of seven prisons in unoccupied France.

Manwhile, ten more alleged communists were sentenced to prison terms ranging from one to ten years.

Death Decreed for Owning Any Kind of WarMaterial as Terrorism Continues

BY ROY PORTER

VICHY, Sept. 13 (AP).—General Ernst von Schaumburg, German military commander of Paris, in a new effort to quell terrorist opposition in occupied France, announced today that unauthorized possessors of firearms would be liable to execution.

As terrorist activities continued in various parts of France, Schaumburg ordered also that penalties for illegal possession of "war material of any sort" be increased to make persons so accused subject to the death penalty.

Terrorists, the official French information office at Vichy stated today, failed in an attempt to blow up the local government offices at Limoges, capital of the Haute Vienne Department. A bomb was discovered before it exploded.

At Perigeaux, Marseilles and Limoges, all in the unoccupied zone, police rounded up about fifteen followers of the Rightist leader, Jacques Doriot, on charges of unlawful assembly, it was reported here. Arms were reported discovered in the home of one of the local leaders of the group.

The Paris radio reported tonight that "some 1,000" persons were arrested at La Rochelle, in the occupied zone on the Bay of Biscay, yesterday in mass police raids on the town's cafes and restaurants. Vichy was without further details.

Military and civil courts continued to grind out sentences to repress anti-national conspiracies, Communist plots and terrorist outbreaks. In a new incident, Vichy sources reported that a German non-commissioned officer was attacked by four young Frenchmen in a street behind the Chamber of Deputies in Paris last night.

In Montauban, southern France, seventeen Communists were sent to concentration camps, while in the occupied territory five were arrested for distribution of leaflets at Besancon, and eleven others there were sent into forced residence on the basis of past Communist records.

The information office said "Communists are multiplying incidents all over the country. Railway sabotage, the increasing number of personal assaults and agitation show "the existence of a veritable Communist plot, the danger of which must not be underestimated," it said.

Anti-Communist courts sentenced ten more persons to prison terms ranging from one to ten years.

A Vichy government Cabinet meeting discussed the new court of justice which is to try the chiefs of the Third Republic. Marshal Henri Petain has promised that the government's action against these leaders, including former Premiers Edouard Daladier, Paul Reynaud and Leo Blum, and General Maurice Gustave Gamelin, former army chief, will be under way by Oct. 15.

The new court will recommend direct procedure by Marshal Petain against "those responsible for the defeat" of France—a switchover from the original charge of the Riom Court, which was "responsibility for the passage (of France) from peace to war."

Serb Rebels Destroy Village

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 13—Serbian Chetniks (revolutionaries) were declared in a newspaper dispatch today to have killed 400 persons of a single village in a recurrence of guerrilla fighting which has broken out spasmodically since the conquest of Yugoslavia by the Axis.

The newspaper Nemeti Usag said the village of Tabor, near Mostar, was the scene of the action—an eight-day fight that ended with burning of homes and driving of surviving villagers to the hills.

Tug-Of-War For Power Hinted

(The motive of Serbian guerrillas in destroying a Serbian village was not brought out in the dispatch. Dispatches Tuesday from Zagreb, however, said there was a tug-of-war for power within Croatia—formed from the northern part of Yugoslavia.)

The Chetniks were said to be striking from a camp high in the mountains. As a result of this and other disorders in the area, the dispatch reported, railway service has been halted between Savala and Humi.

Another band of Chetniks was reported to have stopped a steamer on the Sava river between Belgrade and Sabac and dumped its cargo.

The Zagreb newspaper Novi list reported fighting between Chetniks and police in northwest Bosnia near Trupa, in northern Croatia near Belovar and in eastern Croatia where five Ustachi soldiers were killed. Six laborers were shot at Tuzla for participating in Chetnik activities.

Oslo Reports More Sentences

[By the Associated Press]

Oslo, German-Occupied Norway, Sept. 13—It was announced today that a court-martial had sentenced a foundry worker to fifteen years in prison, a dock worker to twelve years and three others to ten years each.

(This dispatch did not mention the charges, but a German radio broadcast said the sentences were meted out to preserve law and order.

Stoppage of milk deliveries for workers in factories and rumors that the milk was being sent to Finland for the German army caused the strikes Tuesday in Oslo's steel and ship-building industries, the propaganda office of the Norwegian Nazi party announced today.

The Nazi statement said the subsequent rumors that 70,000 to 100,000 quarts had been sent to the German army, British air activity over the Oslo area and Norwegian announcements from London that Norwegian and British troops would come as liberators were all responsible for the strikes.

Helsinki, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Finnish abor organ, Sosiali Demokraatti, blamed the situation in Norway today on the Quisling Government which, it said, "the overwhelming majority of Norwegians cannot endure without indignation.

"The other north countries," it said, "follow the process of tragedy our brother nation is forced to live through with deep sorrow and sympathy."

Quisling Regime's Foes Given Prison Sentences

Stockholm, Sept. 13 (AP) — Reports from Oslo tonight said a German court-martial today sentenced two Norwegians to death and ten others to prison sentences in efforts to stamp out opposition to the Quisling, German-supported regime.

The two death sentences, imposed for acts against the regime, were commuted to life imprisonment by the Nazi Gauleiter, Joseph Terboven.

More Arrests Reported

The other sentences given workers and trades union leaders ranged from ten years to life in prison. One of the men sentenced to life was Fredrik Ramm, a journalist who accompanied Roald Amundsen in his polar flight in the derigible Norge in 1926.

Widespread arrests were reported continuing. Oslo dispatches said inhabitants of the town of Skien were fined 50,000 crowns and prohibited from leaving their homes nights because of demonstrations against Quisling leaders and German forces.

Withdrawal Denied

Because so many Norwegians were leaving the trades unions, while others were refusing to pay their subscriptions, Oslo dispatches said, the Germans ordered no one be permitted to withdraw or to refuse payment.

With stoppage of milk deliveries for factory workers Monday rumors spread in Oslo the milk was being sent to German soldiers in Finland. A Nazi party statement today blamed these rumors for Tuesday's steel and shipbuilding strikes in Olso.

72 INDIA BOUND; 8, VERY GLUM, GO TO SIBERIA

Group Shows Up After Allies Threaten Force

'Sieg Heils' Sting Ears Of Allied Diplomats

Berlin, Sept. 13 (AP) — Authorized German sources asserted today that the fate of Germans in Iran was causing deep concern not only to the Government but to the public as well.

[By the Associated Press]

Teheran, Iran, Sept. 13—Eighty Nazis bound for interment in India and Siberia left here by train today while British and Russian diplomats listened in irritation to their Sieg Heils echoing through Teheran's palatial marble depot.

Seventy-two of the group went by special train to Ahwaz, en route to India, while eight were aboard one coach of a Kazvin train, with Siberia as their destination.

Get But 80 Of 275 Sought

Allied displeasure was manifest over a series of excuses and asserted misunderstandings whereby the German Legation failed twice to deliver the prisoners and finally produced only eighty of the 275 men demanded of it.

With about 400 men and 400 women and children still sheltered under the swastika flag at the German Legation's suburban compound, German Minister Erwin Ettel visited the station and personally saluted most of those being sent away.

A British Legation statement that the transfer had been arranged only after the British Minister threatened to ask the Red army to enter Teheran and seize the entire Nazi colony was denied by the Iranian Government.

To End Stalling

Germans Say Others Listed To Leave Are Ill And 'Unable To Move'

BY DANIEL DE LUCE

[By the Associated Press]

Teheran, Sept. 13—Eighty Nazis left on special trains for war-time internment in India and Siberia today after twenty-four hours of delaying tactics by the German legation were ended by the threat of Iran police and army to "take measures" against the legation compound.

With their "Heil Hitler" cheers rasping the ears of waiting British and Russian diplomats, seventy-two of the group went south toward Ahwaz en route to India, while eight other very glum Germans went north to Kazvin for internment in Russia.

800 Still In Compound

About 400 men and 400 women and children still were sheltered at the German legation's suburban compound.

By a variety of excuses the legation had caused postponement of the trains' departures, first from 8.30 A. M., yesterday, until 10 P. M., then until this morning.

At 6.50 A. M. the first Germans arrived at the station. Then nearly two hours was spent checking passports and drinking beer, before the trains actually left.

Allies Disappointed

The British had expected 225 Germans to leave and the Russians had expected fifty. Both were disappointed.

British and Russian counselors, waiting hours for the Germans, arrived in heavily guarded busses at the station, mentioned several times the possibility that Soviet troops should be called from Kazvin, eighty miles away, to end the stalling tactics.

If further difficulties are encountered tomorrow, when further contingents are scheduled to leave, positive action will be taken, Soviet quarters threatened.

Swede Is Go-Between

The Germans reported to Berlin that the Iran army had machine guns trained upon all exits of the legation compound. At one time the Germans told the Swedish charge d'affairs, the go-between in the surrender of the Nazis, that they would not leave until the guns were removed.

Gen. Ahmad Ahmadi, military governor of Teheran, however, personally supervised their departure, with one hundred Iran soldiers riding on the train to Ahwaz and twenty others on the train to Kazvin.

The Russians especially wanted possession of a dozen alleged Nazi ringleaders of espionage in southwestern Asia, including Roman Gamotta, said by the Moscow radio to have been the chief instigator of Rashid Ali Al Gailani's coup d'etat in Iraq.

He is believed to be a former German naval officer who adopted Gamotta as an alias.

They Do Not Show Up

But neither Gamotta nor the others turned up today, and there were rumors that some of them were hiding in the Japanese legation. Language misunderstandings, lack of transportation to the station, incorrect spelling of names and sickness were some of the excuses the Germans gave for their delay.

They said that thirty-eight who were scheduled to leave on the first train had "fallen ill and are unable to move."

Twenty-five sailors demanded by the British as fugitives from Nazi ships seized at Bandar Shapur were said by the Germans not to have put in an appearance here. They said some of the sailors were "killed or wounded in the South" and that, anyway, no correct list of the names had been submitted.

Sees No Obligation

The names written down by Iran police obviously were misspelled, the Germans said, and the Embassy declared it was under no obligation to furnish a correct list.

[New York shipping circles reported that when the British captured Bandar Shapur they found eight German and Italian vessels there. Two were undamaged, five were sabotaged, but will be able to be repaired, and the eighth was sunk. The nationality of the latter ship was not reported.]

Meanwhile, social camaraderie between the Russian and British Allies spread. The Russian commander at Kazvin invited the British commander at Hamadan to a gala luncheon tomorrow at which the British Minister will be present.

At Senna, the other day an elite British cavalry regiment, a considerable portion of whose officers have inherited titles, tendered a banquet to the Red army's nearest unit. The Russians, who failed to put in an appearance at the first bid, were said to have enjoyed themselves greatly.

Iranian Officials Blamed

London, Sept. 13 (AP)—Sir Reader Bullard, British Minister to Teheran, was reported authoritatively today to have made firm representations to Iran to hasten the departure of the first contingent of Germans for internment camps.

This source emphasized that British-Russian policy demands a complete break in relations between Iran and the Axis powers and said accomplishment of that program has been delayed by unfriendly Iranians in high places.

Vice-Admiral Wodehouse Listed as Missing at Sea

Formerly Commanded Gibraltar Yard; Retired in May, '40

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP).—Vice-Admiral orman A. Wodehouse, who commanded the dock yard at Gibraltar at the start of the war, was listed today as missing at sea. The ship on which he was traveling was not disclosed. Wodehouse was placed on the retired list in May, 1940.

In Action at Jutland

Admiral Wodehouse was a former commander of the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth and the gunnery and torpedo school at Portsmouth. In 1938 he was head of a military mission to Portugal, which was unofficially reported to have concluded an agreement with the Portuguese government giving the British Navy the use of harbors in certain Portuguese islands in the Atlantic.

He served with the navy in the World War and saw action as a gunnery officer in the Battle of Jutland.

Fire-Fighting Services Reorganized by Britain

33 Area Forces to Meet 'New and Deadly' Air Attacks

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP).—Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary, said today that Great Britain has reorganized her fire-fighting services, abolishing 1,400 local lre brigades and forming them into thirty-three coordinated area forces to meet "new and deadly dangers from future air attacks."

One commander will be directly responsible for the fire-fighting strength and equipment of each area. Special fire-fighting appliances, such as foam units, water towers and hose trucks, will be stored at strategic points.

A fire staff college will be organized to give specialized training for senior officers, and a large number of women will be enlisted as drivers and members of control-room and communications staffs, he said.

Berlin, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—In a drive to collect fats, the German Labor Minister, Franz Seldte, today ordered all German industrial plants, dairies and raw wool-washing factories to install special refineries to extract fats from waste water.

The ministry estimated that household dishwater in Germany contains 25,000 tons of fat annually. Waste water fats, it was emphasized, will be used only for industrial purposes such as soap manufacture.

Pacific, Atlantic 'Battles' Linked

Singapore, Sept. 13 (AP)—Sir Frederick Eggleston, en route to Chungking as Australia's first Minister to China, said today that Singapore was to Australia what the Panama Canal was to America.

He said the battle of the Atlantic could not be separated from the battle of the Pacific, which "is now being fought on the continent of Asia."

WARNS U. S. JAPAN WILL FIGHT TO END

Nationalist Leader Speaks at Big Tokio Rally.

Tokio, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Seigo Nakano, extreme nationalist political leader, told a great mass meeting today that Japan is prepared to fight to the last man in the event she cannot settle her differences with the United States through diplomatic channels.

Nakano, whose speech was advertised as a reply to the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic Charter, discounted the possibility of a Japanese rapprochement with the United States and Great Britain because, he said, their positions are fundamentally opposed. Nakano is head of the reactionary Tohokai political group.

Tokio newspapers reported Nakano's speech briefly, playing it down, and a Domei news agency broadcast also tended to minimize it.

Nakano warned that Japan "must be vigilant lest a prolongation of negotiations in Washington eliminate her chance to expand southward." He accused Britain and the United States of trying to intimidate the Axis Powers but said that the United States at present has her hands full in the Atlantic.

Should Japan decide to send her navy and air force—which include, he said, 500 ships and 4,000 planes—into the South Pacific, Britain and the United States would be powerless to protect the sea routes to Manila, Singapore and Australia, Nakano declared, and added that in such circumstances it would be "nonsensical for the United States to start a war against Japan."

Nazis Insulted In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 13 (AP).—German Ambassador Von Thermann has protested to the Argentine Foreign Office against "calumnies" he says were voiced during House debate on a resolution which would ask that he be sent home.

"Overstepping the bounds of a diplomat and abusing his privileges," were accusations leveled at Von Thermann in the resolution, which is to come up for a vote Monday.

The Ambassador objected to charges that members of the German diplomatic corps had participated in "blackmail" of German workers in Argentina to obtain funds for Nazi organizations.

Deputy Damonte Taborda, chairman of a committee investigating subversive activities, said Von Thermann's "protest has the same value as the security Hitler promised the countries he later invaded."

[President Roosevelt, reviewing alleged Nazi activities in the Western Hemisphere, had said secret airfields had been discovered recently in Colombia within easy range of the Panama Canal.]

Foreign Minister Lopez De Mesa previously had told the Senate the Government had conducted several investigations and had been unable to find any evidence of clandestine landing fields.

U. S.-BRITAIN ARMY ADVISED

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 13 (AP).—The armies and navies of Britain and the United States should be combined by treaty after the war but both nations "should keep separate identities," Dr. Elmer Hess, president of the Western New York and Ontario Orological Society, told the society in convention here today.

"At one time during the present struggle I rather looked forward to dual citizenship between our nations," Dr. Hess said. "I now think that would be a mistake. Both of us should keep our separate identities as should all other nations. Both of us should welcome a federation of free states."

The aggressor nations must be "reduced by destruction of their industrial plants to the status of agricultural communities," he added. "Not one plant capable of being converted to munitions production should be allowed to operate."

U. S. WILL STAND BY CHINA, SAYS GEORGE

Senator Convinced Chiang's Interests Come First In Talks With Japan

SEP 14 1941

Views Vary On Roosevelt's Ignoring Of Nippon In His Warning To Axis

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 13—Conviction that the United States would not "desert" the Chungking Chinese Government in any rapprochement that might be effected with Japan was voiced today by Senator George (Dem., Ga.), influential member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"The Chinese have no reason to worry about any action we might take," George said.

At the State Department, meantime, Secretary Hull said there was absolutely nothing new in Japanese-American relations. He reiterated to a press conference that only exploratory talks were in progress with the Japanese. He said the talks involved an attempt to ascertain whether negotiations for a settlement of Pacific problems would be feasible or desirable.

George said there seemed reason to hope that the difficulties which led to the freezing of Japanese assets in this country eventually might be worked out amicably.

Must Take In Chang's Interest

But any such settlement, he stressed, must take into consideration the interests of Chiang Kai-Shek's Government in its undeclared war with Japan.

There have been some indications that the Chinese feared any American reapprochement with Japan might affect the vital flow of United States war supplies coming to them over the Burma road.

Another member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Chairman Connally (Dem., Texas), expressed the opinion that the future of American relations with Tokyo would hinge largely on developments arising from the action of the Japanese Emperor in taking over control of the army.

"If he means to be pacific, then I think there can be an adjustment of our differences with Japan," he declared.

German-Russ War A Factor

Connally said he thought the results of the German-Russian campaign would have great bering on the future attitude of the Japanese. If the Nazi forces bogged down there, he predicted that Tokyo would be much more anxious to smooth out its difficulties with Washington.

Although some legislators were inclined to believe that President Roosevelt's failure to mention Japan in his Thursday night radio talk indicated there was more than hope for peace in the Pacific, one influential Senator said no such construction ought to be placed on the omission.

Asking anonymity, this Senator said he was satisfied that the President did not wish to "scatter his fire" and for that reason refrained from discussing Far Eastern problems directly in his revelation that he had ordered the navy to shoot first, if Axis warcraft were found in American defense waters.

Three U. S. Experts Arrive

Thus, he went on, Japan ought not to assume that the whole of American attention was directed elsewhere or that there was any slackening in this Government's resolve to oppose further aggressions in the Orient.

A mission of three American experts who have just returned from surveying the 700-mile long Burma road, China's supply life line, will come to Washington Monday to confer with American officials.

The mission is composed of Daniel G. Arnstein, president of the Terminal System, New York, taxicab operators; Harold C. Davis, vice-president of the Consolidated Motor Lines, of Hartford, Conn., a trucking expert, and Marco F. Hellman, of Lehman Brothers, New York banking firm, who served as the financial expert.

They will confer with Lauchlin Currie, who made a survey of China's defense requirements on behalf of President Roosevelt; the China Defense Supplies Commission, and other officials.

Sufficient Operation

Upon returning to this country, Arnstein said the greatest difficulty with the operation of Burma road was the inefficiency with which traffic was run, lack of maintenance for trucks, and of a dispatching system, and poor fueling arrangements.

The Chinese Government, on the mission's recommendation, has set up six control stations, created an efficient dispatching system, and called on the United States for mechanics to teach Chinese mechanics to repair the trucking fleet.

More than 2,000 trucks, all American made, are now in service, Arnstein reported, and it is expected 7,000 will be put in use within the next three months.

Legion Is Facing Pacifist Fight

[By the Associated Press]

Milwaukee, Sept. 13—The biggest, most colorful convention crowd in the world pushed into Milwaukee today by rail, highway, air and water for the opening tomorrow of the twenty-third annual American Legion convention.

Religious and patriotic services at the massive Emil Blatz Outdoor Music Temple in Washington Park tomorrow night will precede the initial joint meeting of the Legion and auxiliary Monday morning in Milwaukee Auditorium. The convention will run five days.

The first note of conflict over the Legion's position in the world crisis was expected to be sounded at an America First mass meeting tonight. The meeting, not connected with the convention program, will be addressed by United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Dem., Mo.), past national commander and organizer of the Legion, and Representative Hamilton Fish (Rep., N. Y.), also a prominent Legionnaire.

Clark and Fish, according to newspaper advertisements sponsored by the America First Committee, will speak "against the war makers and their attempt to force a war resolution through the national convention."

Lansing Hoyt, Wisconsin America First chairman, said he considered the Legion's executive committee the group "attempting to railroad through a pro-war resolution." He declared the executive committee had invited Secretary Frank Knox before the convention Monday "to try to promote intervention."

Milo Warner, national commander of the Legion, declined to comment on Hoyt's statements. Another Legion spokesman said all actions of the convention would be by vote of delegates.

Speaking of the youth now in the service, Warner said they undoubtedly would feel the need of an organization as the World War veterans did and "unless the Legion is opened to them I feel certain they will form a similar group of their own."

Washington, Sept. 13—The Senate subcommittee investigating alleged dissemination of war propaganda subpœnaed Charles Chaplin, movie comedian, today for testimony October 6 on his picture, "The Great Dictator."

Chairman D. Worth Clark (Dem., Idaho) announced that the committee had subpœnaed Anatole Litvak, director of the film, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," and William R. Wilkerson, editor and publisher of the Hollywood Reporter, a trade journal, to appear the same day.

Chaplin's Motives At Issue

The subpœnas were issued as a routine matter, Clark said. He explained that Wendell L. Willkie, representing the major movie producers, had agreed to produce witnesses for his group, but added that others not directly represented by Willkie would be subpœnaed from time to time.

The chairman told reporters the committee wished to ascertain Chaplin's motives in producing "The Great Dictator," which John T. Flynn, a previous witness, had testified carried a "propaganda" message at its conclusion.

Clark said Wilkerson had criticized the committee's procedure, adding that he wished to have the editor make his criticisms in person.

The committee will resume hearings Mondoy on a proposal by Senators Gerald P. Nye (Rep., N. D.) and Bennett C. Clark (Dem., Mo.) for a formal inquiry into propaganda.

Propaganda Inquiry Calls Chaplin on His 'Dictator'

Senators Want to Know Motive in Producing Film

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Senate subcommittee investigating alleged dissemination of war propaganda subpoenaed Charles Chaplin, film comedian, today for testimony Oct. 6 on his picture "The Great Dictator."

Senator D. Worth Clark, Democrat, of Idaho, the chairman, announced that the committee had also subpoenaed Anatole Litvak, director of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," and William R. Wilkerson, editor and publisher of "The Hollywood Reporter," trade journal, for the same day.

The subpoenas were issued as a routine matter, Senator Clark said. He explained that Wendell L. Willkie, representing the major film producers, had agreed to produce witnesses for his group, but added that others not represented directly by Mr. Willkie would be subpoenaed from time to time.

The chairman told reporters the committee wished to ascertain Mr. Chaplin's motives in producing "The Great Dictator," which John T. Flynn, a previous witness, had testified carried a "propaganda" message at its conclusion.

Senator Clark said Mr. Wilkerson had criticized the committee's procedure, adding that he wished to have the editor make his criticisms in person.

The committee will resume hearings Monday on a proposal by Senators Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, and Bennett Champ Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, for a formal inquiry into propaganda.

During the day, F. H. Peter Cusick, executive secretary of Fight for Freedom, Inc., made public a letter he said had been sent to Chairman Clark and to Senator Nye asking if they had ever protested against the showing in the United States of the German film "Victory in the West."

"Four days of inquiry and statements," Mr. Cusick added, "have failed to clarify what it is the isolationist Senators conducting the investigation of anti-Nazi propaganda in the motion-picture industry seek to achieve, unless it be to force the industry to present the Axis in a favorable light regardless of the facts.

"Telling the truth about Nazi conduct is bound to make decent people feel like destroying the Axis."

WILLKIE TO FIGHT FOR REPUBLICANS AIDING PRESIDENT

Associates Say He Will Enter '42 Campaign to Help Those Backing Our Foreign Policy

AS AGAINST ISOLATIONISM

But Former Candidate, Friends Say, Will Attack Many New Deal Domestic Policies

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—Reporting that Wendell L. Willkie has decided to take an active part in the off-year elections of 1942, associates of the 1940 Republican Presidential nominee said today that he would work and speak for those Republican candidates who have backed President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

Mr. Willkie's friends reported that he had made three political decisions:

1. He will work within the Republican Party to make it one standing for "internationalism" rather than "isolationism."

2. He will spend all his spare time working for the nomination and election of those Republicans who have supported Administration foreign policy.

3. He will keep silent in campaigns where Democrats supporting Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policies are fighting Republicans who oppose them.

Mr. Willkie, it was said authoritatively, is particularly anxious to help in the re-election campaigns of such men as Senator Ball, Republican of Minnesota, who have supported Administration foreign policy legislation.

Intends to Back McNary

As to Senator McNary, Republican, of Oregon, the Senate minority leader and the Vice Presidential nominee last year, Mr. Willkie has told friends that Mr. McNary has been 60 per cent right and 40 per cent wrong on foreign policy questions. He has added, however, that he intends to support Mr. McNary.

Mr. Willkie was said to believe that the whole future of the Republican party would depend on whether it elected "internationalists" or "isolationists" next year. He was convinced, it was said, that if the party turned toward isolationism there would be room for a powerful new party in the country.

Associates made it clear that Mr. Willkie vigorously opposed many of the New Deal domestic policies. They said that he intended to attack them while supporting the Administration foreign policy.

For instance, it was said Mr. Willkie thought that defense production had been mismanaged, that President Roosevelt had not obtained full cooperation of management and labor and that poor administration had hampered many domestic programs.

Mr. Willkie was reported to have told friends he had little use for party labels and that he was convinced that more than 60 per cent of the voters made up their minds independently of party organizations.

When one visitor pointed out that it would be extremely difficult to get any new party ticket on the ballots of most States, Mr. Willkie was said to have declared:

"That is quite true, and any man with a claim to political leadership should exhaust every avenue within his own party before seeking another method of achieving his objectives."

Meanwhile, Mr. Willkie as counsel for the movie industry, asserted in a statement today that he was "shocked" at what he described as "the race prejudice" exhibited by Charles A. Lindbergh in a talk at Des Moines, and by Senator Nye in testimony before a congressional committee.

"The talk of Colonel Lindbergh in Des Moines was the most un-American talk made in my time by any person of national reputation," Mr. Willkie declared. "If the American people permit race prejudice to arise at this critical moment, they little deserve to preserve democracy.

"I was shocked to hear the same sentiments expressed by Senator Nye, another isolationist, before a Senate subcommittee. He remained unrebuked by any of the isolationist members of the committee. Surely these people, in their desperate effort to sabotage their country's foreign policy, will not seek to pull down the temple of liberty."

Mr. Lindbergh had charged that the "British, the Jewish and the Roosevelt Administration groups" were leading this country toward war. Mr. Nye had testified that the moving-picture industry contained many of foreign birth who were interested in involving this country in a defense of their homelands.

In reply, Mr. Nye said:

"Mr. Willkie gets down terribly low when he seeks to blind those who follow what he says, to the facts which are being and will be developed by the investigation. It is he who makes racial prejudice an issue. It is he who would accomplish one thing—namely, stop this investigation of moving-picture propaganda before all the facts are in the open.

"It is not strange that Willkie would want to stop this investigation before a monopoly strong enough to almost completely guide American thinking was shown up in full light in an hour such as this."

Pershing Hails Spirit Of 1917

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 13—Gen. John J. Pershing became 81 years old today, observing the occasion quietly and without ceremony at Walter Reed Hospital here, where friends said he had been undergoing his annual physical checkup.

In a message of birthday greeting to the army, the man who commanded the A. E. F. in France a quarter century ago declared that "there is no nation in the world whose citizenry affords better soldiers than the United States."

Hails Foresight Of Leaders

"Our men have the spirit and the stamina to defend their country at all costs," he declared. "This was shown in 1917 and will be again should the need arise." The message was issued through the Army and Navy Journal, service publication.

In it General Pershing also said that "the country is to be congratulated on the foresight of its leaders who did not wait for hostilities to begin before organizing a defense force," and he praised Secretary Henry Stimson as an "accomplished and experienced statesman," and Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, who served with Pershing in France, as an "able and seasoned soldier."

Follows War News Closely

Friends reported that Pershing's health was better today than a year ago and in general was considered by physicians to be "remarkably good."

He was said to spend much of his time following war news at home and abroad. Frequently he goes for a drive, but otherwise gets out very little from his quarters at the army hospital.

$50,000 Bail In Spy Case

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 13—Kurt Frederick Ludwig, one of a group of persons indicted on charges of conspiring to transmit valuable defense data to the German Government, was held in the Federal Building today in default of $50,000 bail set in Spokane, Wash., near where he was arrested recently.

His immediate codefendants, Hans Pagel, Frederick Schlosser and Lucy Boehmler, pleaded guilty to the indictment last week. Another woman, Mrs. Helen Mayer, was indicted separately on similar charges and pleaded innocent. The Government charged that Mrs. Mayer worked closely with Ludwig, who was brought here last night by plane.

Charges Against Ludwig

The Government charged Ludwig with obtaining defense information by touring the Atlantic Coast and "directly observing military establishments, naval establishments, air fields, munition plants and other manufacturing plants and making notes of the nature, size, equipment, location and other features of such establishments."

Meanwhile, the trial of sixteen accused German agents in a Brooklyn Federal Court was adjourned until Monday.

Pan-Air Ousts Nazis

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 13—Elimination of all but seventy miles of an 11,500-mile network of German-controlled air lines on South America's Pacific coast was reported today by Pan American-Grace Airways.

The line said it would serve Ecuador exclusively under new schedules, replacing routes operated by Sedta, German subsidiary. German service has been discontinued in Colombia, Peru, Chile and Bolivia, leaving only the seventy-mile transandean run across the narrow strip of Chile from Santiago to the Argentine border.

When the war started the 11,500 miles of German lines were scattered over five nations. Pan American-Grace has now increased its pre-war total of 4,500 miles to 15,000.

Clothing For Britons Urged

Concord, N. H., Sept. 13 (AP)—England needs warm clothing at once in anticipation of the winter, Mrs. John G. Winant, wife of the Ambassador to Great Britain, announced today.

Mrs. Winant expressed this view as she conferred with Mrs. Wales Latham, of New York, who heads Bundles for Britain, Inc., and who sought from the Ambassador's wife information on needs of the civilian population in England.

A large amount of garments are needed after every raid, Mrs. Winant said. Ambulances, mobile kitchens, bedding, cooking and heating equipment also are needed, she added.

Mrs. Winant returned from London to see her two sons. She plans to return to England soon.

Copy Of Speech Given Petain

Washington, Sept. 13 (AP)—Secretary Cordell Hull disclosed today that Admiral William D. Leahy, American Ambassador to France, had delivered a copy of President Roosevelt's speech outlining American policy to use the navy to protect shipping to Marshal Henri Petain, chief of the French state.

Hull said there was absolutely nothing new in Japanese-American relations. Replying to press-conference questions on dvelopments in diplomatic conversations in progress between the two countries, he reiterated that only exploratory talks were in progress.

U. S. Puts New Curb On Frozen Securities

Holdings Under Order Cannot Be Redeemed Without Federal Clearance

Washington, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Treasury ruled today that holders of securities affected by its freezing orders could not redeem them unless given a clearance certificate by a Federal Reserve Bank.

"A further step to prevent the sale in this country of securities which have been looted abroad" was the Treasury's official description of its action.

The new ruling covers all transactions after today, and persons acquiring securities beginning Monday, the Treasury said, "may experience considerable difficulty" in obtaining clearance certificates. They will be required to trace the ownership of their securities since April 8, 1940, when the first freezing orders were issued.

Teacher Draft Delay Urged

SEP 14 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 13—Military deferment for school teachers of vocational, physical and health education was proposed today by Dr. Francis J. Brown, consultant for the American Council of Education, to meet a shortage of instructors in those subjects.

Brown also proposed that schools increase salaries "to make the teaching profession more attractive."

After a nation-wide survey, Dr. Brown said the scarcity of men for vocational, physical and health science teaching was "apparently serious." His report was submitted to the Selective Service Board.

Would End Bans On Wives

As a further guarantee that schoolrooms would be adequately staffed, he suggested that States facing a teacher shortage remove restrictions against married women teaching, encourage the hiring of instructors from States with a plentiful supply of teachers, and advise women now pursuing teacher training to transfer their studies into fields where there is a scarcity of instructors.

The American Council of Education is a coordinating group formed of State and national organizations on education, and of individual colleges, universities and school systems.

Draft, Defense Jobs Blamed

Dr. Brown said the teacher shortage was apparent only in fields in which men specialize, and the cause was obvious—inductions into military service and switches to higher-paying jobs created by the defense program.

Teachers of vocational education and industrial arts were reported to be in great demand in airplane and other defense industries.

While Dr. Brown's study embraced only men teachers, the United States Office of Education said there were indications of a scarcity of women instructors in home economics.

Situation Changing

Dr. Brown's study was made through questionnaires to placement bureaus, employment offices and superintendents of schools in all States and in cities of more than 50,000 population. He released no specific figures on areas most affected by scarcities of men teachers, saying the situation was "continually shifting."

Probers May Let Time Decide Gas Dispute

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 13 — Informed sources said today that a special Senate investigating committee had decided to let a controversy over the reported Eastern gasoline shortage work itself out.

The railroads contend any shortage can be eliminated by using surplus tank cars. A group of major oil companies favor construction of a vast pipe line from the mid-continent fields to provide additional supplies. Acting Petroleum Coordinator Ralph K. Davies has refused to accept the railroads' estimates and has urged that the pipe line be built.

Would "Sit Back And Watch"

"If we just sit back and watch for a few weeks, everybody will know who is right," said one member of the five-man Senate group which has been inquiring into the reported shortage. "Somebody is wrong and time will tell."

Meanwhile, Senator David I. Walsh (Dem., Mass.) wrote Davies that he had information that the Eastern gasoline scare "was baseless and that the curtailment and rationing orders were unjustified."

Supplies of motor fuel for retailers have been reduced ten per cent. below the July level, and filling stations in seventeen States and the District of Columbia have been closing from 7 P. M. to 7 A. M. nightly.

Says Independents Suffer

Walsh declared that eighty tankers carrying petroleum products arrived in Boston harbor during August, compared with sixty-four in the same month last year and noted that tankers now are allowed to carry heavier loads. Walsh said he feared that small, independent units of the oil industry were being injured by the filling-station curfew and asked Davies to comment.

Senator Francis Maloney (Dem., Conn.), chairman of the special investigating committee, said Davies had furnished him a copy of his statement that a gasoline shortage problem "does exist."

The Senate investigators asserted that any claimed shortage in surplus or reserves could be cured by use of presently idle railroad tank cars, estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000. Davies, during two lengthy appearances before the Senate commmittee, insisted he had been unable to locate the so-called surplus cars.

Tunneling Gibraltar

Gangs Working 24 Hours A Day Driving Passages Through Rock Preparing Defenses

[Associated Press Correspondence]

GIBRALTAR, Sept. 13.

The first thing you see as the ferry from Algeciras, Spain, pulls in at the port of Gibraltar is an old tourist sign:

"What to see in Gibraltar, for visitors having only a short time."

Guns hidden in the great gray rock behind the sign are just one of the many wartime improvements the British have introduced at Old Gib just to make sure that the only visitors likely to arrive these days stay as short a time as possible.

French 75's brought over from the United States stand ready to help defend Britain's steppingstone at the western entrance to the Mediterranean.

American Drills Help

American diamond drills are helping to hack out an amazing labyrinth of tunnels in the rock which may be home to thousands of defenders if history repeats itself and twice-previously tried Gibraltar is forced to undergo a third grueling siege.

The tunnels—or galleries—are the key to a new idea for guarding Gibraltar. Work on them never stops. Hundreds of Canadian and English miners, in eight-hour shifts, keep the work going twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.

I dropped off to sleep in a comfortable room at the Rock Hotel to the thunderous lullaby of dynamite blasting. The next morning, after a breakfast of bacon, tomatoes, toast, butter, orange marmalade and coffee—a remarkable breakfast for wartime Europe—I set off on a tour of the passages.

Led by an agile major of the Black Watch, I scrambled up and down huge piles of blasted rocks, picked my way along a little railway by flashlight—and found myself in the very core of Gibraltar.

Live In Little Houses

Over the deafening roar of the drilling, the major explained that we were standing in the "brain" of the rock. General headquarters officers will live in little red brick houses lining the side of the passageway. Their commands will be conveyed by telephone and motorcycle runners.

As in the Maginot Line, all facilities are being provided for this mole's life under ground—kitchens, dormitories, toilets, shower baths, food and water reservoirs (all fresh water in Gibraltar must come from rain, as in Bermuda), ammunition supplies and hospitals.

I visited one hospital inside the rock where 200 beds and an electrically heated operating room are ready for the moment when hospitals outside may no longer function.

Nature has favored the British project. Most of the tunnels are self-ventilated. There is no problem of steel or cement reinforcing except at the openings, since the tunnels are being hewn out of solid rock that rises in places to a height of 1,100 feet. The passages divide at intervals, leaving supporting beams of rock itself.

The big problem is dampness, especially with leakage during the rainy season. This is counteracted by corrugated-iron roofing.

Formidable Guns

From the excavation areas, where work is being speeded up, we went on to a completed passage where sentinels stand over formidable-looking guns of all descriptions.

I pushed into embrasures set in the face of a steel cliff, and sighted down a barrel at what one day may be another no man's land. I descended a vertical shaft and found myself at a sally port which one day may open to let out British raiding parties, but which is so constructed that if an enemy ever gained admittance he would find himself under a hot barrage from above with no way up.

Out of some of the windows you see the narrow strip of land connecting Gibraltar with the mainland. Those workers who sleep in Spain must thread their way through a maze of tank traps each night and morning.

The road leads past small artificial lakes and a landing field constructed on one of the few pieces of flat land. This will be abandoned, because of the difficulty of defending it, if and when the day arrives when Gibraltar passes from its present phase—occasional air raids—through succeeding phases toward a big-time siege.

At the moment, army, navy and air force men stationed at Gibraltar are living on the slope in houses reminiscent of eighteenth-century England.

Few Smashed Houses

The only signs of assault to date are a few smashed houses struck last fall by French bombs during retaliatory raids after Dakar.

The men occupy themselves by day with a variety of exercises designed to keep them on their toes and at perfect defensive efficiency.

A few weeks after Lord (Tiger) Gort took command of the rock he staged a dummy attack, with his bombers dropping sandbags. During my visit, land batteries were potting at a target towed across the water by a swift warship.

But just about everything possible to relieve the monotony of life within a space of three and a half miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide has been provided.

The men take their leave at a special recreation camp at one end of the rock. There for three or four days at a time they are permitted to do as they please. They receive special food, sleep late, listen to the radio, read, swim, play tennis and squash, even football and hockey.

In general, life on this rocky bulwark of the British Empire isn't so bad even today.

War Communiques

Russian

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (Sunday) (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique, in part:

During Sept. 13 our troops fought stubbornly against the enemy along the entire front.

Fifty German planes were destroyed during Sept. 11 in air combats and on enemy airdromes. We lost thirty-four planes.

During the night of Sept. 12 our aircraft bombed Bucharest. All our planes returned.

Speedboats of the northern fleet sank a coast guard vessel and a large German transport.

MOSCOW, Sept. 13 (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique:

During the night of Sept. 12 our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (AP).—The German high command communique:

Offensive operations on the Eastern front proceed successfully according to plan.

In renewed attacks against the enemy convoy mentioned in yesterday's communique, submarines sank an additional four merchantmen, totaling 19,000 tons, as well as three convoying vessels. Thus the enemy lost twenty-eight merchantmen totaling 164,000 tons from this convoy.

In the fight against Great Britain the air force last night scored bomb hits on three large merchantmen of an enemy convoy east of Great Yarmouth.

Additional effective air raids were directed against airports in the Midlands and armament plants and a fuel depot in the southeast of the island.

In day raiding at Scarborough combat planes scored heavy-caliber hits on a factory.

In North Africa German combat planes the night before last bombed the port of Tewfik, as well as oil depots at Suez Harbor. A number of big fires gave evidence of the success of these raids.

British planes last night attacked Frankfurt am Main and the Mannheim region. Bombs on residential sections caused some losses among the civilian population. Anti-aircraft downed two enemy bombers.

British

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP).—An Air Ministry communique:

Though the weather last night again was unfavorable, industrial objectives in Frankfort and elsewhere in the Rhineland were attacked by a considerable force of aircraft of the Bomber Command. The docks at Cherbourg also were bombed.

Coastal Command aircraft during the night made attacks on the port of St. Nazaire and on enemy shipping off the Frisian Islands. A supply ship of medium size was hit.

From these operations two aircraft of the Bomber Command are missing.

Another Air Ministry communique:

Our fighters have carried out several offensive patrols over the Channel and enemy-occupied territory today. During one of these an enemy fighter was destroyed. None of our fighters are missing.

A Ministries of Air and Home Security communique:

A small number of enemy aircraft flew over this country last night. A few bombs were dropped.

At one point in the northeast a small number of casualties was caused and some houses were damaged. Two enemy bombers were destroyed during the night.

CAIRO, Sept. 13 (AP).—A comunique of the Royal Air Force Middle East command:

MEDITERRANEAN: A highly successful attack on an enemy convoy in the central Mediterranean, resulting in the probable destruction of three merchant ships and in severe damage to others, was made by aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm and R. A. F. during the night of Sept. 11-12 and in daylight yesterday.

The night attack by aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm resulted in a torpedo hitting a large merchantman amidships, causing a violent explosion which shook the aircraft. The vessel was left sinking. A second torpedo struck another large merchant ship, clouds of smoke and steam resulting from the explosion.

Yesterday the remainder of the convoy, consisting of six destroyers and four large and two medium-sized merchant ships, was attacked by aircraft of the R. A. F. Two heavy bombs hit one of the large ships, which was left a mass of flames from funnel to stern, the fire and smoke being seen many miles from the point of attack. A second large ship also sustained direct hits from heavy bombs.

SICILY: Ships and the dry dock at Palermo Harbor were attacked by heavy bombers of the R. A. F. during the night of Sept. 11-12. A large number of bombs straddled a merchant ship in dry dock. The red glow of fires was seen in the target area. Accurate observation of the damage was hampered by smoke.

During the same night aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm bombed a munitions factory at Licata. Clouds of white smoke and fire resulted from the attack. Another large fire broke out after aircraft had bombed the railway station near Ragusa. Before leaving, the aircraft machine-gunned Licata Harbor.

LIBYA: Bengasi again was heavily raided during the night of Sept. 11-12. Many bombs were dropped at the base of the Julianna and Cathedral moles and on the quays. Fires broke out. A tanker at the end of the Juliana mole also was attacked and straddled. Direct hits were scored on the mole.

On the return journey our heavy bombers machine-gunned motor transports and stores on the road between Bengasi and Tokra, and motor transport on the road between Barce and Slonta, and a coastal beacon.

An Italian Savoia bomber was shot down by an R. A. F. fighter in the Western Desert during the night of Sept. 11-12.

MALTA: A number of unidentified aircraft made an unsuccessful attack on Malta during the night of Sept. 11-12. There were no casualties. From all these operations four of our aircraft are missing.

A British general headquarters communique:

LIBYA—At Tobruk one of our patrols met and destroyed a German patrol. Our artillery carried out harassing fire on enemy posts, causing explosions and damage. Several enemy bombing raids resulted in no material damage. In the frontier area there was some exchange of artillery fire.

Dutch

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP).—A Dutch government in exile communique:

The Royal Netherlands Admiralty announces that one of Her Majesty's submarines, operating in co-operation with the British Navy in the Mediterranean, has sunk a heavily laden enemy supply ship of about 6,000 tons.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

Italian and German air forces in North Africa continued their effective hammering actions on enemy land objectives of Tobruk and Mersa Matruh and bombed an airport in the Egyptian desert. Activity by our artillery batteries was reported in the Tobruk and Sollum sectors.

British planes dropped bombs on Bengasi, damaging quarters inhabited by the Arab population.

An air raid on the territory of Catania caused neither casualties nor damage.

In East Africa, English aviation continued to fly over positions on the Gondar front, effecting bombardments. Our troops repelled enemy infantry attacks.

NIGHT LEAD GAYDA (WITH BJT)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME, SEPT 13--FASCIST OBSERVERS INDICATED TODAY THAT GERMANY AND ITALY WOULD FIGHT THE UNITED STATES ON ANY SEA THEIR WARSHIPS, SUBMARINES AND PLANES COULD REACH AS A RESULT OF WHAT THE AUTHORITATIVE EDITOR, VIRGINIO GAYDA, CALLED PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S "DE FACTO DECLARATION OF WAR."

THE PRIMARY AIM OF THE AXIS POWERS IN THE BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC WAS TO PREVENT AMERICAN AID FROM REACHING ENGLAND, THEY SAID, CITING A GERMAN SUBMARINE ATTACK ON A BRITISH CONVOY AS THE FIRST ANSWER TO ROOSEVELT'S "SHOOT FIRST" ORDER.

THE BIG QUESTION IN FASCIST MINDS WAS WHERE AMERICAN WAR SHIPS WERE GOING TO SHOOT FIRST.

GAYDA INTERPRETED SECRETARY OF STATE HULL'S STATEMENT TO NEWSPAPER MEN YESTERDAY AS PLACING THE WHOLE WORLD WITHIN THE AMERICAN NAVY'S FIELD OF ACTION.

(HULL TOLD REPORTERS GERMANY'S ACTIONS WOULD DETERMINE WHAT AREAS THE UNITED STATES WOULD CONSIDER "DEFENSIVE WATERS" IN WHICH AMERICAN WARSHIPS WOULD SHOOT FIRST. HE SAID IT SHOULD BE REMEMBERED THAT THE UNITED STATES CONFRONTED A WORLD MOVEMENT OF FORCE AIMED AT CONQUEST OF CONTINENTS AND SEAS.)

GERMANY AND ITALY, GAYDA SAID, HAD FIXED "PRECISE LIMITS" TO THEIR WAR ZONES WITH PUBLIC DECLARATIONS WHILE ROOSEVELT "HAS FIXED NOTHING."

SEP 14 1941

GIOVANNI ANSALDO, EDITOR OF FOREIGN MINISTER GALEAZZO CIANO'S LEGHORN NEWSPAPER, IL TELEGRAFO, SAID THE ITALIAN DIVISION FIGHTING IN RUSSIA AND AXIS SUBMARINES "KEEPING GOOD WATCH AROUND ENGLAND" WERE PROVIDING THE "ONLY ADEQUATE ANSWER" TO ROOSEVELT--NAKED FORCE."

IL LAVORO FASCISTA SAID THE GREER INCIDENT HAD FAILED TO PROVOKE WAR BUT SUGGESTED THE TORPEDOING OF THE STEAMSHIP, MONTANA, BOUND FOR ICELAND, MIGHT SERVE AS A PRETEXT.

THE FASCIST PRESS GENERALLY DEPICTED ROOSEVELT AS DRAGGING A RELUCTANT AMERICAN PEOPLE INTO WAR.

NIGHT LEAD YUGOSLAV

BUDAPEST, SEPT 13-(AP)-SERBIAN CHETNIKS CARRYING ON GUERRILLA WARFARE FROM MOUNTAIN HIDEAWAYS WERE REPORTED TODAY TO HAVE KILLED 400 PERSONS IN A SINGLE VILLAGE OF AXIS-CONQUERED YUGOSLAVIA DURING AN 8-DAY BATTLE THAT ENDED WITH THE BURNING OF HOMES AND THE FLIGHT OF SURVIVING VILLAGERS TO THE HILLS.

THE SCENE OF THIS LATEST FORAY BY THE CHETNIKS, OR REVOLUTIONARIES, WHO HAVE MADE SPORADIC SORTIES SINCE THEIR COUNTRY FELL, WAS SAID BY THE NEWSPAPER NEMETI USAG TO HAVE BEEN THE VILLAGE OF TABOR, NEAR MOSTAR, IN SOUTHWESTERN YUGOSLAVIA.

AS A RESULT OF CONTINUED FIGHTING, A HUNGARIAN NEWS AGENCY DISPATCH FROM ZAGREB SAID TONIGHT THAT RAIL SERVICE HAD BEEN HALTED BETWEEN BELGRADE AND SARAJEVO, AND ON THE SARAJEVO-DUBROVNIK AND SAVALA-HUMI LINES.

THE NEWS AGENCY SAID 127 CHILDREN WHOSE PARENTS WERE KILLED IN FIGHTING WITH THE CHETNIKS HAD ARRIVED AT THE CROATIAN CAPITAL AND WOULD BE PLACED IN THE HOMES OF PEASANTS.

(THE BUDAPEST DISPATCH FAILED TO EXPLAIN WHY THE SERBIAN GUERRILLAS DESTROYED A SERBIAN VILLAGE. ZAGREB ADVICES SAID LAST TUESDAY, HOWEVER, THAT CROATIA, THE NEW STATE CARVED FROM NORTHERN YUGOSLAVIA, WAS TORN BY RELIGIOUS FEUDS AND SABOTAGE AS A RESULT OF A STRUGGLE FOR POWER AMONG THE USTACHA, DICTATOR ANTE PAVELICH'S PERSONAL BODYGUARD, AND ARMY OFFICERS.)

MEXICO CITY, SEPT 13-(AP)-THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT, EXPRESSING BELIEF THAT A "WAR OF CONTINENTS" IS IMMINENT, HAS PROPOSED IMMEDIATE FORMATION BY WESTERN HEMISPHERE NATIONS OF A COMMON DEFENSE PLAN AND A JOINT ECONOMY.

COMMENTING FAVORABLY ON PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S THURSDAY NIGHT BROADCAST, THE FOREIGN OFFICE YESTERDAY ISSUED A NOTE SAYING HIS "SHOOT FIRST" ORDERS TO THE UNITED STATES NAVY "REVEAL TO THE AMERICAS THE GROWING PROXIMITY OF WAR."

"THE AMERICAS HAVE ALREADY PRONOUNCED THEMSELVES FOR THE PRINCIPLE OF THE FREEDOM OF THE SEAS," THE NOTE SAID. "THE WAR MUST BE KEPT AWAY NOT ONLY FROM OUR CONTINENTAL SEAS, BUT FROM ALL THOSE MARITIME REGIONS THAT ARE NECESSARY TO THE PEACE AND SECURITY OF OUR HEMISPHERE. THUS WHATEVER THE OTHER AMERICAN NATIONS DO BY ADEQUATE MEANS TO FORESTALL ACTS OF AGGRESSION DESERVES THE SUPPORT OF OUR COUNTRY."

THE WAR TODAY

SEP 14 1941

(THIS DAILY FEATURE, CONDUCTED BY DEWITT MACKENZIE, IS BEING WRITTEN TODAY BY FRED VANDERSCHMIDT).

THE GERMAN REPLY TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S NO-TRESPASS SPEECH BEARS THE UNMISTAKABLE STAMP OF HITLER'S PROPAGANDA MINISTRY. IT IS WORTHY OF NOTE THAT THE SPOKESMAN WHO DELIVERED IT MADE THE POINT THAT IT WAS NOT A "DECLARATION" OF THE REICHS GOVERNMENT BUT A "COMMENT" AT THE REQUEST OF CORRESPONDENTS, AND THUS THE GERMANS SHOW PLAINLY THAT THEY DO NOT CARE TO HAVE IT RECORDED HISTORICALLY. NO COPIES OF THE TEXT WERE MADE AVAILABLE.

THE GERMANS REITERATE THAT IT IS THE BRITISH BLOCKADE, AND NOT THEIR OWN U-BOAT TACTICS, WHICH BARS FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

BY ALL RECOGNIZED RULES OF INTERNATIONAL WARFARE THE BLOCKADE IS A PERFECTLY LEGITIMATE WEAPON, PROVIDED THE BLOCKADER HAS THE POWER TO MAKE IT EFFECTIVE AND PROVIDED HE RESPECTS CERTAIN LIMITED RIGHTS OF NON-BELLIGERENTS.

THE GERMANS ADMIT BY THEIR OWN PROTESTS THAT THE BRITISH BLOCKADE IS POWERFUL AND EFFECTIVE.

INSTEAD OF ENDEAVORING TO BREAK THE BRITISH BLOCKADE AND FORCE HER OWN SHIPS THROUGH IT, GERMANY HAS DECLARED A COUNTER-BLOCKADE OF BRITAIN ENFORCED TO A MAJOR EXTENT BY U-BOAT WARFARE. SELDOM HAVE THESE U-BOATS ATTACKED BLOCKADING WARCRAFT; RATHER THEIR TARGETS HAVE BEEN MERCHANTMEN.

MR.ROOSEVELT MENTIONED A VERMAN PROMISE ON SUBMARINE WARFARE IN CONNECTION WITH THE ROBIN MOOR, THE UNITED STATES FREIGHTER WHICH WAS SENT TO THE BOTTOM BY A U-BOAT IN THE SOUTH ATLANTIC IN MAY, HER PASSENGERS BEING PUT IN OPEN BOATS IN WHICH THEY DRIFTED FOR WEEKS.

IT IS JUST AS WELL TO RECALL THE CIRCUMSTANCES AND PARTICULARS OF GERMAN'S PROMISE, FOR IT GOT BUT A FEW LINES IN THE PAPERS AT THE TIME--NOV. 23, 1936--THE PUBLIC BEING MUCH MORE INTIGUED WITH THE

SEP 14 1941

AT THE TIME--NOV. 23, 1936--THE PUBLIC BEING MUCH MORE INTRIGUED WITH THE EVENTS LEADING UP TO THE ABDICATION OF HIS MAJESTY EDWARD VIII OF ENGLAND.

ON THAT DAY GERMANY FORMALLY ADHERED TO THE LONDON PROTOCOL FOR THE HUMANIZATION OF SUBMARINE WARFARE. THIS PROTOCOL STRICTLY FORBADE SUBMARINES IN TIME OF WAR TO SINK A MERCHANT SHIP UNTIL THE CREW, THE PASSENGERS AND THE SHIP'S PAPERS WERE AFFORDED A SAFE HAVEN. IT WAS SPECIFICALLY STATED THAT THIS DID NOT MEAN LIFEBOATS IN THE OPEN SEA, UNLESS LAND WERE NEAR AND THE WEATHER GOOD. ABOVE ALL, THE TRUE SAFETY OF PASSENGERS WAS MADE THE PRIMARY CONSIDERATION.

THE ROBIN MOOR PASSENGERS WERE PLACED IN OPEN BOATS FAR FROM ANY LAND, AND IT WAS 18 DAYS BEFORE THE FIRST OF THEM WERE RESCUED. THAT ANY WERE SAVED AT ALL WAS A FREAK OF FORTUNE.

(SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE ADVANCE FOR AMS OF SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 14)

(ADVANCE) UNDATED LEAD 106TH WEEK OF THE WAR

BY THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE

(ADVANCE) PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT LAST THURSDAY REAFFIRMED UNITED STATES' HISTORIC DOCTRINE OF FREEDOM OF THE SEAS AND BLUNTLY INFORMED THE AXIS POWERS THAT UNITED STATES FORCES WOULD SHOOT ON SIGHT ANY AXIS, SUBMARINES, RAIDERS, WARSHIPS OR PLANES VENTURING INTO AREAS DEEMED ESSENTIAL TO AMERICAN DEFENSE.

THIS DEVELOPMENT OVERSHADOWED BY FAR ALL OTHERS IN THE 106TH WEEK OF THE WAR, A WEEK WHICH FOUND THE GERMAN ARMIES STILL BESIEGING THREE MAJOR RUSSIAN CITIES, LENINGRAD IN THE NORTH, KIEV IN THE UKRAINE AND ODESSA IN THE SOUTH WHILE THE RUSSIANS FOUGHT BACK WITH COUNTERATTACKS WHICH PRESSED BACK THE NAZI FORCES IN THE CENTRAL FRONT BEHIND SMOLENSK.

SEP 14 1941

THE PRESIDENT, CITING AMONG AGGRESSIVE INCIDENTS THE SKIRMISH BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES DESTROYER GREER AND A GERMAN SUBMARINE, AND THE SINKING OF THREE U.S.-OWNED MERCHANTMEN, THE ROBIN MOOR, THE STEEL SEAFARER AND THE SESSA, DECLARED IN HIS WORLD BROADCAST THAT THESE REPRESENTED PIECES IN A NAZI PATTERN FOR WORLD CONQUEST.

THIS CONQUEST, HE SAID, WAS TO BE ACHIEVED BY GAINING CONTROL OF THE SEAS.

"LET THIS WARNING BE CLEAR," HE SAID. "FROM NOW ON, IF GERMAN OR ITALIAN VESSELS OF WAR ENTER THE WATERS, THE PROTECTION OF WHICH IS NECESSARY FOR AMERICAN DEFENSE, THEY DO SO AT THEIR OWN PERIL.

"THE ORDERS I HAVE GIVEN AS COMMANDER IN CHIEF TO THE UNITED STATES ARMY AND NAVY ARE TO CARRY OUT THAT POLICY--AT ONCE."

THE AXIS REACTION WAS TWO-FOLD: A CLAIM THAT 28 OF 40 VESSELS AND THREE ESCORTING SHIPS HAD BEEN DESTROYED IN A BRITISH NORTH ATLANTI CONVOY, AND DENUNCIATIONS OF ROOSEVELT AS A WAR MONGERER WHOSE "CONTENTIONS ARE LIES," AND AS A HYPOCRITE.

VIRGINIO GAYDA, AUTHORITATIVE SPOKESMAN OF THE ROME END OF THE AXIS, SAID ROOSEVELT HAD MADE A "DE FACTO" DECLARATION OF WAR WHICH THE AXIS WOULD MEET WITH FORCE.

SEP 14 1941

AS THE WEEK CLOSED THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY DISCLOSED THAT GERMAN SUBMARINES AND FOUR-ENGINED BOMBERS HAD DOGGED AN ATLANTIC CONVOY--APPARENTLY NOT THE ONE THE GERMANS WERE TALKING ABOUT--FOR THREE DAYS BEGINNING IN MID-OCEAN, SINKING SEVEN VESSELS AND DAMAGING AN EIGHTH SO THAT IT WENT DOWN IN A STORM, BUT SAID THAT THE MAJORITY OF THE VESSELS HAD REACHED BRITAIN SAFELY.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS:

(ADVANCE) SUNDAY, SEPT. 7--RUSSIA, IN FIERCE BATTLE OF THREE CITIES, LENINGRAD, KIEV AND ODESSA--HAS ORDERED 360,000 GERMAN-DESCENDED POPULATION OF VOLGA GERMAN REPUBLIC SENT TO SIBERIA TO NIP FIFTH COLUMN ACTION; GERMANS REPORT HUNDREDS OF PLANES BATTER LENINGRAD'S DEFENDERS; RUSSIANS CLAIM COUNTER-OFFENSIVE SUCCESSES BY LAND, AIR AND SEA, INCLUDING CAPTURE OF U-BOAT IN BARENTS SEA; SHOOTING OF TWO MORE GERMAN OFFICIALS AT PARIS INSPIRE VICHY CHARGE THAT DISORDERS ARE RESULT OF COMMUNIST PLOT TO DIVERT GERMAN FORCES TO FRANCE FROM RUSSIAN FRONT.

MONDAY, SEPT. 8--U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCES SINKING SUNDAY OF AMERICAN FREIGHTER STEEL SEAFARER IN RED SEA AIR ATTACK; LONDON AND OTTAWA DISCLOSE CANADIAN-BRITISH-NORWEGIAN FORCE MADE DESTRUCTIVE LAND RAID ON SPITSBERGEN COAL MINES WITHOUT MEETING OPPOSITION FROM GERMAN FORCES IN CONTROL OF NORWEGIAN TERRITORY:

NORWEGIANS THERE ARE EVACUATED TO BRITAIN; RUSSIANS CLAIM VREATEST VICTORY OF WAR SO FAR--ROUTING OF EIGHT GERMAN DIVISIONS ON CENTRAL FRONT; GERMANS EXPRESS HOPE OF QUICK CAPITULATION AT LENINGRAD WHICH THEY SAY NOW IS ISOLATED.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 9--U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT DISCLOSES TORPEDO SINKING OF AMERICAN FREIGHTER SESSA EPP MILES FROM ICELAND; PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL VOICES HOPE FOR EVEN "GREATER HELP" FROM AMERICAN NAVY; WITH LENINGRAD UNDER SIEGE OF BOMB AND SHELL, RUSSIANS REPORT CONTINUED SUCCESSES ON CENTRAL FRONT; SOVIET SPOKESMAN SPEAKS OF "IMPENDING ROUT" OF ALL GERMAN FORCES.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 10--GERMANS SUGGEST THEY MAY NOT STORM LENINGRAD BUT TRY TO REDUCE DEFENSE SLOWLY BY GUNFIRE, BOMBS AND STARVATION; REPORT SEVERAL FIELD FORTIFICATIONS BLOCKING BESIEGERS DESTROYED BY STUKA DIVE-BOMBERS; CENTRAL FRONT COUNTER-OFFENSIVES BY RUSSIANS MAY HAVE EASED LENINGRAD SIEGE THREAT; RUSSIANS CLAIM GERMAN LOSSES IN DEAD AND WOUNDED EXCEEDED 75,000 IN ONE CENTRAL FRONT SECTOR; U.S. AUTHORIZES AMERICANS TO RETURN FROM EUROPE ON BELLIGERENT SHIPS.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 11--PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ANNOUNCES HE HAS ORDERED THE NAVY TO SHOOT FIRST WHEN AXIS SUBMARINES, SURFACE RAIDERS OR AIRCRAFT ARE ENCOUNTERED IN AREAS AMERICA CONSIDERS VITAL TO HER DEFENSE, HITLER'S NEWSPAPER IN ADVANCE OF PRESIDENT'S SPEECH CARRIES BANNER HEADLINE: "WAR-MONGER ROOSEVELT NEEDS PROVOCATION CORPSES"; RUSSIANS CLAIM ADVANCES IN COUNTER-DRIVES ON CENTRAL FRONT, LENINGRAD, KIEV AND ODESSA HOLDING FIRM AGAINST BESIEGERS; GERMANS ADMIT "BOLD" RED COUNTER-ATTACKS BUT SCOFF AT RUSSIAN CLAIMS; RUSSIA CHARGES BULGARIA WITH HARBORING THE AXIS MILITARY; RAF RAIDS NORTHERN ITALIAN CITIES, TURIN AND GENOA, FOR FIRST TIME SINCE LAST WINTER.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 12--GERMANS RESPOND TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S "SHOOT FIRST" ORDER WITH CLAIM THAT 22 BRITISH MERCHANT SHIPS HAVE BEEN SUNK OUT OF A NORTH ATLANTIC CONVOY OF 40 AND DENUNCIATIONS OF ROOSEVELT AS A LIAR AND HYPOCRITE; RUSSIA DISCLOSES NEW THREAT TO KIEV IN OFFICIAL ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF RED ARMY'S WITHDRAWAL FROM CHERNIGOV, 80 MILES NORTHEAST OF KIEV, BUT CLAIMS COUNTER-OFFENSIVE IN CENTRAL AREA REMAINS UNCHECKED; GERMANS, EMPHASIZING HANDICAP OF MUD, RAIN AND BAD TERRAIN, INSISTED "STILL MORE HEAVY BLOWS" WOULD FALL ON THE RUSSIANS BEFORE WINTER SETS IN; ADOLF HITLER IN WRITTEN APPEAL FROM HIS FIELD HEADQUARTERS CALLS FOR CONTRIBUTIONS TO NINTH WINTER RELIEF FUND TO "STRENGTHEN THE (EASTERN) FRONT" AND INSTILL INTO THE GERMAN ARMY A CONSCIOUSNESS "THAT THEIR FIGHT IS NOT IN VAIN;" VIRGINIO GAYDA, OFTEN MUSSOLINI'S EDITORIAL SPOKESMAN, SAYS AXIS SHIPS WILL SHOOT IT OUT WITH U.S. VESSELS; ANOTHER U.S.-OWNED VESSEL, THE MONTANA, SISTER SHIP OF SESSA, IS SUNK OFF ICELAND.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 13--RUSSIANS CLAIM THEY REPULSED DRIVE BY 12 GERMAN INFANTRY DIVISIONS (ABOUT 180,000 SOLDIERS) AND TWO TANK CORPS BEFORE BRYANSK, MIDWAY POINT ON THE MOSCOW-KIEV RAILROAD; 10,000 GERMANS SAID TO HAVE DIED IN 13-DAY BATTLE; GERMANS SAY LENINGRAD AND ODESSA ARE UNDER HEAVY AERIAL ATTACK BUT HIGH

COMMAND REMAINS UNSPECIFIC ON PROGRESS OF LAND FIGHTING; COMMUNIQUE RAISES CLAIM OF SINKINGS IN ATTACK ON BRITISH CONVOY TO 28 MERCHANT SHIPS TOTALING 164,000 TONS AND THREE WARSHIPS BUT BRITISH SAY CONVOY CAME THROUGH HEAVY AIR AND SHIP ASSAULTS AND RACING GALE WITH LOSS OF BUT EIGHT SHIPS; WASHINGTON HEARS TALK THAT U.S. MAY ARM MERCHANT SHIPS.

(WX) INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS
BY KIRKE L.SIMPSON

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S GRIM SHOOT-ON-SIGHT ORDER TO THE AMERICAN NAVY HAS CENTERED ATTENTION ON THE ATLANTIC, YET IT IS CONCEIVABLE THAT HITLER HIMSELF IS MORE IMMEDIATELY CONCERNED WITH HIS BLOODY CAMPAIGN TO SMASH RUSSIA THAN WITH WESTERN WAR DEVELOPMENTS.

THAT "CRUSADE" IS NOW ADMITTEDLY FAR OFF SCHEDULE DUE TO A RUSSIAN RESISTANCE THAT HAS MADE A MOCKERY OF THE FIRST THUNDE

K

SIAN RESISTANCE THAT HAS MADE A MOCKERY OF THE FIRST THUNDERING WAR BULLETINS ISSUED FROM HITLER'S OWN HEADQUARTERS ON THE EAST FRONT. DEEP AS HAVE BEEN NAZI PENETRATIONS TO LAY SIEGE TO LENINGRAD, KIEV AND ODESSA, HITLER CAN LAY BEFORE HIS PEOPLE AFTER MORE THAN 80 DAYS OF THE BLOODIEST FIGHTING IN HISTORY BUT LITTLE CONVINCING EVIDENCE OF IMPENDING DECISIVE VICTORIES.

RUSSIAN ARMIES, DESCRIBED BY GERMANS WEEKS AGO AS CRACKING UP, INSTEAD ARE BATTERING THE WAR-WORN NAZI FORCES BACKWARD ABOUT SMOLENSK. THERE IS NO DENIAL FROM BERLIN THAT THIS WAR-BLASTED RUSSIAN TOWN, KEY TO THE RAIL AND ROAD APPROACHES TO MOSCOW, IS IN SERIOUS DANGER OF BEING WRESTED FROM GERMAN HANDS.

D103WX

BERLIN MADE MUCH OF THE CAPTURE OF SMOLENSK. ITS FALL WAS PLAYED UP AS THE BEGINNING OF THE END FOR MOSCOW.

YET, THUS FAR NAPOLEON'S ROAD TO MOSCOW HAS PROVED TOO TOUGH FOR HITLER. THE DISTANCE THAT THE FRENCH GRAND ARMY NEGOTIATED IN 80-ODD DAYS, AFOOT AND WITH HORSE, MULE AND OXEN TRANSPORT, IS TWICE OR MORE THAT COVER BY HITLER'S MOTORIZED LEGIONS IN THE SAME TIME.

THERE ARE GROWING INTIMATIONS FROM GERMAN QUARTERS, HOWEVER, THAT A FURTHER FORMIDABLE ATTACK WILL BE MADE BEFORE WINTER SETS IN. BERLIN COMMENTATORS CONTEND AT LEAST 60 DAYS OF FIGHTING WEATHER REMAIN BEFORE SNOW AND SUB-ZERO TEMPERATURES BOG DOWN THE WAR ON THE EASTERN FRONT FOR VIRTUALLY SIX MONTHS.

PRESUMABLY THE 60-DAY LIMIT APPLIES ONLY ON THE BLACK SEA FLANK. THE FIRST FROSTS ARE ALREADY REPORTED FROM THE LENINGRAD AREA AND EVEN FROM SOME POINTS IN THE NORTH-CENTER SECTION OF THE LONG BATTLE LINE.

IT IS IN THE SOUTH THAT THE NAZI ONRUSH HAS MADE ITS GREATEST ADVANCE TO REACH THE DNIEPER IN THE GREAT SOUTHERN BEND OF THE RIVER ABOUT THE PLATEAU THAT COMPRISES THE HEART OF SOUTHEASTERN UKRAINE.

THE RUSSIANS ON FRIDAY ACKNOWLEDGED THAT THE TOWN OF CHERNIGOV HAD FALLEN TO GERMAN FORCES, A DEVELOPMENT WHICH BROUGHT THE NAZIS IN A HALF CIRCLE AROUND THE UKRAINIAN CAPITAL OF KIEV AND PUT THEM WITHIN 45 MILES OF THE MAIN RAILWAY BETWEEN MOSCOW AND KIEV.

D104WX

SEP 14 1941

IT IS TO BE REMEMBERED THAT IT IS ONLY VIA THE BLACK SEA OR THE LAND ROUTE AROUND IT TO ROSTOV THAT THE GERMANS CAN GAIN ACCESS TO THEIR MOST URGENTLY NEEDED WAR-MAKING COMMODITY, OIL. RECENT OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT STUDIES IN WASHINGTON HAVE FOUND NO EVIDENCE THAT HITLER HAS YET CAPTURED IN RUSSIA OIL AND GASOLINE TO OFFSET IN ANY MEASURE THE HUGE DRAIN ON HIS OWN SUPPLIES THAT THE WAR IN RUSSIA IS COSTING HIM EVERY DAY.

ALL THESE CONSIDERATIONS POINT TO THE SOUTH AS THE SCENE OF THE NEXT NAZI GREAT OFFENSIVE, ALTHOUGH RUSSIAN SUCCESSES IN THE CENTER MIGHT FORCE A DEFERMENT.

IN ANY EVENT, IT NOW SEEMS CLEAR THAT GERMAN CAPTURE OF LENINGRAD COULD PRODUCE NO DECISIVE RESULTS IN RUSSIA FOR HITLER. HE MUST TRY SOMETHING ELSE. IF HE WAITS UNTIL SPRING, ALL THE LOWER REACHES OF RUSSIAN RIVERS DRAINING INTO THE BLACK SEA OR THE CASPIAN WILL BE IN FLOOD AND THE MUD WILL BOG DOWN HIS FORCES EVEN MORE THAN THESE SEPTEMBER RAINS. THAT IS ALSO TRUE IN THE STEPPES OF THE UKRAINE AND WHITE RUSSIA IN THE CENTER. HE MUST STRIKE AGAIN NOW.

THE POPE IN WARTIME

PIUS XII FOREGOES REST

TO RECEIVE THOUSANDS

OF PILGRIMS, SOLDIERS

STAYS IN ROME TO BLESS,

ASSIST THE FAITHFUL (700)

1941

SEP 14 1941

BY FRANK BRUTTO

(ADVANCE)-VATICAN CITY-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-POPE PIUS XII, FOREGOING HIS VACATION FOR THE SECOND YEAR TO PROTECT ROME AGAINST AIR RAIDS BY HIS PRESENCE IN THE VATICAN, IS TAXING HIS THIN FORM IN PUBLIC AUDIENCES THAT LAST FOR HOURS.

SEVERAL TIMES A WEEK HE RECEIVES THOUSANDS OF DEVOUT PILGRIMS, MANY OF THEM GERMAN AND ITALIAN SOLDIERS, AND WALKS AMONG THEM IN THE HALLS OF THE PAPAL PALACE TO LET THEM KISS HIS HAND.

ONCE RECENTLY HE HEARD A SOBBING GIRL'S CONFESSION IN A CORNER OF THE LARGE CLEMENTINE HALL AND GAVE HER ABSOLUTION OF HER SINS WHILE HUNDREDS OF PILGRIMS WATCHED FROM A DISTANCE.

THIS ACTIVITY, ALONG WITH THE POPE'S CONSTANT CONCERN OVER THE WAR, HAD BROUGHT ON A FORM OF NERVOUS EXHAUSTION BY MID-SUMMER, ASSOCIATES SAID. THEY WERE UNABLE TO INDUCE THE PONTIFF TO RELAX HIS WORK, BUT THEY DID PREVAIL ON HIM TO SPEND HIS AFTERNOONS IN THE QUIET, AIRY COTTAGE OF HIS HEAD GARDENER AT THE TOP OF VATICAN HILL.

USUALLY THE POPES HAVE DISPENSED WITH PUBLIC AUDIENCES IN SUMMER AND RETIRED TO THEIR HILLSIDE VILLA AT CASTEL GANDOLFO ON LAKE ALBANO, NEAR ROME. LAST YEAR PIUS XII DECIDED TO REMAIN IN THE VATICAN, SAYING HIS PRESENCE WOULD SERVE AS A "LIGHTNING ROD" FOR ROME. THIS WAS TAKENTO MEAN THAT THE CITY WHERE HE WAS BORN PROBABLY WOULD NOT BE BOMBED WHILE HE WAS IN IT. SINCE ITALY ENTERED THE WAR, NO BOMBS HAVE BEEN DROPPED ON ROME.

SEP 14 1941

EACH DAY, NOW, WHEN THE AUDIENCES ARE COMPLETED, THE POPE GOES IN HIS AUTOMOBILE TO THE COTTAGE OF SIX SMALL ROOMS FORMERLY OCCUPIED BY AUGUSTO ISSOPI, DIRECTOR OF THE VATICAN GARDENS. THERE HE HAS LUNCH AND RESTS AWHILE. THEN HE WALKS BRISKLY IN THE GARDENS AND, WHEN HE WISHES, RE-ENTERS THE HOUSE TO WORK. IN THE EVENING, AT ABOUT 9 O'CLOCK, HE RETURNS TO HIS APARTMENT IN THE PAPAL PALACE.

THIS THE POPE PLANS TO DO UNTIL OCTOBER. TO PROVIDE HIM WITH PRIVACY, A WALL HAS BEEN BUILT NEAR THE COTTAGE AND THE WINDOWS OF THE VATICAN RADIO BUILDING WHICH OVERLOOK IT HAVE BEEN PAINTED OVER.

WITH THIS DAILY RETREAT TO THE GARDENS, PIUS XII CONTINUES TO RECEIVE 2,000 TO 3,,0

RECEIVE 2,000 TO 3,000 PERSONS IN AUDIENCES TWO OR THREE DAYS A WEEK. MOST OF THEM ARE NEWLYWEDS FROM ALL PARTS OF ITALY, COME FOR THE PAPAL

BENEDICTION. USUALLY THERE ARE A SCORE OR MORE OF SOLDIERS, SOMETIMES A GROUP OF WAR WOUNDED, OFTEN A PILGRIMAGE OF MEMBERS OF SOME CATHOLIC ORGANIZATION.

THE PONTIFF LEAVES HIS STUDY AT 9:45 IN THE MORNING, HAVING COMPLETED HIS PRIVATE AUDIENCES, AND REACHES THE AUDIENCE HALL, WITH A CAPACITY OF 4,000 PERSONS, AT 10. HE IS CARRIED INTO THE HALL ON HIS THRONE CHAIR, STEPS DOWN FROM IT TO HIS THRONE AT THE END OF THE LONG ROOM AND THERE, SEATED, DELIVERS A SERMON ON THE DUTIES OF FAMILY LIFE, THE EDUCATION OF CHILDREN, MODESTY IN DRESS, OR SOME OTHER APPROPRIATE SUBJECT. HIS WORDS ARE CARRIED THROUGH THE VAST HALL BY A SERIES OF LOUDSPEAKERS.

SEP 14 1941

AFTER THE SERMON, THE POPE PASSES THROUGH THE AUDIENCE CHAMBER TO A DOZEN OTHER HALLS AND GALLERIES IN WHICH HUNDREDS OF THE FAITHFUL STAND ALONG THE WALLS. AS HE WALKS SLOWLY THROUGH THE ROOMS, THE PILGRIMS KNEEL AND KISS HIS RING. THIS LASTS SOMETIMES FOR FOUR HOURS OR LONGER.

IT IS A SLOW CEREMONY, FOR MANY ASK FAVORS OF THE PONTIFF AND HE LISTENS TO ALL. SOME WANT TO KNOW WHERE TO SEND AN AILING RELATIVE, OTHERS WISH NEWS OF A MISSING SON. A MONSIGNOR WHO ACCOMPANIES THE POPE TAKES NOTE OF THE REQUESTS WHILE THE PONTIFF LISTENS.

"BLESS MY EXAMINATIONS, MY BUSINESS, MY WORK," ARE AMONG THE REQUESTS.

"HOLY FATHER," SAID ONE PILGRIM, "I WOULD LIKE TO HAVE WORD OF MY SISTER WHO IS A NUN IN ENGLAND."

"WE WILL INTEREST OURSELVES IMMEDIATELY," THE POPE REPLIED, "BUT TO WHOM SHOULD WE SEND THE NEWS?"

"TO ME."

"ALL RIGHT, BUT TO WHAT ADDRESS?"

THE GIRL TOOK PAPER AND PENCIL FROM HER HANDBAG AND WROTE THE ADDRESS WHILE THE POPE WAITED.

MANY REQUEST AUTOGRAPHS AND THE POPE ONCE SAT AT A SMALL TABLE AND AUTOGRAPHED A DOZEN PICTURE POSTCARDS FOR A GROUP OF GERMAN UOLDIERS. SOME ASK FOR A ROSARY OR A MEDAL, WHICH THEY IMMEDIATELY OBTAIN.

BY LOGAN REAVIS

(ADVANCE) NEW YORK, SEPT.13-(THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-ACROSS THE RAGGED MAP OF EUROPE STRETCHES THE BLOODY TRAIL OF THE HARDEST HITTING, MOST SINISTER FIGHTING UNIT YET DESIGNED BY MAN FOR LAND OPERATIONS--THE PANZER DIVISION.

SEP 14 1941

IT PROBABLY WAS NOT UNTIL THE FATEFUL DAYS OF MAY, 1940, WHEN THE GERMANS CROSSED THE MEUSE AND BROKE INTO FRANCE AT SEDAN, THAT THE ALLIED GENERALS FINALLY PERCEIVED THEY WERE FACED BY A MILITARY INNOVATION MORE DANGEROUS EVEN THAN THE MOBILE 42-CENTIMER GUNS WHICH RACKED THE LIEGIAN STEEL CUPOLAS IN THE WORLD WAR.

TO BE SURE, NEITHER MOTORIZATION NOR MECHANIZATION WERE NEW. THERE HAD BEEN TANKS, MOTOR TRUCKS, CYCLES AND PLANES BEFORE, BUT IT TOOK THE GERMAN APTITUDE FOR ORGANIZATION AND TACTICAL EMPLOYMENT TO EVOLVE A SYSTEM OF COORDINATED ATTACK WHICH LARGELY HAS SMASHED OLD PRINCIPLES OF DEFENSE.

AS WITH THE PHALANX OF ALEXANDER OR THE ELEPHANTS OF HANNIBAL, THE CONCEPT OF THE PANZER ATTACK IS TO BREAK THROUGH THE ENEMY'S DEFENSES.

THE GERMAN WORD PANZER REFERS TO ARMOR PLATING AND APPLIES DIRECTLY TO TANKS, USED AS THE SPEARHEAD OF THE OFFENSIVE THRUST. BUT TO THE TANKS ARE ADDED A FAST AGGREGATION OF MOTORCYCLISTS AND ARMORED CARS FOR ADVANCED SCOUTING; INFANTRY CARRIED BY TRUCKS FOR QUICK COORDINATION WITH THE TANKS; MOBILE MACHINE GUNS AND ARTILLERY; MOTORIZED TRANSPORTATION OF ENGINEERS' EQUIPMENT, REPAIR FACILITIES AND SUPPLIES, AND AIRPLANES.

THE DIVISION IS COMPOSED OF 12,000 TO 14,000 MEN WITH SOME 3,000 MOTOR VEHICLES. THE MOBILE EQUIPMENT IS DIVIDED INTO A RECONNAISSANCE GROUP OF 50 ARMORED CARS AND A COMPANY OF MOTORCYCLE INFANTRY; A TANK BRIGADE OF TWO REGIMENTS COMPOSED OF 400 TO 450 LIGHT AND MEDIUM HEAVY TANKS; A RIFLE BRIGADE AND A SUPPLY ECHELON.

THE RECONNAISSANCE GROUP MAY EMPLOY MACHINE GUNS AND MORTARS.

THE RIFLE BRIGADE, AS REPORTED ORGANIZED IN THE EARLY 1940 PANZER DIVISIONEN, COMPRISES AN INFANTRY REGIMENT; AN ANTI-TANK BATTALION; AN ARTILLERY REGIMENT; AN ENGINEER BATTALION AND A SIGNAL COMPANY.

THE ENGINEERS AND THE SIGNAL MEN ARE IMPORTANT UNITS. THE ENGINEERS CARRY SUPPLIES INCLUDING BOATS FOR CROSSING STREAMS, MATERIALS FOR CONSTRUCTING PONTOON BRIDGES, DEMOLITION MATERIALS, BARBED WIRE CUTTERS, AND POSSIBLY "DOODLEBUG" DEVICES FOR DETECTING BURIED MINES.

THE SIGNAL COMPLEMENT HAS ITS USUAL DUTIES TOGETHER WITH THE IMPORTANT RESPONSIBILITY OF SUMMONING AND MAINTAINING COMMUNICATION WITH THE DIVE-BOMBING STUKAS. ONE ACCOUNT PLACES 27 OF THESE PLANES WITHIN THE DIRECT CONTROL OF EACH DIVISIONAL COMMANDER.

SEP 14 1941

THE LIGHT-MEDIUM AND THE HEAVY-MEDIUM TANKS HAVE BEEN MOST COMMONLY USED BY THE GERMANS. THE FORMER, WEIGHING 18 TO 20 TONS, CARRIES A 37-MM GUN AND MACHINE GUN. IT IS NAMMED BY A CREW OF FOUR, IS RATHER HEAVILY ARMORED AND SAID TO BE SPEEDY. THE HEAVY-MEDIUM TANK WEIGHS FROM 35 TO 37 TONS AND CARRIES A 75 OR 105-MM GUN, A 47-MM ANTI-TANK GUN AND A NUMBER OF LOWER CALIBERED MACHINE GUNS.

IT IS NAMMED BY A CREW OF SEVEN OR EIGHT MEN AND A SMALL PERISCOPE

PROTRUDES FROM THE TOP OF THE MAIN TURRET FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE TANK COMMANDER. BOTH TANKS ARE EQUIPPED WITH TWO-WAY RADIO INSTRUMENTS.

THE APPROACH OF A PANZER DIVISION MAY BE AS A GATHERING STORM. PERHAPS WIDELY SEPARATED ELEMENTS ARE IN CONCEALMENT READY TO STRIKE. ENEMY POSITIONS HAVE BEEN SPOTTED BY AERIAL RECONNAISSANCE AND POINTS OF ATTACK SELECTED FOR REACHING MAIN OBJECTIVES.

OF COURSE THERE ARE UNKNOWN ELEMENTS SUCH AS A FOE HIDDEN BY THE FOREST, PLANTED MINE FIELDS, HIDDEN GUN EMPLACEMENTS, AND DIFFICULTIES IN CROSSING STREAMS, AND THE POSSIBILITIES OF FLANKING MOVEMENTS.

FROM DISTANCES OF 50 TO 75 MILES THE COMPONENTS OF THE DIVISIONS ASSEMBLE UNDER COVER OF NIGHT READY TO LAUNCH THEIR ATTACK. PERHAPS THE ARMORED CARS AND SWIFT MOTORCYCLISTS ARE SPEEDING OUT IN ADVANCE OF THE TANKS. LIKE TENTACLES, THEY EXPLORE THE APPROACHES TO THE ENEMY, NOTE THE TANK IMPEDIMENTS, ESTABLISH ACTUAL CONTACT WITH ENEMY OUTPOSTS, ESTIMATE HIS ANTI-TANK PREPARATIONS AND SUGGEST THE DEPLOY-MENT OF THE TANKS.

SEP 14 1941

PERHAPS THE TRANSPORT PLANES HAVE WINGED THEIR WAY BEYOND THE ENEMY'S MAIN LINE OF RESISTANCE AND DROPPED PARACHUTISTS TO CUT TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH LINES, DESTROY BRIDGES OR PREVENT THEIR DESTRUCTION, AND CREATE CIVILIAN PANIC SO THAT ROADS FAVORABLE FOR THE FOES RETREAT OR TO BE USED AS SUPPLY LINES MAY BECOME HOPELESSLY CLOGGED WITH REFUGEES.

THE BEHEMOTH TANKS MOVE RELENTLESSLY FORWARD. IF OPPOSITION IS TOO FIERCE OR OBSTRUCTIONS IMPASSABLE, THEY RUN AROUND THEM TO A MORE FAVORABLE POSITION. YET THEY ALWAYS MANEUVER TO ATTAIN A PINCER APPROACH.

IF A STREAM MUST BE BRIDGED, THE ENGINEERS RUSH FORWARD WITH EQUIPMENT WHILE DEFENSE GUNNERS ARE BLINDED BY SMOKE SHELLS FIRED FROM THE ALREADY EMPLACED PANZER ARTILLERY.

TANKS ARE ASSEMBLED TO CROSS, AND RESIST ENEMY COUNTER TANK ATTACKS. THE MOTORIZED INFANTRY HUSTLES UP TO STORM THE DEFENDERS' POSITION. MEANWHILE, SUMMONED BY THE COMMANDER, THE DIVE-BOMBERS DROP EXPLOSIVES ON DEFENSE EMPLACEMENTS, DISRUPT RESERVE SUPPLY, PARALYZE OPERATIONS AT DEFENSE AVIATION FIELDS, AND SPREAD FIRE AND HAVOC PREPARATORY TO THE NEXT RUSH OF THE TANKS.

IN THE RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN, THE PANZER DIVISIONS HAVE BEEN SLOWED IN THEIR PROGRESS TO LESS THAN 10 MILES A DAY IN SOME AREAS PARTICULARLY CHARACTERIZED BY FORESTS, AND STOPPED ALTOGETHER IN OTHERS, ACCORDING TO CURRENT REPORTS FROM THE FRONT. THIS CONTRASTS TO SPEEDS OF 14 TO 45 MILES A DAY IN EARLIER CAMPAIGNS IN EUROPE.

SEP 14 1941

SUCH HAS BEEN THE SOVIET RESISTANCE AT SOME POINTS THAT THE USUAL MOBILITY OF THE TANKS, UPON WHICH THE SUCCESS OF THE PANZER ATTACK HAS BEEN LARGELY DEPENDENT, HAS BEEN RESTRICTED.

RUSSIA IS A VAST COUNTRY. THE LIFEBLOOD OF MOTORIZED VEHICLES IS GASOLINE. THE FARTHER THE PANZERS PENETRATE, THE MORE DIFFICULT IT MUST BE TO REFUEL THEM.

Leningrad's Defenders Reported Blasting Blocks Of Buildings

CLEAR SPACE FOR FIGHTING DECLARED AIM

Berlin Also Asserts Nazis Are Squeezing City Tighter

SEP 15 1941

Strong Forces Are Said To Have Pierced "Defense Front"

By Alvin Steinkopf

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 14—The Russian defenders of Leningrad were reported blasting away huge blocks of buildings to clear spaces for battle today as the Luftwaffe ranged the skies and Nazi armies in great strength squeezed the city tighter.

Hitler's command said that strong Nazi forces had broken through the city's "defense front" and were continuing their pressure in the face of a resistance of the most desperate character.

Precisely what was meant by Leningrad's "defense front" was not clear, but observers assumed it meant that at least the outer fortifications had been pierced.

Most Of Northern Army There

Numbers of Leningrad's 3,000,000 or more citizens and most of Marshal Klementi Voroshilov's northern army were reported to be within the defense zone.

Germany's high command struck an optimistic note in its communique and declared that operations are going on so successfully that the way is being prepared for "new successes in battle."

The "closer encirclement of the city continues without interruption despite bitter defense," it added.

It was obvious from German reports that the air force was playing a destructive role in hammering Leningrad. One flyer reported that bombers were "raining death and destruction" on the highways leading into the city.

Reports Reds Drawing Back

He observed that Russian columns were moving toward the city, rather than outward to meet the German thrust, and from this observers assumed that the Soviets were withdrawing under pressure or as a strategic move were preparing for a decisive stand on a line smaller than the ring about the city where fighting has been going on for several days.

Russians taken prisoners in the Leningrad sector in the last few days were reported to have told lurid tales of what is taking place within the city.

Germans said they had learned from these prisoners that the Russians were blowing up great numbers of buildings to make open places for a last stand, presumably so their machine guns would command a sweep of strategic points. Such places were reported being cleared especially around important Government buildings, offices, schools and factories.

Leningrad has many fine Government buildings used by the Czars when the city was the capital of Russia.

City May Be Wrecked

"Leningrad may be rubbish and ashes, even if German weapons spare the city itself," said one commentator.

Aside from sweeping over the Leningrad area, the Luftwaffe ranged as far westward as Oesel Island, off the Estonian west coast. Defensive works on the north shore of the island, where the Russians are reportedly basing their fleet for action against German sea reinforcements, were subjected to particularly concentrated assaults.

At another spot on the sea, near Leningrad, German flyers said they smashed a seaplane base, destroying at least fifteen machines at anchorage in one place.

Railways, bridges and cannon emplacements were said to be other Luftwaffe objectives.

There were few details available concerning the action on the other fronts, but such reports as there were indicated it was lively.

The air force reported bombing expeditions in force in the region of Priluki southwest of Bryansk, around the mouth of the Dnieper in the Black Sea region, and about the Crimea in the south.

These reports said ten troop trains, two armored trains and two locomotives were blasted from their rails, two gunboats hit on the lower Dnieper, and a 3,000-ton steamer set blazing off Crimea. The air force also claimed the destruction of 1,177 trucks near Ilmia.

Several German reports again mentioned difficulties due to the weather.

RUSSIA ADMITS RETREAT FROM DNIEPER TOWN

Rail Junction Southeast Of Kiev Abandoned. Nazi Pincers Blamed

Air Duel With Luftwaffe On Leningrad Front Reported

By Henry Cassidy

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Monday, Sept. 15—The Russians acknowledged today a retreat by Red Army forces from Kremenchug, on the east bank of the Dnieper river, before German units lengthening the southern jaw of a giant pincer movement against Kiev.

Kremenchug is a rail junction 175 miles southeast of Kiev and eighty-five miles northwest of Dnieperpetrovsk, already abandoned hydro-electric power and industrial center on the Dnieper.

The abandonment of this town followed by four days the announcement last Friday that Russian forces had withdrawn from Chernigov, thirty miles north of Kiev between the Dnieper and Desna rivers.

In extending the northern jaw of their pincers aimed at Kiev, the Germans drove southeastward to increase this threat to the Ukrainian capital.

Try To Force Junction

With these two fiercely fought operations the Germans apparently are trying to form a junction behind Kiev to form the distant right and left flanks of the city which long has held firmly against the fierce German offensive.

Details of the loss of Kremenchug were lacking, but today's early morning communique spoke of prolonged and bitter fighting in this middle Ukraine sector.

Elsewhere, there was the usual report of stubborn fighting along the entire Eastern front.

Claim Nazi Ships Sunk

The German navy was reported to have lost two destroyers in its first attempt to penetrate Soviet waters off Leningrad.

A Leningrad dispatch to the newspaper Izvestia said the destroyers and an auxiliary cruiser were met in the Gulf of Finland by the Red fleet and that one was sunk by Soviet war vessels and the other by aerial bombs. The cruiser escaped.

The fall of Kremenchug brought the first Russian acknowledgment of a Nazi crossing of the Dnieper below Kiev. Farther down the river beyond Dnieperpetrovsk incessant German attempts to force a crossing were said still to be checked by Marshal Semeon Budyenny's Ukraine armies, inflicting heavy losses upon the Reichswehr.

With the battle for Leningrad growing in intensity on the Northern front, the Russians said a hundred planes participated in the latest duel between the Luftwaffe and the Red Air Force in the sky above that Baltic port and that the Germans fled after losing seventeen planes.

One German patrol plane was downed on the approaches to Moscow yesterday.

Pressing Smolensk Drive

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's western Red army, counter-attacking on the central front, appeared tonight to be closing in on Smolensk, on the old Napoleon road to Moscow, where the Germans are said to have been thrown back.

On the Leningrad front, massive concentrations of Soviet artillery, one of the strongest arms of Russian forces, kept up an unceasing cannonade to defend the approaches.

Soviet dispatches admitted that the Germans, in the face of riddling fire, took several settlements on the bank of a river "T" on the approaches to Leningrad, but said infantry counter-attacks resulted in the recapture of them.

SEP 15 1941

Navy Flyers Enter Battle

Naval aviation from the Red fleet in the Baltic has entered the battle at Leningrad, it was reported officially, showering with bombs and machine-gun bullets the massed columns of German tanks, trucks and infantry and creating immense losses among them.

The one hundred and twenty-ninth anniversary of Napoleon's occupation of Moscow on September 14, 1812, found the western Red army fighting near Yartzevo, twenty-seven miles northeast of Smolensk, famous crossing of the Dnieper 230 miles west of Moscow, where Napoleon won one of his great victories.

Following the recapture last week of Yelnya, fifty miles southeast of Smolensk, this advance in the Soviet counter-attack meant the Russians were closing in from two sides upon the German positions in the salient.

Yartzevo is on the Minsk-Smolensk-Moscow Railway.

Some Units Within 12 Miles

A number of German prisoners were reported taken near Yartzevo and at the town of Dukhovshchina, only thirty miles north of Smolensk.

Soviet dispatches did not give details of the operation, but some advanced Russian units were reported within twelve miles of the battered city and Russian artillery was reported shelling German positions around it.

"Red Star" said the Germans had launched repeated counter-attacks to stem the Soviet march in the last few days on the "CH" sector, but were beaten back. The Germans left many dead, forty tanks and six field guns behind them, this dispatch said.

Nazis Use Old Planes

The Soviet communique quoted a German air force prisoner as saying his unit had lost 75 per cent of its planes in the last two months and that the German command had attempted to replace them with Junkers 52 transports, outmoded PZL 24's and Arado 47's.

[The Junkers 52 is a tri-motored transport, while the PZL's and Arado 47's no longer are listed in Jane's authoritative manual, "All the World's Aircraft."]

The pilot was quoted as saying personnel replacements now were inexperienced youths of seventeen to twenty-three years of age, who often fled the battle, leaving the bomber pilots without protection.

Napoleon Took Moscow 129 Years Ago Yesterday

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 14—The 129th anniversary of Napoleon's occupation of Moscow, on Sept. 14, 1812, found the Central Red Army fighting the Germans near Yartsevo, twenty-seven miles northeast of Smolensk, which is 230 miles west of Moscow.

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Monday, Sept. 15—Col. Alfred Kretschmer, German military attache, said in a speech today before a Japanese patriotic organization that Germany would dispose of Russia within a few weeks and then turn her energies westward in a campaign to capture the British Isles.

SEP 15 1941

He reiterated the often-expressed German contention that the war upon Russia was necessary to prevent a Soviet attack on Germany from the rear and to erase the threat of a Bolshevized world.

NAZI GENERAL DIES FIGHTING ON EAST FRONT

Col. Gen. Von Schobert One Of Kaiser's Leaders In World War

Renown Carried Over By Drive On French In Present Conflict

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 14—The death in action of one of Germany's foremost generals, Col. Gen. Eugen Ritter von Schobert, was announced today by Adolf Hitler's headquarters. He fell two days ago on the Russian front.

Military authorities gave no details on von Schobert's death but the German press cited it as another example of how the highest German officers share risks with their men.

Distinguished In World War

Von Schobert, 58, was one of the Kaiser's distinguished World War commanders who carried over into the Hitler regime to win renown in the present war.

The speed with which he drove his army corps of 1940 into French fortifications between the Maas river and Chiers, the taking of an armored fort west of Margut and his drive through the northern front of Verdun won him the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross and promotion from lieutenant general to the rank of colonel general.

Von Schobert was born in Wuerzburg in 1883. At 19 he entered the First Bavarian Infantry and fought with it as an adjutant in the first World War. He saw action on many Western front battlefields, winning the Iron Cross, first class, in 1915.

Badly Wounded In 1918

Later he was awarded the "Hohenzollern Hausorden" and the highest Bavarian military decoration, the "Knight's Cross of the Military Max-Josef Order with swords." He was badly wounded in 1918.

Von Schobert stayed with the army after the peace and held several responsible War Ministry posts.

In 1933 he started his climb to attention as inspector of infantry with a notable development of that branch. He became a major general in the year Adolf Hitler came to power and was made a lieutenant general in 1937. The outbreak of the present war found him commanding an army corps on the French front.

"The Finns are no party to a great war," said Tanner.

"Entirely Defense War"

"It is for us an entirely defense war, a defensive war with the aid of which we desire to secure our frontiers and a lasting peace. Whatever is needed to secure this must be done, but there our task also ends."

Tanner branded all rumors about peace negotiations with Russia as absolutely unfounded and described such rumors as an attempt to "sow dissension among us and thus ease the military situation of the U. S. S. R., both on the St. Petersburg (Leningrad) front and the Murmansk railway sector.

Lack Confidence In Kremlin

"The Finns not only have not the slightest confidence in the Kremlin rulers, who have broken all previous agreements, but since the Soviets will lose the war with Germany a peace concluded with her would mean nothing," he asserted.

SEP 15 1941

"So far as Finland is concerned the war has gone off unexpectedly well," he declared in deploring what he called foreign propaganda to misrepresent Finland's internal situation.

Cites Two Months' Victories

"In two months," he went on, "victorious Finnish armies have recaptured more than the Soviet Union was able to take in more than three months of war, plus the ensuing dictated peace."

Maintaining that a strong peace party dominates Finnish opinion, Tanner said "this party embraces the entire Finnish nation."

The Finns never wanted warlike adventures, he said, and that even now they hope fervently for peace, but that since "barbarous and expansionist Russia is a neighbor, our long frontier is still insecure and it is probably essential that we should render areas beyond it safe in a military sense."

"Before that there is no possibility of concluding peace with anybody," he added.

Remains Democratic

Insisting that Finland remains the same democratic, liberty-loving nation engaged in defending her independence, Tanner further deplored "that the great democracies of the West show no understanding whatever."

Launching a 2,000,000,000 markka domestic bond loan—the greatest in Finnish history, Premier Kukha Rangell told the nation that not only a fighting army but also a hard-working people could enable survival of the trials of this catastrophic era.

Two wars in two years, he said, have greatly reduced the number of able-bodied men "although in that respect we have been luckier in the present war."

He added that the responsibilities of the survivors are redoubled and a national economy based on careful state planning is absolutely necessary.

Finns Say Reds Plotted Even During Peace

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14 (AP).—The Finnish Government charged today that Russia plotted for 15 months during the peace between them to destroy Finland's independence and finally launched an unprovoked attack on the Finns at the outbreak of the Russo-German hostilities.

The accusation was made in a Finnish Government "blue and white paper" describing relations between Finland and Russia between March 12, 1940, when Finland signed a peace treaty dictated by victorious Russia, and June 25, 1941, when the second Finnish-Russian war began. It was made public by Hialmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister.

Among other accusations, the paper charged that Russia sent hundreds of "diplomats" to Finland and demanded that they have the right to travel by submarine in Finnish waters.

Justifies Alignment.

Procope said that Russia's plotting and hostilities threatened Finland with "annihilation" and, referring to the fight alongside the armies of Germany, he contended:

"Getting help from the only quarter that could and would help her in her present deadly struggle into which she was forced by Communist aggression, Finland is fighting for the right to her place in the world, free from constant threat."

Procope said that Finland and the United States always have maintained "the very best relations," and that he was hopeful the documents made public would "contribute toward preserving and promoting the understanding and sympathy" between the two nations.

Hopes For Quick Peace Announced In Finland

Spokesman Says Country Is Reich Ally Only By Accident, But Denies Separate Negotiations

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Sept. 14—Finland has "good hopes of peace in the nearest future," it was announced tonight by a Government spokesman, who declared this nation is Germany's ally "only by accident and will not continue the war any longer than Finnish interests demand."

In a broadcast to the nation, Viano Tanner, Minister of Trade and Communications and leader of the dominant Social Democratic party, denied, however, that Finland would make a separte peace with Soviet Russia.

Ship Blast Rocks Helsinki

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Sept. 14—A terrific explosion in the harbor aroused the entire city early this morning and an official announcement said that a depth charge lying on the deck of a vessel evidently had exploded, detonating the ship's whole cargo of explosives.

Burning naphtha was showered over the harbor, setting fire to two near-by vessels. Water-front buildings were damaged and windows were shattered in a wide area.

Other circumstances of the blast were not disclosed although it is known there were a number of casualties among the crews of the affected ships.

London, Sept. 14 (AP).—The British Press Association reported that junior members of the United States mission to Moscow, accompanied by Constantin Oumansky, Soviet Ambassador to Washington, arrived in London tonight after an Atlantic flight.

WING OF R. A. F. JOINS FIGHT ON RUSSIAN FRONT

Force Includes Planes, Pilots, Ground Crews And Supplies

U. S.-Built Long-Range Fighters Reach England To Aid Reich Raids

By Noland Norgaard

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Monday, Sept. 15—A German plane sank a steamer of 10,000-12,000 tons off the east coast of England last night, DNB reported today.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 14—A wing of the R. A. F., with planes, pilots, ground crews and materials, has arrived in Soviet Russia to open a British air war on two fronts with Nazi Germany, it was announced today.

This expansion of Britain's battle front was accompanied by the disclosure that the first group of American-made long-range fighter planes had reached England. These may permit Britain's bombers, with fighter escorts, to reach as far as Berlin in daylight precision attacks.

The strength of the R. A. F. detachment in the U. S. S. R. was not disclosed, but informed sources said a "wing" is an elastic term applied to a self-contained unit of two or more squadrons with full flying and ground personnel.

Believed To Be Fighters

It was assumed that all the planes were fighter aircraft rushed to participate in the defense of Leningrad, Moscow, or Kiev, just as Hurricanes and Spitfires formed the first line of defense in the deadly Battle of Britain a year ago.

There were hints that some of the R. A. F. units may already have participated in some of the fighting on the Eastern front.

Arrival of the units was expected in political quarters to quiet some of the clamor in the English press and in Parliament for more tangible aid to the Russian allies.

Predict Day Berlin Raids

Arrival of the first new Lockheed Lightning long-range fighters from the United States brought forecasts from some aeronautical circles that the R. A. F. soon will attempt big daylight raids deep into Germany, possibly even as far as Berlin.

These quarters said the Lightning (known in the United States as the P-38 interceptor plane, a P-38E version of which has been ordered in large numbers by the United States Army) is armed with both cannon and machine guns and has a top speed of more than 400 miles per hour.

The Lightnings, single-seaters, powered by twin 1,000-horsepower Allison liquid-cooled motors, can fly nearly 1,000 miles with full armament. They thus would be able to escort bombers nearly to the suburbs of the German capital.

The lack of fighter escort has been the greatest deterrent to large-scale bombing operations in daylight over Germany. Such daylight raids as have been made often have involved substantial losses because bombers were forced to go it alone against swarms of Messerschmitts.

That British aid to Russia will not be confined to aircraft was indicated in a speech today by the First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, who declared "there are many ways in which naval help can be and is being given Russia, but I am not going to help the enemy by going into details of what is being done."

The Admiralty announced one exploit at dawn on Friday, however, in which naval planes from a carrier attacked shipping and military objectives in the region of Bodo, in Norway, south of Narvik.

The attack was described as a successful foray to cripple German supplies and sea communications with Nazi forces on the Arctic front in Russia. A 2,000-ton supply ship was sunk and others damaged, the communique said, while an aluminum works was set afire and a power station hit.

Informed sources said intensification of such naval raids could be expected as Britain throws her navy into an autumn drive to give the fullest possible support to Russia.

In this connection it was recalled that surface craft on September 9 battled a German convoy supplying the Murmansk front, and succeeded in sinking a destroyer, the escort ship Bremse, an armed trawler and another ship and damaged others.

Indicates Heavy Forces

The fact that an aircraft carrier ventured into waters where the aircraft carrier Glorious was sunk earlier in the war, to make the attack at Bodo led observers to believe that the navy is using heavy forces to clear the northern seas and keep intact the Arctic link with the U. S. S. R.

Alexander, speaking at Nottingham, said new British exploits could be expected "as new construction comes along," but warned that great fleet actions on the Russian front could not be expected because the navy's big job is to win the Battle of the Atlantic.

The Sunday Pictorial today urged Britain to cease depending too much on United States aid, and said "America may be our generous Dutch uncle, but it is Russia who is our fighting brother. Better a Bolshevik who kills Germans, than a democrat who kills time."

Report 8 Ships Set Afire In Mediterranean Convoy

By Ernest Agnew

London, Sept. 14 (AP)—Setting afire and damaging of at least eight Axis ships in a Mediterranean convoy, sinking of a German supply ship off Norway, and possible further damage to the German battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst were claimed today in official British accounts of week-end air and naval raids from the Norwegian coast to Ethiopia.

Heaviest of the attacks appeared to be that made by British naval and R. A. F. planes upon a Tripoli-bound convoy in the central Mediterranean last night.

SEP 15 1941

Navy planes located the rest of the convoy, which had been previously attacked Thursday night and Friday, together with their destroyer escort, were said to have stopped and set fire to one medium-sized merchantman, halted another from which clouds of smoke were seen to pour, and possibly to have hit a third.

Heavy Bombers Take Cover

Later the same night heavy R. A. F. bombers took up the attack. An R. A. F. communique said two more ships were left burning and three others hit.

"None of the ships in the convoy escaped damage," the communique said.

A strong British attack also was reported made last night by a large force of British aircraft against the naval base at Brest. Explosions were seen close to the drydocks where the Gneisenau and Scharnhorst are berthed, the Air Ministry said.

All Planes Back Safely

The docks at Le Havre and German airdromes in Northern France were also attacked. One German plane was reported shot down during these operations, while all British planes returned safely.

Little German air activity was reported over England last night. A communique from the Air and Home Security Ministries said bombs were dropped at only a few points and did only "slight damage." No casualties were reported.

Berlin Reports Raid On Suez

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP)—Oil refineries at Suez and dock facilities at Suez and Por Taufik were hit in a German bombing attack last night, DNB reported today.

On large fire and a number of smaller ones appeared in the refineries after the raid, the agency said.

Shipping Curb In Rumania And Bulgaria Considered Step Toward Naval Drive Against Crimea To Speed Ukraine Campaign

Four Time Blasts Set Off In Zagreb Telephone Exchange—Two Officers And Several Soldiers Injured—Communications Tied Up

[By the Associated Press]

Sofia, Sept. 14—A partial mobilization of the Bulgarian army has been ordered effective tomorrow, it was disclosed tonight.

The class of 1921 and youths of the classes of 1922 and 1923 who have finished their secondary studies are being called to the colors.

The Government also is putting into effect decrees to suppress all subversive activities and may impose the death penalty for sabotage. These decrees are under the laws for civil mobilization and defense of the state.

Attack On Crime Across Black Sea Forecast In Ankara

By Preston Grover

[By the Associated Press.]

Ankara, Sept. 14—Unofficial reports said tonight that Germany had ordered a standstill of all commercial shipping in the Black Sea ports of Rumania and Bulgaria.

The report was taken here to indicate that large-scale Axis Black Sea operations were at the zero-hour stage.

These operations under German direction would be aimed at Russian troops on the Crimean peninsula. The Germans were said to be impatient with the progress of the Rumanian land drive.

Hear General Was Shot

Foreign quarters in Ankara heard that General Ciupercu and several other Rumanian officers were shot for refusing to advance beyond the Dniester river.

That point marks the outer boundary of Bessarabia, which the Rumanians ceded to Russia under German pressure a year ago.

It has been reported repeatedly from Rumania that the army and public, bitterly discontented with continuance of the war, was against going beyound Bessarabia.

The Black Sea, bounded by Russia, Turkey, Bulgaria and Rumania, seems to have been chosen as the setting for a decisive battle between the Axis and the Allies for control of the Ukraine.

Cites Molotov Warning

When Vyacheslav Molotov told Bulgaria, as disclosed last Thursday that she had exceeded the bounds of neutrality in permitting German naval preparations in her harbors the Russian Foreign Commissar apparently meant that the Germans were planning to land Axis forces behind the present Ukraine front along the Dnieper river.

Such an advance into the Black Sea, which with the Sea of Azov arm is about double the size of the Great Lakes, would turn that land-locked sea into a naval battlefield, perhaps straining Turkey's stand as a non-belligerent ally of Britain and diplomatic friend of Germany.

Called Reports Factor

Rumors of German and Italian troop concentrations, of dozens of small, medium-sized and large ships in Bulgarian ports and of recent movement of German legions from Rumania were declared in the main by Molotov to be established facts, justifying the sharp protest Russia delivered to the Bulgarian envoy to Moscow.

Facts and rumors concerning German military activity in Bulgaria have been trickling into Turkey for many weeks.

The first effect of these was to arouse nervous tension here over the possibility that the Axis might strike next in this direction. Recently, however, evidence has accumulated that whatever operation is contemplated it apparently is aimed not immediately at Turkey but at Russia across the Black Sea.

Red Fleet Held Stronger

Where or how Germany could direct sea action against Russia from Bulgarian ports has aroused interested speculation by war observers.

For it is known that the Russian fleet is more powerful than the combined fleets of all the Black Sea states although many ships, including most of the larger ones, are seriously outmoded. Of five cruisers, a dozen or more destroyers and a score of submarines only three destroyers and a few of the undersea craft are considered good by modern standards.

All the Russian ships are reported to be seriously short in anti-aircraft guns. For this reason they are believed scarcely to have ventured from well-protected bases since the start of the fighting along the Black Sea. They have landed some forces in an attempt to ease the siege of Odessa.

Air Convoy Suggested

With sufficient air power Germany might convoy a fleet along the coast past Rumania and the southwestern Ukraine to strike back of the Dnieper. But the Crimean peninsula, probable goal of such a thrust, is considered strongly fortified, and a landing there would be extremely hazardous, even with air support.

Nevertheless some such operation directed immediately back of the Russian lines or daringly clear across the Black Sea at Batum is considered likely. A Batum thrust might put the Germans in the Baku oil fields and as well rupture Russia's communications with her forces and the British in Iran.

Only piecemeal information is available here. Foreign military observers at Sofia are said to have been forbidden to leave that Bulgarian capital, and travelers through military zones in Bulgaria are carried in "blind automobiles."

Axis political observers at Istanbul say that it is highly possible that Russia will declare war on Bulgaria in eagerness to destroy the Bulgarian ports of Varna and Burgas, Germany's naval concentration points.

Time Bombs Set Off In Telephone Office In Heart Of Zagreb

[By the Associated Press]

Zagreb, Croatia (Via Berlin), Sept. 14—Four time-bombs exploded in Zagreb's central telephone exchange today, injuring a German major and at least thirteen other persons.

In another section of the city, six Croat soldiers were wounded by machine-gun fire.

[A British German-language broadcast picked up by CBS in New York said that "patriots" in former Yugoslavia had destroyed an ammunition factory and a gasoline dump, near Belgrade, and wrecked an airplane factory, the location of which was not given. The broadcast declared that "Montenegro is completely in the hands of the patriots." Montenegro is the section of the former Yugoslav state which borders northern Albania.]

Four Blasts In Few Minutes

The first bomb in the telephone office, located in the main postoffice building, exploded at 12.30 P. M. Three other blasts occurred twenty minutes later.

The explosions crippled Zagreb's telephone system and made calls within the city or to outside points impossible. There was no indication when communications again would be restored.

Major Moehring, German Signal Corps officer, was wounded in the head. He is assigned to the staff of Maj. Gen. Edmund Glaise Horstenau, German liaison officer at Zagreb.

Secret Policeman Wounded

A Croat named Reikovic, who is local head of the Croat secret police, Ustachi, was wounded in the leg. The leg later was amputated.

A German lieutenant, four German soldiers, a German telephone operator and six Croats also were injured.

There was no official announcement, but informed sources said they believed Communist saboteurs were responsible.

As a result of the blast, Government offices temporarily were cut off from the rest of the country.

Search Houses For Snipers

The six Croat sentries wounded were found lying in the street as the result of machine-gun fire from a rooftop at a street corner in another part of Zagreb.

A systematic search of houses in the neighborhood was instituted and soldiers and gendarmes controlled the streets at the outskirts of the city.

Reports meanwhile reached Zagreb that the railway line connecting Brod with Srajevo in Bosnia was blasted for the fourth time the night of September 12.

300 More Arrested in Oslo

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 14 (AP).—Three hundred Norwegian trade unionists have been arrested in Oslo in the last two days, bringing to about 2,000 the number of arrests by Germans and Quislings attempting to stifle Norwegian unrest, border advices said tonight. Among those arrested was Dietrich Seip, ousted rector of the University of Oslo, and Chief Wallhasen, of the Oslo city police.

Border To Be Moved To Include Jesenice In New State

Zagreb, Croatia, Sept. 14 (AP)—The Croatian-German border is to be corrected tomorrow to give Europe's newest State the town of Jesenice on the Sava river, it was stated authoritatively.

The change will move the present boundary about a mile north from the Bregana river to include a Croat population outside the new State.

Navy 'Accurate on Draw'

First Lord of the Admiralty Praises American Sea Forces

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP).—Great Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, believes the United States Navy is good on the draw.

Commenting on President Roosevelt's shoot-first order, he said in a speech today that Adolf Hitler had now been warned "not to show any of his private sea forces in the western Atlantic." Alexander added: "If he does, the United States Navy will shoot first, and I believe it is a navy which is very accurate on the draw."

Axis Subs To Continue Raids Despite U. S. Stand, Rome Says

Fascist Press Defies Shoot-First Order, But Gayda Asserts America Must Do First Firing

SEP 15 1941

By Richard Massock
[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 14—The Italian press bristled today with assertions that Axis submarines would continue their attacks on supplies to Great Britain in defiance of President Roosevelt's "shoot-first" order to the American navy.

Virginio Gadya, well-informed Fascist editor, said in La Voce d'Italian that Italy and Germany would wait for American warships to fire first in order to place war blame on the United States. He added, however, that Axis powers were not afraid of Mr Roosevelt's challenge, which they accepted, and would "answer fire with fire."

La Stampa, of Turin, asserted the Axis powers "know the best reply is in hitting sharply and hard, as their submarines have done and will continue to do in the Atlantic."

Il Messaggero said Secretary Hull had refrained from specifying defense waters because of the "most unfounded" suspicion that German submarines would avoid those waters and so sidestep an incident calculated to bring American war intervention.

A Fascist party poster appearing on the walls of Rome said under an insulting caricature of Roosevelt:

"To demand now that United States ships be allowed to unload their aid to our enemies in the very lands where we are fighting them and to demand that we allow them to do it and courteously salute them is an unbearable absurdity. If these ships insist on aiding the British to this impudent extent they will run the consequent and inevitable risks."

The official Stefani agency issued a statement blaming Mr. Roosevelt for the war and its prolongation, saying he had "dug an abyss between Europe and the United States."

While the Axis powers are not afraid of Mr. Roosevelt's "shoot-first" warning, Gayda said, they would not "play into his hands" by causing an incident. He asserted, however, that the Americans were "playing with dynamite."

Once American war craft start shooting, he said, Axis ships and planes will "answer fire with fire."

Meanwhile, they are "waiting" for Washington to make a provocation which will leave the United States responsible for open hostilities or breaking off of diplomatic relations, Gayda said.

Says Britain Fails To Profit

Gayda attributed Mr. Roosevelt's stand to what he called Great Britain's inability to profit from Germany's war against Russia.

"England has given supreme proof of her incapacity for big actions," Gayda wrote, "passively witnessing grandiose developments in the offensive of Germany and the Allies on the Russian front which seemed it ought to offer her the possibility of some offensive gesture—even a small one."

But "Italy and Germany are not playing Roosevelt's game," Gayda said. "They are not provoking. They prefer to let themselves be provoked so that it would be fixed quite clearly in history and international relations beyond any doubt that the aggression came from the United States, and the United States only is responsible for everything, near or distant, which may still happen."

Today's Italian military communique reported widespread air activity. Four British planes were brought down by anti-aircraft fire from an attacked Italian convoy, the communique said, while Italian bombers sank a small freighter in the eastern Mediterranean.

German fighter planes brought down a British plane over Bardia, in Libya, the communique said.

Grim Story Of Freezing Death Told By S. S. Sessa Survivor

Mate Of Torpedoed Vessel Gave Burial Service To Companions On Raft Who Perished In Cold

SEP 15 1941

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Correspondent

Reykjavik, Iceland, Sept. 10 (Delayed)—The story of how three men on a raft, victims of a submarine torpedo in the chilly waters off Iceland, buried three comrades at sea was told today by one of the survivors.

One of them was able to remember snatches of the burial service.

He was the Danish mate of the S.S. Sessa, torpedoed, shelled and sunk by a submarine, while carrying supplies to American troops in Iceland.

Watched Three Die

In halting English and between drinks of the liquor Icelanders call "black death," the mate recalled how he and two other seamen, a Portuguese and a Swede, watched the other three survivors die from exhaustion and exposure to sleet, rain and icy winds as a storm tossed them about in the sea.

"I remembered what I could from the service for burial at sea," the mate said today. "I said it and then threw them into the Atlantic."

The Swedish seaman will lose two toes from freezing, but vigorous massages of all their feet and legs by the Danish mate probably saved the lives of the three survivors. The mate said he remembered an old Admiralty order to do that in case of shipwreck and tried it on his protesting mates.

"We all hollered when I did it," he said today. "It hurt like hell."

Once the men on the raft heard an airplane and once they saw smoke on the horizon, but days went by before British seamen picked them up.

The Sessa was originally a Danish vessel. It was seized by the United States at New York last March when German, Italian and Danish ships were taken into protective custody. It flew the Panamanian flag at the time it was torpedoed. It sank within two minutes of the time the torpedo exploded against its side and the submarine opened fire on it with a cannon.

British Sub, Hit, Gets Revenge

London, Sept. 14 (AP)—The British Admiralty belatedly told today the story of the submarine Triumph which had eighteen feet of its hull blown away and its plating cracked by a mine explosion and lived on to torpedo ten enemy ships.

The Triumph hit the mine on a North Sea patrol in December, 1939, but limped through the Skagerrak minefields to its base in the Firth of Forth, 300 miles away.

Since being repaired, the Admiralty said, it has torpedoed five warships.

Mexico City, Sept. 14—Discovery of a "pirate airfield" and clandestine Nazi propaganda radio station near Las Palmas in the State of Chiapas was reported today by the newspaper Excelsior. The newspaper said the radio station had been spreading Nazi propaganda through southeastern Mexico and Central America.

From Senate sources the newspaper said it learned the station had both short and long wave facilities and used the call letters XAGX. Chiapas has been reported a center of Nazi activity because of its numerous German residents.

Bomb Wounds Yanks

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 14 (AP).—Two American crewmen were injured slightly by bomb fragments which struck the U. S.-owned freighter Arkansas during an Axis raid on Suez last week. Their names were not disclosed. The hitting of the Arkansan was revealed yesterday. She was not heavily damaged and remains seaworthy.

N. J. MEN ON DAMAGED SHIP

Two In Crew of 38 Endangered by Shell Bursts at Suez

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Two New Jersey men were in the thirty-eight-man crew of the Arkansan, an American ship said by the State Department to have been damaged by shell fragments during a bombing raid over Suez the night of Sept. 11.

The Maritime Commission identified the men as William L. Lenk, 55 First Street, Hoboken, and William L. Brewer, Route 1, Milleville.

The ship left New York July 19 and arrived at Port Sudan Sept. 5, sailing three days later for Suez. It was owned by the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company of San Francisco and New York and flew the American flag.

U. S. Air Corps Chief Tours Desert Airfields

Major General Brett Sees R. A. F. Bases On Lightning Trip In Western Egypt

With the British R.A.F. in the Western Desert, Egypt, Sept. 14 (AP)—Maj. Gen. George Brett, chief of the United States Air Corps, made a lightning tour of the desert airdromes with a staff of American specialists today.

He saw squadrons of Tomahawks and Glenn Martin Maryland bombers and the fleet air arm's new Grumman Martlet fighters.

Escorted by Air Vice-Marshal G. G. Dawson, he visited air officers commanding the western desert in the underground operations room. Then Brett drove to the airfield forward area and chatted with pilot, air-gunners and maintenance engineers.

Before entering a big Lockheed to fly back to Cairo, Brett said: "American machines seem to be standing up well under the abnormally difficult conditions out here. My job is to study needs in aircraft of both this and other fronts and ensure a smooth supply of ships and spare parts so that new machines are not sidetracked or delayed between American factories and the battle front."

British at Tobruk Heavily Pounded

Cairo, Sept. 14 (AP).—British Troops, besieged in the hot Libyan desert fortifications of Tobruk, took an unusually heavy artillery pounding yesterday after night-long bombardment by Axis planes. British General Headquarters reported that Axis patrols were showing new life along the Egyptian-Libyan frontier.

A communique issued in Rome told of "continuous" bombing of Tobruk by Italian planes Friday night, with resulting vast fires and explosions.

The German High Command announced that German planes had bombed British positions at Tobruk on Friday night.

One-Man Drive on Flies Helps British in Egypt

Dysentery Ending as Troops Join Australian's Campaign

MELBOURNE, Sept. 14 (AP).—The health of the British Army guarding the Egyption frontier owes much to an Australian soldier.

Appalled at the number of insects infecting camps, he started a one-man campaign to "drive the last fly from the desert." He put up notices in desert outposts which read "Kill that fly," and at first was regarded as a crank.

Troops, however, soon got into the spirit of the campaign, and as a result fly-killing competitions broke out. Dysentery has become almost negligible, and the originator of the campaign now exhibits a glass case containing millions of dead flies.

IRAN ORDERS PROMPT EXILE FOR 400 NAZIS

Police Are Instructed To Move All Males From Reich Legation

Government Acts After Long Delay Of Germans To Surrender

SEP 15 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Teheran, Iran, Sept. 14—The Iran Government today ordered police to remove 400 Nazi males from the German legation compound to barracks in Teheran for transport to India and Russia, where they will be interned for the duration of the war.

The Government order followed a long series of excuses by the legation which has delayed surrender of the Germans to the British and Russians.

At the same time the British said the Iran Government has notified the German, Italian, Hungarian and Rumanian legations to leave the capital, and added the Bulgarian legation to the list of diplomatic missions which will be closed.

Few Women Affected

The British legation said only a half dozen German women propagandists would be interned and that the remaining 400 German women and children could choose whether to stay here, return to Germany, or accompany the men to India.

German Jews crowded offices of the legation to request exemption from the police roundup.

Iran official circles showed concern over the British Broadcasting Corporation's Iranian-language broadcasts and the Iranian-language programs from New Delhi, India, both of which have suddenly become violently critical of the Iranian Government.

Basis Of Complaints

They indicated to many Iranian subjects that the status quo no longer had the approval of Britain and that those who forced changes might have received a go-ahead sign from Whitehall.

One broadcast gave extensive figures to show that taxes in Iran had increased seventeen-fold since 1921. The Delhi radio called for the release of former War Minister Gen. Ahmad Nakhjevan, who was arrested in an abortive air force and army mutiny of August 30.

Jewel Removal Denied

Delhi said the jailing of Nakhjevan was illegal and that no real constitutional government would put a minister behind the bars without disclosing charges.

Reza Shah Pahlavi indicated that he might receive deputies clamoring for permission for Parliament to exercise powers beyond those it now holds—merely to petition the ruler to institute reforms.

The Finance Ministry replied to a Delhi charge that the crown jewels had been sent out of the country by inviting Parliament to inspect them "in the near future."

National bank notes in Iran are issued against the jewels, which customarily are kept in the palace in Teheran.

High Time To Discard American Jazz Music Records, Germans Told

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP)—Germans were urged today to discard all phonograph records of "English-inspired or Negro music"—meaning American jazz.

"It is high time they disappear," declared the Hamburg Fremdenblatt.

It complained especially of restaurants and cafes so "undignified" that after two years of war with England they still entertain guests with hundreds of such records.

Cyprus Is Reinforced

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Sept. 14 (AP)—An official announcement today said arrival of strong reinforcements, including an armored detachment, had made the Cyprus garrison the strongest in the island's history.

After Crete fell to air-borne German troops, Cyprus became a likely objective in any concentrated Axis offensive against the Suez Canal since it lies about 120 miles from Port Said and a bare fifty miles from the Syrian coast at the closest point.

FEHMARN ISLAND, Germany, Sept. 14 (AP)—Julius Dorpmueller, General Director of German Railways, and Fritz Todt, General Inspector of Highways, rode the locomotives of work trains here today to break gorund for new rail and highway connections between Germany and Denmark and a bridge over Fehmarn Sound. The new route will cut the distance from Hamburg to Copenhagen by fifty miles.

Food Secretary Charbin Tells Farmers They Must Turn Over Supplies

Vichy, Sept. 14 (AP)—Food Secretary Paul Charbin today promised Frenchmen potatoes to take the place of the "unfortunately insufficient ration of bread and meat" for the winter.

In a broadcast Charbin informed farmers of the regulations by which Government agencies will determine how much of their potatoes farmers may keep and how much must be turned over to the Government.

A reasonably-good potato harvest, Charbin announced, will fill out otherwise "feeble" rations.

Death Penalty on 2 Reds Is Commuted by Petain

He Overrides Own Law in Cases Which Led to Demonstrations

VICHY, Sept. 14 (AP).—Marshal Henri Petain overrode his own law today to commute the death sentences on two Communist leaders on whose behalf demonstrations had been staged.

They are two rubber workers sentened to death on Thursday by special courts for their activities against the regime. Article 7 of the decree setting up these courts, signed by Petain on Aug. 4, said the courts' judgments were not subject to appeal, but were to be executed immediately.

Elsewhere, however, authorities redoubled their efforts to stamp out what official circles characterized a "veritable plot" against the state. The special court at Paris handed down five more sentences, which appeared to be getting heavier and heavier, for offenses against the regime. Two of the sentences were for seven years' forced labor and five years in prison, respectively, for the mere possession of Communist propaganda matter. Other offenders, charged with Communist activity, drew prison sentences from one to five years.

At Tarbes a second contingent of anti-Communist legionnaires left the Pyrenees region of unoccupied France with the Petain government's approval.

Chinese Affirms Faith in U. S.

SYDNEY, Sept. 14 (AP)—Dr. Hsu Ma, new Chinese Minister to Australia, replying to a question whether he saw any danger in the Japan-United States negotiations, said he was assured that no nation not an enemy could do anything to prejudice China's position—least of all the United States.

Kaname Wakasugi's Departure Held Significant In Current Far East Negotiations

Tokyo, Monday, Sept. 15 (AP)—Kaname Wakasugi, Japanese Minister to Washington, left today for the United States, and considerable significance was attached to his departure at this juncture in current Japanese-American conversations.

He left aboard an undisclosed vessel which will take him to Mexico and from there he will continue overland to Washington. The ship presumably is the one which will bring Japanese nationals home from Europe along with attaches and other officials who are being replaced.

Wakasugi arrived in Japan August 30 from the United States aboard the last vessel to leave there since the Washington and Japanese Governments froze each other's credits.

The next of kin of Seymour, who was at the controls, was given as his mother, Mrs. Ethel Seymour, of Topeka, Kan. Shand's next of kin was listed as his brother, A. F. Shand, of Kerrville, Tex.

WATCH IS SET ON WIEDEMANN IN ARGENTINA

Hitler's Mystery Envoy Arrives At Capital On Secret Mission

Will Be "Detained" If He Attempts To Stay, Officials Declare

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 14—Capt. Fritz Wiedemann arrived by plane from Rio de Janeiro today on a mysterious new mission for Adolf Hitler and immediately was put under surveillance by detectives of the Argentine Congressional "Dies committee," which seeks to question him about Nazi activities in the Americas.

Simultaneously with his appearance here, German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann, who is having troubles of his own, declared bluntly he has "no intention of withdrawing" from his post as requested in a resolution now under debate in the Argentine Congress.

Trip To Far East Hinted

The mystery surrounding Wiedemann's visit was heightened by Von Thermann's announcement that Wiedemann, Hitler's close friend and World War commander, would leave "within a few days" on a special diplomatic assignment in the Far East, although this story has been circulated before and denied by Germans.

It may be that Wiedemann's plans were changed as a result of the extensive publicity attending his comings and goings in South America and that he now may go on to the Orient.

Raoul Damonte Taborda, chairman of the Congressional committee investigating subversive activities, admitted that if Wiedemann does not attempt to stay in Argentina "we have no right to detain him," since he holds a transit visa to cross Argentina to Chile.

Arrest Is Threatened

"But if he attempts to stay he will be detained," he added firmly.

Taborda earlier had called members of the committee together to determine possible procedure for calling Wiedemann, former consul general at San Francisco who was among about 500 Axis consular officials and others expelled from the United States last July.

The committee's detectives kept an eye on him from the time he stepped out of his plane and its members said the square-shouldered Nazi mystery man would be watched every minute of his stay in Argentina.

Von Thermann, meeting Wiedemann at the airport, said the Argentine committee "is fussing without reason." He declared further that the committee had no right to question his colleague since he "is a diplomat on his way to an assignment on another continent."

First Hint Of Status

This was the first intimation that Wiedemann had been raised from consular to diplomatic status. A consul does not enjoy diplomatic immunity unless he happens to serve both as a consul and embassy attache.

The Ambassador said it was undecided yet whether Wiedemann would take a ship to Japan from Buenos Aires or would fly to Chile, thence by ship across the Pacific.

As for himself, von Thermann told interviewers that charges made against him by the Congressional committee are "ridiculous and do not constitute a reason for my withdrawal." He said he had been subjected to personal insults by the chairman of the committee which has accused him of "overstepping the bounds of a diplomat and abusing his privileges."

In Special Plane

The Ambassador said he would issue a statement at the close of the current Congressional debate on a resolution censuring him or at the close of Congress—"otherwise the discussion would be endless." His statement followed a second protest to the Argentine Foreign Office over statements made about him in the House of Deputies.

The significance of Wiedemann's special mission was emphasized by his arrival in a big four-motored plane—not the usual Condor ship which make the Rio de Janeiro—Buenos Aires run.

But, he said, "for weal or woe, the United States and the people of the United States are involved to whatever extent President Roosevelt has gone to implement his policy of national defense."

"My own position," he continued, "is simply this:

"For myself, I will support the national defense program, as I have been doing. The United States must be kept a free and independent and powerful nation at all costs.

"The President having acted, the Congress of the United States and the people of the United States must and will support that action.

"There is no other course of action open to us."

Kansas Isolationist Says No Other Course Is Open "Since U. S. Is In Undeclared War"

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 14—Senator Capper (Rep., Kan.) said tonight that President Roosevelt had initiated an "undeclared war" which "the Congress and the people of the United States must and will support."

The Kansan, who has been critical of Administration foreign policy, discussed, in an address transcribed for broadcast from Topeka, the President's order for the navy to shoot first at Axis raiders in American defensive waters.

"Shooting on sight is not short of war," he declared. "Shoot on sight is war, and no carefully chosen words in explanation can make such an order anything else."

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 14 (AP)—The isolationists' contention that the United States is at the verge of war "proclaims the bankruptcy of their formula," W. W. Waymack, editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune editorial pages, declared today.

Waymack, Pulitzer Prize winner for editorial writing in 1938, said in a broadcast that an objective study of propaganda "would show that never has a nation had such a drenching with it as this nation for twenty years—with the propaganda of isolationism," and asked:

"Are we at the gate of the very woes from which the isolationist propaganda said it would guarantee us?"

"Intellectual Blindness"

Waymack termed a contention by Charles A. Lindbergh at an America First Committee rally here last Friday night that the British, the Jews and the Roosevelt Administration are leading the nation toward war "a species of intellectual blindness that I cannot comprehend."

Hitler, he said, "is the propagandist who really did the job" in establishing the American wish that Germany should not win the war.

Waymack said totalitarianism constitutes menace and "wisdom dictates keeping the menace at a distance."

He spoke under the auspices of Fight for Freedom, Inc., of which he is not a member.

Agar Defends Movies, Asks Hitler's Defeat

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—Senators who have accused the movie industry of warmongering were assailed tonight by Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who asked:

"Do they want the motion-picture industry to pretend that the Nazis are not cruelly assaulting our civilization are not relentlessly destroying freedom and kindliness wherever their bloody rule extends?"

He declared in a broadcast under the auspices of Fight For Freedom, Inc., that "the public knows that Hitler is the enemy of every decent man on earth and that he has got to be beaten.

"Public Knows"

"The public knows that he probably won't be beaten unless America takes a hand. So the public supports Mr. Roosevelt in all he has done—and the public will go on supporting him to the end."

Agar declared that "these amazing Senators accuse the movie industry of not being 'impartial.' They charge that many recent pictures tend to make people dislike and oppose Hitler. They seem to forget that Hitler tends to make people dislike Hitler.

"Thank heaven that a powerful voice is raised to defend the motion-picture industry. Wendell Willkie believes in civil liberties, believes with all his heart in the American idea.

"It is not warmongering to tell the truth—even if the truth, as Mr. Roosevelt says, is 'cruel and relentless.' It is not our fault that the truth is cruel. But it will certainly be our fault if we are too dull or too cowardly to face the cruel facts."

Lindbergh's Speech Condemned By Writer

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—Dorothy Dunbar Bromley, author and former committee member of the New York chapter of the America First Committee, tonight condemned as "totally un-American" Charles A. Lindbergh's speech last week at Des Moines, Iowa, which she said he must have known would incite race hatred.

The writer, who said she resigned from the organization August 2 "when I feared an evolution in America First policy," declared:

"I am as convinced as ever that participation in Europe's war may mean economic ruin in this country and an end to our democratic institutions. Because I believe in democracy, and because I was for several months a member of the committee, I must publicly condemn Lindbergh's totally un-American declaration. . . .

"It is grossly unjust to lay the groundwork for the charge that this is a Jews' war."

SHOOT-FIRST STAND ASSAILED BY WOOD

President Acted Without Congressional Sanction, Isolationist Asserts

Head Of America First Committee And 58 Others Sign Statement

[By the Associated Press]

Chicago, Sept. 14—Gen. Robert E. Wood today released a statement, which he said was signed by fifty-eight prominent persons, declaring that President Roosevelt's recent shoot-first instruction to the navy was "supported neither by Congressional sanction nor by popular will."

The statement issued by Wood, who is national chairman of the America First Committee, said in part:

"The President's speech of September 11 presents a grave threat to the constitutional powers of Congress and to the democratic principles of majority rule. . . .

Called Unauthorized

The President has decreed that shooting will begin. His edict is supported neither by Congressional sanction nor by popular will. It is authorized by no statute and undermines the constitutional provision which gives the war power to Congress alone.

"The American people . . . will expect their elected representatives to take quick action to restore public confidence and to insure the carrying out of the people's will."

Supporters Are Named

Among the signers Wood listed were:

FORMER GOVERNOR WILLIAM H. MURRAY, of Oklahoma.
IRVIN S. COBB.
ALICE ROOSEVELT LONGWORTH.
WILLIAM L. HUTCHESON, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor.
FORMER GOVERNOR PHILIP F. LA FOLLETTE of Wisconsin.
ARCHBISHOP FRANCIS J. L. BECKMAN, of the Catholic diocese of Dubuque.
BISHOP GERALD SHAUGHNESSY, of Seattle.
BISUOP JOHN DUFFY, of Buffalo.

Wood said that Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford University, also signed and added: "The President should follow the Constitution as did President Wilson when he proved his case before Congress. . . . If the President is convinced that war should be begun, Congress should also be convinced by the same evidence."

Wheeler Changes Again President Acted Illegally

Polson, Mont., Sept. 14 (AP)—Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.), a critic of the Administration's foreign policy, told a group of his home State citizens today: "I'll stop talking only when Congress actually declares war as provided by the Constitution."

Wheeler reiterated that "when the President says to start shooting, then he is, in my opinion, violating the Constitution.

"Only Congress can declare war, and the President says that convoys mean shooting and shooting means war."

Suggestion On Service

Wheeler observed that Montanans, if they chose, could cross the border and enlist in Canadian forces, and added: "The President probably will give you his blessing."

Saying that many had charged him as a traitor, Wheeler asserted, "If I, Senator Clark (of Missouri), Senator Nye (of North Dakota) and others opposing entry into the war are traitors, then eighty per cent. of the people in the United States are traitors, because eighty per cent. of them oppose our entry into foreign conflict."

Defense Committee Opposes Geographic Limits On Army Operations

Convention Today Will Study Dozen Proposals Offered By Group

[By the Associated Press]

Milwaukee, Sept. 14—The American Legion's national defense committee recommended to the twenty-third annual national convention today that it go on record in favor of removing geographic limits on the use of American troops in the world crisis.

Declaring that it had much confidential information from the army and navy, the committee, through Chairman Warren H. Atherton, of Stockton, Cal., offered a dozen proposals which will go before the convention for study with the opening of business sessions tomorrow.

It proposed immediate provision for a permanent system of military training for American youth, fortification of all American islands in the Atlantic and Pacific suitable for defense purposes and peaceful acquisition of others that may be useful.

Against Any Appeasement

The committee also advocated maintenance of a permanent two-ocean navy, a regular army and National Guard large enough to make the nation secure and increased pay schedules for the armed forces.

The report will go to the convention along with one from the foreign relations committee denouncing totalitarian powers as "international bandits" and opposing any policy of appeasement on the part of the United States.

Later in the day Sergt. Alvin C. York, of Tennessee, World War hero whose life has been portrayed in a movie, criticized Senator Nye (Rep., N. D.) and other non-interventionists before a religious-patriotic gathering of Legionnaires tonight.

"Great Experience"

"I see where Senator Nye says that the picture which bears my name is propaganda," York said.

"If the story of my life is propaganda, then so is this very convention, because the simple story of my life revolves around the same great experience that yours does. If our lives are propaganda, and Senator Nye is against all propaganda, then he should start immediately to tear up all the history books in the country.

"He should destroy all the history books, just as Hitler made a bonfire of great literature in Germany, because the histories of this country tell story after story about every generation's fight to keep alive in this nation freedom of religion, freedom of speech and freedom of thought."

Against Communism

"The American Legion has always stood firmly against Communism and there is no evidence that we intend to chance our minds about it," York said.

"I am against Communism as much as any man in this convention, but I am for all out aid to Russia so long as Stalin continues to fight our greater common enemy—Nazi Germany."

The Legion's administrative body, the national executive committee, heard reports today from all major standing committees, but in most instances decided to refer them to the convention without recommendation.

Demand Defense Strikes End

The list included a report of the law and order committee demanding termination of all strikes in defense industries.

This committee charged that defense strikes were being caused by subversive agents of foreign powers and workers who failed to appreciate the urgent needs of the country.

It said subversive elements could be stamped out by law and by voluntary action of labor unions and that workers could obtain fair treatment through such agencies as the National Mediation Board.

The question of United States aid to Russia, in view of the Legion's traditional stand against Communism, is one of the issues that will command the attention of the 1,474 delegates. It will be discussed tomorrow by National Commander Milo J. Warner, of Toledo, in a report on his administration.

The delegates also will hear a personal message from President Roosevelt, delivered by Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, and an address by Fiorello H. LaGuardia, director of the Office of Civilian Defense.

With registrations approaching the 100,000 mark, Legionnaires took complete possession of Milwaukee for the four-day session and turned the business district into a bedlam. Officials predicted the one-day visitors would swell the attendance to around 250,000 when the annual parade is staged Tuesday.

Speech by Reynolds Canceled

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 14 (AP)—Herbert S. Waters, president of the Newark Advertising Club, has announced cancellation of an address before the club by Senator Robert R. Reynolds scheduled for Sept. 24, because the talk "might be in definite conflict with the national defense program." Robert St. John, former Associated Press war correspondent, is to speak instead.

NEW LEASE-LEND REQUEST FORESEEN

Expected Report By President Today May Precede Plea For Appropriation

$5,000,000,000—More To Be Sought For Aid To Britain And Anti-Axis Nations

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 14—President Roosevelt is expected to give Congress tomorrow a second accounting of expenditures from the $7,000,000,000 lease-lend fund, a report likely to be followed soon by a request for another appropriation—probably totaling about $5,000,000,000—for aid to Britain and other nations fighting the Axis.

In his first report to Congress on June 11, just 74 days after the $7,000,000,000 fund was appropriated, Mr. Roosevelt said that all but approximately $2,750,000,000 had been allocated. At that time, however, only about $75,000,000 actually had been spent, and this gave rise in Congress to some complaints that Britain had received little real help in the way of ships, planes and munitions.

No Funds For Soviets

Mr. Roosevelt's Congressional lieutenants recently discussed the second lease-lend request with him and reported afterward that it would provide no funds for Soviet Russia. For the time being, it was said, Russia was in a position to pay for her purchases in this country.

The House will reconvene tomorrow after a month's vacation and will take up as its first major piece of business the compromise $3,583,900,000 tax bill which was rewritten by a joint committee of House and Senate members after the two chambers had passed differing versions. The measure is scheduled for consideration Wednesday and leaders are hopeful the legislation will clear both chambers by the end of the week.

Current Investigations

Two investigations held the immediate attention in the Senate. An Interstate Commerce subcommittee will resume tomorrow its inquiry into allegations that the motion picture industry is spreading propaganda to involve the United States in war. The Defense Investigation Committee has asked Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce, to testify Tuesday on a contract between the Defense Plant Corporation and the Aluminum Company of America.

The committee investigating the movies called Jimmie Fiddler, Hollywood columnist, as its first witness.

This committee, marked last week by frequent exchanges between Wendell L. Willkie, representing motion picture producers, and Senator Nye (Rep., N. D.), was expected to hear testimony later in the week from the heads of some of the major companies.

Willkie's Proposal

Willkie has demanded that the committee view films which Senators Nye and Clark (Dem., Mo.) have complained contained war propaganda. Chairman D. Worth Clark (Dem., Idaho) said that uncut versions of the pictures probably would be shown to the members later.

Nye, coauthor of an inquiry resolution which the subcommittee is considering, told reporters he had received a "flood of mail" approving the charges he made as the hearing's first witness that a number of films released by the major companies in recent months had contained war propaganda.

New York Gas Famine Unless Rationing Is Lifted Soon Predicted

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—A spokesman for New York's filling-station operators said today that approximately one fourth of the city's 8,000 stations would be out of gasoline by the end of the month unless their quota supply is increased.

"Some dealers will run out of gas, if the rationing isn't lifted, somewhere around September 20, and each day after that it will be more severe," said Nathan Gelfer, president of the Gasoline Station Council of Metropolitan New York.

"I would estimate that twenty-five per cent. of the city's 8,000 gasoline stations and garages will be out by the end of the month unless something is done," he added.

Gelfer said a shortage was avoided last month only because dealers were permitted to draw on their September supplies.

Extent Of Assistance To Jews Announced

Group Has Helped Over 35,000 From Europe To Palestine In Two Years

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—The United Palestine Appeal disclosed today it had helped more than 35,000 Jews from Europe to enter Palestine in the first two years of the war.

Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, National U. P. A. chairman, said that 310,000 homeless Jews had found haven in Palestine since the beginning of Adolf Hitler's regime, far more than emigrated to any other country.

Dr. Silver said American Jewry had contributed $6,600,000 to the U. P. A. since the outbreak of war.

Dutch Plan To Meet Interest On Bonds

Coupons Which Post Date German Occupation Of Country Will Be Honored

SEP 15 1941

Washington, Sept. 14 (AP)—The Netherlands legation announced today that arrangements were being made for payment "an an early date" of interest on Government bonds, coupons of which post-date the German occupation of Holland.

The announcement said payments would be made on coupons dated later than May 15, 1940, by the banking firms of J. P. Morgan, of New York, and B. W. Blydenstein and Company, of London, and firms in the Dutch East Indies.

War Communiques

Russian

SEP 15 1941

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (Sunday) (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique:

During Sept. 14 our troops continued stubborn day-long battles along the entire front.

After many days of fierce fighting Soviet troops abandoned Kremenchug.

In aerial battles on Sept. 12 our air force downed twenty-one German planes and destroyed forty-six on airdromes. Our losses were twenty-eight planes.

One German patrol plane was downed on the approaches to Moscow on Sept. 14.

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique:

During the night of Sept. 13-14 our troops fought the enemy along the entire front.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (AP). — The German high command communique:

The favorable course of operations in the east prepare the way for new successes in battle.

After strong German forces broke into Leningrad's defense front closer encirclement of the city continues without interruption, despite bitter defense.

An enemy freighter south of the Faroe Islands was badly damaged yesterday by an air bomb.

In the course of a successful attack by the air force on a convoy east of Great Yarmouth which was reported in yesterday's high command communique, a British destroyer was struck by a heavy caliber bomb.

German battleplanes in North Africa on the night preceding Sept. 13 and yesterday bombed British anti-aircraft positions and a tent encampment at Tobruk.

There was no action by the enemy over the Reich's territory by day or night.

The commander of an army, Colonel General Ritter von Schobert, fell Sept. 12 in fighting on the east front.

British

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

Further successful action has been taken by the Royal Navy against the enemy's supplies and sea communications with his troops on the north Russian front.

At dawn on Friday, carrier-borne naval aircraft attacked enemy shipping in the Bodoe area of the Norwegian coast and military objectives in the vicinity.

One enemy supply ship of about 2,000 tons was sunk and other ships were damaged. An aluminum works was hit and set on fire, and an electric power station was also bombed. From these attacks all our aircraft returned safely.

An Air Ministry communique:

Brest was heavily attacked last night by a large force of aircraft of the bomber command. A great weight of bombs was dropped in the dock areas, and bursts were seen to straddle drydocks in which the battle cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau are lying.

Other aircraft bombed the docks at Le Havre. Fighter command aircraft on offensive patrols over northern France during the night attacked several enemy airdromes. An enemy aircraft coming in to land was destroyed.

None of our aircraft are missing from these operations.

A Ministries of Air and Home Security communique:

A very small number of enemy aircraft flew over the east coast last night. Bombs which were dropped at only a few points did only slight damage. No casualties have been reported.

CAIRO, Sept. 14 (AP).—A British General Headquarters communique:

LIBYA: In the Tobruk area our fighting patrols made deep penetrations into enemy positions at a number of points without making contacts. As a result of our activities the enemy shelling was particularly heavy against the eastern sector of the Tobruk defenses.

Enemy bombing attacks during the night were continuous, but they resulted in no casualties and no important damage to material. In the frontier area enemy patrols moving somewhat wider than usual are being successfully engaged.

The Royal Air Force Middle East communique:

MEDITERRANEAN: A highly successful attack by aircraft of the fleet air arm and the R. A. F. on an enemy convoy in the central Mediterranean, mentioned in yesterday's communique, continued the night of Sept. 13-14, when aircraft of the fleet air arm located the remaining merchantmen and their destroyer escort approaching Tripoli.

One medium-sized merchantman was hit and brought to a standstill and set on fire. Another vessel of the same size was also stopped, and clouds of black smoke were observed issuing from it. A third ship was possibly hit.

Later, during the same night, the attack was continued by heavy bombers of the R. A. F. Two ships were left on fire and three others were hit. None of the ships in the convoy escaped damage.

CRETE: The landing fields at Candia and Malemi were raided by heavy bombers of the R. A. F. during Friday night. At Candia many bombs fell on the target. Fires and explosions were observed. Similar effective results of our bombing were seen at Malemi.

CYRENAICA: Aircraft of the South African Air Force attacked the landing grounds at Gambut and Gazala during Friday. During Friday night fleet air arm bombers raided Bardia and Gambut landing grounds. At Bardia fires broke out among the (fuel) dumps and stores. At Gambut a direct hit was scored on one aircraft. Others were damaged. A large fire was started on the landing ground, where gasoline containers were set ablaze.

SICILY: Airdromes of Gerbini and Catania were again attacked during Friday night, when aircraft of the fleet air arm machine-gunned and dispersed the aircraft and airdrome buildings at both objectives.

ETHIOPIA: Aircraft of the R. A. F. bombed enemy positions south of Gondar during Saturday.

From all these operations none of our aircraft are missing.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the land front in North Africa there was lively activity by our artillery.

Formations of the Italian air force, overcoming violent enemy anti-aircraft reaction, continuously bombarded numerous sectors of the Tobruk forces on the night of Sept. 12, scoring direct hits with large-size bombs on batteries and fortified works, barracks and munition dumps, causing vast fires and explosions.

At Bardia a British plane was shot down by German fighters.

In East Africa, in the Culquabert sector, an Italian medical detachment visibly marked with the Red Cross was bombed and machine-gunned, and several were wounded.

One British bomber was shot down by the anti-aircraft defense.

During an air attack against one of our convoys, anti-aircraft fire from our ships brought down in flames four enemy machines. In the eastern Mediterranean during actions against enemy shipping our air force sank a merchant ship of small tonnage.

MOSCOW -- ADD SOVIET COMMUNIQUE X X X THE ENTIRE [illegible] FRONT.

IN ONE SECTOR IN THE WESTERN DIRECTION OF THE [illegible] FRONT OUR ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNNERS BROUGHT DOWN A JUNKERS 88 BOMBER. THE PILOT, NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICER EMIL FROST, THE OBSERVER, SERGEANT MAJOR ALFRED BECHER, AND THE MECHANIC, CORPORAL VERUNMAN POLIKMAEN, SAVED THEMSELVES WITH PARACHUTES. COLLECTIVE FARMERS DISARMED THEM AND BROUGHT THEM TO "X" UNIT HEADQUARTERS. UPON INTERROGATION, PILOT EMIL FROST STATED: "IN THE FIRST TWO MONTHS OF THE WAR OUR AIR GROUP LOST 75 PER CENT OF ITS AIRCRAFT. THE REPLACEMENTS WHICH WE RECEIVED DO NOT COVER THE LOSSES BY FAR. BESIDES, WE BEGAN TO RECEIVE PLANES OF OLD MAKES, SUCH AS JU-52'S, PZL-24'S, ARADE 47'S, ETC. MATTERS ARE STILL WORSE WITH THE FLYING PERSONNEL. MANY EXPERIENCED PILOTS WERE KILLED. AT PRESENT THE FLYING STAFF CONSISTS CHIEFLY OF YOUNGSTERS, 17 TO 23 YEARS OLD. THE GERMAN COMMAND IS DEEPLY WORRIED BY THE PROBLEM OF REPLENISHMENT OF FLYING PERSONNEL. OUR FLIERS, ESPECIALLY THE YOUNG ONES, ARE AFRAID OF SOVIET FIGHTER PLANES. WE BOMBER PILOTS REPEATEDLY OBSERVED HOW, UPON SIGHTING SOVIET PLANES, OUR FIGHTERS FLEE, ABANDONING US WITHOUT PROTECTION."

SERGEANT MAJOR ALFRED BECHER STATED: "RUSSIAN AIRCRAFT REPEATEDLY APPEARED OVER BERLIN, KOENIGSBERG, STETTIN, ALLENSTEIN AND OTHER GERMAN CITIES. RECENTLY I WITNESSED THE BOMBARDMENT OF BERLIN BY SOVIET PLANES. NUMEROUS FIRES BROKE OUT IN THE CITY, FREQUENT BOMB EXPLOSIONS WERE HEARD. I HAPPEN TO KNOW THAT BOMBS HIT A MUNITIONS PLANT. IN CONNECTION WITH SOVIET AND BRITISH AIR RAIDS, THE GERMAN POPULATION IS IN A DEPRESSED STATE. EVERYBODY ASKS THE SAME QUESTION --WHEN WILL THIS ACCURSED WAR END?"

SEP 15 1941

THE GERMAN INVADERS ARE POWERLESS AGAINST THE ELUSIVE AND HEROIC GUERRILLAS. IN ONE MONTH OF OPERATIONS IN FASCIST-OCCUPIED LENINGRAD REGIONS A GUERRILLA DETACHMENT COMMANDED BY "K" ANNIHILATED OVER 300 FASCIST OFFICERS AND MEN, INCLUDING A MAJOR AND COLONEL. GUERRILLAS BURNED DOWN FOUR TWIN-ENGINED BOMBERS ON AN AIRDROME AND DESTROYED 34 TRUCKS AND SEVERAL MOTOR CARS. IN THREE WEEKS A DETACHMENT COMMANDED BY "S" EFFECTED 16 RAIDS UPON ENEMY COLUMNS AND SMASHED THE HEADQUARTERS OF A LARGE GERMAN UNIT. IN ENGAGEMENTS THE DETACHMENT KILLED 116 GERMAN PRIVATES AND EIGHT OFFICERS, DESTROYED 39 TRUCKS WITH FUEL AND AMMUNITION AND ENEMY SOLDIERS. THE GUERRILLAS CAPTURED 60 GERMAN RIFLES AND 18 HORSES.

SOVIET GUERRILLAS OPERATING IN THE PSKOV REGION AND KARELIA EXTERM-

INATE HUNDREDS OF FASCIST OCCUPANTS. THE GUERRILLAS WAYLAY GERMAN STAFF MOTORCARS AND OPEN FIRE ON THEM FROM THE FORESTS. "NIKOLAI", A SNIPER IN ONE GUERRILLA DETACHMENT, ALREADY HAS KILLED 39 GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN.

"OLGA", A SCOUT OF THE SAME DETACHMENT, A FORMER PARACHUTE JUMING INSTRUCTOR, KILLED 14 GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN WITH AN AUTOMATIC SHE HAD CAPTURED FROM A GERMAN.

IN FIGHTING GERMAN FASCIST INVADERS, GUERRILLA SNIPERS HAVE DEVELOPI SKILLFUL TACTICAL METHODS. THE FASCIST INVADERS INCREASINGLY FEEL IT ON THEIR HIDES.

SEP 15 1941

A WHITE FINNISH OFFICER INFORMED THE NEUE ZUERICHER ZEITUNG CORRESPONDENT THAT "RUSSIAN GUERRILLAS SHOOT FROM AMBUSH AT PASSING CARS. WITH LIGHTNING SPEED THEIR RIFLEMEN APPEAR FROM AN THICKET AND WITH THE SAME SPEED VANISH AGAIN IN FOG AND DENSE FOREST. FINNISH PATROLS ATTEMPT TO CLEAR THE FOREST. BUT THIS IS IMPOSSIBLE IN THIS BOUNDLESS WILDERNESS." (END)

MOSCOW -- ADD RUSSIAN X X X WITHOUT PROTECTION.

THE START OF THE 13TH WEEK OF THE WAR ALSO FOUND KIEV AND ODESSA, TWO OTHER MAJOR OBJECTIVES OF THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE, HOLDING OUT IN THE FACE OF RAGING BATTLES AT THEIR APPROACHES.

THE SOVIET PRESS REVIEWED THREE WEEKS OF ACTION IN THE NORTHWEST ABOUT LENINGRAD, DESCRIBING THE JOINT ACTION OF THE RED ARMY AND PEOPLES ARMY IN CHECKING THE ASSAULTS.

SEP 15 1941

IZVESTIA, THE GOVERNMENT ORGAN, DESCRIBED WHAT IT SAID WAS A TYPICAL TANK BATTLE IN WHICH RUSSIAN MACHINES LAID AN AMBUSH AND STOPPED THE ADVANCE OF NAZI TANKS FOLLOWED BY INFANTRY. THIRTEEN OF THE GERMAN MACHINES WERE DESTROYED IN A THREE-DAY BATTLE, IT WAS SAID.

IN ANOTHER ACTION A RUSSIAN FLIER WAS SAID BY TASS, OFFICIAL NEWS AGENCY, TO HAVE DESTROYED A PONTOON BRIDGE. SCOUTS ESTABLISHED THAT THE GERMANS LOST ABOUT A BATTALION OF INFANTRY AND 15 ANTIAIRCRAFT GUNS ON THIS BRIDGE, TASS SAID.

A RED STAR BULLETIN SAID ONE RED ARMY UNIT IN THIS SECTOR BEAT OFF REPEATED ASSAULTS AND THEN IN A COUNTERATTACK DESTROYED A GERMAN BATTALION AND CAPTURED TEN GUNS.

SEP 15 1941

BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES IN THIS SECTOR, GUERRILLAS WERE SAID TO BE CONSTANTLY HARRASSING THE GERMANS. ONE BAND OF 27 WAS REPORTED TO HAVE RECAPTURED TWO VILLAGES AND HELD THEM FOR A DAY. ANOTHER GUERRILLA BAND WAS REPORTED IN THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE TO HAVE SMASHED HEADQUARTERS OF A LARGE GERMAN UNIT AND KILLED 300 GERMANS.

YET ANOTHER BAND ACCOUNTED FOR 124 GERMAN MEN AND OFFICERS, THE COMMUNIQUE SAID.

ONE WOMAN GUERRILLA, "OLGA", A FORMER PARACHUTE-JUMP INSTRUCTOR, WAS OFFICIALLY REPORTED TO HAVE KILLED 14 GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN WITH AN AUTOMATIC WHICH SHE CAPTURED FROM THE GERMANS.

FIERCE FIGHTING WITH THE FINNS ON THE KARELIAN ISTHMUS NORTH OF LENINGRAD ALSO WAS REPORTED IN RED STAR, WHICH SAID TWO FINNISH REGIMENTS ATTEMPTING TO FORCE A RIVER LEFT MORE THAN 200 DEAD WHEN REPULSED BY TWO RUSSIAN INFANTRY BATTALIONS.

ON THE SOUTHWESTERN FRONT, A SOVIET BULLETIN SAID THE RED AIR FORCE ON SEPT.11 DESTROYED 30 TANKS AND 50 TRUCKS IN ONE OF ITS ATTACKS.

ONE EXTRAORDINARY ACTION ON THIS FRONT WAS REPORTED BY TASS WHICH SAID 10 "SOVIET PATRIOTS" STOOD THEIR GROUND IN THE FACE OF AN OVER-POWERING ATTACK BY TEN TANKS AND ARMORED CARS COVERING INFANTRY. THE RUSSIANS DIED IN THEIR TRACKS, TASS SAID, BUT THEY DESTROYED THREE TANKS AND 100 OF THE OPPOSING SOLDIERS.

WHILE THE BRITISH MILITARY MISSION HERE ANNOUNCED THE ARRIVAL IN RUSSIA OF A WING OF THE RAF, WITHOUT GIVING DETAILS, THE SOVIET COMMUNIQUE QUOTED A GERMAN AIR FORCE PRISOMR AS SAYING HIS UNIT HAD LOST 75 PER CENT OF ITS PLANES IN THE LAST TWO MONTHS, AND THAT THE GERMAN COMMAND HAD ATTEMPTED TO REPLACE THEM WITH JUNKERS 52 TRANSPORTS, OUT-MODED PZL 24'S AND ARADO 47'S.

BERLIN, SEP 14-(AP)-FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE THE START OF THE WAR, LEAFLETS WERE DISTRIBUTED THROUGHOUT BERLIN TONIGHT URGING BERLINERS NOT TO SLACKEN IN THEIR PREPAREDNESS FOR AIR RAIDS.

THE PEOPLE WERE ADVISED TO KEEP HANDBAGS PACKED TO TAKE TO THE CELLARS DURING RAIDS. THE BAGS SHOULD CONTAIN VALUABLES, IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS AND PERSONAL PAPERS TO PROVE IDENTITY, EXTRA CLOTHES, FOOD AND RATION CARDS, THE CIRCULARS SAID.

ORIGINALLY, THE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE CONTENDED THAT WIEDEMANN WAS NO DIPLOMAT SINCE HE WAS EJECTED FROM THE UNITED STATES AND BECAUSE OF THE HAVANA ACCORD WHICH PROVIDES THAT ONE AMERICAN REPUBLIC REFUSE TO BE HOST TO A PERSON EXPELLED BY ANOTHER.

SEP 15 1941

IT TONED DOWN ITS STAND, HOWEVER, IN VIEW OF THE TRANSIT VISA GRANTED THE NAZI ENVOY BY THE ARGENTINE FOREIGN OFFICE.

EVEN WHILE WIEDEMANN WAS WINGING HIS WAY HERE FROM RIO DE JANEIRO THE 32-YEAR-OLD TABORDA SWUNG INTO ACTION FORMULATING LATER ABANDONED PLANS TO SEIZE THE NAZI OFFICIAL WHEN HE LANDED.

APPARENTLY UNCONCERNED OVER WIEDEMANN'S STATUS, AN ORDER WAS AGREED UPON BY THE COMMITTEE FOR POLICE TO DETAIN WIEDEMANN, BUT IT APPARENTLY NEVER WAS ISSUED.

"WE WANT TO QUESTION HIM," TABORDA SAID DURING THESE PREPARATIONS, ADDING THAT POLICE "HAVE SUFFICIENT LEGAL GROUNDS FOR HIS DETENTION."

AFTER WORD CAME FROM PORTO ALEGRE, WHERE THE BUENOS AIRES-BOUND PLANE LANDED BRIEFLY, THE GERMAN EMBASSY ITSELF DECLINED TO CONFIRM OR DENY THAT WIEDEMANN WAS EXPECTED.

AN ADVERTISEMENT APPEARED IN BUENOS AIRES NEWSPAPERS TONIGHT OVER THE NAME OF THE "FEDERATION OF GERMAN CIRCLES OF BENEFICENCE AND CULTURE" SEEKING TO JUSTIFY THE ACTIVITIES WHICH CONGRESS WANTS TO STAMP OUT.

CHIEF AMONG ITS CONTENTIONS WAS THAT THE BENEFICENCE CULTURE CIRCLES--WHICH THE COMMITTEE CHARGES ARE AN EXTENSION OF THE OUTLAWED ARGENTINE NAZI PARTY--OPERATED WITH FULL KNOWLEDGE AND APPROVAL OF THE POLICE AND OTHER GOVERNMENT AUTHORITIES.

ALTHOUGH THE ADVERTISEMENT SAID HEADQUARTERS AND OFFICE PERSONNEL WERE THE SAME AS USED BY THE NAZI PARTY IT WAS "NATURAL" THAT THIS HAPPENED SINCE "THE ROOMS WERE VACANT AND THE PERSONNEL UNEMPLOYED."

SEP 15 1941

MEANWHILE, FEDERAL JUDGE MIGUEL JANTUS ORDERED THE MARITIME PREFECTURE TO DELIVER TO HIM 83 PACKAGES, SOME OF THEM CONTAINING ALLEGED NAZI PROPAGANDA, WHICH ARRIVED EARLY IN AUGUST ABOARD A JAPANESE SHIP AND WERE CONSIGNED TO THE GERMAN EMBASSY HERE.

THE ORDER WAS REQUESTED BY THE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE, WHICH DEMANDED THAT ALL THE PARCELS BE EXAMINED AFTER FIVE WERE OPENED AND, OFFICIALS SAID, FOUND TO CONTAIN PROPAGANDA GESTAPO-COMPILED AND TWO BOOKS LISTING THE NAMES OF PERSONS WANTED BY GERMAN AUTHORITIES IN THE REICH.

BUENOS AIRES, SEPT. 14-(AP)-GERMAN AMBASSADOR EDMUND VON THERMANN PROTESTED AGAIN TO THE ARGENTINE FOREIGN OFFICE TODAY CONCERNING STATEMENTS MADE IN THE HOUSE OF DEPUTIES DURING DEBATE ON A RESOLUTION WHICH INDIRECTLY WOULD ASK THE GOVERNMENT TO SEND HIM HOME.

VON THERMANN SAID HE HAD BEEN SUBJECTED TO "PERSONAL INSULTS" BY DEPUTY RAOUL DAMONTE TABORDA, CHAIRMAN OF A COMMITTEE INVESTIGATING

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES, WHICH HAS ACCUSED THE AMBASSADOR OF "OVER-STEPPING THE BOUNDS OF A DIPLOMAT AND ABUSING HIS PRIVILEGES."

FRIDAY VON THERMANN FILED A FORMAL PROTEST AGAINST THE COMMITTEE'S ASSERTIONS THAT MEMBERS OF THE GERMAN EMBASSY STAFF HELPED EXTORT MONEY FROM GERMAN WORKERS IN ARGENTINE TO FINANCE AN UNDERGROUND NAZI POLITICAL ORGANIZATION.

THE HOUSE WILL VOTE TOMORROW ON A RESOLUTION CONDEMNING VON THERMANN FOR HIS ALLEGED ACTIVITIES.

Milwaukee, Sept. 15—Men who hate war because they know war—the American Legion—met today in their twenty-third annual convention preponderantly sympathetic to reversing their double-decade-old stand against American participation in foreign conflicts.

With challenging words from Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, resounding in their ears, and with President Roosevelt's message that he knew the nation could count on the Legion's continued interest and cooperation in whatever lay ahead, these former warriors of the first American Expeditionary Force whooped up every inference of intervention.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox told the Legion in blunt language today that the United States Navy had orders "to capture and destroy" every Axis surface or submarine raider encountered "between the American continent and the waters adjacent to Iceland."

First Official Disclosure

Knox's speech comprised the first official disclosure of the navy's method in carrying out President Roosevelt's shoot-on-sight orders in his speech of Thursday night.

"Beginning tomorrow the American navy will provide protection as adequate as we can make it for ships of every flag carrying lend-aid supplies between the American continent and waters adjacent to Iceland," the Navy Secretary declared as Legionnaires stood and cheered his every word.

Hits America-First Group

The secretary added that "the whole issue is far too broad to make the question of who fired first of great importance" but he said he wanted to refer to it because "it offered a chance for that curious organization known as 'the America First Committee' to tell the American public that, in its judgment, it was more likely the German U-boat commander was telling the truth than the American naval officer who commanded the Greer."

"That is an important fact for the American public to digest," Knox declared, "that we have in our midst an organization of American citizens who, on a question of veracity, declared publicly that they prefer to accept the word of a piratical murderer of women and children on the high seas, engaged in a type of warfare denounced by every civilized nation in the world, rather than accept the word of an American commander of an American warship."

Cheer President's Message

And when the President's message of faith was read the delegates roared back their pledge that the Legion will be there when called upon.

Milo Warner, the national commander, carried on the trend in his annual report by saying:

"We must so fully prepare ourselves for war in so far as it is humanly possible we of America can keep war away from our shores. In order to be able to do so we must have an army and navy which are unfettered and unshackled and so well prepared by equipment, training and authorization, that they can strike wherever or whenever it is necessary for the purpose of defense."

Retract former Attitude

It was a Legion convention different from any other held in the long history of the A. E. F. veterans. Every year in the past the convention has gone on record against ever again sending as American army into European conflict.

Today, however, many leading Legionnaries heretofore against active American participation overseas were canvassing support for a resolution to be reported later in the week, favoring the lifting of the ban.

The fight in favor the resolution eclipsed any other item before the convention, even the eight-cornered race for national commander.

All Delegates Present

Typically Legion, the convention got under way as have all other previous meetings—with a flood of oratory, felicitations, mundane committee reports and singing, but unlike any other previous meeting the first day saw every delegate's chair filled and every warlike utterance greeted with yells of approbation.

These men, most of whom now have sons of army age, have smelled powder and don't want to wait to see the whites of the enemy's eyes if reaction to today's oratory is any criterion.

Movies Anti-Nazi

Secretary Knox's address had progressed hardly a hundred words when an electric reaction was manifest by the delegates. This was when he referred to Hitler as the most ruthless military conqueror the world has ever known. Derisive shouts greeted the reference to the German dictator.

Again when Darryl F. Zanuck, Hollywood producer, denied that the motion-picture industry was making pictures to generate a war spirit, the Legion cheered, a cheer that became a torrential vocal outburst when he said: "If you charge us with being anti-Nazi you are right."

At the very outset the trend of the convention could be felt, for in his invocation Brigadier William G. Gilks, of Texas, national chaplain, asked that the Legion be guided in a way that would help bring about the end of this senseless destruction by peoples who have turned their backs on God.

Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Legionnaire Mayor of New York city and National Civilian Defense Coordinator, after a few words on civilian defense, kept the convention in a constant cheer with his explosive reiteration that aid to Britain was aid to the United States.

Convention Parades Tomorrow

"I know," he said, "that when you give your answer to Hitler as you do in resolution, it will be that we are ready to keep the dictator away from our shores and from our mode of living."

The delegates rest tomorrow from business for the annual convention parade, a Tuesday endeavor since the first Legion convention was held way back when these same men thought nothing of stepping out ten miles, but who now drop into line as near the reviewing stand as possible—and out soon after.

New Orleans and Atlantic City are staging a neck and neck race for the 1942 national convention of the Legion. The next convention city will be selected Wednesday.

Roosevelt Praises Legion

President Roosevelt, in a personal message to the first formal session of the convention, told the Legionnaires that it had been "a source of satisfaction to me to have had your full co-operation in the development of our national defense program in all of its aspects," and that he felt confident the Administration and the nation could count on a continuation thereof "in meeting whatever lies ahead."

The delegates roared back their pledge that the Legion will be there when called upon.

Secretary Knox's address had progressed hardly a hundred words when an electric reaction was manifest by the delegates. This was when he referred to Hitler as the most ruthless military conqueror the world has ever known. Derisive shouts greeted the reference to the German dictator.

Mr. Knox's announcement of the Navy's action program came near the end of his address, after he had declared that since United States occupation of Iceland on July 7 "Hitler and the Nazis were palpably losing the Battle of the Atlantic" and therefore were forced to attempt to break down the bridge of ships carrying supplies to Britain.

"If they did not swiftly take successful measures to break down this bridge," Mr. Knox said, "the defeat of England, the prime purpose of the war, would become impossible. If they did make such an all-out effort, they would add the United States Navy to their numerous foes.

"It was a grim choice, but Nazi action in the last few days has left little room for doubt of what they will do."

"A German submarine," he continued, "encountered an American destroyer engaged in carrying mail to our outpost in Iceland. The encounter came in broad daylight and the American destroyer carried identification marks which left no possible room for doubt as to its nationality.

"At close range, the submarine discharged three torpedoes aimed at the American destroyer. The Greer evaded them, and promptly attacked the submarine with depth charges. After the second depth charge attack, all contact with the submarine was lost by the destroyer."

The Navy Department, Mr. Knox said, immediately made public all information on this incident, while the German government countered by saying the Greer fired the first shot.

Answers "America First"

The Secretary added that "the whole issue is far too broad to make the question of who fired first of great importance," but he said he wanted to refer to it because "it offered a chance for that curious organization known as 'the America First Committee' to tell the American public that, in its judgment, it was more likely the German 'U' boat commander was telling the truth than the American naval officer who commanded the Greer."

"That is an important fact for the American public to digest," Mr. Knox declared, "that we have in our midst an organization of American citizens who, on a question of veracity, declared publicly that they prefer to accept the word of a piratical murderer of women and children on the high seas, engaged in a type of warfare denounced by every civilized nation in the world, rather than accept the word of an American commander of an American warship."

In discussing defense activities within the country, Mr. Knox praised the Legion for its share in promoting armament preparations and gave it credit for bringing about enactment of the eighteen months Army service extension law, which Congress recently passed.

At another point in his speech he warned against taking the Navy's airplanes from under the direction of Navy commanders. "Taking the Navy's planes away from the fleet commander and placing their command elsewhere would unquestionably cripple the fleet," he said.

Roosevelt Sends Message

President Roosevelt's message, delivered personally by Secretary Knox and read to the convention by National Commander Warner, follows:

"My dear Commander Warner:

"I regret so much my inability to be with you in Milwaukee during the twenty-third national convention of the American Legion. Only the pressure of official business prevents my attendance. It is with pleasure, however, that I extend most cordial greetings to you and through you to all Legionnaires and members of the auxiliary who will be assembled at your convention.

"Knowing of the keen interest manifested by the Legion in current and momentous events both at home and abroad, I need not remind you of the serious situation that is facing the world and its possible effect on the future of our own country.

"You who have served in our armed forces during time of war know best the stern realities of war and consequently would much prefer peace. However, you also well appreciate the danger in our not being fully prepared to meet any condition that may arise in world affairs. The threat to our national security and to our way of life is not imaginary but real. This hazard can truly be appraised only when we appreciate the destruction, desolation and enslavement which have overtaken free people of other nations during recent years.

"Our nation throughout its existence has stood as a symbol of security and freedom. It is our constant aim and our controlling purpose that those priceless rights and privileges accruing to American citizenship may above all be preserved and protected. To that end, as you know, we are now engaged in a very thoroughgoing effort for national defense in order to meet adequately the steps being taken by aggressor nations. We all know that for the successful accomplishment of such a vast undertaking there must be unity of purpose, unity of sentiment, and a keen desire to make whatever sacrifices may be necessary in order to obtain our objective.

"The American Legion is an organization extending throughout the nation, even to the smallest community, and with a membership in excess of a million, it is of tremendous importance in stimulating strong patriotism and true citizenship.

"It has been a source of satisfaction to me to have had your full cooperation in the development of our national defense program in all of its aspects. I feel confident that the administration and the nation can count on that same interest and cooperation in meeting whatever lies ahead.

"It is my desire that you may have a very successful convention.

"Very sincerely yours,

"Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Legion's Aid Is Solicited By Marshall

Army Chief Asks Veterans Help Create Public Understanding of Training Program

Convention Cheers Intervention Talk

Old 'Foreign Entanglement' Policy May Be Lifted by Resolution; Parade on Tuesday

Milwaukee, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army, appealed to the American Legion national convention tonight to help remove a lack of public understanding which he said was hampering the training of America's new army of selectees.

General Marshall told a gathering of distinguished Legionnaires and guests at the annual commander's dinner that it was impossible to develop an efficient army if decisions purely of a military nature were "continuously subjected to investigation, cross-examination, debate, ridicule and public discussion."

Pressure Groups Cited.

Declaring that criticism came mainly from pressure groups and misinformed individuals, General Marshall said:

"I submit that there is a clear line of demarcation between the democratic freedom of discussion which we are determined to preserve and a destructive procedure which promotes discontent and destroys confidence in the Army.

"The local posts of the Legion can do much to bring the people at home to a better understanding of requirements of the situation," General Marshall said. "Even you veterans probably do not realize the result of the appeals of the young man angling for a home-made cake or bragging to his parents or his girl of the hardships he endures, or grousing over the failure of his leaders to recognize his patricular ability by immediate promotion.

"The War Department at times receives a veritable avalanche of criticisms or pressures resulting from such ordinary soldier reactions as these. The incidents in themselves are often amusing, as in the case of the mother who complained that her son wasn't getting enough to eat and we found her boy had gained sixteen pounds in twenty days.

"But the total effect is really serious. As I read confidential reports from abroad there is a striking similarity between our present situation in this respect and that which affected the late army of France.

"Criticism, justified or otherwise is to be expected. In fact, it is as inevitable as a Congressional investigation, but when its nature or purpose is to cause disunity within the Army I say, direct the criticism at me, personally, and leave the Army alone."

Text of Secretary Knox's Address to Legion Convention

SEP 16 1941

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 15—Following is the text of the address by Secretary Knox today before the convention of the American Legion:

At the outset I want to express my appreciation of your invitation to address you assembled in your annual national convention of the American Legion for 1941.

No American Legion convention has ever been held at a time more perilous to our national welfare and security.

The Legion was born immediately following the last war and is made up, exclusively, of men who served in that war. And we meet here in Milwaukee in the third year of another great war which has brought almost all the world, save only the Western Hemisphere, into its destructive, suicidal encirclement.

With all of Europe, save only the British Isles, under the heel of the most ruthless military conqueror the world has ever known; with from eight to ten million men now engaged in deadly struggle along a Russian battlefront 2,000 miles long—the greatest battle measured in size and casualties in world history; with an Axis partner in Asia seeking to create a Far Eastern empire by force of arms, and with all the seven seas the scene of naval conflict, I come to you as the spokesman for one of our great branches of the national defense.

Under these circumstances, you will expect me to dwell chiefly upon problems relating themselves to national defense, to national preparedness, to the maintenance of peace, and, if war comes, to the successful prosecution of the war.

I need not go beyond the pages of American history written by the American Legion itself for my inspiration for such a discussion.

Military Service For All

There are many of you here today who, with me, attended the caucus of the American Legion held in St. Louis, and the first national convention of the Legion held in Minneapolis. It was at these two conventions that this great organization was given its character. It was there the outline of its mission was formulated.

First of all, the American Legion declared that the military system of defense upon which we should rely for our national security must always be subject to civilian authority.

It declared for a national military system based on universal military obligation. We not only favored a system of universal obligation to serve in time of danger, but we also declared for a policy of universal military training so that an American citizen, when called upon to discharge this primary function of citizenship, shall be trained and equipped to meet successfully and victoriously the hazards of war.

We declared for military training in high schools and colleges and for the continuance of training camps to train and educate officers to serve capably in time of national emergency.

These general underlying principles at subsequent conventions of the American Legion were developed and elaborated until it became a matter of universal knowledge that the American Legion constituted the greatest single unit in American life devoted to the principles of American preparedness against war, and of national defense—if war came.

Despite the efforts which the American Legion and other elements have made to promote a condition of preparedness, we have fallen far short of attaining that ideal.

I allude in this not alone to a lack of industrial preparedness, mechanical readiness and economic preparation against possible emergencies, but I also refer, even more emphatically, to our failure to be mentally and spiritually ready against danger from without.

It is utterly idle to have abundant means for the production of war-making material of every kind if we fail to maintain and develop those qualities of manly courage and virility that will insure that those weapons will go into the hands of men capable of meeting a dangerous armed foe when one appears.

National morale is always more important than national industrial production even in these days of mechanized warfare.

Three Epochs of the Legion

The entire life of the American Legion has been spent in three widely different epochs.

From 1919 to 1929 we lived through a period of crass materialism. Reacting from the high sense of idealism and sacrifice which characterized our participation in the first World War, we went through a period of disillusionment, a period of abnormal and drunken prosperity, in which spiritual values of every sort, including love of country and service for the common good, were subordinated to a get-rich-quick psychology.

This was followed by a period of great depression, when, for millions, life became a daily struggle for the bare necessities and millions more subsisted on a public dole. Finally, the great depression was succeeded, during the past four or five years, by an era of world-wide war or threat of war.

During the last five years a ferocious sweep of conquest by force has enveloped the world. Centering in the Axis powers of Germany, Italy and Japan, there has grown up a concept of world conquest before which free men everywhere have stood aghast.

So contrary has it been to the whole history of human progress for hundreds of years that, at first, peoples who were threatened were incredulous. They refused to believe in the reality of danger. There were many of this type in our citizenship.

Others, who recognized the reality, thought to curb and limit its excesses by a policy of appeasement under which this group of conquerors would be permitted to sate their appetite upon near-by helpless peoples, in the hope that the contagion of war could be kept remote from their boundaries. There are also many of this group to be found in the United States.

It is dangerous to fail to recognize that both of these groups exist in our own country, and that both of these groups contribute to a lack of those virile qualities in a nation—the lack of the willingness to incur danger and the lack of the courage to face facts—which contribute to lowered standards of mental and spiritual preparedness.

It must be a part of the function of the American Legion, with its quarter century stand for national preparedness, to combat both these tendencies which make the task of providing an adequate national defense more difficult.

On the subject of national preparedness through material production there have been causes for anxiety, there have been disappointments and disillusionments, there have been mistakes and delays, but, despite it all, no nation in human history, starting from scratch, with practically no production of war material at all, has ever equaled the record in productivity that we have made in the past year!

"Tremendous Job" Is Praised

Despite the carping of ill-informed critics, and the demagogery of those who seek to make political capital out of our weaknesses and our shortcomings, a tremendous job has been done in an unbelievably short time.

This has been made possible by two things: the overall capacity of American industrial management to meet a crisis and overcome it, and the skill and loyalty of the American worker.

You have heard a vast deal about labor difficulties, and there have been many, some of them indefensible. You have not heard so much, but it has been there, nevertheless, of avarice and cupidity and unscrupulousness on the part of men trying to make money out of the national emergency; but in the sum total neither these nor labor disputes have sufficed to prevent the conversion of an industrial plant wholly designed for peace into a wartime plant for the production of military necessities at a speed on a scale that challenges comparison, anywhere, at any time!

The United States has never enjoyed more skillful, unselfish and patriotic services from any citizen in the long course of its history which have excelled those qualities of big Bill Knudsen, who has wrought this miracle—and miracle it is—of swift wartime production.

I cannot give you actual figures, because that is a military secret, but when the time comes when the story can be written of what has been done in production in the last year to provide the means to defend America, it will constitute one of the brightest pages to be found in American history, a page of which every American will always be proud, and yet it is not enough.

There is no room for complacency.

Calls Added Service Vital

Earlier, I have referred to the fact that the American Legion, at its very beginnings, declared both for a universal obligation to service on the part of every citizen, and for national, universal military training in order that the individual soldier could discharge his duties expertly and well. Only recently, under the pressure of a war situation, the threat of which to us was unmistakable, we adopted a universal service law which, in thoroughgoing accord with American Legion principles, called up the young men of the country for military training.

In the unwarranted hope and expectation that the crisis which provoked this act would pass, it was provided that, unless Congress enacted to the contrary, the period of service for training would be one year.

As the end of that year approached it was obvious that, instead of the menace decreasing, and the danger growing less, the exact opposite was true.

Thus, in order to prevent practical demobilization of the Army then under training, Congress proposed that the period of service be extended for eighteen months longer. The enactment of this amendment to the Selective Service Law was absolutely essential, in my judgment, to the safety of the country, and yet there was the gravest danger that the measure might fail to pass.

It is now entirely appropriate for me to tell you that, in this crisis, the American Legion, through its national commander and its representatives in Washington, were directly responsible for the passage of this legislation and the salvation of the half-trained American Army from dissolution by bringing to the support of the Administration forces the very votes which gave a majority for that measure.

I dare say that in the whole history of the American Legion nothing that it has done for national preparedness and national defense has counted more greatly than this achievement of the last sixty days!

As Secretary of the Navy, it naturally is on my heart to talk to you men of the Legion of that great service and of the progress we have made toward the building of a two-ocean Navy.

For achievement of this purpose, awards have been made for the construction of 332 new combatant ships. The building of these vessels, which will cost about $6,000,000,000, added to what we already possess, will give us a combined sea strength of thirty-two battleships, eighteen aircraft carriers, ninety-one cruisers, 364 destroyers and 186 submarines, a total fleet of 691 vessels of war.

Incomparably, this will be the greatest sea power with air power auxiliary ever created by any nation in the history of the world.

At the outset of the program it was estimated that it could not be given effect before 1946. I shall not attempt to tell you how much short of that time the objective will be realized, but I do dare to say to you that the whole fleet will be completed far ahead of schedule, and that every ship coming into commission is going into service months ahead of the scheduled time.

Before the end of 1941 we will have added to the fleet, commissioned and ready for service, two battleships, one aircraft carrier, eighteen destroyers and ten submarines.

We have been building for a generation a fleet air arm. The American Naval aviation is admittedly the best, most competent and most highly trained fleet air arm in the world. Part of the reason why it is the best in the world has been because it has been trained specifically to serve with the fleet.

It was our Navy which produced the first, and still the best, dive bomber in the world. It was our

Navy which brought the airplane carrier to its highest state of perfection. It was our Navy which created and developed the long-range patrol bomber—flying boats.

We have made tremendous progress in expanding the aeronautical service of the Navy. Aircraft are coming to us now in significant numbers and in every category. They are proving to be the equal or the superior of any that are produced in the world.

Against Single Air Force

These types have become so effective because they have been designed and operated as a part of the Navy. They must never be regarded as other than a part of the Navy. Our sea-air arm is not called upon to perform its many tasks as a coordinated unit. In training, in drill, in carrying out strategical and tactical problems, planes and ships must always work together.

Taking the Navy's planes away from the fleet commander and placing their command elsewhere would unquestionably cripple the fleet.

But a navy is not composed of fighting ships and planes alone. A fleet without its train of auxiliaries would be like an army without its supply and ammunition services. While we have been building combatant ships, we likewise have been building auxiliaries.

This year of 1941 will have seen added to the fleet eighty-four vessels of this type, to give us a total of 258 ships in such varied classifications as submarine tenders, ammunition ships, oilers, hospital ships and transports.

In addition, we are constructing a swarm of small patrol boats and district vessels, submarine chasers, torpedo boats, coastal mine sweepers, fuel barges and so forth. We will add almost 500 of these to our Navy during 1941, to give us a total strength in these classifications of about 1,130 craft.

Each month sees more than 10,000 new men wearing the uniform of the United States Navy. Of the loyalty, the competence and the morale of these men the United States has every reason to feel proud. No finer men, no more competent fighters, no more proficient sailors ever went "down to the sea in ships" than the men who keep the American flag afloat in the seven seas today.

Keen as you men are for the national defense, and powerful as you have been in supplying support for that cause, let me emphasize to you two things: No war of significant proportions can now be fought anywhere in the world save by those nations which have access to the seas.

Raw materials out of which the complicated instruments of war are now wrought come from the four corners of the earth.

Sea Power Is Called Decisive

No continent has a monopoly of them and, therefore, those nations which possess sea power are the nations in the future into whose hands will be entrusted the peace of the world.

We now know how futile it is to place our trust in written promises to foresake war as an instrument of national policy. Promises to keep the peace are just so much worthless paper to be scrapped when some ruthless, acquisitive leaders of greedy and warlike people feel so disposed.

The only peace in which the world can put any confidence, for at least one hundred years to come, is the kind of peace that can be enforced by the peace-loving nations of the world. It will not be sufficient just to love peace if these nations are to support the cause of peace effectively.

It is imperatively necessary to have not only the will to peace but the power to enforce it!

In such a world as that of today, sea power for America is more vital, more essential, than ever before in its history. We are on the way to achieve that power! We shall soon have the fleet that will make us the greatest maritime power the world has ever known, and we have the materials, the skills and the capacity to maintain that leadership indefinitely!

This will only be achieved, however, if the American people learn, in these crucial years, how needful for their own security and welfare is sea power, and if they determine out of a love for peace, not for war, to maintain that sea power in the years that lie ahead.

SEP 16 1941

As to "Attitude" on War

We hear a great deal these days concerning the attitude of the American people toward war. There has never been any secret nor any division in this matter.

The American people are not warlike. They are peace-minded. They have no national objectives, or policies, which must be promoted by war.

In any choice between war and peace, all but a lunatic few would, of course, vote for peace. It is utterly foolish to talk about a plebiscite on war. It is never true that a people may choose between peace and war, unless they are satisfied with a peace on terms dictated by an aggression.

If we want an honest test of sentiment and really desire to know the mind of the American people with respect to their own defense, and the defense of their rights, the questions we should ask them in the light of the present war situation might be broached in this fashion:

Do you want to lose your liberties?

Do you want security for your family and for your property?

Are the vital interests of this country in peril?

If your liberties are in danger, if your family and its security are in peril, if the vital interests of the United States are threatened, will you surrender them or will you fight for them?

If you put the question that way, and that is the way it is being put, what percentage of the American people, think you, would answer negatively?

The answer would be in an affirmative that would shock the confidence even of a dictator like Hitler. You could expect no other answer from Americans. If the time ever comes when such a question is not answered affirmatively, if under such circumstances the American people do not oppose war, rather than surrender, then this country of ours would cease to be the country we have always known and will become a land occupied by cowardly vassals, abject subjects of a more virile race of men.

Must Fight for Liberties

You cannot preserve liberties such as we enjoy, save by willingness to fight for them if need be.

A worthy, righteous peace is the fruit of effort. You don't get peace, you don't retain peace just by being peaceable. You get it, if it is worth having, by a constant willingness to work and sacrifice and risk for it.

You have it now. The people in the United States have it now because other men of other generations have been willing, when necessary, to fight for the conditions that make peace possible. If you think by just keeping peaceable and never going to war that you can get a just peace in this world, you are wrong

That is the one way in which to surely lose peace.

The currency with which you pay for peace is made up of manly courage, fearless virility, readiness to serve justice and honor at any cost, and a mind and a heart attuned to sacrifice.

A peace temporarily enjoyed by a people without these qualities is but a prelude to certain disaster. That nation that regards the avoidance of war as the highest good regardless of the price exacted for peace in its honor, its rights, its vital interests, is a nation both wretched and contemptible and cannot long endure.

This does not mean that we must not exhaust every honorable means to foster and promote peace, but we must be sure that we seek and enjoy a righteous peace, for those who put peace before righteousness, and justice, and liberty do infinite harm and always fail of their purpose ultimately.

We must also remember that it is only the strong who can promote and preserve a righteous peace. When war threatens and human liberties are at stake, when attempts at world-wide dominion are to the fore, we must be sure that the world understands that we do not withhold our hand through weakness or timidity.

Quotes Theodore Roosevelt

Idle and futile is the voice of the weak nation, or the craven nation, when it clamors for peace.

At this point I should like to quote from a former President, Theodore Roosevelt, who, like Franklin D. Roosevelt, was a courageous, virile champion of just and righteous peace, and a foe of those who put peace before righteousness. Theodore Roosevelt once said:

"Peace is a great good, and doubly harmful, therefore, is the attitude of those who advocate it in terms that would make it synonymous with selfish and cowardly shrinking from warring against the existence of evil. The wisest and most far-seeing champions of peace will ever remember that, in the first place, to be good it must be righteous, for an unrighteous and cowardly peace may be worse than any war; and in the second place, that it can often be obtained only at the cost of war."

A powerful national defense, especially on the high seas, is a prerequisite of a peace-promoting, justice-loving America. During the last half dozen years it has been clear to almost any man that a powerful fleet and a powerful air force, neither of which can be extemporized, are vital essentials to our national security in a time of great world turbulence.

Months ago, the American Government, acting through Congress by overwhelming majorities of both houses, adopted the Lend-Lease Bill. Subsequently, by even greater majorities, both houses of Congress appropriated $7,000,000,000 to make our aid to Britain and China and those fighting Hitler effective.

Our aid contemplated not only the manufacture of every form of munitions and war-making material, but it also included the repair of British-men-of-war in American navy yards. All this was not only officially made the policy of the country by Presidential and Congressional action, but it was overwhelmingly endorsed by the American public.

No Doubt on Nazi Intentions

The German Government declared officially that it would attempt to prevent the delivery of lend-lease material by sinking every vessel bearing such materials to British ports. This declaration of the German Government was positive and left no room for doubt of German intentions.

To effectuate our policy and to meet this German challenge, our government has created a naval and air patrol over the waters of the North Atlantic crossing, and, as a measure of additional defense, has occupied Iceland as an air and naval base. These measures have been in effect since July 7 of this year.

Immediately, shipping losses over that route dropped dramatically. August losses were lower than those of any month for the past year. Continuously since July 7, over that route, American naval vessels have been providing escort for cargo ships flying the American and Icelandic flags. The safe delivery of lend-lease articles in British ports reached an all-time high.

The bridge of ships over which supplies were being transported to England, adequate to make a successful invasion by Germany highly improbable, was being rapidly created. Hitler and the Nazis were palpably losing the Battle of the Atlantic.

If they did not swiftly take measures to break down this bridge the defeat of England, the prime purpose of their war, would become impossible. If they did make such an all-out effort, they would add the United States Navy to their already too numerous foes.

It was a grim choice, but Nazi action in the past few days has left little room for doubt of what they will do.

Cites Attack on the Greer

A German submarine encountered an American destroyer engaged in carrying mail to our outpost on Iceland. The encounter came in broad daylight and the American destroyer carried identification marks which left no possible room for doubt as to its nationality.

At close range the submarine discharged three torpedoes aimed at the American destroyer. The Greer evaded them and promptly attacked the submarine with depth charges. After the second depth-charge attack all contact with the submarine was lost by the destroyer.

Immediately upon receipt of this news, the Navy Department gave the public every fact in its possession, based upon the dispatch direct from the commander of the American destroyer. The German Government countered by saying that the American destroyer had fired the first shot.

The whole issue is far too broad to make the question of who fired first of great importance. I allude to it chiefly because it offered a chance for that curious organization known as "the America First Committee" to tell the American public that, in its judgment, it was more likely the German U-boat commander was telling the truth than the American naval officer who commanded the Greer.

That is an important fact for the American public to digest: that we have in our midst an organization of American citizens who, on a question of veracity, declared publicly that they prefer to accept the word of a piratical murderer of women and children on the high seas, engaged in a type of warfare denounced by every civilized nation in the world, rather than accept the word of an American commander of an American warship.

Navy Is Told to Get Axis Ships

Regardless of this minor controversy, there is happily no doubt of the American answer. You heard it last Thursday night when the President of the United States, in his capacity as Commander in Chief of the American Navy, announced to the world that, come what may, American aid to Britain was to be delivered where it could be used to help in the fight against Hitler in maximum degree.

Beginning tomorrow, the American Navy will provide protection as adequate as we can make it for ships of every flag carrying lend-aid supplies between the American continent and the waters adjacent to Iceland.

The Navy is ordered to capture or destroy by every means at its disposal Axis-controlled submarines or surface raiders encountered in these waters.

That is our answer to Mr. Hitler.

A great American President, the second in the long line of men who have filled that office, President Adams, ordered the American Navy to make the Caribbean Sea safe for American ships, and the Navy did so.

His successor, President Jefferson, ordered the American Navy to destroy the corsairs of the Barbary Coast in the Mediterranean, and the Navy accomplished that mission.

President Andrew Jackson gave the American Navy of his time a similar mission in the Malayan Archipelago of the Far East, and the pirates were destroyed.

And now President Roosevelt, under far more menacing conditions, exercises the same constitutional power as that exercised by Adams, by Jefferson and by Jackson.

From its beginning the American Navy has fought for the freedom of the seas. It is fighting for that vital principle now, and the officers and men who are making this gallant fight to uphold this principle in the far reaches of the North Atlantic and elsewhere have the unquestioned and loyal support of a substantially unanimous American pub-

Biddle Ruling Permits U. S. Ships To Carry Arms, Ammunitions And Passengers In Many Combat Zones

Navy Will Guard All Cargoes

By WILLIAM F. KEAR

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—President Roosevelt discussed revision of the Neutrality Act with congressional leaders today while Secretary Knox announced that the Navy henceforth would guard all Lend-Lease cargoes as far as Iceland.

Against this background, foreshadowing further moves by the United States against German U-boats and raiders, the President sent his second report on Lend-Lease operations to Congress showing that $171,191,946 worth of supplies had been transferred to Great Britain and other nations within the last three months. Prior to that period, $75,202,426 worth had been transferred.

Knox's declaration, apparently indicating that American warships would convoy British and other cargo ships most of the way across the Atlantic, was made at the American Legion convention in Milwaukee in these words:

"Beginning tomorrow, the American Navy will provide protection as adequate as we can make it for ships of every flag carrying lend-aid supplies between the American continent and the waters adjacent to Iceland.

CHALLENGE TO AXIS

"These ships are ordered to capture or destroy by every means at their disposal Axis-controlled submarines or surface raiders encountered in these waters.

"That is our answer to Mr. Hitler's declaration that he will try to sink every ship his vessels encounter on the routes leading from the United States to British ports."

The extent of the Neutrality Act revisions being considered by the President and the congressional leaders was not disclosed and speaker Rayburn said that no conclusions had yet been reached.

Revision of the law would be necessary, however, if the administration contemplates arming American merchant vessels. There also was some speculation that repeal might be sought of the ban on the entry of American ships into combat zones.

$190,447,670 Cargoes

The President's Lend-Lease report showed $190,447,670 of lend-lease cargoes actually exported from the time the law was passed last March up to Aug. 31 but added that along with these shipments went additional supplies under contracts placed by Britain and other countries from their own resources.

"The true measure of the volume of war supplies moving from our shores," Mr. Roosevelt said, "is reflected in our total exports. Thus, since the beginning of the war, about $4,400,000,000 worth of goods have been exported to the British Empire."

Of the original $7,000,000,000 lend-lease appropriation, $3,,555,-587,895 has been obligated—that is contracts let—and $6,281,237,-241 allocated for specific purposes.

"Thus," the report said, "ninety per cent of the appropriation has been allocated on the basis of specific requisitions and has passed from the stage of planning into active procurement operations. Within six weeks no funds should remain to meet requests which already total much in excess of unallocated balances."

Rayburn disclosed, after the White House meeting, that the President would send a request for further lend-lease appropriations to Congress Thursday. Informed sources said the amount would be $6,000,000,000.

The $190,447,670 figure on actual lend-lease exports was made up in large part of $90,117,587 worth of food—millions of pounds of cheese, eggs, milk, meat and beans. It included only $6,016,145 of aircraft and aeronautical material, and $28,163,729 of tanks and other vehicles.

Moreover, it did not include $78,-169,377.85 already actually spent for completed defense services and projects, including $15,211,683.89 for reconditioning warships and other defense articles. Mr. Roosevelt mentioned the repair of the British battleship Malaya and the aircraft carrier Illustrious as "outstanding examples of this naval assistance."

In reporting on the allocation of the $7,000,000,000 appropriation, the report showed that the biggest chunk—$2,027,398,629 — had been earmarked for aircraft and aeronautical material, of which $1,-286,175,700 was for bombers. Of this total allocation, $1,347,140,-839.54 has been obligated and $19,-297,791.66 actually spent.

70% To Britain

Although 70 per cent of the exports went to the United Kingdom, lend-lease aid also is being made available to China, Brazil, the Dominican Republic and the so-called "governments in exile" —Poland, Belgium, The Netherlands, Norway, Greece and Jugoslavia.

Apparently in reply to recent reports that some lend-lease funds had been misspent, the report said that "all items not essential to the successful prosecution of the war effort are eliminated."

"The governments receiving Lend-Lease aid have been scrupulous to limit their requests to vital needs," it added. "No requests for such items as living or administrative expenses of any foreign purchasing commission or agency have been made."

The report showed that $5,-058,574 had been allocated for administrative expenses and $206,-424.74 spent.

Mr. Roosevelt said that "Americans may be justly proud of the way in which the tools they have forged are standing up when tested under fire."

"An American-made flying boat spotted the Bismarck," he continued, "and American-made bombers blasted the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau, and they have helped make possible the great raids of the R.A.F. in the battle of Germany.

"In the wars of the Western desert, fighter planes from our factories are in the vanguard of the attack and hundreds of our tanks stand ready to help rout the Nazi scourge from the African continent."

On the task of building "the arsenal of democracy," the President said, "we are now engaged with ever-increasing vigor."

"Planes, tanks, guns and ships have begun to flow from our factories and yards," he concluded "and the flow will accelerate from day to day, until the stream becomes a river, and the river a torrent, engulfing this totalitarian tyranny which seeks to dominate the world."

U. S. RELAXES OLD RULING ON WAR SHIPMENTS

American Craft Can Now Carry Arms To Many Parts Of British Empire

Biddle Decides Goods May Now Go To Several Sections Of Africa

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 15—The State Department tonight announced a ruling by Francis Biddle, the new Attorney General, permitting American ships to carry arms, munitions and passengers to many areas of the far-flung British Empire.

Under the ruling, the ships carrying war implements may go to all parts of the British Empire other than the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa and areas included in combat zones delineated by the President.

Under the Neutrality Act, when the President finds a state of war to exist, American ships must not carry arms and munitions to the belligerents. On November 4, 1939, the President issued a proclamation recognizing a state of war between Germany on the one hand and the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa on the other.

Asked About Other Areas

Three weeks ago the Attorney General was asked whether the terms of the proclamation applied also to British overseas areas not expressly enumerated.

Biddle concluded that the terms of the document included only England, Wales, Scotland and northern Ireland, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa.

The State Department officials said this meant that American ships could carry arms and ammunition to such British colonies as British East Africa, including Kenya Colony, and British Somaliland; British West Africa, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Aden and Perim, near the Arabian coast, and Sokotra, at the entrance to the Red Sea.

Where Else It Can Go

It also meant, the officials added, that arms-bearing American vessels can go to Burma, Malaya, the Straits Settlements, the Federated Malay States, Briish North Borneo, Brunel and Sarawak, i nthe South Pacific.

Such shipments also may go to the Fiji and Pacific islands owned by the British and these areas in the Western Hemisphere: Bermuda, Falkland Islands, British Guiana, British Honduras, British West Indies, Newfoundland and Labrador.

The ruling, a department announcement said, does not permit such shipments to Presidential-proclaimed combat areas. Officials indicated they felt the chief importance of tonight's announcement was to answer many queries as to where American vessels may and may not carry implements of war in connection with the aid-to-Britain program.

"A Term Of Art"

After citing numerous authorities, Biddle declared:

"The foregoing discussion demonstrates that the term 'United Kingdom' is a term of art with a well-settled and precise meaning. No contrary purposes appearing, well-settled canons of constructions require that the term as used in the proclamation should be given this meaning.

"For the reasons given it is my opinion that the term 'United Kingdom' as used in the proclamation of November 4, 1939, is properly to be construed as including only England, Wales, Scotland and northern Ireland and not the overseas territories and possessions of the British Empire."

"Accordingly," the State Department announced, "transportation of passengers, any articles or materials, including arms, ammunition, or implements of war, to the overseas colonies and possessions of Great Britain which are not in a combat area and which are not specifically enumerated in the proclamation of November 4, 1939, is not prohibited by the Neutrality Act of 1939."

Senators Weighing Proposal To Study Greer-U-Boat Clash

Navy Meanwhile Checks Up Reports That Nazi Raider Is Operating in Vicinity of Galapagos Islands.

SEP 16 1941

Washington, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Amid reports that a German raider was operating in the Pacific approaches to the Panama Canal, the Senate Naval Committee will be asked to decide whether there should be an investigation of the North Atlantic shooting clash between the U. S. S. Greer and a U-boat.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts, chairman, who summoned the committee to meet Wednesday, said he would ask for the questioning of Secretary of the Navy Knox and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, about the Greer incident—one of the recent series which led to President Roosevelt's shoot-on-sight speech Thursday night.

"I think the Naval Committee should look into the matter," the Senator told reporters. "It is the type of incident which might be used to involve this country in war. Congress and the country are entitled to know the facts and I shall ask the committee to conduct an open hearing."

Meanwhile, the navy was believed to be checking reports that a Nazi raider was in the general vicinity of the Galapagos Islands off the coast of Ecuador—some 1,000 miles west of the Pacific entrance to the canal—and was preying on merchant shipping.

The location indicated, involving the possessions of a hemisphere nation, apparently would fall within the "defensive waters" area which Mr. Roosevelt mentioned in his speech when he warned Axis warcraft that they entered those stretches of the sea at their own peril.

Information Called Vague.

The navy treated the raider reports in a very gingerly manner and would give no hint what was being done about them. Although a spokesman described the information as unofficial and vague, he refused to divulge its source. However, New York shipping circles for days have been hearing of a raider in that general vicinity, and these sources say that she has sunk one Dutch freighter and given chase to others.

The Pacific was a fertile hunting ground for German raiders in the world war, and to a somewhat lesser extent in the present conflict, one of the most celebrated of the raiders being Count Felix von Luckner, the bluff and picturesque Sea Devil who in the world war bagged twenty-five vessels before his capture.

In the current conflict, too, raiders have been active in the Pacific, but to a somewhat lesser extent. The Von Luckner legend bobbed up in January, with reports that he was once more prowling the Pacific, sinking British ships, but these were later questioned. From time to time, too, there have been charges from Allied quarters that the Nazi raiders in the Pacific were secretly being supplied by Japanese sources.

Surface Raider Likely.

If reports of a raider near the Galapagos are true, the opinion of informed circles here was that she would prove to be a surface raider. As far as is known, Germany has no submarines of the extreme range necessary for effective operations in the vast reaches of the Pacific. The possibility that one or more U-boats might be operating with a "mother ship" or from a secret base was largely discounted.

Chairman Walsh asked the naval committee to consider two resolutions—one by Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, and another by Senator Clark, Democratic, of Missouri, both opponents of administration foreign policy. Mr. Nye's resolution proposed that the committee examine the log of the Greer and question its officers. Senator Clark proposed only that a copy of the Greer's log be submitted to the committee.

President Roosevelt and the Navy Department have stated that the Greer dropped depth bombs after a submarine had tried to sink it with torpedoes. A Berlin communique contended that the destroyer fired first.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his speech Thursday, declared: "In spite of what Hitler's propaganda bureau has invented, and in spite of what any American obstructionist organizations may prefer, I tell you the blunt fact that the German submarine fired first upon this American destroyer without warning, and with deliberate design to sink her."

Senator Nye, however, told reporters today he was "satisfied that the inquiry, if made, will reveal that the United States more or less provoked the Greer incident."

From Senator Connally, Democrat, of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, came this statement:

"The Senate won't pass any fool resolution such as that suggested by Senator Nye. The Senate will not demand the log of the Greer. That is a matter of high naval and military importance and the Senate is not going snooping to gratify the desires of those who desire to make a little political capital out of their beliefs."

Nazi Sea War Stand Unclarified

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 15—The German press and radio continued today a series of bitter attacks on President Roosevelt's foreign policy but failed to clarify the Reich's position with regard to his warning to Axis warships to stay clear of American defense waters.

Nazi military commentators repeatedly emphasized, however, that lengthening nights would be more conducive to effective submarine operations in the North Atlantic and dwelt at length on successes credited to undersea raiders during the past week.

There was considerable speculation in the press on what President Roosevelt meant by the defense waters which he said in his broadcast last Thursday Axis warships would enter at their own peril.

Der Montag expressed the opinion that the phrase meant "as far as the seas reach," and said the President probably would try to force revision of the United States neutrality law and the arming of American merchant ships.

Axis Free To Hit U. S. In Any Sea, Says Gayda

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 15—Virginio Gayda contended today that President Roosevelt's orders to the United States Navy, without defining American defensive waters, gave Axis warships "complete freedom of action" to fire at United States ships or fight in any sea.

The editor of Il Giornale D'Italia again charged that United States submarines were active in the Mediterranean.

(Gayda asserted last July 24 that there was "suspicion more than well founded" that American submarines were operating with Britain's Mediterranean fleet, but no basis for this ever has been given and the assertion has been made only by Gayda.)

"All Waters Suitable"

Roosevelt may delay a declaration of war by the United States, Gayda said, but "Germany and Italy today find themselves forced with the preannouncement of American aggression without knowing where and when it will commence."

"Since no limit has been announced for aggressive action of American ships against the Axis powers, one may consider all waters of the world are suitable for American aggression," he added.

"Since President Roosevelt has warned that American ships sighting Axis ships will open fire immediately without waiting for offensive action, it is evident that Axis ships for legitimate defense must be prepared to attack American ships on sight and with these two premises, Axis forces from today on acquire the right, legitimatized by Roosevelt's declared policy, of complete freedom of action in the battle of the Atlantic, the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and other seas useful in war."

Text of Roosevelt's Report on Lend-Lease Operations

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (AP).—President Roosevelt's letter to Congress, transmitting his second report on the $7,000,000,000 lend-lease program, follows:

THE PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE:

THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

I am submitting this report pursuant to Section 5 (B) of the lend-lease act of March 11, 1941, which provides that the President report to the Congress every ninety days on the operations under that act.

The lend-lease act was passed by the Congress just 183 days ago. One hundred and sixty-seven days ago the Congress appropriated $7,000,000,000 to carry out our national policy of giving every possible material assistance to the countries resisting aggression.

The effective expenditure of this large sum in furtherance of our announced policy has presented tasks of large proportions. We have surveyed the needs of the countries we are aiding. We have correlated this program of aid with the procurement programs of our own Army and Navy. We have arranged with our industries for the production of the great quantities of material involved.

'Now Far Along'

The War Department, the Navy Department, the Treasury Department, the Agriculture Department and the Maritime Commission are the agencies principally charged with the actual procurement of the supplies. They are now far along with their task.

Over $6,250,000,000 of the $7,000,000,000 appropriated have now been allocated, upon the recommendation of these agencies, for specific materials and services. Their procurement machinery has been constantly at work, locating producers and placing contracts. Over $3,500,000,000 of legal commitments have already been made. Contracts will soon be placed for the entire $7,000,000,000 appropriation.

Contracts have been placed and work has started on nearly a billion dollars of bombardment aircraft. New ways have been started and work is in progress for about $500,000,000 of new merchant shipping. New facilities to speed the production of guns, ammunition and other defense articles have been started under contracts totaling about $262,000,000. More than $430,000,000 has been allocated, and more than $250,000,000 has been obligated for the purchase of milk, eggs and other agricultural products.

Daily the aid being rendered is growing. Through the month of August the total dollar value of defense articles transferred and defense services rendered, plus expenditures for other lend-lease purposes, amounted to $486,721,838.

Food and steel and machinery and guns and planes have been supplied in increasing quantities. Agricultural commodities worth $110,606,550 have been transferred to the countries we are aiding. We have transferred to the United Kingdom more than 44 million pounds of cheese, more than 54 million pounds of eggs, more than 89 million pounds of cured pork, more than 110 million pounds of dried beans, and more than 114 million pounds of lard. We have transferred to them more than 3 million barrels of gasoline and oil. We have sent them many tanks.

Merchant and naval ships and other transportation equipment are being transferred in growing amounts.

SEP 16 1941

Vessels Chartered

A substantial number of cargo ships and tankers have been chartered to the use of those countries whose defense is vital to our own. Our yards are repairing allied merchant ships. We are equipping allied ships to protect them from mines; and we are arming them, as much as possible, against aircraft, submarines, and raiders.

We have also, by repairing and outfitting their warships, helped the British and allied navies keep clear the vital sea lanes upon which depends continued resistance to Axis piracy. The repair of the battleship Malaya and the aircraft carrier Illustrious are outstanding examples of this naval assistance.

Over the whole range of technical and material assistance required by modern warfare, we are, under the lend-lease program, rendering effective help. Important defense information is being supplied to Britain and the other nations fighting the Axis powers. Our technicians are instructing the allies in the assembly, operation, and maintenance of the tools coming from our factories. Across the United States and across Africa, our plane-ferry service is linking the arsenals of America with democracy's outposts in the Middle East. On our airfields, thousands of British pilots are being, and will continue to be, trained, and already we are preparing a similar program to help the Chinese.

We have supplied equipment for the Yunnan-Burma Railroad and for the Burma Road in order to speed the flow of arms and materials to the heroic Chinese people. In addition to materials of war, we are furnishing China with medicine and technical assistance to fight the ravages of malaria. A military mission has also been dispatched to China in connection with the supplying of lend-lease aid.

Speed Up to Industry

The $7,000,000,000 appropriated for purchasing defense articles has been available less than six months, and actual transfers from these funds have necessarily been limited to articles which could be purchased in a finished state or produced in that time. The speed with which future lend-lease transfers will be made depends largely on the speed with which our industries deliver the goods. The rate of our production must be accelerated, and every step to achieve that end must and will be taken.

These lend-lease deliveries are not, of course, the only materials which have been moving from our shores to the countries resisting aggression. Prior to the lend-lease act, large contracts were placed here by Great Britain and by other countries from their own resources. Deliveries under these contracts are moving across the sea along with lend-lease articles. The true measure of the volume of war supplies moving from our shores is reflected in our total exports. Thus, since the beginning of the war, about $4,400,000,000 worth of goods have been exported to the British Empire.

Figures alone cannot show the significance of our help. Americans may be justly proud of the way in which the tools they have forged are standing up when tested under fire. An American-made flyingboat spotted the Bismarck and American-made bombers blasted the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau, and they have helped make possible the great raids of the Royal Air Force in the battle of Germany. In the wars of the western desert, fighter planes from our factories are in the vanguard of the attack and hundreds of our tanks stand ready to help rout the Nazi scourge from the African Continent.

The British Empire has received the bulk of our aid. But we have also extended assistance to the many other countries engaged in the same struggle. China and the Dutch East Indies are receiving ever-increasing quantities of supplies. The exiled governments of the countries under the Nazi yoke are sharing in the program. We are already outfitting Polish troops who are training in Canada for action overseas. We are also providing, directly or indirectly, aid for the Dutch, the Norwegians, the Greeks, the Belgians and the Yugoslavs. We know that every group which yields to or collaborates with the Nazis makes our own defense that much more didficult. Likewise, each group that resists Nazi aggression helps to keep the war from our own hemisphere.

Hemisphere Defended

The defense of the Western Hemisphere has been a prime consideration in our lend-lease program. Not only are we helping the European countries which stand athwart the Nazi path toward the Western Hemisphere, but we are also giving direct lend-lease aid to the countries of this hemisphere. We are strengthening Iceland, where our troops and ships now stand guard over the approaches of the North Atlantic, and we have already embarked upon a comprehensive program of material aid to the countries of Central and South America to strengthen the common defense of our good neighborhood.

The gallant resistance of the Russian people has been of enormous help to all peoples resisting the Nazi war machine. It has completely upset the Nazi time schedule and has destroyed the myth of Nazi invincibility. We are using the energies of our government to make available supplies which are urgently needed by Russia. By speeding deliveries and by arranging the quickest transportation of American materials, we are moving to strengthen the important Russian front. The Soviet government's purchases here are being made with its own funds through its regular purchasing agency.

The people of the United States know that we cannot live in a world dominated by Hitlerism. They realize that there can be no real peace, no secure freedom, until we have destroyed the evil forces which seek to work us woe. Through their chosen representatives they have declared a firm and unalterable policy to build up an impregnable defense for this hemisphere, and to furnish unstinted material aid to the countries fighting against Nazi aggression and tyranny.

Not Act of Charity

We are not furnishing this aid as an act of charity or sympathy, but as a means of defending America. We offer it because we know that piecemeal resistance to aggression is doomed to failure; because the ruthless war machine which now bestrides the Continent of Europe can be combated only by the combined efforts of all free peoples and at all strategic points where the aggressor may strike.

The lend-lease program is no mere side issue to our program of arming for defense. It is an integral part, a keystone, in our great national effort to preserve our national security for generations to come, by crushing the disturbers of our peace.

"Tools of Final Victory"

To those peoples who are gallantly shedding their blood in the front lines of this struggle, we must offer not only a shield but a sword, not merely the means to permit the stalemate of protracted defense, but the tools of a final and total victory.

This country has evolved the greatest and most efficient industrial system in history. It is our task to turn the workshops of our industry into mighty forges of war—to outbuild the aggressors in every category of modern arms. Only in this way can we build the arsenal of democracy.

On this task we are now engaged with ever-increasing vigor. Planes, tanks, guns, and ships have begun to flow from our factories and yards, and the flow will accelerate from day to day, until the stream becomes a river, and the river a torrent, engulfing this totalitarian tyranny which seeks to dominate the world.

Five Loaded Transports In Toll Claimed In Baltic And Arctic Fights

Air Force Blasts Black Sea Ports To Discourage German Thrust There

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Tuesday, Sept. 16—The sinking of eight German vessels, including five troop-jammed transports, in the repulse of a Nazi landing attempt on the Baltic island of Oesel and in a clash in Arctic waters was announced today by the Russians.

In the biggest of the two engagements the Soviet Information Bureau said four transports and two destroyers were sent to the bottom by Soviet naval, air and shore units which smashed the Germans attacking Oesel, an island off Estonia where Russia left strong forces after withdrawing from the Estonian mainland.

The landing force was wiped out, the communique said, and two transports and several torpedo boats among several others badly damaged.

Arctic Clash Off Petsamo

In the Arctic, off the port of Petsamo, still another transport was declared sunk along with an escort vessel. The Oesel clash occurred Saturday, but the date of the Arctic sinkings was not given.

Apparently out to smash any German effort to launch large-scale operations in the Black Sea on the south, the Red air force heavily pounded Constanta and Sulina, off the Rumanian coast, and Galati, Danubian oil port, Saturday.

The defenders of Odessa, strongly supported by sailors of the Black Sea fleet, were reported to have smashed German and Rumanian efforts to breach the besieged city's defenses.

Say Foe Depletes Garrisons

On the zigzagging Western front it was declared officially yesterday that the Germans are losing control of the occupied Russian areas by stripping their rear garrisons to fill gaps caused by enormous losses on the fighting lines.

Today's morning communique confined its report of Western front fighting to its stock phrase—stubborn battles all along the line—while last night's official announcement stressed the situation back of the lines.

Red guerrilla activity, it was declared, was becoming so much more effective that skeleton Nazi forces occupying fifty-two communities had been annihilated and several German expeditions sent to punish the raiders had been forced to return to base with great losses, leaving the guerrillas in control.

Name Specific Areas

Listing specific areas where Russian irregulars had been active, the communique reported that in the Polessye region alone guerrillas had blown up 20 ammunition dumps, 46 oil depots, 115 provision transports and 47 supply transports.

German garrisons withdrawn for forced marches to the front, it was added, were in many cases "replaced by village elders recruited from among former Kulkas, white guards and criminals. No sooner had the German garrison left the district centers and neighboring villages than guerrillas began to eradicate the Fascist appointees. Some of them fled; many were shot."

This, and official claims that German artillery was not the master of every battlefield, formed the principal picture offered during the day by Russian sources.

Leningrad Defense Cited

The available information was to the effect that the Soviet army of the northwest still was successfully defending Leningrad fortifications.

As to the south, where yesterday the Soviet command acknowledged the fall of the railway junction of Kremenchung, 175 miles below Kiev, there was little news.

(An authoritative quarter in London declared that the Russian evacuation of Kremenchung and a developing German thrust into the Perekop area to the south apparently had laid open the River Don, with its great industrial basin, to a German thrust which would meet no natural obstacles of consequence.

(Perekop lies fifty miles southeast of the lower Dnieper river on the narrow land neck connecting the Russian Crimea with the mainland.)

Nazi Garrisons Stripped.

Moscow, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The Red Army reported today that Germany's heavy losses in the fighting line was forcing her to strip garrisons from many occupied points at the rear and use them for front re-enforcements, thus giving greater rein to the Russian guerrillas slashing at the Nazi rearguard.

Already, the communique said, the hit-and-run fighters have "completely destroyed Fascist garrisons in fifty-two populated points."

"Several punitive detachments, sent by the German command to suppress the guerrilla movement, were severely battered and returned without effecting their purpose," it said.

Whole garrisons have been withdrawn at many places, the communique went on.

"German commandants of these villages were replaced by village elders recruited from among former kulaks (rich peasant land holders), white guards and criminals," it added.

"When the garrisons leave, the communique said, the guerrillas sweep in to "eradicate the Fascist appointees."

The first German crossing of the great Dnieper River south of besieged Kiev was admitted today by Russia in an official report that the rail junction of Kremenchug, 175 miles below the Ukraine capital, had fallen to the Nazis after many days of fierce fighting.

[The Germans, however, some time ago claimed they crossed the lower Dnieper to take Zaporozhe, 140 miles southeast of Kremenchug.]

Farther south, the Red armies were reported holding firm against other German attempts to cross the Dnieper, while to the north great fighting was reported over Leningrad and on the land and sea approaches to Russia's second city. The Russians said 100 planes fought in the latest duel over Leningrad, with the Germans fleeing after losing seventeen machines.

The Soviet afternoon communique again reported merely that the Red Army fought the invaders along the entire front last night.

Just when Kremenchug, on the east bank of the Dnieper, was abandoned to the Germans was not told nor was it indicated whether the Germans had made progress in their evident attempt to extend the southern jaw of a wide pincer movement against Kiev.

Kiev in Greater Danger.

The loss of Kremenchug apparently increased the danger facing Kiev, for only last Friday the Russians acknowledged the evacuation of Chernigov, a city eighty miles north of Kiev between the Dnieper and Desna rivers.

SEP 16 1941

The movements of the German armies north and south of Kiev indicated they were trying to meet behind the city, which still was fiercely resisting the Nazis as the war went into its thirteenth week.

The fighting on the central front saw increased Russian pressure in the direction of burned and wrecked Smolensk, a key point on the road Napoleon took to Moscow.

The 129th anniversary yesterday of the occupation of Moscow and the Kremlin by Napoleon found the Germans still roughly some 200 miles west of the Russian capital—and their campaign already had exceeded Napoleon's by two days.

Russians Near Smolensk.

Red Army forces which only last week recaptured Yelnya, fifty miles southeast of Smolensk, were fighting today near Yartzevo, twenty-seven miles northeast of the city on the Minsk-Smolensk-Moscow railway, Russian reports said. It was said that some Soviet troops were within twelve miles of Smolensk, with Russian artillery shelling German positions.

Red Army artillery also was playing a major part in the defenses of Leningrad.

Soviet dispatches said the guns were firing without stopping to counter the heaviest blows of the Germans. The loss of several settlements on the bank of the river "T" on the approaches to Leningrad was acknowledged, but the Russians said three settlements were recaptured.

The first German attempt to push into Soviet waters off Leningrad was beaten off, a Leningrad dispatch to the Government newspaper Izvestia said. It related that one destroyer was sunk by the Red fleet and another by aerial bombs, while an auxiliary cruiser was driven from the action in the Gulf of Finland.

A report of guerrilla activity behind the German lines said "Olga," a former parachute-jump instructor, had killed fourteen German officers and men with an automatic she captured from the Germans.

The early morning communique said an army formation commanded by a Col. Shtykov killed more than 10,000 German soldiers and officers and destroyed nearly 200 tanks, hundreds of trucks, more than 100 guns and some 500 motorcycles.

RUSSIAN TANK BLOWS HALTED, BERLIN CLAIMS

SEP 16 1941

Germans Declared Pushing Yard By Yard Against Leningrad

Aerial Threat Far East Of Dnieper River Also Reported

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 15—The German armies claimed tonight they had beaten off repeated Russian counter-attacks supported by heavy tanks in a great and continuing struggle yard by yard for possession of powerful modern fortifications of Leningrad.

More than 500 motor vehicles were reported destroyed in a new German aerial thrust east of the Dnieper river, that is hundreds of miles south of the Leningrad front.

DNB, reporting on broad scale action of the Luftwaffe, said also that a Russian armored train and six transport trains were halted by bombardment and various artillery positions knocked out of action.

Oesel Island Raid Reported

Ranging over northern waters, German airmen also "effectively attacked" Red army forces still clinging to Oesel Island, at the mouth of the Gulf of Riga, the news agency said.

The semi-circular line of men and steel seeking to throttle Leningrad, second city of Russia, steadily pressed inward, the high command said, but was meeting the most stubborn resistance from inner Red positions which were pictured in other accounts as obstacles fully as formidable as any ever breasted by German forces.

Against numerous Soviet bunkers in great depth—some bunkers had steel and concrete walls six feet thick and were equipped with revolving gun cupolas—the Germans hurled their heaviest artillery, tanks and bombers and sent crack infantry surging in behind.

Divisions Claims 50 Bunkers

Now and again, German shells cleared a position and foot soldiers moved in a few yards closer to the city.

A single German division reported it had broken fifty bunkers. North of Leningrad German-Finnish forces claimed to have knocked out 150.

Of Soviet counter-action there was no detail beyond the official report that Red troops supported by big tanks had charged the German lines again and again, the counter-attack each time collapsing.

At some points, informed sources said, German troops have pushed to with fifteen miles of the center of Leningrad.

Compared To Berlin Map

This source laid a map of the city of Berlin over a map of the city of Leningrad, and said the Berlin highway girdle showed the approximate position of German troops around the Russian city—a distance of roughly fifteen miles.

To reach these positions, it was said, the Germans had to break through seventy-five miles of defenses in which tank traps nine feet wide and six feet deep forced the advancing Germans virtually to discard mechanized warfare in favor of close-quarter combat.

Felled trees have been laid as obstructions and within the forests wires have been strung from tree to tree—all this, German sources said, by Russian women and children. Thousands of mines also must be removed by engineers ahead of the German advance.

Estimate 4,500,000 In Area

Some sources estimated that 4,500,000 persons are trapped into the Leningrad region in a space roughly of 1,900 square miles.

The Nazis declared they can take the city house by house, if necessary, in which case they said losses would be "extremely bloody."

As to the second major Russian city besieged, Odessa, in the far south on the Black Sea, authorized persons said that it was being approached by German experts in flame-throwing and bunker-storming and that house-to-house fighting was bringing the Germans forward step by step. It was asserted that this method had been adopted to avoid the necessity of shelling and utterly destroying the city.

Air Blows At Donets Valley

Of the front generally, the high command summed up the position by reporting "great offensive operations in the East are progressing successfully."

Other informants said, however, that the front was "ripening" for great successes now being developed in the South, where Nazi dive bombers were attacking Soviet artillery emplacements and troop concentrations in the Donets valley, east of the Dnieper river, and on the isthmus connecting the Crimea to the Russian mainland.

The Stuka, these sources pointed out, is a specialized weapon often used immediately before decisive actions, and the expectation thus was raised that a great battle impended in the Donets area.

reported today.

Little was known regarding details of the battle, but the offensive was said now to be an operation of powerful attacking weapons. The Germans indicated that the battle, into which they have flung their strongest tanks, artillery and infantry and in which the air force and navy are co-operating closely, was progressing successfully.

Bunkers in great numbers which surround Leningrad in a deep defensive zone were pronounced the equal of anything the German Army encountered in France or Belgium. Some were said to have had concrete walls six feet thick, but the Germans said that they smashed high velocity shells off these thick walls incessantly and that finally the explosives reduced vital internal spots.

4,500,000 Persons Trapped.

About 4,500,000 persons in the Leningrad region are trapped in an area of about 1,900 square miles, the equivalent of a space roughly forty-four miles on each side, German informants said.

The besiegers, they said, have the power to take the city house by house, and if this is necessary they predicted it would be "extremely bloody."

German military observers said that action also was developing all along the line and that the eastern front was "ripening for the successes which the High Command announced were unfolding."

Some sources expected a climactic battle soon in the Donets Valley, where stukas were reported dive-bombing artillery emplacements and troop concentrations. The Donets Valley, east of the Dnieper and northeast of the Crimean peninsula, is a region of important Russian industries and considerable German cultural and economic influence.

Dive bombers, Germans explained, are specialized weapons ordinarily used in land warfare only at the peak of battle or immediately before decisive actions.

500 Motor Vehicles Destroyed.

More than 500 Russian motor vehicles have been destroyed by the German air force in a new thrust east of the Dnieper river, DNB reported today.

Also caught in the Luftwaffe's sweep, according to the official news agency, were a Russian armored train, which it said was brought to a standstill, various artillery positions put out of action, and six transport trains halted by bombs.

The air force also effectively attacked Russian troops still holding out on the island of Oesel, in the mouth of the Gulf of Riga.

"Great offensive operations in the East are progressing successfully," said the war bulletin from Adolf Hitler's headquarters. There were no further elaborations.

"Repeated enemy counter-attacks supported by heavy tanks collapsed," the communique declared.

DNB said the Luftwaffe sank a 5,000 ton Russian transport in the Black Sea east of Odessa yesterday, destroyed two others and damaged a fourth, of 3,000-tons. A Soviet coastal battery trying to drive off the air attackers was silenced, the agency said.

SEP 16 1941

German pilots, returning from reconnaissance flights, were quoted as saying the Russians apparently were preparing for a stand on a new and shorter line tightly ringing Leningrad.

At the same time the Germans said they had learned from Russian prisoners that the Soviet forces were dynamiting huge blocks of buildings in Leningrad to clear the line of fire for artillery and machine-guns. These preparations seemingly indicated that the Russians—who have sworn to defend the city to the last—were planning on a street-to-street defense.

City May Be Rubbish.

German observers, commenting on these preparations, said loconically:

"Leningrad may be rubbish and ashes, even if German weapons spare the city itself."

"Dispatches from the front indicated the German air force was playing a major role in the Nazi offensive, one reporter-flyer declaring that the Luftwaffe was "raining death and destruction" on highways leading into the city.

Nazi bombers also were said to be subjecting the Russian island base of Oesel, off the Estonian coast to the west of Leningrad, to concentrated attacks.

The High Command announced that Col.-Gen. Eugen Ritter von Schobert, one of Germany's foremost military men, had been killed in action in Russia two days ago. The press cited his death as evidence that German officers were sharing the gravest risks with their troops.

Von Schobert, 58 years old, was one of the Kaiser's most distinguished commanders in the world war, during which he was badly wounded. Carrying on under the Hitler regime he became an inspector of infantry and at the outbreak of the current war he commanded an army corps on the French front.

RED ARTILLERY HELD SUPERIOR

Moscow, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. I. Kamera declared today in Pravda, the Communist party organ, that Russian artillery is so much the master of the battlefield that even the Germans are forced to admit "not only its quantitative, but also its qualitative superiority."

Attributing recent Red Army successes chiefly to artillery, which he called "the God of modern warfare," he said that a three-day battle in the first week of September cost the Germans 4,000 killed, 15,000 wounded, thirty field guns and much ammunition.

His article said that the Russians were guarding their artillery zealously, with the result that "almost all field guns on the western front continue to destroy the enemy with a terrible, well-aimed fire."

See Reds in Bad Position.

London, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—An authoritative source said today that as a result of the Russian evacuation of Kremenchug and the German thrust in the Perekop area to the south there apparently were no longer any natural obstacles between the German Army and the River Don. Reports from neutral sources, however, indicated that the Germans probably would find it precarious going across that muddy terrain.

Russian troops in the Kiev sector were said by this authoritative source to be in a very dangerous position as the Germans executed a pincers movement upon them from Gomel on the northwest and Kremenchung on the southeast.

The German thrust in the Perekop area was said to imperil the only rail communication between Crimea and the mainland.

Perekop is fifty miles southeast of the lower Dnieper and is located on the narrow neck of land connecting the Crimea with the mainland.

Big Fires From Shelling Reported In Leningrad

Helsinki, Sept. 15 (AP)—Great fires have been set inside Leningrad by a steady German artillery pounding which is creating deadly havoc in parks and streets crowded with refugees from outside the city, Finnish army correspondents reported tonight from the front.

"The explosions reach our ears with a continuous muffled rumble," one wrote. "There are many fires and the conflagration is spreading. The whole sky is already ablaze. An endless din has begun in the doomed city."

A railroad engineer said to have fled from Leningrad was quoted as saying that the shells were taking a terrific toll because the refugees from outside the city were unable to find raid shelters and were forced to live and sleep in public parks and squares while the battle raged.

Likelihood Grows That Finns May Be Near End of War

Talk of Separate Peace With Moscow Ruled Out, However, by Tanner

By the Associated Press.

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 15.—The possibility that Finland may be near the end of her war with Soviet Russia was heightened today by the declaration of a government spokesman that there are "good hopes of peace in the nearest future."

Any talk of a separate peace with Moscow was ruled out, however, by Vaino Tanner, Minister of Trade and Communications and leader of the dominant Social-Democratic party, in an address to the nation yesterday.

He stressed that Finland was an ally of Germany "only by accident" and that this country would continue to fight only as long as her interests demanded.

"It is for us an entirely defensive war, with the aid of which we desire to obtain secure frontiers and lasting peace," Tanner said. "Whatever is needed to secure this must be done, but there our task also ends."

Finland, he added, never wanted war, but he declared that since "barbarous and expansionist Russia" is a neighbor "our long frontier is still insecure and it is probably essential that we should render areas beyond it safe in a military sense. Before that there is no possibility of concluding peace with anybody."

Tanner declared the Finnish people "not only have not the slightest confidence in the Kremlin rulers, who have broken all previous agreements, but since the Soviets will lose the war with Germany a peace concluded with them would mean nothing."

Tanner failed to give the basis for his hopes of early peace, but there have been previous unofficial predictions that Finland would stop fighting as soon as she regained territories lost to Russia in the 1939-40 winter war, plus enough territory in certain areas to give her a good strategic front.

The Helsinki government announced some time ago that its armies had regained all the lost territory, thus realizing one of the two aims set forth by Tanner.

Finland Is Devastated And Hungry, Moscow Says

MOSCOW, Sept. 15 (AP).—The newspaper Pravda said today that Finland was "devastated, hungry, poverty-stricken and facing the future with the greatest anxiety" and that "many Finns begin to realize that the adventurous policies of the dishonest rulers of Finland have brought the country to the edge of the precipice."

There was no change, however, from the two-week-old statement of S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, that reports of impending peace between Helsinki and Moscow have no basis in fact.

Nazis Praise Internees

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 15—Vociferous "sieg heils" in the Teheran railway station by departing German internees Saturday resulted in demands by the British and Russian Ministers to Iran that the German Minister be barred from the station when later German contingents leave for internment, authoritative sources said today.

The attitude of the internees, these sources said, was one of "unbending faith in victory" even though they were leaving for an uncertain future.

Germany, it was said, is fighting by every means at her command in behalf of German women and children in Iran.

Charge Protection Refused

Authorized informants charged that British and Russian diplomats had denied protection to these women and children in the event of their extradition.

From humanitarian as well as national viewpoints, they declared, a plan for them to pass through Russian territory unaccompanied and unprotected was unacceptable to Germany.

(The British legation at Teheran said yesterday that only a half dozen German women propagandists would be interned and the remaining 400 German women and children would have their choice of staying in Iran, returning to Germany or accompanying the men to India.)

U. S.-RUSSIAN-AID MISSION IN LONDON

Harriman Rushes To Conference With English Leaders

Beaverbrook Heads British Group Appointed To Go To Moscow

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 15—W. Averell Harriman rushed into conferences with the British tonight to find out how many United States guns, tanks and planes they will spare to Russia before the American delegation he heads hurries on to Moscow for three-power meetings to complete a plan of deliveries.

Within an hour after he and other top members of the United States mission arrived from the bombers which flew them across the Atlantic, Harriman had begun conversations in which Prime Minister Churchill and British army, navy and air experts were expected to participate.

The American emissary dined with Churchill tonight.

Beaverbrook Heads Britons

The British economic mission to Moscow, with Lord Beaverbrook as its head, was named today soon after Harriman conferred with Churchill. The selection followed after long editorial criticism over delays in selecting its members.

The British-American group is expected to leave as soon as possible after a series of hurried consultations.

The British delegation will include a military mission already in Moscow—Lieut. Gen. F. M. Mason-MacFarlane, Rear Admiral Miles and Air Vice-Marshal A. C. Collier—and these other members from London, Capt. H. H. Balfour, Under Secretary of State for Air; Maj. Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay and Maj. Gen. G. N. Macready.

Speeded By Ukraine Peril

The pressure for speed was indicated by announcement of expanding British aid to Russia and by reports from the warfront indicating acute danger for the Red army in the Ukraine.

Shortly after the announcement that an R. A. F. wing of planes, men, fuel and munitions, had reached Russia and may already be in battle, Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Supply, announced that every tank turned out from British factories next week will go immediately to the Eastern front.

Harriman said:

"We are anxious to get to Moscow as soon as we can. We shall have consultations with Lord Beaverbrook and then hope to get away as soon as possible."

General Brett In Egypt

Except for Maj. Gen. George Brett, who is with the British forces in Egypt and probably will go to Moscow independently, the whole delegation was assembled here.

Flying with Harriman were Admiral William H. Standley, Maj. Gen. James H. Burns and William L. Batt, Junior members arrived also by bomber yesterday accompanied by Constantine Oumansky, Russian Ambassador to Washington.

Harriman's big job during his brief stopover in London will be to establish equipment priorities satisfactory to both Britain and Russia.

The Russians, who have been expending vast amounts of material and whose own production has been cut by German gains in the Ukraine and threats to Leningrad and Kiev, are known to be pressing for everything they can get.

Sought For Spring Campaign

They are said to be anxious particularly about the availability of supplies for compaigns next spring.

On the other hand, the British consider their needs no less urgent and point out that they violent renewal of the German air offensive this winter. They contend also that movements of Axis convoys in the Mediterranean and activity on the Libyan front are forerunners of big campaigns in Africa.

Peril To Flank Seen

The immediate peril to Russia's southern flank was seen here as the result of the Red army's withdrawal from Kremenchug, on the east bank of the Dnieper, and a simultaneous German thrust toward Perekop on the Black Sea coast, where there are no natural barriers to a Nazi push toward the River Don.

With the Germans pressing a pincer operations based on Gomel, to the northwest, and Kremenchug, to the southeast, an authoritative source said Russian troops in the Kiev sector were in a "very dangerous position."

The drive toward Perekop, 50 miles southeast of the lower Dnieper on the narrow neck of land between Crimea and the Russian mainland, was said also to imperil Crimea's only rail connections.

Britain To Step Up Supplies

As soon as priorities have been established, it was believed, Britain will step up shipments of planes, guns and tanks from her reserve supply on the promise of replacements from the United States.

This view was supported by Churchill's announcement last week that hundreds of planes were being sent to Russia, today's disclosure of the complete wing already there and Lord Beaverbrook's promise of next week's tank output.

Exhorting tank makers to their utmost effort, the Supply Minister said:

"The work of your hands will be sent to the front lines defending Leningrad, Kiev and Moscow.

Pledges No Delay

"There will be no delay. There will be more to come. But the tanks you build next week will go forthwith into action."

Harriman was greeted at an airdrome near London by his daughter, Kathleen; Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary; Lord Beaverbrook whom he hailed as "Max;" Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador to London; John G. Winant, the United States Ambassador; Capt. Harold Balfour, British Under Secretary for Air and John D. Biggers, American lease-lend representative in London.

they had landed earlier in the day in the bomber which carried them across the Atlantic.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden greeted Mr. Harriman at an airdrome near London. Others in the reception party included the Russian Ambassador to London, Ivan Maisky; the United States Ambassador to London, John G. Winant; Lord Beaverbrook; Capt. Harold Balfour, British Under-Secretary for Air, and John D. Biggers, Washington's lease-lend representative in London.

Mr. Harriman's daughter, Kathleen, also was waiting for him. First he rushed forward to greet her and then turned to Messrs. Eden, Beaverbrook and Maisky, shaking hands warmly and calling Mr. Beaverbrook "Max." Several of Mr. Harriman's colleagues were in need of shaves. They explained they had had no time for such matters.

"We had an excellent trip," Mr. Harriman said before he motored to the United States embassy with his daughter and Ambassador Winant.

Arriving also were these members of the mission: Admiral W. H. Standley, Major Gen. James H. Burns and William L. Batt. Also on the plane were Lieut. Gen. Stanley D. Embrick and Capt. Frank P. Thomas, U. S. N.

One of the group said that the only member not now in London is Major-Gen. George Brett, "who will probably go to Moscow by a route other than London." Gen. Brett is with the British forces in Egypt.

Arrival of the first British Flyers in Russia was disclosed yesterday in a brief announcement that a wing of the R. A. F.—a self-contained unit with full flying and ground personnel—had reached the Soviet. Before the war a wing normally contained three squadrons, but the present strength of such a unit—as well as the number of planes in a squadron—is a military secret.

It was presumed, however, that the newly-arrived unit consisted of fighter aircraft, probably speedy Hurricanes and Spitfires such as have formed the first line of defense in Britain.

British newspapers carried reports that the British flyers already had reached the front and had gone into action against the Germans—presumably in defense of Leningrad.

It was believed here the R. A. F. contingent had been dispatched by the shortest and fastest route—through the Arctic to Murmansk. British forecast, however, that reinforcements would be sent by the longer but safer 15,000-mile route around the Cape of Good Hope, up through the Persian Gulf and into Russia by the newly-opened back-door route across Iran.

The Daily Telegraph, foreseeing a steadily-increasing flow of aid to Russia, declared it was reasonable to assume that the newly-arrived R. A. F. unit was only "the advance guard of a large fighter contingent destined for the eastern front."

Informed sources, recalling Prime Minister Churchill's statement last week that hundreds of fighter planes were being sent to Russia, said Britain had a large supply of aircraft on which to draw.

U. S. Planes Augmented Reserves.

Aircraft production took a spurt upward a year ago, these sources said, and during the long quiet winter reserves were piled up which were augmented by planes from the United States.

Unconfirmed reports said American-made Tomahawk fighter planes were among those already shipped to Russia.

Further evidence of Britain's intention to step up active aid to Russia was given yesterday in an Admiralty communique reporting that carrier-borne naval aircraft had attacked German ships in the Bodo area of Northern Norway Friday.

A 2,000-ton ship was sunk and several other vessels were damaged, the communique said, and an aluminum works and electric power station were hit in forays inland.

The operations were carried out, the Admiralty explained, to harry German supply lines and sea communications with Nazi troops on the Northern Russian front.

U. S. Mission to Moscow Arrives In England for Stop-over Talks

Group Plans to Leave for Russia Soon—First R. A. F. Unit Already in Action With Reds on Eastern Front.

SEP 16 1941

London, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—With a wing of the Royal Air Force reported already in action against Germany on the Eastern front, as part of Britain's aid to the Soviet, the United States mission to Moscow has arrived in Britain for stop-over talks before continuing on to the Russian capital for consultation with the British and Russians on how to defeat Germany.

The R. A. F. units now in Russia were only the advance guard of greater forces to go, informed quarters indicated, and the British press carried reports that American-made planes already were in the service of the Red Air Force.

Junior members of the American mission reached London yesterday with the Russian Ambassador to Washington, Constantin Oumansky, after a trans-Atlantic flight, and the American embassy announced today that W. Averell Harriman, head of the mission, and the remainder of the delegation had arrived in the United Kingdom. Mr. Harriman arrived in London late today.

The delegation has been commissioned, with its British counterpart, to study with the Russians all means of speeding supplies and weapons of war to the Russian front.

"We are anxious to get to Moscow as soon as we can," Mr. Harriman said. "We shall have consultations with Lord Beaverbrook (British Minister of Supply) and then hope to get away as soon as possible."

Mr. Harriman and other members of the mission arrived in London by air from "somewhere in the United Kingdom," where

BRITAIN TO HAVE A TANK WEEK

London, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Supply, announced today that al the tanks manufactured in Britain during the week beginning September 22 will be sent to Russia.

In a message exhorting workers in tank factories to put forth their utmost efforts, Lord Beaverbrook said the seven-day output would be dispatched to the nation "whose soldiers today are fighting in the same shining cause" as Britain.

"From Monday next, therefore, and for a space of seven days the work of your hands will be sent to the front lines defending Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa," said Beaverbrook's message.

NAZIS MAY TRY BLACK SEA PUSH

Ankara Forecasts Drive to Cut Off Russians.

SEP 16 1941

Ankara, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—A sea-borne Nazi drive against Russian forces on the Crimean peninsula was forecast by observers here today as Balkan sources reported the Germans had ordered all Rumanian and Bulgarian Black Sea ports closed to commercial shipping.

The reported German action capped recurring rumors that both the Germans and Italians had been concentrating men and ships in Bulgarian ports, presumably for an attempt to land forces behind the Soviet defense line on the Dnieper River in the Ukraine.

Only last Thursday it was disclosed that Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov had protested to Bulgaria that she had overstepped the bounds of neutrality by permitting German naval preparations in her harbors.

[Dispatches from Sofia last night said partial mobilization of the Bulgarian Army had been ordered for today and that the Government was putting into effect decrees providing severe penalties for sabotage and subversive activities.]

It is believed here that the reported German preparations were prompted by dissatisfaction with progress of the campaign in the Ukraine, in which the Rumanian Army has been playing an important part.

Rumanians Would Quit.

There have been repeated reports that both the Rumanian public and army leaders were opposed to continuing the war against Russia, now that the provinces of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina, which the Soviet took by ultimatum more than a year ago, had been won back.

The Istanbul newspaper Ikdam, meanwhile, labeled Bulgaria a belligerent nation, citing the action of the refugee Greek Government in declaring war against Bulgaria. As a belligerent, Ikdam said, Bulgaria would not be permitted to send warships into the Black Sea through the Dardanelles—over which Turkey is the guardian.

The paper apparently was alluding to reports that Bulgaria recently had purchased warships from Italy with the intention of sailing them through the Dardanelles. Treaty conventions regarding the straits bar the passage of warships of belligerent nations in time of war, providing Turkey is neutral.

Turkish observers said the Ikdam article reflected the official Turkish viewpoint.

Tomorrow Set As Dead Line For Leaving

Teheran, Iran, Sept. 15—A spokesman of the Soviet Embassy declared today that the Iranian Government "will find itself in very great difficulties" unless Axis legations leave Teheran by tomorrow.

German, Italian, Hungarian and Rumanian diplomats had asked postponement of their own departures until all their nationals had been sent off to internment.

Another contingent of Germans left this morning, 220 for India in British custody and twenty-one for Siberia under Russian guard. About 150 men still are awaiting transportation.

NAZIS LIFT STATE OF SIEGE AT OSLO

No Reason Given But Hints Heard That Uprising Was Feared

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Sept. 15—Joseph Terboven, Nazi commissioner in occupied Norway, in a move interpreted as a German attempt at conciliation, tonight ordered that the state of civil siege be lifted tomorrow morning.

Since the state of siege was declared last Wednesday, German authorities have executed two Norwegian labor leaders and arrested between 250 and 300 union leaders in the Oslo district alone.

Fear Of Outbreak Hinted

No reason for lifting the siege was given, but informed quarters here said resentment over the rigid restrictions ran so high in the country that it was possible the authorities feared a nation-wide outbreak of trouble unless the regulations were relaxed.

Dispatches from Oslo said that the actual event precipitating the state of siege was a proposed strike of 40,000 workers in Oslo.

Among the men reported arrested and sent to a concentration camp were Prof. Diduk Arup Seip, principal of Oslo University; K. R. Welhaven, former Oslo police superintendent; the deputy chairman of the Norwegian labor party and a number of other university leaders.

The Gestapo chief in Oslo today republished an order issued a year ago calling for the surrender of all firearms. He warned of severe penalties for those failing to comply.

Stockholm, Sept. 15 (A. The actual event which precipitated the decree, these advices said, was a mass strike in the Oslo district in which 40,000 workers took part. Metal workers were said to have begun the strike.

Secret Phone Call Exploded Zagreb Bomb, Probers Say

SEP 16 1941

Blast In Office Wounded Dozen German Soldiers. Communists Blamed In Shooting Of Croats

[By the Associated Press]

Zagreb, Croatia (Via Berlin), Sept. 15—Untraced telephone calls put through to two secret numbers in Zagreb's central telephone exchange were revealed tonight to have set off the explosion yesterday of four bombs which wounded more than twelve German soldiers.

Investigators said that the calls from outside the postal building in some way released the bomb mechanism, but those responsible have not been found. Two employes of the exchange's night shift fled.

Liaison Officer Wounded

One of the German soldiers wounded, Major Moehring, Signal Corps officer assigned to the staff of the German liaison officer here, suffered head injuries. Seven Croats also were injured.

Six Croat sentries in another section of the city who at first were believed to have been wounded by machine-gun fire were actually attacked by four men armed with pistols, it was said tonight.

Described As Communists

Their assailants were described as "Communists," and three of them were captured. The fourth was shot dead on the street, clutching an unexploded hand grenade. He was left lying there as an example to the populace.

The explosion cut Zagreb off from provincial cities and Berlin for more than twenty-four hours.

Zagreb, Croatia (Via Berlin), Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Blasts of four time-bombs in Zagreb's central telephone exchange and machine-gun fire in another part of the city wounded two-score persons, one of them a German major, in outbreaks yesterday.

Major Moehring, signal corps officer assigned to the staff of the German liaison officer at Zagreb, suffered head injuries in the telephone exchange explosions, which crippled the city's telephone system. A German lieutenant, four German soldiers, a German telephone operator and seven Croats also were injured.

Six Croat sentries were cut down by machine-gun fire from a rooftop in another part of the city.

Star Of David Soon To Be Mandatory For Appearance In Public

Berlin, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Jews of the Netherlands soon must wear the Star of David on their left shoulder, a DNB dispatch said today.

The official news agency said that "the commissioner general for security (in the Netherlands) issued a decree regulating the appearance of Jews in public, as already has been ordered within the Reich itself."

It has been ordered in Germany, effective September 19, that each Jew must wear a large six-pointed star bearing the word Jude whenever he appears on the street. These must be sewn to the clothing.

Greeks Collapse on Streets Of Athens From Hunger

SEP 16 1941

Suffering Is Shared by British Soldiers Who Failed to Escape and Are Now Hiding

ANKARA, Turkey, Sept. 15 (AP)—Greeks in Athens are collapsing in the streets from hunger and their suffering is being shared by numbers of British and Australian soldiers who failed to escape and are hiding in small towns and mountain villages, a recently arrived neutral observer reported today.

The situation of Allied soldiers left behind in the withdrawal from Greece was said to be especially difficult because they are without credentials for obtaining food.

The traveler said the food situation was made increasingly acute by a ban prohibiting fishermen from going more than five miles off shore. This, he explained, was ordered largely because a number of Greeks, British and Australians were escaping in fishing boats.

Men and women who formerly refused to be seen with Germans now are capitulating socially, and otherwise as a means of getting food, the informant said.

Germans continue in control of Greece, he added, despite the technical assignment of administration to the Italians. As an instance, he explained that Germans retained control of warehouses and the port arsenal at Piraeus, port of Athens, giving the Italians administration only of the canal sewer in the port.

Hilferding, Foe of Hitler, Reported Dead in Prison

Former Reich Finance Chief Was in Gestapo Custody

LISBON, Sept. 15 (AP).—Varian M. Fry, American relief worker expelled from unoccupied France a week ago, said tonight that he had received word that Rudolf Hilferding, sixty-three-year-old former German Finance Minister arrested last February at Marseilles and delivered to Nazi authorities, had died in prison.

Fry said he had no details of Hilferding's death, but that the pre-Hitlerite German minister had been in the hands of the Gestapo (secret police) since he was arrested when attempting to board a ship at Marseilles.

SEP 16 1941

Another Seized at Same Time

Another former German leader, Rudolph Breitscheid, once head of the Social Democrats in the Reichstag, was seized at Marseilles at the same time as Hilferding. Both men had long been on the Nazi list of enemies of the states, and both had had their German citizenship revoked and their poreptry seized.

Hilferding was born in Vienna of Jewish parents and began his career as a physician, but soon became an active Socialist. He once edited the newspaper "Vorwaerts" and conducted a pacifist campaign until called into the army in the World War.

After the war he edited the independent Socialist daily "Freiheit," and in August, 1923, became Finance Minister in the Stresemann Cabinet. He was Finance Minister again in the Mueller government in 1928. A member of the Reichstag when Adolf Hitler came to power, he was forced into exile.

BRITISH REPORT AIR LOSSES LOW

169 Killed Or Missing, 136 Injured By Nazi In August

SEP 16 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 15—The Home Security Ministry announced today that 169 persons were killed or missing and believed killed and 136 injured by air raids again. Great Britain during August.

These casualties were the lightest since heavy German attacks started in August, 1940. The previous lowest casualties of this period were those of June of this year when 399 were killed and 461 injured.

The heaviest casualties were those of September, 1940, when 6,955 were killed and 10,624 injured.

Recalls Peak Raid Year Ago

The Air and Home Ministries saluted the first anniversary of the greatest air battle in history today with a laconic "there is nothing to report."

Just a year ago today the climax in the German daylight air offensive in the Battle of Britain was reached.

In a great miles-high aerial zone which reached from London to the Channel Hurricane and Spitfire pilots fought the waves of Luftwaffe in day-long battle on September 15, 1940, which resulted, the British said, in the shooting down of 187 German planes. A United States military observer on his return home from London said the figure actually was well over 200.

German Convoy Attacked

The German mass daylight attacks gave way, soon after that, into a winter-long campaign of night bombing.

By contrast with the quiet skies over England today, the R. A. F. made numerous offensive sweeps over the Channel and German-occupied territory, the Air Ministry said.

A German convoy off the Frisian Islands, north of Holland, was attacked, one ship being left sinking and another hit, the Air Ministry reported, and shipping and a factory at the western Norwegian port of Haugesund were bombed.

One-Plane Raid On Britain

SEP 16 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 15—Just one year ago the German air offensive against Britain reached its peak in the most savage aerial battle the world has known—a battle which the British say cost the Nazis 187 planes.

In sharp contrast with that epic struggle was a Government announcement today that only one German plane crossed the British coast last night, dropping bombs which caused minor damage and a few casualties in a northeast town.

The announcement emphasized the R. A. F.'s claim that the battle of September 15, 1940, established its control of the skies over Britain and forced the Germans to abandon mass air-raid tactics.

Big U. S. Planes Arrive

Disclosure, meanwhile, of the arrival in England of new American-made long-range fighter planes held the promise that the R. A. F. would step up its rapidly-growing offensive against the Reich.

The new planes, Lockheed Lightnings, are armed with both machine-guns and cannon, can do better than 400 miles an hour, and have a range of nearly 1,000 miles, it was stated. Their arrival caused speculation that the British might be able to inaugurate daylight raids deep into Germany—perhaps as far as Berlin.

Battleships Again Attacked

The British continued their offensive operations during the week end with a series of sweeps along the Nazi-occupied French coast. The German battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst — sheltered at Brest— were again the objects of attack. Bomb explosions were seen to straddle the drydocks in which the battleships are lying, the Air Ministry said.

The British said all their planes returned safely from the week-end forays.

One Vessel Left Sinking and Another Hit.

London, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—One vessel was left sinking and another was hit this afternoon when the R. A. F. blasted at German shipping off the Frisian Islands, the Air Ministry announced.

4 Americans in R.A.F. Are Reported Missing

Eagle Squadron Pilot Believed Killed in Action

LONDON, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Air Ministry announced today that four American volunteers in the Royal Air Force, including a member of the American Eagle Squadron, are "missing."

The Eagle Squadron man was Pilot Officer V. W. Olson, of Concord, Neb., who was said to be "missing, believed killed in action." The home towns of the other three were not given but they were identified as follows: Second Aircraftsman E. R. Jack, Sergeant E. A. R. Thompson and Sergeant C. Deges.

[Records of the State Department in Washington list a Virgil Wilson Olson, retired member of the United States Naval Reserve, from Boise, Idaho. They show that this Olson joined the Eagle Squadron in England.]

A Royal Canadian Air Force casualty list also reported Flight Sergeant G. R. Menish, of Salina, Kan., as missing in action, and Sergeant G. J. Massee, of Taunton, Mass., as wounded in action. The Air Ministry said Massee's mother lives in Rhode Island, but the name of the city was not known.

Concord, Neb. Sept. 15-(AP)-Pilot Officer V.W. Olson, a member of the RAF'S American Eagle Squadron, who was reported in London dispatches as missing, is the son of Mrs. Anna Olson, a former Concord resident now living in Boise, Idaho. This is believed to be the birthplace of the flier whose parents moved from here when he was a child.

SMASH BY AXIS TURNS TO ROUT, BRITISH CLAIM

SEP 16 1941

Counter-Blow By Planes And Tanks Said To Have Driven Foe Back

Listening Post In Tobruk Line Overpowered, Cairo Admits

[By the Associated Press]

Cario, Sept. 15—The heaviest fighting in weeks was reported from the Libyan front today as the terrific heat of the western desert neared its seasonal end, and British quarters predicted "boiling" activity by early October.

General headquarters announced that two Axis armored columns struck thirty-five miles into Egypt in sudden thrusts Sunday, but were routed back into Libya after losing considerable numbers of men and machines.

It was the first offensive move by Axis forces in Libya for many weeks. The two columns crossed the border about thirty miles south of Sofafi, apparently on reconnaissance. Moving rapidly over the hard plateau surface, they were about thirty-five miles inside the frontier before they were challenged by British mechanized forces operating under a cover of diving, machine-gunning R. A. F. planes.

Nazi Tank Captured

German tanks returned the fire but maneuvered to get away. One German medium tank, complete with crew, was captured.

At the same time the British admitted that one of their listening posts manned by six men in the Tobruk lines, where an Axis siege has been pressed since mid-April, was overrun by "sheer weight of numbers" of tanks and troops.

But there was no confirmation of an Italian communique that Tobruk's lines had been penetrated at Sidi Belgasem.

The British said three of the Axis tanks which attacked the post were captured and the troops dispersed by British cannon fire.

Described As Reprisal

The attack was a reprisal, it was explained, for several "brilliant raids" against Axis siege positions, in which an officer and five men were captured in one strong point and twenty men were killed and two captured at others.

With the approach of good fighting weather in the desert, British forces pointed out that the Italians and Germans have been reinforcing their African army throughout the summer despite heavy R. A. F. and naval raids on their convoys.

The number of supply convoys has increased about fifty per cent. in the last few months, it was reported.

The British now have more than 500,000 troops in the Middle East, informed sources said, and the Allied position is held to be the most secure it has been since the start of the war.

Tobruk One Of Strong Points

Tobruk is one of the strong points of the British. Located on the coast where the British are able supply it through the wreck-strewn harbor, the town stands on the flank of the Axis forces, seventy-five miles behind their spearheads across the Egyptian border.

It is about ten months now since the British launched their surprise November counter-offensive across the desert last year, an offensive which advanced the British from Matruh in Egypt to Bengasi and beyond in Libya, a distance of 500 miles.

The British navy and air force, in sharp reaction to Axis efforts to strengthen African forces, have sunk more than 100,000 tons of shipping in the Mediterranean in the first half of September, according to British accounts.

Flyers Sink Dozen Vessels

Air attacks alone have sunk a dozen Axis vessels, and heavily damaged at least six more, the British say.

Italy also is said to have lost two destroyers in the last fortnight.

The Royal Air Force Midle Eastern command, reporting heavy aerial operations all over the frontier zone, announced that fourteen Axis planes had been destroyed yesterday by fighter craft and anti-aircraft fire. Seven British planes were lost.

A small number of aircraft raided Alexandria naval base last night but caused slight damage, a communique said.

The RAF said today that one ship, believed from a convoy out of which 10 were sunk or damaged in two days, was found burning fiercely at Zuala. It blew up in a violent explosion, a communique said.

In addition the RAF raided Tripoli and Bengasi and other points.

Axis Thrust Into Egypt Repelled

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 15—Two Axis armored columns based in Libya penetrated thirty-five miles into Egyptian territory yesterday but were routed by British mechanized forces operating under close cover of the R. A. F., the British reported today.

The disorganized Italian-German forces were said to have fallen back to Libyan territory.

British general headquarters called the Axis thrust "a reconnaissance in force." Falling back, the invaders lost considerably in men and equipment, the daily communique said.

Situation May "Boil"

British sources said that thrust into Egypt and clashes outside Tobruk, seventy-five miles within Libya, constituted the heaviest fighting of months in North Africa. They said there was every indication that the Libyan situation would be "boiling" by early October.

One source said that the Axis had been reinforcing its Libyan forces virtually all summer despite heavy R. A. F. and fleet air arm raids on Mediterranean convoys. The number of supply convoys was said to have been increased about fifty per cent. within the last month.

Half Million Men Poised

There are now more than a half million Allied troops in the Middle East—the largest force by far since the start of the war—and the Allied position, the informants said, is "the most secure" it has been since war came to the area.

The rout of the Axis columns was reported facilitated by the R. A. F. which bombed the advancing columns.

The communique indicated pursuit of the columns was continuing.

Tripoli Bombed

Tripoli, Bengasi, Barce, Gambut and Gerbini were bombed again and at Zuara, the communique said, a large ship believed to have been part of a convoy from which ten ship previously were reported sunk or damaged, was seen blazing and later seen to explode.

The British at the same time announced "a series of brilliant raids" against Axies siege positions at Tobruk, in which an Italian officer and three other men were captured.

Outpost Overrun

The raids were carried out by British patrols Saturday night, a communique said.

At two other strong points the besiegers were stated to have lost twenty dead and two prisoners.

"In retaliation a strong enemy force, supported by a number of tanks, engaged and overran b. sheer weight of numbers one of our listening posts containing six men," the communique said.

Three Tanks Captured

"Three German tanks employed in this operation were subsequently engaged and captured by British tanks and the enemy concentration then was dispersed by heavy artillery fire."

The Tobruk defense has stood as a constant threat to the Axis flank since Italian and German troops drove the British back from their deep Libyan penetration past Tobruk into the Egyptian-Libyan border zone.

'Every Ship In Axis Convoy Hit'

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Sept. 15—Every ship in a convoy bound for Tripoli, capital of Libya, was damaged in three nights of bomb attacks ending with two heavy raids in which eight merchantmen were set afire or damaged, the R.A.F. Middle East command reported yesterday.

Following up the raids of Thursday and Friday nights, the fleet air arm and the R. A. F. set four ships afire and hit or damaged four others, the report said. The British said they lost no planes in the attacks.

(The Italian communique yesterday said four British planes were brought down by gunfire from the attacked convoy while Italian bombers sank a small freighter in the eastern Mediterranean.)

Rome Tells Of Capture Of Hill In Tobruk Line

Rome, Sept. 15 (AP)—Italian-German detachments, striking out from their semi-circular siege lines at British-held Tobruk, Libya, wrested hill positions from the defenders near Sidi Belgasem, east of Tobruk, in a "lightning attack" Saturday night, it was officially announced today.

The British were declared to have lost an unspecified number in dead and prisoners after a fierce fight.

The announcement said that the pressure on Tobruk, for most part by aviation and artillery, now and then is increased by troops seeking to disrupt the British line. The Saturday-night assault was such a one, it said.

The action was linked with an aerial assault in which "waves of Italian heavy bombers hit important objectives," it was said, after "German planes scored direct hits on several British storehouses Saturday afternoon."

On another African front, according to a communique, a large column of Italian infantry and cavalry inflicted heavy losses on a British formation in the Lake Tana sector of Northern Ethiopia.

At the same time the Italians acknowledged that the British air force was bombing and machine-gunning their remaining strongholds in East Africa with increasing severity.

The communique acknowledged British planes had raided the Italian Libyan bases of Tripoli and Bengasi, but said damage was limited to non-military targets. One British plane was reported downed over Bengasi.

AXIS REPORTS TOBRUK FIGHT

British Positions Are Captured in Swift Attack, Rome Says

ROME, Sept. 15 (AP)—A burst of activity in Africa, in which Hill 146 was captured by Axis forces in a lightning attack east of Tobruk, Libya, and a British formation routed in Ethiopia by Italian cavalry and hand-grenade attacks, was reported officially today.

Crawling and running across stretches of desert through a fierce artillery barrage and machine-gun fire, Italian and German troops took British hill positions near Sidi Belgasem, east of Tobruk, on Saturday night, capturing a number of prisoners and inflicting casualties.

The announcement explained that artillery and bombers have been the chief weapons in the siege of Tobruk, now entering its sixth month, but that occasionally "these air operations are joined with sudden land actions which, exceeding the normal activity of patrols, feel out the enemy lines and upset its arrangements."

Prior to the attack, it was said, waves of Italian heavy bombers blasted at important Tobruk objectives and German planes scored hits on several storehouses.

In Ethiopia a strong Italian column in the Lake Tana region assaulted British positions and put the British to flight, the Italians said. Six cavalry charges were made by one group, according to the Italian reports, while the Third Galliano Battalion of infantry attacked several times with grenades.

In the same general area, the High Command said, British trucks carrying troop reinforcements were hit by Italian artillery fire. British planes bombed Italian positions.

British air raids on Tripoli and Bengazi, Libya, were acknowledged. A British bomber was reported to have been downed at Bengazi.

Egyptians Inhabit Stone Tombs To Avoid Bombs

SEP 16 1941

By Godfrey H. P. Anderson

Siwa Oasis, In the Western Desert, Egypt, Sept. 15 — Ancient Egyptian tombs from which mummies have been removed provide the safest air-raid shelters in the world for the people of this sand-girt oasis.

When the war first touched the far fringe of the Western Desert the Siwa inhabitants flocked from their crumbling mud-hut city to nearby Jebel Muta (mountain of death) and made new homes inside death chambers hewn from solid rock thousands of years ago.

Like A Step Backward

A visit to this maze of catacombs is like a step back in time. Two thousand persons — Egyptians, Bedouin, Berbers, Senussi, Arabs—live there in rock caves so low it is impossible for a man to stand upright.

Niches which once contained mummies of their ancestors now house crude pottery, cooking pots, smoky oil lamps of Biblical design and modern kettles from Birmingham, England, the latter via Cairo bazaars.

Huddle Around Fires

Veiled women and young girls squat before fires of dried palm leaves like figures from an old Egyptian frieze.

Goats and chicks wander freely through the innermost recesses of darkened caves which still smell faintly of rich spices used to embalm the mummies of long ago.

War with the Italians across the Libyan frontier brought Siwa more contacts with the outside world than it had known in a hundred years.

Big Party Given

When British imperial troops entered the oasis after driving hundreds of miles across the waterless desert, the Mahmour—or local governor—threw a big party in one of Siwa's famous date gardens.

Seven sheep, roasted and stuffed with chopped liver and kidney, were carried in on poles. The soldiers, who had been warned to bring their own knives, forks and plates, had the feast of their lives.

Grapes, dates and pomegranates followed and the meal was topped off with stuffed heart of palm tree, which tastes something like a turnip.

This was the greatest compliment the Oasis could offer because the tree had to be destroyed to provide it.

Then, with troops gathered around, the venerable shiek squatted on a crimson carpet and prepared mint tea with an elaborate ritual carried out in Siwa through scores of generations.

Pope Asks Peace Prayers

Chungking, Sept. 15—United States Ambassador Clarence E. Gauss conferred today with Foreign Minister Quo Tai-chai with the purpose, Quo said, of "keeping close contact" between Washington and Chungking.

The Foreign Minister, announcing the conference, expressed confidence that the United States would not deviate from the policies she has "so consistently and faithfully observed in the past, particularly in regard to the Far East and Pacific."

"Familiar Tactics"

Some reports on Japanese-American conversations, he said, have "been calculated to arouse the apprehensions and suspicions of the Chinese people, but, on the whole, the Chinese people need not be misled by these familiar tactics."

"We are confident," Quo continued, "that the United States not only has no intention to make any arrangement at China's expense but also that, in any discussion affecting China or Chinese rights or interests, we will be fully consulted, for China has something to say for herself in any proposed settlement, and the United States, I am sure, wants to hear what China has to say.

ARGENTINA VOTES TO OUST NAZI ENVOY

Ambassador Is Described As Persona Non Grata In Buenos Aires

Congress Would Also Expel Ringleaders Of German Underground Groups

Buenos Aires, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Argentine Congress voted with but one dissenting voice today for the expulsion within three days of the ringleaders of Nazi undercover organizations, among whom its so-called "Dies committee" named German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann.

The Nazi envoy was not mentioned by name in the ouster demand, but the resolution did censure him for abusing diplomatic privileges, in a form that holds him persona non grata in Argentina.

It was the first time since the war's outbreak that an Axis envoy of top rank has been the target of such drastic action by a neutral nation in the Western Hemisphere.

Vote Is 79 To 1

The vote was 79 to 1. The lone holdout, Conservative Daniel Videla Dorna, contended the action was an unconstitutional legislative intrusion into executive power.

The ouster resolution was addressed to Acting President Ramon S. Castillo for action immediately, thereby posing a delicate problem for the chief executive who has been plotting a course of "neutrality toward all" for this powerful South American republic.

Von Thermann himself declared defiantly yesterday that if he leaves he would have to be asked to go, that he had no intention of going voluntarily.

Seek To Prevent Break

Informed quarters said the Foreign Office was taking the position that the ambassador should go on the grounds of personal indiscretions, thus perventing a break in German-Argentine relations.

This was the procedure followed in the last war when the German Ambassador was sent home for writing the command to "sink Argentine ships without a trace."

Today's action came while another of Adolf Hitler's emissaries, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, former consul general at San Francisco, was being kept under surveillance by detectives of the Argentine committee investigating subversive activities, the same group that instituted the proceedings against Von Thermann.

Going To Orient

Wiedemann arrived by plane yesterday from Rio de Janeiro, en route, Von Thermann announced, to a diplomatic post in the Orient. Previously Wiedemann had said he was in South America on a special mission for Hitler, his close friend and World War subordinate.

Some newspapers speculated on the possibility that he might have been sent to replace Von Thermann. Taborda announced yesterday that Wiedmann, who has transit visa to cross Argentina to Chile, would be detained if he overstayed his sojourn in this country.

The Congressional action began with an investigation by the committee which reported uncovering documentary evidence that the Nazi envoy was among ringleaders of Nazi-patterned subversive organizations.

Says They Are Ridiculous

Von Thermann's attitude toward the committee charges that they were ridiculous and "do not constitute a reason for my withdrawal."

These charges accused him of being paymaster for Nazi undercover groups all over South America; that he was head of an "almost military organization in Argentina" operating in "cells," financed by taxes wrung from German-descended residents and disciplined by "storm troops."

Even before Congress concluded debate on the resolution von Thermann initiated a fight against his possible removal, sending two "most vigorous protests" to the Foreign Office in as many days. He called statements made against him on the floor of the House of Deputies "gross calumnies" and "personal insults."

Unanimous support of the committee resolution came from divergent political sectors represented on the investigating body, headed by Deputy Raul Damonte Taborda.

Censures Envoy Directly

The resolution censured von Thermann directly, asking for his resignation by implication only. He was not named in the paragraph calling upon the President to expel leaders of the German organizations, but was named as one of them in reports of the investigating committee.

The committee first intended a direct request for von Thermann's removal but dropped the plan when unanimous support of committee members was not forthcoming. Instead, it planned to amend the resolution on the House floor to include the ouster demand.

With the Conservative party's full support of the milder resolution, the anti-Nazi bloc leaders decided solidarity would be a better demonstration of the nation's feelings respecting the German Ambassador.

KEEPING WATCH ON WIEDEMANN

SEP 16 1941

Argentina Checks on Nazi, Ex-Consul in U. S.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Argentina's congressional committee investigating subversive activities kept a close watch today on Capt. Fritz Weidemann, emissary and friend of Adolf Hitler, while pressing its demand for the expulsion of the German Ambassador, Edmund von Thermann.

The Chamber of Deputies is near a vote, perhaps today, on the committee's resolution accusing Von Thermann of "overstepping the bounds of a diplomat and abusing his privileges."

Into the midst of the furore throughout Argentina over the resolution and two sharp protests made by Von Thermann, Capt. Wiedemann stepped yesterday from a plane which brought him from Rio de Janeiro. The smiling Captain, ousted from his consular post in San Francisco last July and sent back to Europe with 500 other Axis representatives, greeted a large crowd at the airport with a wave of his hand and drove off in Von Thermann's limousine.

To Visit Far East.

Von Thermann, who said yesterday he had no intention of withdrawing from his post, declared Capt. Wiedemann would leave in a few days on a special diplomatic assignment in the Far East.

Raoul Damonte Taborda, chairman of the committee, had sought a way to question Wiedemann but acknowledged his committee had no right to detain him if he did not attempt to remain in the country. Capt. Wiedemann has a transit visa to cross Argentina to Chile. Members of the committee said he would be watched every minute.

Federal Judge Miguel Jantus ordered the Maritime Prefecture, meanwhile, to deliver to him eighty-three packages, some containing alleged Nazi propaganda, which arrived early in August aboard a Japanese vessel. They were consigned to the German Embassy here.

The congressional committee requested the order after five parcels were opened and, officials said, were found to contain propaganda and two Gestapo-compiled books naming persons wanted by German authorities. The committee demanded that all the parcels be examined.

Tanker Reports Rescue Of 37 Dutch Seamen From Torpedoed Vessel

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 15 (AP)—The tanker Standvac Manila, due at Santos, Brazil, Friday radioed today "have thirty-seven Netherlands seamen from torpedoed ship aboard."

Country Will Accept Whatever Sacrifice Is Necessary, He Declares

San Jose, Costa Rica, Sept. 15 (AP)—President Rafael Calderon Guardia told a big anti-Nazi demonstration today that Costa Rica would do her part in the defense of the Western Hemisphere.

"In the face of the evil force which is arising, the nation to the north, led by President Roosevelt, is following the example of Lincoln," Calderon Guardia asserted.

"We do not know to what limit the United States will go, but we shall gladly accept whatever sacrifice Costa Rica is called upon to make. I call upon all Costa Ricans to swear irrevocably to defend the civic patriotism which links us to our ancestors."

New Parachute Unit To March in Mexico

Mexico City, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Mexico will exhibit a brand-new unit of 400 parachute troops in a capital military parade tomorrow marking the 131st anniversary of her independence from Spain.

Twenty-four hours of festivities, beginning the celebration, will open when President Manuel Avila Gamacho will repeat from the central balcony of the National Palace the traditional call to independence and strike Mexico's liberty bell.

MOUNTIES ON GUARD

Ontario War Plant Reopens After Strike.

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 15 (A. P.).—More than 200 Royal Canadian mounted police today guarded entrances to the local plant of the McKinnon Industries, Ltd., plant, a subsidiary of General Motors of Canada, as about 300 workers went back to work after a five-day strike called by the United Automobile Workers of America (C. I. O.).

The plant, engaged in making parts for military vehicles, employs 4,500 workers on day and night shifts. W. A. Wecker, plant manager, said that the factory was able to run "after a fashion."

The police were under orders to prevent mass picketing and any interference with workers going back to their jobs. The strike was called for a 10 per cent wage increase for workers paid hourly rates and a 15 per cent increase for bonus and piece work employees.

U. S. Food for Britain To Be 'Fifth Column,' Wickard Declares

Plentiful Supplies to Incite Opposition to Hitler, He Asserts

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 15.—Secretary of Agriculture Wickard declared today that an abundance of American food would serve as a "fifth column" to incite the conquered and hungry peoples of Europe to rebel against Hitler.

In a speech urging farmers to co-operate with the department's 1942 farm program which is designed to provide the Nation with a record supply of food so that Great Britain might be amply supplied, Mr. Wickard said:

"What do you think is the effect upon those people looking across the Channel from half-fed France or Holland and seeing the British are getting enough to eat?

"Our Fifth Column."

"I think the effect," he said, "is the equivalent of about 10 field armies. Food is our fifth column. When the conquered peoples see what America is supplying the British in the way of food, and know that there's more where the British supplies come from, I think these people in the conquered countries may do more than hope for victory for the democracies; they'll work and fight for it."

The speech was prepared for a regional conference of farm leaders to discuss next year's production goals for Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States.

"Nearly all of us have been slow," the Secretary said, "in seeing how our interests are involved in World War 2. It seems to me that the first thing to realize is that this is our war, not some one else's war."

30.24 — 11843

our war, because of the greedy aims of a certain man who has the most powerful military machine the world has ever known."

More Food Needed.

Secretary Wickard told the farmers that they should make "some pretty extensive adjustments" in 1942 production schedules. There will be need for larger production of some things—particularly meats, milk, poultry and vegetables—and smaller output of wheat, tobacco and cotton, he said.

This country, he said, was expected to furnish a fourth of the British food needs in 1942.

"We are planning," he said, "to send the British during 1942 dairy products that will require between 4,500,000,000 and 5,000,000,000 pounds of poultry meat—chicken for the most part; almost 1,500,000,000 pounds of pork and lard. We have promised to send almost 125,000,000 tons of fruit and more than 2,500,000 cases of canned vegetables."

Ample Supply Here.

Washington, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—D. E. Montgomery, Agriculture Department consumers' counsel, declared today that hoarding of food supplies either by consumers or by distributors was injurious both to the general public and the interests of national defense.

Hoarding, he said, was bound to have the effect of boosting prices more than they would go up otherwise.

Montgomery's statement was issued as the department received many reports of large-scale buying of important food staples by both consumers and distributing agencies in the fear of possible future shortages or for the purpose of avoiding higher prices later.

The department insists that there is an abundance of most foods. Only in the case of some dairy products poultry products, some kinds of meats, certain canned vegetables, and fruits, and products imported from Europe or Asia, is there a possibility, officials said, that the supply may not be large enough to meet both the increased demand of this country and of larger requirements for shipment to Great Britain under the "aid-for-democracy" program.

Sharp Drop Reported In Wheat Crop Of European Countries

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Agriculture Department said today that rains during the August harvest season reduced Europe's sorely-needed wheat crop by about 30,000,000 bushels.

On the basis of such weather and crop information as is now available, the department forecast European production (exclusive of the Soviet Union) at 1,430 000.000 bushels. Earlier forecasts were for 1,460,000.000 bushels.

Despite the weather loss, a 1941 crop of the size estimated would be larger than last year's smaller outturn of 1,325,000,000 bushels, but below the five-year (1930-34) average of 1,516,-000,000 bushels.

The department said that should unfavorable weather conditions continue for harvesting and threshing operations, especially in northern Europe, some further small reductions in the European total may occur. This year's crop was said to be below that of last year in quality because of a very high moisture content.

As far as individual countries and regions are concerned, the principal gains over last year were expected in western Europe, notably France, the British Isles and Portugal, with some small increases in central Europe and the Danube basin. The crop in French North Africa was reported to be considerably above last year's poor crop and should permit some exports. Prospects in Turkey and Greece, on the other hand, were reported much less favorable than a year ago.

Arms Work Affects Gadgets

Many Household Articles Will Contain Substitutes for Defense Materials.

Washington, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Face powder, hairpins, cooking utensils, sporting goods, toys, electrical appliances, ash trays and other gadgets on the counters of retail stores this fall are going to show the effects of the defense program, OPM officials said today.

Shortages of critical materials needed in the armament program are being felt sharply in scores of industries which make common household articles. Few defense officials believe, however, that many widely used items will disappear entirely from the market. Substitutes will take the place of aluminum, zinc, copper and other scarce materials.

Here are a few of the changes likely to be made:

Hairpins of wood or plastics instead of high-grade wires; cellophane, waxed paper and transparent plastics wrappings instead of tin-foil for cheese, candy bars, chewing gum and tea; refrigerator trays of plastics or glass instead of aluminum; enamelware and iron utensils instead of aluminum.

No Bottle Cap Cork.

The cork under bottle caps may be replaced with a rubber derivative or paper. The nickel in bicycle lights, horns and sirens may be supplanted by enamel steel.

Brass inflators for footballs and basketballs will be made of some other metal; hickory shafts are likely to become more popular on golf clubs for there will be little high-grade sheet steel available for steel ones; linen fishing lines may become scarce.

Santa Claus was not caught asleep by priorities restrictions, officials say. Stocks of toy trains, wagons, automobile, coasters and scooters are reported adequate for the Christmas trade in most instances, but the production of roller skates is decreasing as manufacturers find increasing difficulties in obtaining materials.

Eventually, officials say, there will be extensive changes in toys, since many of them are made of scarce metals. One maker of toy telephone sets has curtailed his production because of inability to get copper wire.

Zinc is the adherent base of much face powder, but manufacturers say that substitutes are being developed and consumers may not be able to discern the difference. Aluminum hair-curlers, portable hair dryers and permanent wave machines are now being made of other materials.

Electrical appliances have been hit hard by priorities, but reports to defense officials indicate that many manufacturers are developing satisfactory substitutes for the metals used presently on toasters, waffle irons and grills.

No Rubber Shortage Yet.

Efforts to conserve rubber have affected the consumer so far principally in the disappearance of white-sidewall tires and of multi-colored galoshes. Officials are endeavoring to build up stock piles of rubber, but they assert that so far no concern has been told that it cannot have rubber for civilian products. The making of white sidewall tires was forbidden because that type uses more rubber than the ordinary dark tire.

One maker of baby nipples has complained that he was unable to obtain rubber, but officials see little possibility of cutting supplies for such manufacturers at any time in the near future.

Puzzling to many housewives, who know that the Government extended full priority control over aluminum months ago, is the fact that pots and pans of that scarce material are still on the shelves of many stores and some concerns have offered such merchandise in special sales recently.

The answer is that it is a long path from the aluminum plant to the retail counter. Manufacturers used up their stock on hand and it has taken months for available supplies to pass from distributors and to the retail market.

AUTO PRODUCTION CUT 48.4 PER CENT

December Reduction Fixed By OPM May Be Even Greater In January

Henderson Says Workers Displaced Will Find Jobs In Aircraft Plants

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 15—A sweeping 48.4 per cent. reduction in passenger automobile production for December was ordered by the Office of Production Management today and some Government sources predicted that an even deeper slash might be expected for January and succeeding months of 1942.

The curtailment after the first of the year probably will take the form of a leveling-off process, pinning production approximately to the figure specified by OPM for December—204,848 passenger cars, as compared with 396,823 in December, 1940.

2,450,000 Output

Thus, the over-all production for the 1942 model year—August 1, 1941, to July 31, 1942—would be brought to around 2,450,000 passenger cars, approximately half the 1941 model year output.

The OPM said in August that the halving of production would be necessary to conserve steel and other strategic metals for defense requirements.

Job Question.

Leon Henderson, director of Civilian Supply, said that a wholesale displacement of workers which is expected to result from the curtailment was timed to coincide with an expected increase in the number of jobs for skilled mechanical workers in aircraft engine and other defense plants. Steps are being taken to place idle workers in defense jobs and to direct additional defense orders into the communities most seriously affected.

SEP 16 1941

The December cut amounts to 51.5 per cent., on an average, for the large motor companies—Chrysler, Ford and General Motors. For smaller producers, who are less able to withstand wholesale reduction, it amounts to an average of 15.3 per cent.

In the case of Hudson, Willys-Overland and Crosley, increases were allowed. This was because Hudson and Willys-Overland were in a particularly low production period last December and Crosley has on hand parts already fabricated. Crosley turned out only thirty-five cars in December.

Cut In Trucks

A comparatively light cut, nine per cent., was ordered in output of trucks weighing one and a half tons for August, September, October and November. Light trucks, it was explained, are essential for hauling live stock and produce, for the use of power and telephone company maintenance crews, and for the distribution of groceries, milk, newspapers and retail goods. Quotas for individual light truck manufacturers have not yet been worked out.

"Bright-work" and other ornamental but non-functioning parts which absorb large quantities of chrome and other defense-metals will soon be banned, it was announced, but no date was set for this step. It was indicated that passenger car makers would be asked to eliminate such trimmings voluntarily.

U. S. AGREEMENT WITH ALCOA SCORED

SEP 15 1941

Aluminum Contract Termed "Entirely Onesided" By Senate Group Counsel

Jones Tells Investigating Committee $52,000,000 Deal Is "Good And Safe"

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 15—A $52,000,000 Government contract with the Aluminum Corporation of America was assailed as "entirely onesided" today before the Senate Defense Investigating Committee after Jesse H. Jones, Secretary of Commerce, had described the agreement as "good and safe."

Hugh A. Fulton, committee counsel, said "it's difficult to find any obligation on the part of "Alcoa" and that the contract would prevent the Government from operating its own plants "unless Alcoa agrees."

Jones, as head of the Defense Plants Corporation, an RFC subsidiary, signed the contract August 19 over the objections of Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, who termed it "contrary to the policies of this Administration."

The agreement provided that the Government furnish funds for constructing aluminum plants, which are to be leased to Alcoa for five years. Alcoa will receive fifteen per cent. of the profits as a fee for operating the factories.

Senator Mead (Dem., N. Y.), acting chairman of the committee, objected to the lack of a time clause in the construction contract, saying Alcoa could take five years to build the plants and still not be subject to penalties.

Jones retorted that the "purpose an dspirit" of the contract was for Alcoa to build the plants "as rapidly as possible."

Price Conditions Questioned

Fulton questioned ones concerning a provision whereby Alcoa could refuse to accept bauxite, basic material for aluminum, if the company considered the price was not "reasonable." The contract provides for arbitration in such an instance.

"Then if Alcoa doesn't want us to, we can't even deliver materials to our own plants," Fulton said.

Jones was aked what would happen if Alcoa refused to arbitrate on bauxite prices. He replied that the Government and the company would have no difficulty.

"I haven't any fear in the world that the Government is going to be hurt by this contract," he testified.

Estimated ¼ P. C. Net Profit

Jones estimated that Alcoa would not make a net profit exceeding one-fourth cent a pound. On the aluminum produced, and added that "it's cheap for the Government because they're the only people qualified by experience to make aluminum."

Senator Ball (Rep., Minn.) said the committee was "worried that we've used Alcoa so much they'll come out of this emergency with their monopoly position strengthened."

Consumer Goods Changes To Mark Conservation Step

Supply Priorities Head Cites 'Simplified' Design; Campaign Due

Washington, Sept. 15. — (AP.) — Donald M. Nelson, executive director of the Supply Priorities and Allocation Board, said tonight that the Government would announce in a day or two a broad campaign to conserve materials, skilled manpower and machine tool capacity by simplifying the design of many items of consumer goods.

"The job will be done the democratic way," he told the National Retail Drygoods Association. "Everyone who is interested will have a chance to be heard. But it will be done just as speedily and effectively as we know how to do it. And we are not going to miss anything."

Asserting that the United States should take "double or nothing" as its motto and double its present effort, Nelson said, "frankly we have only begun to feel the effects of this defense program."

"In every way possible," he continued, "we are compelled to use all of our materials, all of our men and all of our factories for the production of essentials.

"That means for the duration of the emergency, a somewhat lower standard of living for all of us, particularly as to the luxuries we practically take for granted."

Simplification of consumer items, Nelson said, would be a matter of giving up the frills and trimmings.

"Notice that I said 'simplifications,' not 'standardization'," he added. "There is a world of difference. We do not propose to standardize styles."

entering a stage in its preparations in which an increase in the output of war materials can be achieved only at the expense of civilian production."

The report also asserted that the solution of the labor problem in relation to the defense program "may prove impossible unless the government clearly defines its policies relating to wages, hours, the closed shop, profits and similar questions."

Both labor and management, the report said, "must be brought to a full realization of the stakes in this war."

Of proposals to curb strikes by legislation, the association said: "Industrial peace is likely to be more solid and permanent if obtained through voluntary co-operation of labor and management."

Although the report discounted some criticisms directed at the National Defense Mediation Board, the association said the agency "has in practice confused mediation and arbitration." Its recommendations in many cases "constitute compulsory arbitration, particularly since they may be enforced by government seizure of the strike-bound plant," the association said. It added that it was difficult for parties in a labor dispute to be completely frank with "mediators who may later pronounce an arbitral judgment."

Coincidentally, the National Labor Relations Board announced a change in procedure which it said would "expedite consideration of cases" by eliminating an average 10-day interval between the date of issuance of an intermediate report by a trial examiner and its transfer to the board. Under previous procedure such reports were sent to regional offices first, now they will be handed to the board's chief trial examiner and copies mailed to the regional offices.

Says Price Ceiling Imposition Demands Wages And Profit Limit

Research Organization Asserts Government's Efforts In Rate Control Unlikely To Succeed If Consumer Income Continues To Rise

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP) — The Foreign Policy Association said today that the imposition of a ceiling on prices requires a similar limit on wages and profits.

In a study of defense economy in the United States, the private research organization said that the government was striving "to control prices for consumers' goods, but its efforts are unlikely to succeed if consumer income derived from wages and business continue to rise."

The defense program, the report contended, "should not be considered simply in the light of opportunities for higher profits and wages. The country is now

15 Minutes A Day Asked

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 15—William S. Knudsen, director general of the OPM, asserted tonight that even an extra fifteen minutes' work by every American would step up arms production so much it would bring about Hitler's defeat and cut short the duration of the war "by a substantial margin."

The plea for an increase in the total "man hours" production effort of the country was made by Knudsen in a broadcast address.

"If every man working today worked one extra hour a day, six days a week, that would be something like an extra 300,000,000 man hours per week and that would produce a lot more planes, ships, tanks and guns," he said. "An extra half hour a day would be 150,000,000 more man hours per week and just fifteen minutes additional would give us 75,000,000 more man hours."

American Stocks Financing British

Realize $70,000,000 by Sales in Nine Months

NEW YORK, Sept. 15 (AP)—The World-Telegram said today a survey showed more than $70,000,000 has been raised by the British Government through sale of listed American stocks in the last nine months.

Sales totalled about 2,600,000 shares in nearly 100 companies and were mostly handled through Wall Street brokers and investment banking firms, the paper said.

The British government acquired the securities by requisitioning the holdings of its nationals, and reimbursing them with British government bonds.

Canal Defenses Praised

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 15—A Congressional committee chairman reported today that the United States was rapidly forging a ring of defenses around the Panama Canal which soon would make it impregnable from the east.

Representative Dow W. Harter (Dem., Ohio), head of a five-man group studying the aviation arm of the nation's defense program, said that already the Caribbean area was very potent defensively, and added: "We will be safe enough plenty soon."

"Most Difficult To Attack"

Returning with colleagues from a four-week, 18,000-mile tour of the Caribbean and United States aviation facilities, Harter said:

"When all these outlying bases are completed, it will give us a ring of defenses which will be well-nigh impregnable. It will be most difficult for any enemy or group of enemies to attack the canal."

He reported that the army had "done first things first" and had given priority to the building of suitable runways at all these bases.

Army and Navy Seek to Censor Overseas News

Forrestal Says Plan Awaits New Law; Compulsory Press Censorship Denied

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (AP).—The House learned from the Navy Department today that joint Army-Navy plans had been worked out for censorship of international communications but that no provisions for compulsory censorship of the press were involved.

Representative William S. Jacobsen, Democrat, of Iowa, submitted a letter from James Forrestal, Acting Secretary of the Navy, explaining the situation. Mr. Forrestal's letter, addressed to Carl Vinson, Democrat, of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Committee, was in response to Mr. Vinson's request for a report on a resolution by Representative Paul W. Shafer, Republican, of Michigan, asking whether plans for press and radio censorship existed.

Mr. Forrestal said the proposed censorship would be limited to "the control of communications passing between the United States and foreign countries or overseas possessions and between ships and shore."

He added that the plan would have to be approved by "higher authority" and be supported by necessary legislation.

Some months ago the Navy asked Congress for funds to set up such a censorship, but the request was turned down because the necessary legislation had not been enacted, At that time it was reported that the legislation was being drafted by the Justice Department.

"The control of information the disclosure of which would be inimical to the operations of the fleet is but one of the many problems which is under constant study by the Navy Department," Mr. Forrestal wrote. "Working in close liaison with the War Department, joint plans have been prepared setting forth the measures which should be taken to obtain such control. Subject to approval by higher authority and supported by such legislation as may be necessary, these plans provide the necessary machinery for censorship of international communications.

"It may be stated without injury to the public interest that such plans contain no provisions for compulsory censorship of the press, but are limited to the control of communications passing between the United States and foreign countries or overseas possessions and between ships and shore."

Inasmuch as the letter contained the information sought by Mr. Shafer, the House agreed to table his resolution.

Sees Divided Views On U. S. in Britain

Publisher Reports Some for, Other Against, Our Entry

NEW YORK, Sept. 15 (AP)—British opinion is divided on whether the United States should actively enter the war, Paul Patterson, president of the Baltimore Sun, reported today on arrival from England aboard the Atlantic clipper.

In his eight weeks in Britain, Patterson declared, he found that some well-informed Englishmen did not "want the United States in at this time" because of their belief that formal entry would hamper the flow of American supplies to British forces.

Lord Beaverbrook, British minister of supply, told him, Patterson said, that American entry would unquestionably be helpful and asserted that this country "wouldn't get into full production until it got on a war basis."

Patterson said he was convinced that "nobody can spend a couple of months in England without feeling that whatever we can do to shorten the war should be done 100 per cent," and added that the British were making all kinds of sacrifices "with the gayest, cheeriest spirit."

Army Making Poison Gas

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 15—The Wall Street Journal said today: "The mystery behind the shortage in chlorine, hardest-to-get chemical in America, finally can be revealed.

"The primary but hitherto secret reason for the shortage is the huge and unexpected demand from Government arsenals for the production of war gases.

"For several months the chemical industry has been trying to explain the situation without giving away a closely guarded War Department secret.

Secret Comes To Light

"The shortage has been obvious. A score of big industries dependent on it for peacetime as well as defense production have been growing more and more worried about their supplies.

"Until the chief of the chemical warfare service, Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, made a speech a few days ago before the American Chemical Society and revealed officially that poison gas is being produced by the army in quantity, the chemical industry could not discuss the matter.

Chlorine, a poisonous gas, is made from common table salt. Some of its peacetime uses include: bleach for paper and textiles; purification of water; use in dry cleaning fluids, ethyl gasoline, plastics, safety glass and patent radiator anti-freeze mixtures.

He told a Federal Court judge and jury trying 16 men on charges of espionage conspiracy that a German Gestapo leader had given him five micro-photographs of instructions to be distributed to spies here.

One of the postage stamp size documents, which Sebold said was addressed early last year to Frederick Duquesne, a defendant, asked for detailed information on:

The instructions concluded with a warning to German agents to "report immediately any signs of American mobilization" and the shipment of war materials and Army units.

Sebold said he delivered the instructions to Duquesne in New York, shortly after his arrival from Germany.

Alleged Spy Leader Pleads Not Guilty

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—Kurt Frederick Ludwig, named by the Government as the master spy of a widespread espionage ring, pleaded innocent in Federal court today to an indictment charging him and four others with violation of the Federal Espionage Act.

Judge John W. Holland held Ludwig in $50,000 bail at the request of Mathias F. Correa, United States Attorney, and set the case for trial, September 22, when a co-defendant, Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer, 25-year-old secretary, also is scheduled to go to trial.

Ludwig and Mrs. Mayer, who also has pleaded innocent, and three other defendants who have pleaded guilty were charged in the indictment with participating in a conspiracy involving representatives of the German Government, and agents in Spain and Portugal, to acquire and transmit to the German Government information vital to national defense.

Jews Ask Committee To Repudiate Lindbergh

Anti-Defamation Counsel Declares Statements Discredit America First Movement

Minneapolis, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Jewish Anti-Defamation Council, of Minnesota, today asked the America First Committee to repudiate Charles A. Lindbergh's assertion in Des Moines, Iowa, last week, linking Jews with Britons and the Roosevelt Administration in efforts to drag America into the war.

In a letter to Gen. Robert Wood, of Chicago, head of the America First Committee, Arthur Brin, of Minneapolis, chairman of the Minnesota Jewish Anti-Defamation Committee, said:

"Lindbergh's statements reveal either such a gross ignorance as to discredit the responsibility of the America First Committee or else his following of the Hitler line that 'the very enormity of a lie contributes to its success.'"

Rumania Issues Denial That General Was Shot

Legation Answers Ankara Report Troops Balked At Going Beyond Dniester

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Rumanian legation in a statement today said the "Rumanian Government emphatically denies the report that General Ciuperca and other Rumanian officers had been shot for refusing to advance beyond the river Dniester" in the war on Russia.

Ankara dispatches yesterday said foreign quarters there had heard that General Ciuperca was shot and that the Rumanian army and public were bitterly discontented with continuance of the war after advance of Rumanian troops to the old frontier between Russia and Bessarabia.

"General Ciuperca, as commander-in-chief of the Rumanian armies in Southern Bessarabia, has himself found it necessary to cross the Dniester solely in consequence of military considerations insuring Bessarabia against further Communist threats," the legation statement said.

As to reports of popular discontent, the statement said the military operations were an expression of "the legitimate national will to liberate 3,000,000 Rumanians" in Bessarabia and Bucovina, ceded to Russia in 1940.

Urges More Active Role in World Affairs.

Milwaukee, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Sergt. Alvin C. York of Tennessee, one of the ranking heroes of the world war and an advocate of all-out aid to Russia as a means of stopping Nazi Germany, wants the American Legion national convention to play an important part in molding the foreign policy of the United States.

Sergt. York spoke last night at a religious-patriotic service for Legionnaires on the eve of the first business session of the twenty-third annual convention—faced with serious decisions on problems arising from the foreign conflict.

An avowed interventionist, York urged the legion to stay out of politics but to take a big hand in shaping the nation's foreign policy.

"For we who are here have learned a lesson," he said. "We learned that liberty, freedom and democracy are not inherited. We know that a country cannot fight to win them once and then stop. We learned the hard way that liberty and freedom and democracy are prizes awarded only to those people who fight to win them—and then fight eternally to hold them."

York Criticizes Nye.

Sergt. York, whose life has been depicted in a movie, disagreed with the statement of Senator Gerald Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, non-interventionist, that the picture bearing his name is propaganda.

"If the story of my life is propaganda, then so is this very convention, because the simple story of my life revolved around the same great experiences that your's does," he said. If our lives are propaganda, and Senator Nye is against all propaganda, then he should start immediately to tear up all the history books in the country."

Fidler Says Movie Producers Tried To Suppress His Column

Tells Senate Probers That They Wanted To Stop His Criticism Of Alleged War Propaganda In Films

16 1941

By JACK BELL

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—A Senate Committee heard testimony today from Jimmy Fidler, movie commentator, that Hollywood producers had attempted to suppress publication of his newspaper column partly because he had criticized alleged war propaganda in films.

Fidler, appearing before the Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee studying a proposal for a formal investigation of propaganda in the movies, testified among other things that he had rejected what was described as a "bribe" for the favorable review of a motion picture.

The columnist's testimony brought commendation from Senator Tobey (R.-N. H.) who said he thought Fidler was being "fearless," but Wendell L. Willkie, representing movie producers, declared in a press release the committee had found "a witness to its liking—a gossip writer—one who makes his living by unsupported and unproven statements about other people."

Willkie, chief attraction for the crowds who have attended the hearings thus far, was absent at today's sessions.

Fidler's testimony was given after Chairman Clark (D.-Idaho) had placed in the record an exchange of letters between Maurice Saffle, branch manager for Loew's Inc., at Seattle, Wash., and Fulton Cook, St. Mary's, Idaho, theater owner, over Cook's refusal to exhibit "The Land of Liberty." Cook described the picture as a propaganda film.

Saffle wrote Cook that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, controlled by Loew's, was distributing the picture at its own expense "at the request of the United States government." He said all rentals on the picture were to be turned over to the government, adding:

"In fact, they (the government) are so interested in the playing of the subject that we have been asked to wire immediately the names of those exhibitors who eliminate it."

Cook replied that he thought "propaganda pictures are distasteful to the public," adding that it was "of little interest to me what you or the United States government may feel about what I show in my theater."

Fidler, appearing at the afternoon session in a natty gray suit instead of the blue which he had worn earlier, testified that he had been offered "a considerable sum of money" in "a roundabout way" if he would praise the film, "The Prisoner of Zenda."

He said the offer was made through Russell Birdwell, an advertising executive for David O. Selznick. After he had rejected it, he said, he gave a favorable view to the picture because he thought it good entertainment.

When Senator McFarland (D.-Ariz.) asked Fidler if he looked upon this as a "bribe," Fidler replied that he supposed that was true. He said, however, that he felt there was nothing illegal about the proposal.

Later Birdwell telegraphed Chairman Clark denying Fidler's charges and demanding the right to appear before the committee. Clark said Birdwell would be permitted to testify later.

"Fidler is a liar when he says I discussed offering him $2,500 or any other sum for a favorable review on 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' one of the best motion pictures ever produced," Birdwell telegraphed Clark.

Describing another incident Fidler said that after he had been paid about $3,000 for an advertising "trailer" he had made for 20th Century-Fox, Harry Brand, West Coast advertising director for the company, complained about Fidler's criticism of some of the firm's pictures.

Fidler replied, he said, that he had received the money for making the trailer and did not consider that this circumstance should influence his opinions on pictures.

The attempts to suppress his newspaper column, he said, culminated recently in a call made on Norman Chandler, managing editor of the Los Angeles Times, by a group of movie producers. He said Louis B. Mayer, Harry Warner, Frank Y. Freeman, Harry Brand, Howard Strickler and Raymond Griffith were in this group.

The witness said that when Chandler refused to eliminate the Fidler column from the Times, many of the movie companies cut their advertising in the paper to a minimum.

This, he testified was only a series of attempts by the movie producers to throttle his criticisms. He recounted that his criticism of "Conquest," starring Greta Garbo and Charles Boyer, had caused Louis B. Mayer of M-G-M to protest to the National Broadcasting Company.

Don Gilman, an NBC vice-president, then wrote a letter to New York saying that Fidler's reviews should be held off the air for 30 days after a picture was released, Fidler testified.

He said that the film studios, NBC and Columbia Broadcasting System then got together to rule that all "A" pictures would have to have favorable reviews and "B" pictures receive some measure of approval.

Fidler testified that Donald R. Thornberg, vice-president of CBS, told him he was not to say anything in his broadcasts that would be "destructive or detrimental to the motion picture industry," adding that CBS "couldn't afford to offend the industry" from which it often obtained stars for radio shows.

Replying in a press release, CBS charged that it was "beset by legal difficulties and dangers so long as Jimmy Fidler was on the air because of Fidler's desire to destroy values and reputations in order to build up a big audience to which his sponsor could advertise."

Fidler said his objection to propaganda films was that they were foisted on the public as entertainment. He had no objection to the production of such films if they were labeled and exhibited as propaganda, he said.

Chairman Clark read a list of films and Fidler said he thought "Underground," "Man Hunt," "The Mortal Storm," "The Man I Married," "The Voice In The Night," "Escape," "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," "So Ends Our Night," and "Four Sons" contained propaganda.

The propaganda in "One Night in Lisbon" was only "medium," he declared but he labeled "Foreign Correspondent" as "pro-British propaganda."

George Fisher, radio movie commentator who followed Fidler to the stand, told the committee he had criticized pictures carrying a war story background for their "propaganda."

However, Senator McFarland had him read into the record an article he had written in 1939 taking Fidler and others to task for criticizing the movies for portraying what Fisher then described as "realistic" conditions.

A statement earlier in the day by Chairman Clark that "75 per cent" of newspaper columnists appeared to be engaged in attempts to "smear" the committee's inquiry, brought a comment from Willkie that "that makes Dorothy Thompson and Gen. Hugh Johnson fellow conspirators."

"Those two must be having an amusing time together," the statement went on, "perhaps discussing Colonel Lindbergh's and General Nye's recent un-American talks." Willkie obviously referred to Senator Nye (R.-N.D.), coarthur with Senator Clark (D.-Mo.) of the movie inquiry resolution.

Chairman Clark told the committee that the columnists' criticisms "suggested the possibility of concerted action in an endeavor to stop these hearings."

Declaring that he could not concur in Clark's statements, McFarland said the committee was accomplishing nothing and ought to end the inquiry. It ought also, he said, to guard against any move toward censorship.

"We'd better be careful and not have the burning of the books which Germany had in 1933, for that was the beginning of the dictatorship," he declared.

RAF Aid to Reds Draws Scrutiny

—By DEWITT MACKENZIE—

THE APPEARANCE of British-manned warplanes on the Russian front, presumably to assist the Reds in their defense of the Nazi siege of Leningrad, is a notable demonstration of allied cooperation—but it seems to me that it must be taken as emphasizing that the position of this great and strategically vital city is critical.

These planes are believed in London to have been rushed to the Bolshevist front by way of the Arctic port of Murmansk. The unit is being described vaguely as a "wing," but this likely means something like forty planes, with full RAF force, including ground personnel.

DeWitt Mackenzie

Informed quarters in London say that further strong air reinforcements are to follow, but by the slower route through Persia. So this first comparatively small expeditionary force represents a needle to try to pull Leningrad through a mighty tough situation.

These British warplanes may prove a Godsend to the hard-pressed Reds, for Berlin tells us that the German airforce has, as usual, been a tower of strength in the Nazi offensive. Indeed, the probabilities are that were it not for the Luftwaffe, the invaders would still be far from this ancient capital of the Czars, instead of claiming that they have pierced the outer rim of the city's fortifications.

FORTY BRITISH fighting planes—or whatever the number may be—constitute a small force as compared with the total warplanes in action along the Russo-German front, but they can be of big aid in a crisis. For instance, the Muscovites tell us today that the latest duel fought over Leningrad involved 100 planes and that the Germans fled after losing 17. Thus the wing of 40 planes would represent nearly half the number engaged on both sides.

Warplanes are the greatest help which Britain can give her hard-pressed ally. One assumes that it will be available at any time now, since British Premier Churchill last week announced that hundreds of planes were being sent to Russia.

Right now is the critical time for both the Nazies and the Bolshevists in the bloody battle raging along the extended front from Leningrad to the Black Sea. Hitler has perhaps a fortnight of fairly good weather left in which to get himself favorably set for the winter—and the Reds are straining every nerve to prevent this.

THE FUEHRER can have little hope that he won't have to hold a front in Russia through the winter, but he will have maneuvered himself into such a position as to do this with the least effort if he can liquidate several difficulties. He must capture Leningrad; he must hold his line in the center opposite Moscow; Kiev, great rail center and capital of the Ukraine must be captured. The stubborn and brilliant Russian defense at Odessa and along the Dnieper must be knocked out and the German lines placed farther east.

As things now stand, it is possible the Nazis will achieve a considerable portion of this program. A great deal must depend on the weather, which already is beginning to break in northern Russia. Quick arrival of further British air reinforcements might influence the position.

With so much of the strategical position in Russia confused in the minds of the general public by conflicting claims, it is natural that the question of who really is winning should be constantly at the fore. I think the answer must be at the moment that if the query relates to the European war as a whole, then the Russians have advanced the allied cause immeasurably.

Helpless But Not Beaten

French In Indo-China Give "Silent Treatment" To Japanese Soldiers Who Are Regarded "The Little Man Who Aren't There"

SEP 16 1941

(The [illegible] Special News Service)

Saigon, French Indo-China—To the Frenchman in Indo-China, the Japanese soldier has become "the little man who isn't there."

Of course, he is here, and in very large numbers, sent into this helpless French colony, presumably to prevent it from becoming a second Syria, to forestall alleged British intentions against it. He is, as the official pronouncements put it, the guardian of Indo-China's sovereignty and independence.

But the French merely ignore him.

There is no rudeness, no outright discourtesy, no obvious contempt. The French simply don't see the Japanese.

It is the only weapon left to the French.

In a military sense, they were powerless a year ago when Japan pressed the thin edge of the entering wedge against the colony. They have even less power or hope of resistance today.

Vichy governs Indo-China, and the deal to send a Japanese Army here was arranged in Vichy.

So now a Japanese Army is here. More troops are coming. Japanese businessmen are rapidly burrowing into the rich fabric of Indo-China's economy. American and British companies are liquidating, reducing staffs, sending their people home.

The French are helpless, but not beaten.

They haven't surrendered. They are not without hope.

We were on a bus only a few miles below Phnom Penh, the capital of Cambodia, en route to Saigon, the principal city near the coast. Suddenly it groaned to a stop, confronted by long lines of trucks.

They were new, American-made. Some were hauling heavy artillery. Others carried heavy loads, covered with canvas beneath which you could see gasoline drums, ammunition, supplies. Still others were loaded with Japanese soldiers, 15 or 20 to the truck.

Something like a sigh went through the passengers on the bus—"les Japonais." The "protecting" Army had landed only the day before, and here it was, already deep in the heart of Indo-China, going up to the Cambodian capital.

The faces of the French, for just a moment, were a study in bleak misery. They stared out at the advancing Japanese. There were sudden tears in the eyes of an old lady. Then she murmured, "after the war, we shall see what we shall see."

A lean, tanned Frenchman, with hair prematurely white, bit his pipe. His teeth grated on the stem, and hard knots bulged at the corners of his jaw.

And then, ostentatiously, with a great rattling and rustling, he opened his newspaper and lifted it to read. Never once, during the long wait while the Japanese trucks went past, did he raise his eyes toward them.

The others on the bus followed suit.

And all over Indo-China today, French people are doing the same thing. You see them walk past Japanese sentries, with fixed bayonets, without so much as a glance. Not a head is turned when the Japanese roll past in their cars or stroll in groups through the streets.

Japanese enter French coffee shops. The annamite waiter—a past master at delay and obstruction—somehow takes long moments to get around for the order. And then, even if the order is given in French (which it seldom is) he seems to have enormous difficulty in understanding. Eventually, he has to call someone else. That calls for another delay.

The Japanese get the idea.

In their turn, however, they have been behaving extremely well. They have none of the conquering-Army attitude, so manifest in occupied China. Their cars and trucks aren't roaring through the streets, reckless of traffic and traffic lights, as they have done in Shanghai.

There has been no discourtesy, no carousing after dark. You don't hear any crude remarks from them, nor see as much shouldering or pushing as you find in Japan itself.

Apparently they have very strict orders.

"Making friends with us," said a Frenchman with a little smile. "They learned that from the Germans. It will succeed here in just about the same proportion as it is succeeding in France."

You can't talk openly about these things today.

Officially, the Japanese are here as guardians. Officially, the French population is greatly relieved that the "British menace" has been ended. A newspaper declared that "Indo-China is fortunate to have leaders with the wisdom to save the country from war." That's the official attitude.

It is, of course, far from that of the man on the street.

Here you find a welter of conflicting opinion, all shades and hues of political thought, from staunch Vichy to furious Free French. There are French who have the conviction that a "new world order" is in the making. Not, they add, Japan's "new order in East Asia," but the one proclaimed by Berlin and Vichy.

And you find some bitterness against the democracies, coupled with the belief that the only real hope for Indo-China lies in a defeat of the Germans.

Frenchmen say they asked the United States and England for help last year, when Japan made her first gestures toward this colony, but that they were refused. "We weren't as important to you as the Netherlands Indies, where there is so much that you need. Ah, there your attitude was quick and clear."

The other side of this story is that when Indo-China appealed for help, her leaders were asked to declare themselves and the colony—Vichy or Free French? Men who claim to know insist that no concise answer ever reached Washington and London, that the French here were reluctant to commit themselves.

So today a Japanese Army of occupation is in Indo-China. The French are down, but not out. Privately, they will talk of what they plan to do "apres la guerre," or when the opportunity presents itself.

In the meantime, the Japanese is "the little man who isn't there."

MOSCOW, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué today:

In the course of the night of Sept. 14 our troops fought the enemy along the whole front.

In action on Sept. 11 and 12 our troops smashed two German regiments. One of them, the 456th Infantry Regiment, lost almost 80 per cent of its total strength. In addition, the Germans lost twenty-five tanks, twenty-eight guns, thirty-eight machine guns, nine mine-throwers, three armored cars, more than 100 motor cycles and four wireless stations.

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Sept. 16 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued the following communiqué:

During Sept. 15 our troops fought stubbornly against the enemy on the entire front.

Fifteen Fascist airplanes were shot down Sept. 13 in aerial combat. We lost ten planes.

Our aviation bombed Galati, Sulina and Constanta.

On Sept. 13 the enemy attempted to debark on the shore of Oesel Island. By naval, aviation and coastal battery fire the German landing force was destroyed. Four enemy transports and one destroyer were sunk. Two other transports and several German torpedo boats were damaged badly.

During Sept. 13 and 14 German and Rumanian troops attempted incessantly to break through toward Odessa. Our units of Red soldiers and sailors stubbornly repulsed the numerically superior enemy's attacks. In the combat the Fourth Rumanian Infantry Regiment was dispersed and one battalion of this regiment was destroyed. The operations of our land units were supported by the fire of Black Sea naval vessels.

Aerial reconnaissance reported that an enemy transport weighing about 8,000 tons, escorted by a warship and three destroyers, were en route to Petsamo. Two Soviet torpedo boats commanded by Captain Kousenko hurried to meet the enemy ships. Our ships softened their motors and slipped past enemy coastal batteries.

At the entrance to the bay and near the coast they waited for the enemy ships. The silhouettes of the fascist ships appeared soon. They passed untroubled into the bay. When they were from 500 to 600 meters away the Soviet ships launched their torpedoes. A transport and a ship escorting it were sunk.

BERLIN, Sept. 15 (AP)—Today's German High Command communiqué, issued from "the Fuehrer's Headquarters," said:

Great offensive operations in the east are progressing successfully. The encirclement of Leningrad was further tightened in stubborn fighting for possession of modernly constructed fortifications. Repeated enemy counter-attacks supported by heavy tanks collapsed.

Combat planes last night sank a 10,000-ton transport from a convoy off the British east coast.

In North Africa, German Stukas dropped heavy caliber bombs on British encampments, tanks and motor vehicle concentrations at Solum.

During an attack by German combat units the night before last on the regions around the Suez port of Tewfik, oil deposits were set afire.

The enemy did not enter the Reich's territory day or night.

British

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 15 (AP)—British General Headquarters issued this communiqué today:

Libya—During the night of Sept. 13-14 our patrols around Tobruk intensified their activities, carrying out a series of brilliant raids against enemy positions facing the eastern sector of our defenses.

An Italian officer and three other ranks were captured from one strong point. At two other strong points close fighting took place in which the enemy sustained heavy casualties, leaving twenty killed on the ground and two prisoners in our hands. In addition, one field gun and one anti-aircraft gun were destroyed.

In retaliation, a strong enemy force supported by a number of tanks engaged and overran by sheer weight of numbers one of our listening posts, containing six men. Three German tanks employed in this operation were subsequently engaged and captured by British tanks, and the enemy concentration then was dispersed by heavy artillery fire.

In the frontier area, two enemy columns containing armored fighting vehicles carried out a reconnaissance in force, penetrating some miles across the frontier.

Under cover of close air support, advance elements of our mechanized forces engaged these columns, inflicting considerable damage and losses upon them. One German medium tank, complete with crew, was captured, and both enemy columns now are withdrawing, followed up by British troops.

The text of a Royal Air Force communiqué:

A strong force of bomber aircraft of the South African Air Force yesterday attacked and dispersed enemy motor transport and armored fighting vehicles in the frontier area. A large number of bombs fell among the vehicles. Many direct hits were observed and fires of considerable dimensions broke out.

The last formation of our attacking aircraft, with its fighter escort, was engaged by German and Italian fighters. In the ensuing air combats one ME-109 and one G-50 were destroyed and others badly damaged. One of our bombers and three fighters are missing.

During the night of Sept. 13-14 bombers of the Royal Air Force raided Tripoli, Bengazi and Barce.

At Tripoli bombs were dropped on shipping in the harbor and at the Spanish Quay. Many bursts were observed on and near ships both in the harbor and at the quayside.

At Zuara a large ship believed to have been part of the remnants of a convoy successfully attacked by the Fleet Air Arm and R. A. F. in the Central Mediterranean was seen blazing furiously. The ship later exploded with great violence.

At Bengazi the harbor and shipping were bombed, while at Barce an oil storage building was destroyed.

Another force of our fighters carried out an attack on a large concentration of enemy aircraft on Gambut landing ground. The attack was successful, and a large number of enemy aircraft were either destroyed or badly damaged. An Italian S-79 was shot down in the frontier zone.

Gerbini airdrome was bombed by Fleet Air Arm aircraft during the night of Sept. 13-14.

The crew of one of our aircraft lost in the Mediterranean on Sept. 12 has now been brought to safety.

In addition to those mentioned above, one other of our aircraft is missing.

A special R. A. F. communiqué stated:

Further details of yesterday's air operations over the frontier zone in the Western Desert show that in addition to the three enemy aircraft (one G-50, one ME-109 and one S-79) mentioned in this afternoon's communiqué, two JU-87s were destroyed by anti-aircraft fire and another was compelled to make a crash landing, the crew being captured.

An attack by our fighters on the Gambut landing ground yesterday afternoon was very successful and a number of enemy aircraft were severely damaged. Last night an attack on the same landing ground was renewed by aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm. Their bombing attacks resulted in the destruction of eight enemy aircraft, which were left in flames, and some half-dozen others damaged.

In these intensive day and night operations, therefore, the R. A. F., South African Air Force and Fleet Air Arm between them destroyed eleven enemy aircraft. Three more were destroyed by anti-aircraft fire, making fourteen in all. Many others were severely damaged.

Two of our aircraft are missing in addition to the five previously announced. Two of the pilots are known to be safe.

LONDON, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued this communiqué tonight:

Blenheim aircraft of the Bomber Command attacked an escorted enemy convoy off the Frisian Islands this afternoon. One of the ships was left sinking and another was hit and damaged.

Other Blenheims of the same command attacked enemy shipping at Haugesund, on the west coast of Norway, and a factory in the same area.

Our fighters maintained a number of offensive patrols over the Channel and enemy-occupied territory today. In one of these an enemy fighter was destroyed.

In these operations we lost two aircraft, a bomber and a fighter.

A communique of the Air and Home Security Ministries:

One enemy aircraft dropped bombs on a town on the northeast coast last night. These caused some damage and a small number of casualties.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 15 (AP)—Today's Italian High Command communiqué:

In North Africa, on the Tobruk front, local infantry actions and artillery activity by the Axis were reported. The adversary suffered losses and left prisoners in our hands.

Italian and German planes bombed the fortress, while the enemy dropped bombs on Tripoli and Bengazi. Some civilian buildings were damaged and several native dwellings destroyed. Bengazi's anti-aircraft defense shot down one plane.

In East Africa British aviation multiplied its active bombing and machine-gunning actions against our advanced positions.

In the Wolchefit sector our artillery hit numerous enemy motor trucks transporting troop reinforcements.

In the Lake Tana sector a strong column of ours under command of Lieut. Col. Giulio de Sio carried out an extensive action, engaging considerable enemy forces. Following particularly fierce fighting, the enemy was forced to withdraw with serious loss. Our troops demonstrated their usual valor and aggressive spirit.

The following particularly distinguished themselves: the Fourteenth Group of Cavalry Squadrons and the Third Galliano Battalion, which with repeated charges and counter-attacks brought about the rout of enemy detachments.

THE OLD MAN HEROICALLY STOOD THE TORTURE AND DIED WITHOUT SAYING A SINGLE WORD.

AT NIGHT A MESSENGER FROM THE VILLAGE ARRIVED AT THE GUERRILLAS' CAMP AND REPORTED THE VILLAINOUS CRIME OF THE FASCIST CUTTHROATS. WITH PERMISSION OF THE COMMANDER, VORONIN'S SONS WENT TO THE NATIVE VILLAGE. THEY CUT THE TELEPHONE WIRE CONNECTING THE VILLAGE WHERE THE COMPANY WAS STATIONED WITH THE REGIMENTAL HEADQUARTERS. A SOLDIER SENT OUT TO FIX THE LINE WAS KILLED. THE FASCISTS SENT TWO MORE SOLDIERS WITH ONE NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICER BUT THEY MET THE SAME FATE.

THE NEXT DAY THE VORONIN BROTHERS SHOT THREE GERMAN SOLDIERS WHO DROVE A HERD OF COWS SEIZED ON NEIGHBORING COLLECTIVE FARMS. THAT NIGHT FIRES BHOKE OUT IN VARIOUS PARTS OF THE VILLAGE IN AMMUNITION DUMPS AND BARNS FILLED WITH PLUNDERED FODDER. THE SOLDIERS RUSHED TO EXTINGUISH THE FIRES. Martinique Background (15/9/41) PX to WX 30.W
By the Associated Press (marked) TO WX)

Ever since the collapse of metropolitan France in June, 1940, Martinique has been regarded as a potential loophole for an axis thrust against the panama canal through the great defense rim of the windward and leeward islands and the new U.S. bases obtained from Britain in the destroyer deal.

SEP 16 1941

The position of the orphaned Vichy French island at the center of the Caribbean defense chain at least wrote a sinister question mark where the United States wanted a positive point of protection.

Both British and U.S. warships have patrolled the waters outside the spacious harbor of Fort de France on a constant vigil---lately kept up by the U.S. alone---lest Nazi pressure on Vichy should put a shotgun squeeze-play upon this outpost of empire.

Demands have been made from time to time by congressmen and naval experts and editorial writers for the seizure of Martinique on various grounds ranging from debt satisfaction to defensive necessity. President Roosevelt stopped off Martinique on his Caribbean cruise of August, 1940, and his visit was saluted in a communique issued by the colonial government.

But the popular affections of the islanders for the Vichy regime on the one hand and the De Gaullist Free French on the other have remained unknown due to a steam censorship.

SEP 19 1941

There was some talk of a plebiscite in 1940 to determine between Vichy and De Gaulle but it never came off and the official attitude clave to the government of Marshal Petain. Of late the V (presumably for victory) has been seen in Martinique.

Although Martinique and neighboring French Guadeloupe, both discovered by Columbus in 1502, are considered jewels of the empire for their beauty and production, and as examplars of colonial life, their main value to the western hemisphere is strictly strategic.

In hostile hands they would constitute a rotten core in the far-flung U.S. defenses guarding the vital link of the 2-ocean navy---the panama canal.

One of the paradoxes of wartime is that sultry Martinique was the last vital link between the pre-armistice French government of Paul Reynaud, the stepping stone for material hastened from the United States in answer to Reynaud's desperate appeal for "clouds of warplanes" from across the ocean.

As evidence of this, nearly 100 American-made planes, stranded while enroute to collapsing France, still stand on Martinique, deteriorating under the tropical sun and lashing winds and seasonal rains, and useless now. SEP 16 1941

As further evidence of former American collaboration with France, hundreds of millions in gold lie cached in Martinique, apparently a war-purchase reserve fund spirited out of France ahead of the Nazis and moved to safekeeping through Canada and the United States before France surrendered.

The most potent units of France's defense of Martinique throughout the uncertain period of Nazi pressure on Vichy were the cruiser Emile Bertin and the aircraft carrier Bearn.

Behind these were the harbor fortress, a stronghold of undetermined potentialities and a small garrison of colored troops officered by the French.

With such little power at command, the purpose of the garrison under Admiral Georges Robert, a spade-bearded old naval man who nominally commanded for Vichy all the French possessions in the western hemisphere, was to sabotage the gold and any weapons at the approach of a landing force.

The admiral supposedly had Vichy orders to "blow up the gold" rather than have it impounded by any nation.

The British navy has made some comic-opera passes at Martinique, such as the time in 1940 when signals were exchanged between English warships and the French. The British told the French that heavy gunfire would be heard from the sea but not to mind, it would be only target practice. SEP 16 1941

Various meanings were read into this incident but nothing came of it. The British-American vigil sharpened then when the Bearn and the Bertin steamed out to sea one day, but came ~~XXXX~~ back to port with the explanation that is routine stuff---to keep up the morale of the crews.

Of late a pair of U.S. destroyers have been bouncing on the waves outside Fort de France , just looking on, while commerce in the island remained at a standstill for want of ships and markets to dispose of rum and sugar for staples needed from elsewhere. The United States has relaxed credits at times to permit the Martiniquais to buy food.

Martinique has a long history of bloodshed, for it was a plum in the battles between the Spanish, French,

Dutch and British for control of the Indies, and it has changed hands several times. The stamp of the French, however, is most durable in speech and customs for all the [illegible] shades of the populace, ranging from black to white.

Nature, too, has taken its toll of Martinique with hurricanes, earthquakes and volcanic eruptions between long periods of blissful tropical life. The eruption of mount pele , one of the great disasters of history, erased the city of St. Pierre in 1902, killing 40,000.

SEP 16 1941

With an area of only 385 square miles, Martinique has a population of more than 250,000, an average of almost 650 per square mile.

Napoleon's empress Josephine was born on a sugar estate at Trois Ilets near Fort de France.

The capital was successively called Fort Royal, Fort de la Republique, Fort Napoleon and finally Fort de France although to some of the residents it is still Fort Royal.

Berlin Reports Annihilation of 18 Red Divisions

SEP 17 1941

BERLIN, Sept. 16 (AP).—A broad German push eastward from the lower Dnieper River was reported by Adolf Hitler's headquarters today to top off claims of successes ranging the full length of the 2,000-mile Russian front.

A special communique reported a crushing victory over three Russian armies in the north-central sector, roughly 150 miles south of Leningrad, while news agency dispatches told of steady inroads into the ring of redoubts around besieged Leningrad itself.

The High Command said German land troops, strongly supported by the air force, established bridgeheads on the Dnieper, held and widened them in several days of fierce fighting against Soviet tanks and infantry, and now had thrust on to the east. Some reports said they already were penetrating the Nogaisk Steppe, indicating a possible move to isolate the heavily-fortified Crimean Peninsula from the mainland.

The High Command reported in a special bulletin the defeat of the Soviet 1th, 27th and 34th armies south of Lake Ilmen.

It said nine divisions were "completely annihilated," nine others crushed with "the bloodiest of losses," 53,000 men captured and 320 tanks and 695 cannon either captured or smashed.

(On a division strength of 15,000, this would imply Russian losses of 270,000 men.)

Around Leningrad, DNB said, German infantry broke through stubbornly defended bunkers Sunday, putting 91 out of action and capturing 800 Russians, then seized an unidentified "larger community" behind the forts. Previously more than 200 of these bunkers had been reported taken.

The High Command, however, reported no specific developments either around Leningrad or besieged Odessa on the Black Sea, but news agencies and front-line correspondents emphasized the crossing of the great Dnieper River barrier.

Karl Eckert, a German war correspondent, said the Fuehrer's forces had been streaming across the Dnieper for at least a week, while the Red Air force strove repeatedly to destroy the temporary bridges spanning that vital watercourse.

An authorized military spokesman said the Dnieper bridgeheads were established by keeping the Russian positions under artillery and air bombardment for days on end.

A Wilhelmstrasse commentator said the Russians had considered themselves safe behind the lower river, 1,000 yards wide and 18 feet deep. They admitted poor weather had held the Germans back for a while, but said the skies had cleared and German troops had "new tasks" to perform.

There was speculation as to whether cutting off the Crimea might be one of these tasks, in fashion similar to the isolation of the Peloponnesus in the Greek campaign last April.

The railway traversing the narrow isthmus to the Crimean already has been "broken in many places" by German bombardment, and an important railway station has been it, according to DNB. Soviet fortifications in the area have been bombed repeatedly, the news agency added.

Shipping in the Black Sea off the Crimea also has been pounded.

At the other extremity of the front, two Soviet transports were reported sunk and another damaged by dive bomberx attacks on Murmansk and its vicinity.

Other German planes bombed Soviet positions around Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, claiming destruction of 21 Russian tanks and 14 planes there.

In all the Russians lost 96 planes yesterday, the agency stated.

Observers in Berlin were surprised at the announcement of the great victory on the North-Central front near Lake Ilmen, for it had been assumed that area had been cleared of the Russians long ago.

This impression, Dienst Aus Deutschland, the authoritative commentator explained, was due to characteristic encirclement tactics designed to immobilize large concentrations of an enemy then gradually move in and destroy them. Dienst added that Berlin military circles were convinced the report of this action "gave only one phase of general developments in the East."

The High Command communique said the battle of destruction had occurred during past weeks, and it credited airmen under Colonel General Keller with a large share in the victory of Colonel General Busch's troops.

(A Stockholm dispatch by Reuters, British news agency, reported the Germans had captured the Island of Vormsi, which lies between the Estonian mainland an the Island of Dagoe. The Russians still hold fortified Dagoe and Oesel.)

But Russians Assert They Won Big Tank Battle Outside City.

Berlin Puts Losses of Enemy in the North at 270,000, Half Annihilated.

Berlin, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler's field headquarters announced today the decisive defeat of three entire Russian armies about 150 miles south of Leningrad and the seizure of important bridgeheads on the broad reaches of the lower Dnieper far to the south as highlights of a general push eastward all along the Russian front.

[On the other hand, Red Star, the Soviet Army newspaper, reported that a gigantic night battle of heavy tanks for an important point on the approaches to Leningrad had ended in a complete rout of the Germans, who left hundreds dead on the field.]

Air Force Aids Nazis.

In both actions announced by the Nazis effective support by the German air force was said to have accounted for a large share of the successes, which were announced while other dispatches from the front pictured Leningrad's steel and concrete fortifications as crumbling and the German forces approaching ever closer to that beleaguered city.

The Eleventh, Twenty-seventh and Thirty-fourth Russian armies were beaten south of Lake Ilmen, on the north-central front, a special communique declared. Nine divisions were declared "completely annihilated" and nine more "crushed with the bloodiest of losses."

[Estimating a division at about 15,000 men, this may indicate the loss of about 270,000 Russian soldiers.]

In addition, 320 tanks and 695 pieces of field artillery were among the vast stocks of Russian war materials captured or destroyed, the special announcement said. Troops of Col.-Gen. Busch and the air arm under Col.-Gen. Keller were credited with the victory after a battle of several weeks.

Tell of Drive in Ukraine.

This special communique was followed almost immediately by another announcing seizure of the Dnieper bridgeheads.

The sites of the bridgeheads were not disclosed.

Karl Eckert, German war correspondent, said that Hitler's forces had been streaming across the lower Dnieper for at least a week.

The Russians had considered their positions safe behind the 1,000-yard wide Dnieper, an official spokesman said. Bad weather in this sector has given way to good, he said, and German troops "have new tasks" cut out for them.

Dispatches from the front said that more than 200 bunkers and pill boxes in the Leningrad defense zone, originally some seventy-five miles deep, had been smashed or captured. At some places German troops, advancing after a devastating bombardment by siege guns and dive bombers, were reported only fifteen miles from the heart of the city.

DNB, the official German news agency, reported that a German infantry division had broken through stubbornly defended bunker positions two days ago and captured an unnamed "larger community" within the fortified zone before Leningrad.

The Germans acknowledged the Red army was offering fierce resistance and that Leningrad's modern defense works were proving a tough nut to crack, but military commentators reiterated with growing confidence that the fall of the one-time capital of the Czars was only a matter of time.

Odessa "Resisting Bravely"

Less glowing were accounts of operations around the Black Sea port of Odessa which, though besieged by German-Rumanian forces for more than a month and pounded repeatedly from the air, was said to be resisting bravely.

Stockholm dispatches today reported the German capture of Vormsi Island, between the Estonian mainland and Dagoe Island, at the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. Dagoe is used by the Russians as an important air and naval operations base.

Stuka bombers sank two Soviet transports totaling 3,000 tons and heavily damaged a 1,000-ton ship in the Arctic Murmansk, DNB said.

Second Oesel Push By Nazis Smashed, Moscow Declares

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Wednesday, Sept. 17—A second Nazi attempt to land troops by air and sea on the Russian-held Estonian island of Oesel was reported smashed today by Red defenses.

"As a result of two days fierce fighting," the Soviet communique said, "the bulk of the enemy marine and air landing parties was annihilated and the remnants thrown into the sea."

Many transports, small craft and air ferry planes were used in the second German attempt to storm the island after the Soviets reported destroying four German transports and one destroyer in the first attempt last Saturday.

Part Of Leningrad Defense

Defense of Oesel island is part of the defense of Leningrad to the east at the end of the Baltic.

Before that beleaguered city, the Soviets said today that big Red tanks had smashed into German positions destroying forty-eight Nazi tanks and armored cars, twenty-seven guns and thirteen mine throwers.

Altogether Red fleet units and shore batteries sank a total of thirty-odd Nazi naval craft in the Baltic and Arctic seas, and the transports sunk off Oesel contained tanks as well as troops, the Russians said.

Massed Air Attacks

Heavy fighting along the entire front continued with Red airmen attacking en masse against Nazi Panzer divisions, artillery nests and German airdromes, the communique added.

Balcic, Rumanian Black Sea port near the Bulgarian border, was bombed.

Twenty-nine German planes were reported destroyed compared to Soviet losses of eighteen during Sunday's combat.

On a rain-soddened front around Leningrad regular Red troops were supported by a huge citizen army.

In one sector of that front some girl volunteers aided in desperate charges and were said to have dislodged the Germans from a series of fortress islands in the river "N" (presumably the Neva).

Recapture Lagoda Island

The Russians also reported recapturing an island in Lake Ladoga, northeast of Leningrad. They said 800 Finnish soldiers were killed and four Finnish launches and two motor boats were sunk. Remnants of the island garrison were taken prisoner, the communique said.

Farther to the north—somewhere in the Arctic region—Soviet forces were declared to have routed a regiment of the Thirtieth German Infantry Division and to have "inflicted a heavy defeat" on the Nineteenth Tank Division.

German forces driven from a town in this theater, said military dispatches, left a battalion and a half of dead.

Denies Push To Crimea

During the day, S. A. Lozovsky, the official Soviet spokesman, denied reports that the Germans in the south were advancing toward Perekop, at the entrance to the Crimea, and declared Hitler would not be able to achieve a single decisive result before winter.

While the fleet was active in all the northern waters, the guns of the Kronstadt naval base near Leningrad joined in the defense.

The Soviet command's afternoon communique repeated the familiar report that heavy fighting went on everywhere.

Other Russian sources, however, pointing to the fact that nasty weather already had fallen in the Leningrad area, spoke of the coming winter campaign which they said would be as disastrous for Adolf Hitler as it was for Napoleon.

Stress Guerrilla Activity

"Our people," observed the Communist newspaper Pravda, "are entering the winter campaign confidently, stout-heartedly, wholly prepared. The thick fog, the whirling snowstorms which hold no terror for the physically hardened Russian soldier will do their part toward insuring the Hitlerite marauders the same fate as the Napoleonic army."

For the second successive day activities of guerrillas was stressed. Two instances of their stealthy work were thus detailed by the Soviet command.

Near Smolensk, young guerrillas swam a river at night, crept up to a German command post and showered it with hand grenades, killing thirty German officers and men.

In another and unstated area sharp steel spikes were planted in the forest lanes to puncture tires of German motorcycles. The riders, dismounting, were killed from ambusn and their orders turned over to Soviet officers.

man naval operations.

Succeeding communiques of the Soviet Information Bureau told of the sinking of ten Nazi vessels—seven troop transports and three escorting warships—in northern waters.

Transports Reported Sunk

Torpedo boats and a submarine sank two large German transports in the Barents Sea north of Norway and Murmansk, one Soviet communique said.

Previous reports had told of a transport and escort sunk in the northern waters of Petsamo Bay, off Finland, and four transports and two destroyers sunk in an attempted German landing on the fortified island base of Oesel off Estonia.

In another sector of the battlefield about Leningrad fierce Red army counter-attacks hurled the Germans from a string of islands in River "N," Red Star reported.

Island Success Claimed

This dispatch said the Nazis were preparing to force the river from their positions in the islands.

But after night-long preparations, Soviet troops, reinforced by citizen volunteers, stormed the islands.

The Germans held on under a hurricane of machine-gun, rifle and trench-mortar fire, Red Star reported, but in the end were forced to retreat, leaving hundreds of killed and wounded and many weapons.

The islands now are held securely by the Russians, Red Star said, having been converted into an "impregnable series of fortresses."

Gulf Sinkings Listed

The Communist organ Pravda said seven cutters and two barges were sunk by the Red air force one night in the Gulf of Finland.

Hundreds of German officers and men who planned to land in the vicinity of Leningrad were drowned, Pravda said.

Fierce air fighting also was reported, the Soviet communique announcing that twenty German planes were destroyed in fights on the northwestern sector four days ago and sixteen destroyed on the southwestern front the same day. The next day, it was said, seventeen Nazi planes were shot down.

Galati, Rumanian oil center, and the ports of Constanta and Sulina were reported to have been pounded by Russian flyers, apparently to impede German operations in the Black Sea.

Tank Rout Of Germans At Leningrad Claimed

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 16—A gigantic night battle of heavy tanks for "an important point on the approaches of Leningrad" was reported by the newspaper Red Star today to have ended in a complete rout of the Germans, who left hundreds of dead on the field.

The Red defenders captured twenty-five heavy tanks, three armored cars and nine field guns, the dispatch said, following up Soviet successes in the Barents and Baltic Seas against Ger-

Despite heavy autumn rains, cold and darkness, fighting is raging "on land, in the air, on the water and under the water at a swift and unbelievably tense pace," Pravda added. The thunder of big guns at the Kronstadt naval base rolls across the area, while new naval detachments join the land forces vowing that "here we were born, here we grew up, here we fought and here we shall stand to the last."

Land operations yesterday were covered in today's early communique with the usual declaration that "Our troops fought stubbornly against the enemy on the entire front." At beleaguered Odessa, the bulletin said, guns of the Black Sea fleet backed up the land units in repulsing repeated attempts of German and Rumanian troops to break through the city's defenses on Saturday and Sunday.

"In the combat," the communique reported, "the Fourth Rumanian Infantry Regiment was dispersed and one battalion of this regiment was destroyed." There was no mention in this communique of either Leningrad or Kiev.

The later communique, issued at noon, said that fighting also continued all along the battle line during the night.

However, Tass, the Government news agency, declared that scores of thousands of the people of Kiev had joined the military engineers in erecting defense lines about the city and that "the fortifications have stood the test of fire." Autumnal rains are already falling in the Ukraine, the agency added, and the nights have become cold.

Island Reported Seized

LONDON, Sept. 16 (AP)—Stockholm dispatches reported today the German capture of Wormsi Island, between the Estonian mainland and Dagoes Island at the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. Dagoes, used by the Russians as an air and naval base, is just above Oesel Island.

Finns Claim "Chaotic Rout"

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 16 (AP)—Finnish Army dispatches reported today the "chaotic rout" of some Soviet divisions after their defenses had been broken in Eastern Karelia. Russian units were said to have been encircled by surprise attacks. No specific details were given.

Reports Finns Will Fight On

The Finnish radio in a broadcast heard last night by the National Broadcasting Company said a lasting peace with Russia could be obtained only b ythe complete defeat or change of the present Russian Government, the Associated Press reported. "Therefore Finland will continue to fight on Germany' sside until such a victory is ours," the broadcast said.

PLANE FERRY TO RUSSIA MAY DROP BOMBS

Proposals Said To Be Studied By British And American Missions

London Reports Nazis Have Drawn 500,000 Soldiers From West Front

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 16—Mass delivery of big, long-range bombers direct from the United Kingdom to Russia, with tons of bombs being dumped on Berlin and other cities en route, was forecast tonight by persons close to the Anglo-American missions to Moscow.

These "live ferry" formation flights, combining quick transfer of planes to Russia and bomb devastation deep in the Reich, would require less than 1,500 miles of flying, only a few hundred miles farther than the present round trip the R. A. F. makes between Britain and Berlin.

They would successfully adapt a plan first advanced during the Polish campaign, but never tried at the time because of Britain's lack of heavy planes.

Hundreds Of Fighters Sent

Hundreds of fighter planes already are being sent from Britain to the U. S. S. R., Prime Minister Churchill has disclosed, but their delivery is slow and dependent, at least in part, on roundabout ship routes.

As both United States and British missions prepared to proceed quickly to Moscow, British sources said that while the Germans are believed to have withdrawn 500,000 men from western occupied countries to fill depleted ranks in Russia those transferred apparently have been replaced by younger or older soldiers, leaving, therefore, 800,000 Germans still garrisoned in western Europe.

Taken As Answer To Pleas

This was taken as an answer to a new outbreak of newspaper pleas for a quick British incursion into the Continent to compel the Germans to return troops and planes to the West and relieve the pressure on the Red army.

The Russians, not discouraging these pleas, have asserted that many garrisons in western Europe are held by old or wounded Germans.

Some well-informed quarters now believe, however, that decisions by Britain and the United States to rush all possible aid to the Eastern front have made immediate large-scale operations in the West a very remote possibility. This belief is supported by Home Secretary Herbert Morrison's statement that Britain is retaining only enough of her arms output to insure her own safety, and sending the remainder to Russia.

Cuts Down Offensive

Already, diversion of British planes to Russia has been accompanied by a slackening of the R. A. F.'s continental fighter offensive which, in midsummer, sent hundreds of Spitfires daily over northern France.

As for the United States, W. Averell Harriman, head of the American mission to Moscow, said today that shipments of United States raw materials and finished products now reaching Russia in substantial amounts would be increased despite the "great problems involved." United States ships, he added, were going freely across the Pacific to Vladivostok.

Six Britons were named today to complete the British Moscow mission under Lord Beaverbrook. Both missions will depart shortly, but the date is being kept secret.

London Hears U. S., Britain and Russia Will Discuss Project at Moscow.

HARRIMAN IN BRITISH CAPITAL

Declares American Supplies Are Already Reaching Soviet Union in Large Quantities.

London, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Observers said today that one of the subjects to be discussed at the Moscow conference of Russia, Britain and the United States would be a project to fly large formations of bombers from Britain to Russia which would drop cargoes of bombs on German cities and communications en route. Such a delivery would require a flight of a little over 1,400 miles, or only about 300 miles farther than the present round trip from London to Berlin.

Interviewed earlier today W. Averell Harriman, head of the United States delegation to the Moscow War Needs Conference, said that American products and raw materials are already reaching Russia in substantial quantities.

"They will continue to reach the Russians in increasing amounts," he added. "We have a good idea of what the Russians need, and we will do our utmost to see that they get it.

Mr. Harriman said that American ships were "going freely" to Vladivostok, the Russian Far Eastern port, but he added that "great problems are involved" in getting materials through to the Soviets. He arrived in London today en route to Moscow.

Says U. S. Effort Is Up.

Mr. Harriman said that the Russian war at first caused a letdown in the United States' effort, but declared that this situation has since improved and the British seemed to have a better idea of the urgency of Russian aid. He said that the United States Government was "aware of the urgency."

The American mission of twenty-two or twenty-three persons, he reported, is leaving Britain for Moscow shortly. Asked the exact date, he laughed, saying: "I don't want to become an incident." He would remain in the Russian capital for several weeks after the departure of the rest of the mission, he said, adding: "I want to get all the first-hand information I can."

Mr. Harriman said Col. Philip B. Faymonville, an ordnance officer, and some technicians would remain in Moscow after he leaves.

He said he had drawn two principal conclusions about aid to Russia: "1. I find Britain determined to give all possible assistance, and, 2. The American Government is equally determined."

Meanwhile today a British Commission headed by Lord Beaverbrook, the Minister of Supply, was designated to confer with the Russian and American representatives in Moscow on ways of meeting Russia's war needs. The other delegates are Lieut.-Gen. F. M. Mason-MacFarlane, Rear Admiral G. J. A. Miles and Air Vice-Marshal A. C. Collier, already in Moscow as members of a military mission; Capt. H. H. Balfour, Under-Secretary of State for Air; Major-Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay and Major-Gen. G. N. Macready.

Troops Withdrawn.

London, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—The demands of the Russian campaign were declared by a reliable spokesman here today to have compelled Germany to withdraw "nearly 500,000 seasoned troops from the Low Countries and occupied France," replacing them, apparently, with younger recruits and soldiers over 35 years old.

There is reason to believe, however, that western Europe is still garrisoned by approximately 800,000 men, the same number that has been there for several months, it was said.

ALLIED TROOPS EXPECTED TO ENTER TODAY

British And Russians Charge Dilatory Tactics In Meeting Demands

21-Year-Old Son, Brother-In-Law Of Farouk, Succeeds To Throne

By DANIEL DELUCE
Associated Press Correspondent

Teheran, Sept. 16 (AP)—Reza Shah Pahlavi of Iran abdicated his throne in favor of his 21-year-old Crown Prince today as Russian armored cars neared the city for imminent entry.

British forces prepared to enter Teheran tomorrow afternoon.

The Shah's decision to step down came after the British and Russians, annoyed by what they called his dilatory tactics in complying with terms of the recently reached peace, ordered immediate occupation of the capital.

15-Year Reign Crashes

The aged ruler's emissary was told last night by the British legation that there was no other course open. Thus today came to the end his fifteen-year reign which crashed on the rocks of power politics.

Immediately upon announcing his abdication before Parliament the Shah left on the road toward Isfahan, upon which the British are advancing upon the city. The Russians are coming from another direction.

The gay, curly-haired, darkly handsome crown prince, Shahpur Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, was favored by the British to succeed his father as a means of saving a token Iranian government until the Allies are able to settle post-war problems.

The consort of the new Iranian ruler is a sister of Egyptian King Farouk.

Army Planes Disappear

It is believed that all communications will be shut down immediately upon the arrival of the Russians.

All Iranian army planes disappeared from fields outside Teheran during the day.

A high police official went to meet the Russians and negotiate conditions of the occupation with the major general leading the Red forces.

Reds Get First Start

The British and Russians agreed Saturday for joint occupation of Teheran some time this week, but the Reds got the jump and were on the move at 3 A. M. today from Kazvin, only ninety miles away.

The British, 200 miles away at Sulanbad to the southwest, got started upon learning that the Russians already had reached Karaj, thirty miles northwest of Teheran, by 7 A. M.

In his first interview with a foreigner, the Red commander at Karaj addressed me as "citizen"—not "comrade."

Armored Cars In Advance

He inquired whether the Iranian army was throwing up road defenses and then pointed significantly to twenty-two heavy-gunned armored cars and thirty trucks with fifteen soldiers each in his advance detachment.

Even before the British and Russian invasion, the Shah was persona non grata to the Allies and they were in no mood to preserve an unpopular regime.

Had not the occupation of Teheran been decided upon, it was believed here that Parliament itself would have changed rulers.

Shah of Iran Abdicates Throne

Allied Troops Are Reported Marching on Capital in Crisis Over Expulsions.

SEP 17 1941

London, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—British and Russian troops tonight were reported marching on the Iranian capital of Teheran as the nation's ruler, Riza Kahn Pahlavi, abdicated under the threat of such action.

The British and Russians accused the Shah and his government of dilatory tactics in carrying out an agreement to expel or deliver to the Allies all German, Hungarian, Italian and Rumanian nationals.

This afternoon, it was reported authoritatively, British and Russian troops were marching on Teheran with plans for immediate occupation of the city. A Teheran dispatch, not immediately clear here, said that Russian forces already had occupied the town of Karaj, twenty-eight miles northwest of Teheran, but stated that a British military attache had gone to inquire into the reason for the Russian move. This dispatch was filed before announcement over the Teheran radio of the Shah's abdication, and before it was stated authoritatively here that the British and Russians were co-operating to occupy Teheran.

Ill Health Given as Reason.

The Shah's abdication was announced before an extraordinary session of the Iranian Parliament, the Teheran radio stated, the official reason being ill health.

The Shah, who ascended the throne in 1925, was reported to have fled the capital, but his whereabouts were not disclosed immediately. It was announced he would be succeeded by his 21-year-old son, the European-educated Crown Prince Shaphur Mohammed Riza.

In informed quarters here it was said that it was thought that Teheran would be occupied without Iranian opposition. The capital was not included in the zones which previously had been agreed upon for occupation by British and Russian troops. The Russian zone was a strip running north of the capital, and the British territory was laid out in the southwest to include Iran's valuable oil fields.

It was stated by an authoritative Brtish spokesman that occupation of the capital had been pending for several days. Authoritative persons for some time had stressed the impatience of both Britain and Russia at what they called the Shah's "pro-Axis" leanings and efforts to delay as long as possible the fulfillment of the Allied demands.

Co-operation Impeded.

Efforts of the Iranians to cooperate with Britain and Russia were being impeded, it was said, by German nationals and sympathizers among the Iranians. British spokesmen had reported popular dissatisfaction with the Shah's regime.

The Teheran radio broadcast announcing the abdication detailed some of the difficulties the British and Russians have had in their efforts to round up German agents which Iran was to turn over to the Allies for deportation to Siberia and India.

The British said that it had become "virtually obvious" that "hidden influences were hindering our work wherever possible and helping the Germans" in Iran.

A Teheran dispatch carried by Tass, the official Russian news agency, accused the Shah and the Iranian Government of a double-crossing policy in fulfillment of the obligations undertaken in the agreement with Russia and Britain which ended their invasion of Iran a few weeks ago.

Accused of Slowness.

The Iranian Government, Tass said, undertook to expel from the country all German agents and diplomatic representatives not only of Germany, Italy, Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria, but of Finland, too. In carrying out the agreement the Iranian Government has been guilty of "unpermissible slowness," Tass charged.

This was the first mention of Finland among the nations whose representatives were to be expelled.

Tass also said that the Shah himself had approved a pro-Axis editorial in the newspaper Ettelaat recently against which both the Russian and British envoys had formally protested.

The Iranian people, according to Tass, are "expressing great alarm." The Russian agency said that "there is apparent dissatisfaction with the provocative behavior of certain officials, and the leadership of the army is closely tied with German agents."

Shahpur Mohammed Riza was sent to Switzerland to be educated in 1931. The way his father "spoiled" him was common talk at the time. The young prince had a large car and a fine horse, and was never happier than when riding with troops on maneuvers. The youth had a habit of driving his car around the grounds of his father's palace at eighty miles an hour, without much regard for possible obstacles.

When he returned from Switzerland in 1936, the capital was bedecked with flags and banners.

Reports Allies Advancing.

The British Broadcasting Corporation quoted its representative in Teheran today as saying Russian and British forces were advancing on Teheran, with the Russians only a half-hour away. The Russian advance began from Tabriz this morning, said the B. B. C. representative, Richard Dimbleby. The broadcast was heard here by CBS.

The Bucharest radio reported last night that Mr. Dimbleby and another English correspondent had been arrested in Iran, but did not say when, where or by whom.

Specifically denied were Moscow's charges that new German forces had arrived in Bulgaria and that Germany was organizing submarine bases on the Bulgarian coast.

Nazi Paper Says Destruction In Hamburg Raid Was "Staggering"

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 16—A powerful armada of R. A. F. planes swept over the Dover Strait just before sunset today in an extension of last night's 200-plane raid upon German-occupied France and the northwest German ports of Hamburg, Bremen, Cuxhaven and Wilhelmshaven.

The late afternoon attackers, which apparently included some of the four-motored American-made flying fortresses, flew so high they were barely visible between patches of clouds.

In the morning, a flight of British bombers was credited with sinking a German patrol boat off the Dutch coast. The fighters which followed up this raid reported they shot down six German fighters. The Air Ministry said two British fighters and a bomber were lost.

Hamburg was the chief target of last night's raid and in the hours-long assault the British reported shipyards, factories and railways blasted and set ablaze.

Nine R. A. F. bombers were lost in the Monday night operations.

British Set Hamburg Fires

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 16—A powerful force of R. A. F. bombers attacked shipyards, factories and railways of Hamburg last night, authoritative sources said today.

Many large fires were reported to have been started in the raid, which lasted several hours.

Other British forces attacked the German ports of Cuxhaven and Wilhelmshaven and the French port of LeHavre.

From all these operations nine British bombers were listed as missing.

Bremen again and German airdromes in occupied territory were bombed in the night forays, an Air Ministry communique said.

On the home front, the Government said, "there is nothing to report."

New Attack on France.

Flames from the gun muzzles at Cap Gris Nez could be seen from this side of the Channel. Buildings in the Dover area were shaken by explosions of shells.

German searchlights swept sea and sky and signal rockets went up from German anti-aircraft ships in mid-channel.

Berlin, Sept. 16—A 7,300-ton British tanker was destroyed in a daylight air attack west of the Hebrides, the German high command announced today, while a transport under convoy and another large merchant ship in British waters were set afire by bombs during the night.

(These latter two apparently were the same which informed German sources said exploded when bombed last night off Scarborough and in the Irish Sea.)

Number Killed In Hamburg

A British night raid on Hamburg and other places in northwest Germany was acknowledged, with a number of civilians killed or wounded, especially in Hamburg. Nine British planes were listed as destroyed.

Daylight British raids on Helgoland Bight and the Dutch coast yesterday were declared failures, with two British planes downed. Informed sources said the Helgoland raid was on a German convoy.

Reich Discounts Damage From Attack On Hamburg

Berlin, Sept. 16 (AP)—A Hamburg propaganda office communique tonight said "small damage was done to the city's industrial plants in last night's R. A. F. raid and "in no case has loss of production resulted."

"As a result of a short circuit," it was added, "siren apparatus in various sections of the was put out of order."

Six bombers were said to have been shot down in that area.

However, the newspaper Hamburger Fremdenblätt said destruction in one thickly settled residential street was "staggering."

"To the right and left houses caved in and formed a disorderly pile of ruins," said the newspaper.

The German high command said that a 7,300-ton British tanker was destroyed in a daylight air attack west of the Hebrides, while a transport under convoy and another large merchant ship in British waters were set afire by bombs during the night.

RAID ON CAIRO EXPOSES ROME TO BOMBINGS

Reprisals Threaten If Moslem Holy City Or Others Were Targets

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 16 — German bombers last night attacked the Cairo airport, DNB said tonight, hitting hangars and a munitions dump.

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Sept. 16—Axis warplanes—in defiance of a British threat of retaliation against Rome—bombed Cairo for the first time early today in an attack which killed thirty-nine persons and wounded ninety-three.

Britain, in a warning direct from the Prime Minister's residence in London, on April 18 had informed the Axis that if either Athens or Cairo were bombed, reprisals would be carried out against Rome.

Further, it was stated that once the bombing of the Italian capital started it would "continue as convenient to the end of the war."

Holy City To Moslem World

The Axis never did bomb Athens proper in the course of the attack on Greece, and until today had respected the Egyptian capital, a city holy to the Moslem world much as Rome is to Catholics.

The raiding planes dropped both high-explosive and incendiary bombs on Cairo. Despite the number of casualties, property damage was described by the Egyptian Ministry of the Interior as slight.

Anti-aircraft guns blazed at the attackers, and raid alarms were sounded in several provinces.

Follows Revival Of Fighting

The raid came at the beginning of what is expected to be a period of renewed vigorous warfare in the North African theater as the heat of the western desert nears its seasonal end. Only yesterday the British command here announced that two axis armored columns had struck 35 miles into Egypt and then were forced back to the Libyan border in the first axis offensive move in Libya for many weeks. (The Italians also announced the thrust but said nothing of the retreat reported by the British).

(Neither the Rome nor Berlin communiques mentioned an attack on Cairo).

[The British warned last spring that bombing of either Cairo or Athens would bring reprisals against Rome because Cairo is a holy city to the Moslem world, much as Rome is to Catholics. Although Alexandria, site of a British naval base, has been bombed frequently, Cairo had escaped heretofore, and Athens proper was not bombed throughout the Balkan campaign.

[Downing Street warned the Axis on April 18 that once the bombing of Rome started, "it will continue as convenient to the end of the war." It added that the greatst care would be taken to spare Vatican City, but charged that the Italians were prepared to drop captured British bombs there. German officials the next day angrily rejected the British warning with the declaration that they did not intend to bomb either Athens or Cairo.]

The Egyptian Ministry of Interior issued a communique stating that there were alarms in several provinces and that anti-aircraft went into action. Property damage was described as slight.

Cairo Transport Strike

Cairo, Sept. 16 (AP)—A one-day general transport strike made thousands of citizens walk to work today. It was a demonstration in support of demands for increased cost-of-living allowances. The Government began an investigation.

Free French Proclaim Syria's Independence

Damascus, Syria, Sept. 16 (AP)—The independence of Syria was proclaimed today by the occupying Free French authorities and Sheikh Tajeddine Hassani was named the first President of the republic.

In a letter to the new President, Georges Catroux said:

"Free France, acting in agreement with her ally, Great Britain, has undertaken to terminate the mandate and grant Syria the status of an independent sovereign state and to guarantee the new state by treaty."

A new Cabinet is expected to be formed Tuesday.

The Free French and British won control of Syria and Lebanon last June in a brief campaign from the Vichy French, who had continued to rule these Levant states under the League of Nations mandate.

NAZIS IN PARIS SHOT DESPITE 10 EXECUTIONS

Two New Attacks Listed As Reprisals Toll Rises To 13

German Officer Gravely Wounded; Assailants Make Escape

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 16—A DNB dispatch from Zagreb, capital of Croatia, reported today that eleven Serbs have been sentenced to death for attacking gendarme patrols at Serajevo.

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 16—Shadowy gunmen made two new pistol assaults last night and today on German soldiers in Paris, in defiance of wholesale German reprisals in which ten more French hostages died at dawn before the rifles of a Nazi execution squad.

One German non-commissioned officer was shot in the back and wounded gravely last night on the Boulevard Strasbourg, near the Gare de l'Est, in the heart of the occupied capital's commercial district.

Today another assailant fired several shots at a German soldier in a subway station. All of them missed.

Apparently both attackers escaped.

Son Of Petain Friend Victim

The tension in Paris was heightened still further tonight by disclosure of the kidnapping on September 8 of the 22-year-old son of Col. Alfred Heurteaux, a vice-president of the French Legion of Honor and a close friend of Chief of State Petain. The youth's seizure came only a week after the old marshal converted the legion into France's sole political party. He still is missing.

The latest attack on a German soldier occurred a few hours after the execution of ten hostages, the youngest 19 and the oldest 72, in reprisal for previous attacks on the Nazi soldiery.

Penalty For 3 Attacks

They paid the supreme penalty for the attacks committed on three separate days by other persons still at large. None of the Germans was killed, but now thirteen French hostages are dead, a ratio of more than three Frenchmen executed for each German soldier attacked.

Today's announcement of the executions by Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel, commander of the German forces in occupied France, gave, for the first time, the names and ages of those shot, but not their occupations or the reasons for their arrest.

Lists Names And Reason

They were:

RENE LUCIEN MANTERON, 21.
RENE JOLI, 41.
LUCIEN LEON CLEMENT, 29.
ALBERT VALENTIN GOKELAERE, 26.
ANDRE BONNIN, 24.
DAVID LIBERMANN, 21.
C. MAGER-OPAL, 50.
ISIDOR BERNHEIMN, 72.
HENRI BECKERMANN, 21.
LUCIEN BLUM, 62.

Acts Specified

The acts for which they were shot as specified by the German command were:

(1) Shooting at an officer and at a mobilized railroad official.

(2) Striking an officer over the head.

(3) Mobbing of a soldier by four young men.

The three hostages to die, on September 6, were executed for the shooting of a German sergeant.

Courts Grind Out Sentences

In both the Free and occupied zones, courts continued to grind out sentences in an attempt to stamp out terrorism, sabotage and anti-collaborationism.

Today these courts sentenced one man to death for treason and thirty others to prison.

At Rennes, in the occupied zone, authorities arrested Marcel Cachin, 73-year-old former Communist Senator from the Seine department.

On the other hand, twenty-two men who have been interned in five different camps were released on order of Marshal Petain to take up their work again as union leaders. The statement announcing their liberation said "the marshal has distinguished between those who honestly defend the workers of all classes and those who exploit the difficulties of the working class."

German Non-commissioned Officer Fired On in Subway After Prisoners Are Executed.

SEP 17 1941

Paris, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—A German non-commissioned officer was shot here today after a German firing squad had executed ten hostages for attacks on other German soldiers.

At the same time it was learned that another German non-commissioned officer was seriously wounded last night before execution of the hostages. The German shot at today was not hit.

Today's assault occurred in a subway station. Several shots were fired. Identity of the German was not disclosed.

The man wounded last night was said to be in an extremely serious condition. He was attacked on the Boulevard Strasbourg, in the heart of the city's commercial district and near the East Station where another German sergeant was wounded September 3. Two bullets lodged in the German's back.

Says All Were Reds.

Execution of the ten hostages was announced by Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel of the German occupying forces in France. They were described as "all communists, including six foreigners."

The executions were in retaliation for attacks on men of the army of occupation on Sept. 6, 10 and 11, a notice informed the public. The announcement was sent to newspapers of the occupied zone and was posted on house walls.

The executions brought to thirteen the number officially announced. Three hostages were shot at dawn September 6 for an attack on a sergeant.

The evening after the first executions, a German officer was shot, another escaped bullets fired at him, a German military garage was fired and a German military official assaulted. Subsequently, a German officer was clubbed and another manhandled in Paris streets.

As far as is known, the actual attackers have not been apprehended.

The latest executions—any political prisoner of the Germans is considered a hostage—appeared to check the announced desire of Fernand De Brinon, the Vichy Ambassador to Paris, to take charge of punishing opposition to occupational authority. The communists, De Brinon declared, have promised that there would be ten reprisals for every hostage shot by the Germans.

The names of the ten persons shot were made public. They included several Jews, ranging in age from 19 to 72. Names of previous hostages executed have been withheld.

Traitor Condemned

SEP 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 16—The military court of the Fifteenth Military Region at Marseille today condemned to death for treason a man identified only as Andrew Bernard. The trial was held in secret and no details were available.

Meanwhile a special court at Marseille imposed prison terms ranging from one to ten years upon thirteen persons convicted of distributing Communist propaganda. This raised to thirty the number reported to have been convicted in France for such activity in the past twenty-four hours.

Seventeen persons were convicted of Communist activity by special courts in the German-occupied zone. Eleven at Nancy, four at Dijon and two at Amiens were sentenced to one to eight years in prison.

Oslo Siege Law Is Lifted.

Berlin, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—The state of civil siege in Oslo and suburbs was lifted at 5 A. M. today by Joseph Terboven, the German Commissioner for Norway, DNB, the German official news agency, declared in a dispatch from the Norwegian capital. It was in effect for exactly one week.

Norwegian advices to Stockholm said the state of civil siege was precipitated by a mass strike of 40,000 workers in the Oslo area.

During the first day, two Norwegian labor leaders were executed and during the week some 250 to 300 union leaders in the Olso district were arrested, these advices said.

Stockholm reports were that the state of siege was lifted because resentment ran so high throughout the country that the authorities possibly feared a nationwide outbreak unless the regulations were relaxed.

Quisling Foe Gets Life Term

[By the Associated Press]

Oslo, Norway (Via Berlin), Sept. 16—Frederich Ramm, a Norwegian journalist accused of fomenting opposition to the Quisling Government, was sentenced to life imprisonment today as the courts continued to deal with disturbing elements after lifting of a state of civil siege at Oslo.

School authorities were notified that their institutions might be closed if there were any indication that they were giving encouragement to "Communistic elements."

5 EXECUTED IN REICH

Four Convicted of Treason —One for Spying.

Berlin, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—The People's Court announced the execution today of five men, four of them convicted of preparation for high treason and the fifth of spying for a foreign Power. This brought the total of executions for these crimes for the year to twenty-nine.

Estates Of Dutch Queen And Kin Confiscated

[By the Associated Press]

The Hague, Sept. 16—German authorities today ordered confiscation of all property within the German-occupied Netherlands belonging to living members of the House of Orange and Nassau, headed by Queen Wilhelmina, now in exile in Britain.

Queen Wilhelmina has palaces at The Hague, a summer residence called Het Loo at Apeldoorn, and Dam Palace at Amsterdam. Princess Juliana and Prince Bernard have a palace at Soestdyk, where their children were born. In addition, they have a number of farms and other property, the value of which is not at present estimated.

Since occupation authorities do not need the seized properties they will be used for "purposes of general benefit," the confiscating order stated.

Explaining the action, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, the German Commissioner, said the Queen "clings obstinately to the Bolshevist-capitalist front. She thereby excludes herself from the community of new Europe."

NAZIS EXECUTE 15 HOSTAGES AS UNREST GROWS

UNDATED NAZI LAND UNREST

By The Associated Press

Fifteen persons were put to death Tuesday and 12 others were sentenced to die as authorities in Germany and Nazi-dominated countries sought to deal with continued widespread unrest.

But one of two new attacks on German non-commissioned officers followed one of the group executions within a few hours and in Oslo, German-occupied Norway, a Norwegian journalist was given life imprisonment for fomenting opposition to the Nazi-supported Quisling government in a sentence pronounced after the lifting of a state of civil siege.

Ten of Tuesday's victims were French hostages shot by a German firing squad in Paris in retaliation for attacks on German soldiers. They brought to 13 the number of hostages officially announced executed.

"SPY" EXECUTED

SEP 17 1941

While the officer shot at following Tuesday's execution escaped injury, it was disclosed that still another German non-commissioned officer had been wounded Monday night before the execution. Reports were that he was in "a very serious condition."

The other five men executed met death in Germany itself. Four had been convicted of preparation for high treason. One was said to be a spy for a foreign power.

Eleven of the 12 sentenced to death Tuesday were Serbs convicted in Zagreb, capital of the Axis-created state of Croatia, of attacking gendarme patrols of Sarajevo, DNB said. The 12th was a man identified only as Andrew Bernard, condemned by a military court at Marseilles, unoccupied France, on a charge of high treason.

Thirteen other persons were given prison sentences at Marseilles for distributing Communist propaganda, making a total of 30 such convictions in 24 hours.

In the German-occupied zone of France a total of 17 persons was convicted by special courts of Communist activity. All got prison sentences.

KIDNAPING REPORTED

The son of a colleague of Marshal Petain was disclosed to have been kidnaped in Paris more than a week ago. He still was missing.

The Norwegian journalist sentenced to life imprisonment was Frederich Ramm convicted by a court in Oslo a few hours after the ending of the state of civil siege imposed a week ago to meet a mass strike of 40,000 workers in the Oslo area. During the state of civil siege two Norwegian labor leaders were executed and hundreds of union leaders were arrested. Stockholm reports indicated the restrictions were lifted because of the nation-wide resentment they provoked.

In the Netherlands, German authorities ordered confiscation of all property within the German-occupied part of the country belonging to living members of exiled Queen Wilhelmina's house. Affected property included two small palaces at the Hague, a villa on the North Sea coast, the palace the Queen gave to Princess Juliana after her marriage and various farms and other holdings, the Netherlands Indies News agency said.

Dakar Chieftan Reaches Vichy For Conferences

Vichy, Sept. 16 (AP) — The commander of French forces in Dakar, Pierre Boisson, arrived by plane today for a series of important conferences which already had brought other French African commanders to Vichy.

Almost simultaneously the Vichy Government added 113,000,000 francs ($2,599,000) to a previous appropriation of 150,00,000 francs for extending the Tran-Saharan railway to Dakar.

Boisson's trip followed those of Gen. Auguste Nogues, commander of Morocco, and Admiral Jean Esteva, resident general of Tunisia.

[Only last week, the Associated Press in New York was advised by competent persons that Vichy, Germany and Spain had entered into a virtual alliance for holding Africa against any British or American effor to obtain bases there.]

The North African Colonial Government in Algiers said a report that Dakar was being used as a German submarine base "is such a falsehood that it is necessary to deny it."

Dakar Defender Reaches Vichy

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 16 (AP) — Pierre Boisson, the French defender of Dakar, arrived in Vichy on a flying trip today to continue the series of important conferences, which has brought several other high French commanders from North Africa.

The Government added 113,000,000 francs ($2,599,000) to a previous allotment of 150,000,000 francs ($3,450,000) for extending the trans-Sahara railway to Dakar.

fax, British Ambassador to Washington, declared today.

The envoy described the establishment of such outposts as "a reproduction and expansion of the American pioneer spirit."

"The problems of the United States' and Britain's defenses have come to be considered as one problem," he told a press conference at the Ministry of Information, adding that it was a problem which would not cease with the end of hostilities.

Lord Halifax expressed satisfaction with the production of war materials by the United States, saying that "as the United States industrial capacities get going, things will look much different."

Camaraderie Cited

Commenting on Britain's civil defense, Lord Halifax said he noted the nation was fully prepared for a possible renewal of heavy air raids. He also said there was marked extension of communal camaraderie and cooperation because of sharing dangers and responsibilities.

This, he said, doubtless will continue after the war, to Great Britain's benefit.

The Ambassador said that he hoped to return to the United States soon.

ROME PRESS SEES WAR WITH AMERICA

Assails Patrol Duty as Stocks Continue Slump.

SEP 17 1941

Rome, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—The Fascist press professed today to foresee inevitable hostilities with the United States as a result of Secretary Knox's announcement yesterday that United States naval vessels would protect ships carrying aid to Britain.

"The United States has really arrived at what is called the last step," said Il Piccolo. "What margin now remains for averting the drama? None."

Other papers joined Il Piccolo in assailing what Il Piccolo called "the blind irresponsibility of the White House."

"From dawn this morning the American fleet is on a mission of war at sea from America to Iceland," said Il Popolo Di Roma. This paper interpreted Secretary Knox's announcement as meaning that United States warships would escort supply ships from Britain, although noting that the Navy Secretary refrained from using the word convoy.

A heavy slump on Italian stock markets was reported, with especially heavy declines yesterday in textile shares and shares of the big Fiat and Breda companies, makers of airplane and other engines.

Berlin Assails Knox.

Berlin, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Authoritative sources today called Navy Secretary Frank Knox "Roosevelt's staff tru...peter" who must always blare out what the President "does not quite dare to tell the American people."

Commenting on Secretary Knox's speech before the American Legion convention yesterday, the spokesmen said that men like Secretary Knox and Senator Pepper always put into precise language, without speaking officially, "what Roosevelt for very good reasons does not say."

A spokesman said that President Roosevelt had exceeded his constitutional powers and that it was a fine commentary on democracy and its workings.

He charged the Roosevelt administration with deliberately evading a definition of what waters are regarded as United States defense areas until something happens somewhere.

The incident then can be claimed by the United States to have happened in one of the areas meant, it was said.

Taylor's Vatican Mission Closes In Hour Audience

Peace Aims Believed Topic; Pius Also Receives Nazi Soldiers

SEP 17 1941

Vatican City, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Pope Pius XII talked for an hour today with Myron C. Taylor in a private audience which completed the mysterious special mission for which President Roosevelt's envoy came by air a week ago.

Presumably the Pontiff told Taylor of his views on the war and peace aims of the United States and Great Britain, which Taylor will convey to the President.

It was also assumed the Pope gave some indication of his attitude toward maintenance of the Soviet regime in Russia, which Rome always considered the arch-foe of religion, through American and British aid against Germany.

However, Vatican sources said, the Pope's attitude toward the belligerents would remain, publicly at least, one of strict neutrality.

Peace moves appeared out of the question in these talks. Taylor was unofficially understood to have reiterated to the Pope the President's intention to help Great Britain crush Hitlerism. Observers considered it likely Taylor told the Pope the President considered the Nazi menace to the world and to the welfare of its people greater than that of Communism.

The Pope is to receive Taylor and his wife in a farewell audience Friday before the envoy's departure for New York on Monday but today's audience was understood to be the last one of diplomatic significance.

Following the Taylor audience the Pope received a group of German soldiers in a general audience and Italian ambassador to the Holy See, Bernardo Attolico, privately.

Pope Confers For Hour With Roosevelt's Envoy

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 16—Pope Pius XII received President Roosevelt's envoy, Myron C. Taylor, for an hour's private audience today in which the Pontiff presumably gave his reply to whatever proposals were made in last week's conferences.

SEP 17 1941

Both American and Vatican circles maintained silence, however, on the negotiations between the President and the Pope. Taylor had his first audience with Pope Pius last Wednesday shortly after arriving from the United States.

The Pope is to receive Taylor and his wife in a farewell conference Friday, and the envoy is expected to depart for New York next Monday.

After Taylor left him, the Pope received a group of German soldiers in a general audience and then was visited by the Italian Ambassador to the Vatican, Bernardo Attolico, formerly stationed in Berlin. This audience also was private.

Italians Link "War Plans"

Italian officials have shown an interest in Taylor's visit, although nothing has appeared in the newspapers since his arrival except for a report in Regima Fascista, Fascist party organ, that President Roosevelt had sent Taylor to get the Pope's "approval for his war plans."

Taylor, after his meeting with the Pope, conferred with Mgr. Giovanni Battista Montini, Vatican Undersecretary of State, for 50 minutes. Luigi Cardinal Maglione, the Secretary of State, has returned to his vacation after a long talk with Taylor September 10.

1,418 Men Lost In Battle With Bismarck Last May, Admiralty Announces

London, Sept. 16 (AP)—A total of 1,418 men were lost in the sinking of the battle cruiser Hood by the German battleship Bismarck last May 25, the Admiralty announced.

Of these, ninety-four were officers. There were three survivors.

About the same number of Germans is believed to have been lost in the subsequent destruction of the Bismarck by British planes and warships.

Rationing Affects London Pachyderm

Sanger's Famous Circus Goes on Auction Block

LONDON, Sept. 16 (AP)—Alice, the ancient elephant of Sanger's famous circus, was knocked down to a Manchester zoo for the equivalent of $250 today as the auctioneer's hammer crumbled John Sanger's life work.

The circus has been closed by the war and rationing. Sanger, 73, and Bimbo, one of the last of the Victorian clowns, looked on sadly at the auction.

"It's not that she's not worth more," said the old clown, when Alice was sold, "but it's because she eats so much. This, sir, is war and there is rationing for everyone—even elephants."

Alice eats 280 pounds of hay every day. Annie, a smaller pachyderm, brought $300.

"She's really nothing of the beat that Alice is," explained Bimbo, "but she doesn't eat so much. It's a strange world, sir."

He witnessed the "liberation" of Syria, in which British and Free French forces occupied the country, and the opening phases of the Iranian campaign, which was conducted by British and Russian forces.

He visited Khartoum in Egypt, Eritrea, in East Africa, and Brazzaville, capital of French Equatorial Africa.

JAP EDITOR SEES ATTEMPT TO DUPE

Shanghai, Sept. 16. (AP) — A Domei dispatch from Tokyo tonight quoted one of Japan's most influental commentators as warning his countrymen that the United States and Britain are "making alluring gestures toward Japan simply because they can not afford to have a two-ocean fight on their hands."

The commentator, Soho Tokutomi, writing in the newspaper Nichi Nichi, declared "these appeasement tactics simply are masking the real policy of stopping Japan's advance southward."

Havas, the French news agency, reported from Tokyo that "the expected announcement of a Japanese - American agreement has been delayed because some difficulties have arisen." Havas said this was due to issues raised at the eleventh hour by Washington and expressed belief these "bear particularly on the American attitude toward the French-Japanese agreement for the joint defense of French Indo-China."

TOKIO TIGHTENS GRIP ON MONEY

Capital Control Plan Wins Approval of Cabinet.

SEP 17 1941

Tokio, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—The Japanese Cabinet moved toward completion of the war-time structure today by approvng a capital control plan for the 1941 fiscal year and establishing import-export policies for China and Manchoukuo for the coming year. The measures rounded out general economic mobilization plans which cover labor and materials, expansion of transport facilities and control of power resources.

The capital control plan envisages supervision of the supply of capital to Manchoukuo and China and encouragement of savings and investments.

The issue of Japanese representations over American oil shipments to Russia via Vladivostok is being held in abeyance pending the outcome of Japanese-American talks in Washington, Koh Ishii, spokesman for the Cabinet Information Board, said today. Ishii in previous conferences with foreign correspondents had said there was no reply to the representations of several weeks ago.

The Government spokesman disclosed that a Foreign Office official accompanied Kaname Wakasugi, Japanese Minister to Washington, who left yesterday to return to the United States. Wakasugi arrived August 30 in Japan from the United States and conferred with Foreign Office, army and navy officials.

The identity of his companion was not disclosed nor would Ishii give the name of their vessel or its destination, except to say that the Minister was returning directly to the United States. It had been stated yesterday he would land in Mexico and continue overland to Washington.

The Ministry said traffic was flowing along China's lifeline without the slightest interruption.

Wiedemann to Leave Argentine For Far East

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Argentine foreign ministry announced tonight that Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, former German consul-general at San Francisco, would depart tomorrow on the Japanese ship Manila Maru en route to his new diplomatic mission for Adolf Hitler in the Far East.

His early departure will preclude any questioning by the Argentine congressional committee investigating subversive activities which has kept him under surveillance since he arrived by plane from Rio de Janeiro last Sunday on a transit visa.

The committee has admitted it would be unable to summon him for questioning unless he overstayed his time limit in Argentina.

The embarkment here cancels previously announced plans by which he would have gone by plane to Chile and taken a ship from there.

Ouster Campaign Pushed

Meanwhile, the committee pressed its campaign for the ouster of German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann by declaring that a Congressional resolution censuring him for abuse of diplomatic privileges implicitly requires his ejection.

From a study of the resolution forwarded to Acting President Ramon Castillo, committee members said, "The executive power very well understands what it is Congress wants him to do."

In order to obtain an overpowering majority vote of 87 to 4, the committee agreed to withdraw a clause flatly demanding that von Thermann leave Argentina.

The resolution demands the ejection within three days of the chieftains of Nazi organizations operating in Argentina, among whom the committee lists von Thermann.

Argentina Silent On Next Anti-Nazi Step

SEP 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 16—A Congressional demand for the expulsion of ringleaders of Nazi under-cover groups, a category in which an investigating committee named German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann, presented a problem today for Acting President Ramon Castillo.

Castillo has sought "neutrality toward all."

Foreign Minister Ruiz Guinazu declined to say what action the republic's Foreign Office would take.

Ousters In Three Days Asked

By a vote of 79 to 1, Congress late yesterday adopted a three-point resolution:

1. Declaring Thermann had "overstepped the bounds of a diplomat and abused his privileges."

2. Calling upon the administration to remove from the country within three days the chiefs of welfare and cultural circles and labor unions which the committee investigating subversive activity called a disguise for the outlawed Nazi political party.

3. Demanding legal rights be stripped from the German Chamber of Commerce, described by the committee as another agency for Nazi political activity.

"Insults," Says Envoy

The German envoy, who had protested twice against what he called "gross calumnies" and "personal insults" voiced against him during House of Deputies debate, was not mentioned by name in the ouster demand. But the form in which he was censured on charges of abusing his diplomatic privileges was the equivalent of holding him to be persona non grata in Argentina, officials said.

The investigating committee, headed by Deputy Raul Damonte Taborda, also had charged that he was paymaster for Nazi undercover groups throughout South America and the chief of an "almost military organization" in Argentina, disciplined by Storm Troops and financed by levies upon residents of German blood.

Wiedemann Speculation

The only vote against the resolution was cast by Conservative Daniel Videla Dorna, who held the ouster demand to be an unconstitutional intrusion upon executive power.

Some newspapers speculated upon the possibility that Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, former consul general at San Francisco who arrived Sunday from Rio de Janeiro, might have been sent to replace Thermann.

Thermann declared Wiedemann was en route to an Oriental post. Wiedemann, with a transit visa to cross Argentina to Chile, was kept under surveillance by detectives of the Argentine investigating committee.

America Speeds Defense Plans In Helping Britain And China

Roosevelt Directs Stettinius To Approve Applications Rapidly For Lend-Lease Requirements Of Allied Countries Including Haiti

SEP 17 1941

Washington, Dec. 16 (AP)—President Roosevelt gave Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., power to approve applications for Lend-Lease help from Great Britain and China today as one method of speeding final action on them.

Making this announcement at a press conference, the Chief Executive also was plied with questions as to whether the Navy's protection to merchant ships between the United States and Iceland included convoying, but he declined to make a direct answer.

In that connection, however, he said that amateur strategists should bear in mind that there is more than one way of protecting ships against submarines and surface raiders.

He described the Stettinius appointment as a minor matter, yet one that was typical of things that had been done to cut red tape and expedite assistance to Great Britain and China.

At one time, he said, it took 25 to 30 days for Lease-Lend applications to pass through all the governmental channels required by the law. This period, he added, had been cut to 16 days.

The Chief Executive went on to say that a 24-hour delay had been discovered in the White House itself. Late each day, he added, a sheaf of such applications reaches his desk, requiring 50 or more signatures. These, he said, did not reach officials responsible for the next step until the afternoon of the following day.

Since the law allowed him to delegate authority to sign the applications, he had given Stettinius the task. Stettinius is to report to the President weekly on what applications have been approved.

Incidentally, the appointment raises Stettinius' salary from $1 a year to $10,000. The former head of the United States Steel Corporation, who entered the defense setup as a $1-a-year man, will henceforth receive the salary of a special assistant to the President.

In response to a question, Mr. Roosevelt said it was unfair to say that the progress of the Lease-Lend program had been disappointing, because most of the items involved cannot be purchased from the shelves of department stores, but must be manufactured.

He declined to comment on whether the Red Sea was included in the American defense zone and was silent likewise on proposals for arming merchant ships and for amending the Neutrality Law.

If there are further incidents at sea, he said in reply to further queries, the naval situation will determine whether or not they will be announced to the public.

Endeavoring to reinforce the hemisphere's defenses and make the approaches of the Panama Canal impregnable, the government agreed today to send $1,100,000 worth of Lease-Lend materials to Haiti.

Secretary of State Hull and Fernand Dennis, the Haitian Minister, signed an agreement covering the shipments, repayment to be made in imports from the strategic Caribbean island.

The Navy meanwhile, announced it had let contracts for the construction of every warship that has been authorized by Congress "in the creation of the greatest array of fighting ships under one flag the world has ever seen."

At the same time, testifying before the House Banking Committee, Jesse Jones, the Federal loan administrator, asked Congress to give the RFC $1,500,000,000 additional borrowing power, mostly for defense. He said the agency had nearly reached the limit of its credit.

After Jones testified, the committee agreed to approve the borrowing bill, with an amendment to limit its life to June 30, 1943.

The products which will be imported from Haiti in return for defense materials are to be stipulated in future agreements. Probably, they will include rubber, sugar, cocoa, fibers and other raw materials.

The Haitian government and the United States had previously collaborated, in the interest of defense, in building an airfield at Port-au-Prince, to be used by either military or commercial planes.

The navy, in summarizing its building program, noted that the new 35,000-ton battleships Carolina and Washington had been added to the battle line—the first capital ships to be built here since 1923. The country now has 17 battleships in service.

Another new capital ship, the South Dakota, has been launched but not yet commissioned and another is to be launched next Tuesday.

A total of 2,831 combat and auxiliary vessels have been ordered since Jan. 1, 1940, the department said, at a cost of $7,234,262,178. An additional $460,000,000 has been allocated for expanding public and private shipbuilding facilities.

MIGHT USE THIS SYSTEM RATHER THAN CONVOYING

Warships Could Police a Definite Belt From U. S. to Iceland

ROOSEVELT HINTS NO CONVOYING PLANNED

SEP 17 1941

Says There Are Other Ways of Protecting Ships

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP)—The possibility that a corridor of steel—ships, planes and navy guns—has been laid out in the North Atlantic to protect lend-lease deliveries to Great Britain was considered in the capital tonight.

F. D. R.'s Words Noted

The speculation was raised by President Roosevelt's warning, at his press conference, that amateur strategists should not hink that naval convoys were the only means of guaranteeing delivries of cargoes to friendly powers.

Under Secretary of Navy Knox's declaration yesterday that, beginning today, naval vessels would give every protection within their power and would "capture or destroy" raiders encountered between North America and Iceland, the view had been accepted widely here that the Navy had undertaken actual convox duty.

While the President did not make specific denial of such a long-expected development, it was considered possible that his deprecatory comment might mean, instead, the establishment of a "safety lane" to Iceland. The Royal Navy, in such a case, could take over guardianship of the cargoes from Iceland on to the British Isles.

Under such an arrangement, American cruisers, destroyers and submarines would police a designated corridor along which lend-lease traffic could flow. This arrangement would have the same virtue as a convoy system in releasing large numbers of British ships for intensified activity against U-boats nearer Great Britain, where most of the sinkings have occurred.

Whether such policing could be accomplished so efficiently that no commerce raider would dare enter the patrolled zone was a matter which some authoritative sources were inclined to doubt.

Other methods for effective protection of the transatlantic cargoes, however, appeared to be few in number. The arming of merchant ships was a possibility discussed immediately after Mr. Roosevelt's "shoot on sight" speech last Thursday, but this would require congressional authority and would take considerable time for installation of guns and the providing of small crews of Navy men to man them.

Still another possibility might be merely the intensification of the broad patrol which has operated in the North Atlantic for many months. Vessels of the Atlantic Fleet, probably numbering 125 in all, and planes of the Fleet's air arm, have kept a watch for raiders and sent warnings of their whereabouts to shipping.

Most observers believed, however, that any intensification of this type of widespread patrol sufficient to carry out the new phase of naval activity enunciated by Knox yesterday, would require more ships than this country was ready to keep in the Atlantic Ocean, in view of the continued tense situation in the Orient.

U. S. Building Cruisers To Hunt Ocean Raiders

Six 27,000-Ton War Vessels, Of Type New To Navy, Are Now Under Construction

SEP 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 16—Six 27,000-ton super-cruisers, a type of ship new to the United States Navy, were reported under construction today.

The disclosure came in a naval shipbuilding report which showed work started on six "large cruisers," a designation applied to the fast, powerful vessels designed to hunt down and destroy commerce raiders.

The vessels are about 17,000 tons heavier than the navy's present heavy cruisers and only 8,000 tons lighter than the powerful new battleships North Carolina and Washington which the navy reported today had joined the battle line. All six will be built by the New York Shipbuilding Company, at Camden, N. J.

All Details Withheld

The navy withheld all details on speed, weapons and armor of the cruisers, but it was understood the vessels were intended to cope with hostile sea raiders preying on shipping and to conduct long-range patrol work on missions separate from the main battle forces and many miles from bases.

Their names, a navy official said, are the Alaska, Hawaii, Guam, Philippines, Samoa and Puerto Rico. Naming cruisers for territories also is a departure from custom, since previous light and heavy cruisers have borne the names of American cities.

Officials would not say whether the term "under construction" meant that keels had been laid or merely that preliminary work of assembling and fabricating parts had begun.

All Already Contracted For

The Navy shipbuilding report showed that every vessel authorized by Congress had been contracted for in the accelerated drive for completion of a two-ocean fleet. A total of 2,831 ships of all classes have been ordered since January 1, 1940, at an estimated cost of $7,234,262,178, and 968 ships of all classes and designs are under construction.

The $80,000,000 battleship North Carolina and Washington have joined the fleet, the first addition of capital ships in eighteen years. The North Carolina, armed with nine 16-inch guns, passed her firing tests earlier this month. She was commissioned in April, the Washington in May. Addition of these two dreadnaughts gives the navy seventeen battleships.

The survey reported that production-line methods were being used where possible, and that a pronounced speed-up had been accomplished by institution of the forty-eight-hour week, and the three-shift twenty-four-hour day. About 375,000 men are now working in shipyards and another 125,000, will be employed by next July, it was estimated.

32 Billions Next Budget Basis

Estimate of Record-breaking Figure Is Made as Smith Begins Hearings.

SEP 17 1941

Washington, Sept. 16 (A. P.)—Harold D. Smith, budget director, began today the preparation of a record-breaking budget for the next fiscal year, and it may total $32,000,000,000.

The exact figure, however, will not be known until President Roosevelt sends it to Congress next January.

A $32,000,000,000 budget would mean $10,000,000,000 more than is slated to be spent this fiscal year. Mr. Smith's task, however, is something more than arriving at a huge total, for financial experts hold that expenditures on such an astronomical scale will be possible only if defense production reaches a tremendous volume.

They explained that, in the last analysis, the size of the new budget will depend, not on administration wishes, but on the estimated amount of munitions the nation's factories can turn out. The cost of this production, plus certain routine Government expenses, will write the total.

Defense is scheduled for about $25,000,000,000 next year, compared with about $15,000,000,000 this year. This fiscal year will end and the new one begin the night of June 30, 1942.

Mr. Smith, himself, declined to estimate the size of the next budget, saying that he has only begun hearings on departmental requests. The first hearing, held yesterday, was for the Interstate Commerce Commission. In the coming weeks each of the scores of Government agencies will present and try to justify their requests, with the big army, navy

Revision in December.

Late in December the budget officials and President Roosevelt will revise the departmental requests, but all the details will be secret until the President sends his report to Congress early in January. Congress then must pass appropriations to make the President's requests effective.

The revenue side of the budget will depend mostly on the tax bill now awaiting final action in Congress.

Roughly, the new bill will add $3,500,000,000 to the Federal revenues of the next fiscal year. With revenues from existing laws, receipts thus may reach $13,000,000,000 or more. Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau, however, already have said they will ask for still more taxes and lease-lend hearings waiting for December.
next year.

But the indicated deficit of approximately $19,000,000,000, as well as the spending and revenue forecasts, all would set new records for American finance.

The largest deficit of the world war era was $13,376,638,000. Until this year, the spending record was $18,522,895,000 and the revenue record was $6,694,565,000, both world war figures. This year the spending is estimated at $22,269,000,000, revenues at approximately $11,000,000,000, and the deficit at about $12,269,000,000.

F. D. Ridicules Film Probe Activities

Declares He Has Not Been Aware of War Propaganda in Movies; Nye Replies

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP)—Asserting he had not been aware of war propaganda in the movies, President Roosevelt today ridiculed the activities of the Senate sub-committee investigating the film industry.

And, when asked whether the government had brought pressure to bear on the movie makers to include war propaganda in their output, he replied that government was a broad word and said that neither he nor, to his knowledge, any of his subordinates had done so.

He called attention to a cartoon published in the Washington Evening Star on the subject and said it was worth reprinting. It showed Charlie Chaplin holding a subpoena in his hand and asking what he could teach those "past masters" about comedy.

The President also produced a telegram, a copy of which had been sent to a member of the investigating subcommittee by an unnamed individual in Connecticut. It read:

"Have just been reading book called Holy Bible. Has large circulation in this country. Written entirely by foreign born, mostly Jews. First part full of dangerous war mongering propaganda. Second condemns isolationists with fake story about samaritan. Dangerous. Should be added to your list and suppressed."

Senator Nye (R-ND), co-author with Senator Clark (D-Mo) of the resolution for the movie inquiry, said in reply to Mr. Roosevelt:

"I am surprised that the President has not injected himself earlier in the efforts being made to discontinue and stop the investigation of war propaganda in the motion pictures. I am sure that these efforts are going to be unavailing."

The investigation is being conducted by Senators Clark (D-Idaho), Tobey (R-NY) and Brooks (R-Ill) all critics of the President's foreign policy, and Senator McFarland (D-Ariz), a supporter of the chief executive, who has criticized the methods of the subcommittee. Senator Bone (D-Wash) is also a member but has been ill and has not attended any of the sessions.

WIDE EXTENT OF NAZI SPY RING DESCRIBED

Far-Reaching Operations Conducted in New York, Court Told

Messages From Gestapo Radio Station In Hamburg Read

SEP 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept 16—The web of German military intelligence spun in New York, extended from Alaska and Iceland to Brazil, China and Africa, and covered cities and whistle stops in the United States, according to evidence presented today at the trial of sixteen men charged with espionage conspiracy.

Harold M. Kennedy, United States Attorney, read into the trial record a series of messages received at a secret "spy" radio station on Long Island—built and operated by American counter-espionage agents—which indicated Germany's insatiable thirst for military and industrial intelligence.

Germany wanted to know, according to the messages from the Gestapo station in Hamburg, what planes were being built in Fairbanks, Alaska, and whether a friend of Frederick Duquesne, 63, a defendant characterized by the Government as a "spy for the last forty years," could spy in Dakar, Africa.

Use Of Microphotos

The messages mentioned microphotographs—on which thousands of words were reduced to a picture the size of a postage ctamp—being transported by spies on the high seas; and they directed the transmission of secret documents, diagrams and war mechanisms through agents in Rio de Janeiro and Shanghai. Payment came from Mexico City.

Hamburg demanded, "What preparations has United States made in Greenland and Iceland for convoys?" five months before American occupation of Iceland was announced.

William G. Sebold, who turned over his assignment in German espionage to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, testified that Duquesne dispatched to Germany pictures, diagrams and detailed information on the Garrand rifle, naval movements in the Caribbean, Chrysler tanks, gas masks, anti-gas devices, aerial bombs and grenades, life belt textiles and a secret type of warship deck which destroys aerial bombs before impact.

Other Data Sought

In messages read today, the German espionage system stressed a requirement for information on American anti-aircraft guns and shells and urged Duquesne to "enlist the services of members of the United States Air Corps."

Most of the messages are not being offered in evidence by the Government.

Sebold said earlier that F. B. I. agents supervising the radio sent misinformation to Germany.

One microphotographic order from Hamburg told Duquesne to have agents (seventeen of whom already have pleaded guilty to one or both counts of the indictment) check up on the following cities and aircraft factories and determine the productive capacity, production, employment, floor space, shifts and other details:

Bell, Buffalo; Bellanca, Newcastle, Del.; Boeing, Seattle, Wash.; Brewster, New York and Newark, N. J.; Beech, Wichita, Kan.; Consolidated, San Diego, Cal.; Curtiss, Buffalo; Curtiss Wright, Robertson, Mo.; Douglas, Santa Monica, Cal.; Fairchild, Hagerstown, Md.; Grumman, Bethpage, N. Y.; Lockheed, Burbank, Cal.; Glenn Martin, Baltimore; North American, Inglewood, Cal.; Republic, Farmingdale, N. Y.; Ryan, San Diego, Cal.; Stearman, Wichita; Stinson, Wayne, Mich.; Vought-Sikorsky, Bridgeport, Conn.; Vultee, Inglewood; Waco, Troy, Ohio; Northrop, Hawthorne, Cal.; Stinson, Nashville, Tenn.

Also the Allison Motor Works at Indianapolis, Ind.; Pratt & Whitney, East Hartford, Conn.; Wright, Paterson, N. J., and Naval Aircraft Factory, Philadelphia.

SAVE STRENGTH FOR WAR'S END, HOOVER URGES

Ex-President Says Isolation Or Intervention Is Impossible

SEP 17 1941

But Also Calls For Sending Material Help To Democracies

[By the Associated Press]

Chicago, Sept. 16—Herbert Hoover asserted tonight that the United States should build an impregnable defense, give material aid to democracies, bulwark freedom at home and reserve its strength to help in reconstruction and stabilizing peace "when Hitler collapses of his own overreaching."

He mentioned these points in outlining a "constructive policy" for America and contended that neither isolation nor intervention was wise or possible.

Hoover stated also that President Roosevelt was right in protesting against the firing on United States warships and the sinking of merchant ships.

"Most Critical Of All"

"But the President's policy of edging our warships into danger zones, of sending American merchant ships with contraband, raises the most critical of all questions," he added in a broadcast address.

"These steps to war are unapproved and undeclared by Congress," he said. "That is not in accord with the spirit of representative government and it should be remembered that these indictments are the consequence of violating the spirit of the Neutrality Act."

Hoover said new objectives had been advanced for the American people and that the navy had been ordered to start shooting.

Holds War Inevitable

"No one will deny that if we keep up this step-by-step policy it will lead inevitably to sending our sons into this war," he maintained, adding that this must not be done "without the specific declaration by the Congress."

The former President asked "what is the constructive policy for America?" He continued:

"Is it isolation? Is it intervention? Neither is possible. Neither is wisdom.

"We must have impregnable defense. We must give the tools of defense to the democracies. We should reserve our strength that unexhausted we may give real aid to reconstruction and stabilizing of peace when Hitler collapses of his own overreaching. . . . We can do our greatest service to civilization by strengthening here in the Western Hemisphere free institutions and free men and women."

Bases For U. S. Policies

Hoover suggested that American policies should be predicated on these bases:

If we prepare we cannot be invaded nor our economic life be dangerously impaired.

England can prevent invasion of her shores if we give her the tools, and even warships, without sending our boys to death, either on ships or land.

Hitler is on the way to be crushed by the vicious forces within his own regime.

We have proved by bitter experience that it is a futility for us to try to impose freedom and justice upon the world by war.

The ideas and ideals of the West can grow and spread abroad by our own demonstration in our own country. They will die in the world if they shall become weakened or die in America.

To send our sons into this war must also be weighed in the scales of future America. Should we not weigh in this scale the dead and the maimed? Should we not weigh the one-third of underfed, undernourished, underhoused, undereducated Americans for another generation that will be inevitable? Should we not weigh the loss of our own freedoms?

Abhorred Compromise

Hoover said he abhorred any American compromise or alliance with either Naziism or Communism. He stated Russia was defending herself against aggression but also was "an aggressor nation against democracies."

"And what happens to the millions of enslaved people of Russia and to all Europe and to our own freedoms," he asked, "if we should send our boys to win this war for Communism?"

Says Hitler Can't Survive

He said the "hate of Hitler" in the countries he had conquered would prove "more terrible than the blizzard was to Napoleon," and contended Hitler's "kingdom" could not survive even if he suffered no military defeat on the continent.

Hoover suggested that to the four freedoms enunciated by President Roosevelt a fifth should be added—economic freedom.

"A large number of the men administering our preparedness program do not believe in this freedom," he said. "With a long war their methods with the inevitable debt, inflation, unemployment and demoralized agriculture will make us over into state socialism, probably under some other name."

Wallace Warns Of Premature Ending to War

SEP 17 1941

Calls for International Organization Built on Justice, Charity, Peace In Fordham Speech

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (AP)—Vice President Wallace said tonight that while the American people were "tremendously interested in peace" they would "hate to see this war end prematurely in a way which would insure a third and more horrible war in our generation."

In an address prepared for the Fordham university centenary celebration, the Vice President called for a world organization to establish a "new order built on justice, charity and peace."

"The Hitler house is built upon the sands and the winds are blowing," he said. "I predict that behind the walls where lie France and Poland, Belgium and Luxembourg, Holland and Norway, Yugoslavia and Greece, the winds are blowing at the foundations of Hitler's house. Force untempered by justice brings the tornado to the house of force itself.

"No one can predict the day of the fall of the house of Hitler. But all men of keen perception know that this house will fall from within through the falsity of the architect—through the refusal of Hitler himself to believe that the human being and his rightful needs are the bricks and mortar of any permanent house of God and government on this earth."

Speaking to an audience made up largely of Catholics, Wallace said that there were many passages in President Roosevelt's messages and speeches which paralleled sentiments expressed in papal encyclicals. He recalled that in 1933 the President had called upon 54 nations to join in disarmament.

"The President's objective was peace but he was not a pacifist," Wallace continued. "Hitler answered President's request with a demand for more guns. Fortunately, Roosevelt was not a pacifist and began building ships, a fact which will ultimately contribute mightily to the outcome of this war in both the Pacific and the Atlantic. x x x

"The way to meet the economic and social challenge of all so-called new orders which deny the sacredness of the human soul in its relationship to God is to present a democratic new order which under God will carry out the four freedoms and the eight peace aims. A free economy and a Christian leadership must remove the fear of war. Only by world organization may this be done."

Wheeler Urges F. D. R. To Obey Constitution

Billings, Mont., Sept. 16 (AP).—Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) said tonight that if President Roosevelt intended to take the nation into war "then let it be done the constitutional way and not in the manner of the Hitlers and the Stalins and the Mussolinis."

He spoke over an NBC hookup.

Referring to the President's orders to the Navy to shoot in meeting any threats of Axis warships in this country's defensive waters, Wheeler said:

"Mr. President, during the debate upon the lend-lease bill, you were reported by the press to have said that convoys meant shooting and that shooting meant war.

Recalls F. D. R.'s Words.

"And, Mr. President, on the night of Sept. 11, 1941, you told a tense nation that you had ordered the Navy to shoot. You, Mr. President, ordered shooting after you had said that shooting meant war. You ordered shooting, Mr. President, after you had made those solemn promises not to send American boys to fight in foreign wars.

"Mr. President, you may have the power to wage an undeclared war but under the Constitution of the United States you do not have the right to do so. That is not only my view but it was the opinion of the greatest authority on the war-making powers of the President—Mr. Justice Sutherland of the United States Supreme Court."

Says "War May Be Forced Upon U. S."

Navy Official Notes "Events of Last Few Days"

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (AP)—Ralph A. Bard, assistant secretary of the Navy, said today that "events of the last few days strongly indicate" that war may be forced upon the United States.

Speaking at graduation exercises for 429 ensigns aboard the training ship Prairie State, Bard said that German submarines were coming ever closer to our shores and that four-engined bombing planes had sunk ships within a few miles of land in this hemisphere.

"Modern planes have conquered distance to such an extent that there is an almost continuous stream of planes ferrying across the Atlantic," he said, "and don't forget they can fly west as well as east. Possibilities of attack which were scoffed at a year ago are viewed with apprehension today."

Among the graduates was R. M. Morgenthau, whose father, the Secretary of the Treasury, handed him his commission.

ASSAILS STAND OF LINDBERGH

Ramspeck Declares Flyer Destroys Confidence.

SEP 1941

Boston, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—United States Representative Robert Ramspeck, Democrat, of Georgia, declared today that anybody who is going around the country destroying confidence in the foreign policy of our Government—like Lindbergh—is doing a great wrong.

Addressing the National Association of Postmasters, Mr. Ramspeck said that the lease-lend act had been properly enacted by Congress, that other laws establishing our foreign policy were being properly interpreted by the President, and that anybody attempting to make them ineffective was bordering on disloyalty.

Repeal a Different Matter.

He asserted that if anybody wanted to repeal these laws, that was a different thing, but that as long as they were the laws of the land the President should be given the support of all of the people, Republicans as well as Democrats. He said the time for argument on the nation's foreign policy ended when these laws were enacted.

Mr. Ramspeck said that the lease-lend bill was enacted not only to aid Britain but because of our self-interest to keep Hitler from reaching American shores.

"I believe it inevitable," he declared, "that if Hitler wins, we eventually will have to face him by ourselves because he has created a force over there that will destroy him unless he keeps it busy."

Representative John W. McCormack, House majority floor leader, said that the President in this crisis is taking practical steps to keep America out of war, but if war does come, it will be because Hitler has thrust it upon us."

Stresses Good Offense.

He said that the President's job was to keep war away from these shores and he asserted that a good offense is a good defense.

Without mentioning names, Mr. McCormack declared that an address made recently by a speaker in Iowa was a disgrace to a person in his position. He said that no decent person could support a speech intended to arouse racial prejudice.

Mr. McCormack asserted that, while he respected every man's right to religious convictions he was opposed to those who made appeals on racial lines.

Roosevelt Lauds G. A. R. For Preserving Union

Tells Commander In Chief Of Gratitude For Action Cannot Be Measured.

SEP 14 1941

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 16 (AP)—President Roosevelt in a letter of greetings to the Grand Army of the Republic's seventy-fifth national encampment here today told Commander in Chief William W. Nixon:

"I think that all good Americans would now agree that the perils of our present international situation would be vastly graver were the North and the South now divided into two separate nations—which they might well have been—but for your vision and accomplishment.

"Therefore, the national unity which you won for all of us—North, South, East and West—stands now as our greatest national achievement and national bulwark, since the war for independence. Our gratitude for this patriotic action cannot be measured—as we salute the survivors of those who preserved our Federal Union.

Martinique's Seizure Urged

[By the Associated Press]

New Orleans, Sept. 16—Representative Evan Howell (Rep., Ill.), back from a two-week inspection tour of United States defense outposts in the Caribbean, predicted early seizure by this country of the French island of Martinique.

Howell, a member of the House Insular Affairs Committee, in an interview expressed impatience with what he termed "inconsistencies in our defense program" and said "we should have taken it (Martinique) a long time ago."

The Representative praised the work of army engineers in bringing order out of the chaos of bogs and jungles in island outposts, especially in construction work far from supply sources and where little skilled labor is available.

Henry-Haye Sees Secretary Hull

Washington, Sept. 16 (AP) — Gaston Henry-Haye, the French ambassador, conferred with Secretary of State Hull for 30 minutes today in what the envoy described as a general discussion of Franco-American relations.

The ambassador said the conversation was an exchange of views concerning French and American policies and added that he anticipated going further into the question in another visit.

Nazis Have Secret Of Making Ordinary Auto "Gas" Into High-Rating Air Fuel

BY PAUL GESNER AND JOHN BECKLEY

New York, Sept. 16. (The Special News Service)—Germany has developed a secret substance, easy to handle, which when added to ordinary automobile gasoline boosts its octane rating to that of high test aviation fuel, Pan American Airways announced today.

The stuff looks like ordinary cardboard. You take a little piece of it and stick it in a tank of automobile gas, and presto, you have a tank full of airplane gasoline.

The secret was discovered by Pan American-Grace Airways while it was setting up its lines in Ecuador paralleling the German-controlled Sedta Airline there.

Sedta planes were grounded September 5 and its operations discontinued when the Ecuadorian government revoked its charter. Ecuador ruled Sedta had failed to carry through a program of improvements, and had not maintained schedules. The German-controlled line, however, had lost business right and left to "Panagra" and was carrying only a negligible number of passengers and poundage of express when it folded up.

But the story of the secret substance to boost gasoline octane rating goes back to early this year when Sedta was having difficulty obtaining gasoline.

British and American companies were virtually the only concerns selling aviation gasoline in Ecuador and the German-controlled line found it difficult to get suplies from them.

Sedta asked permission of Ecuadorian officials to operate ships with automobile gasoline, and the officials refused.

"Finally," said Pan American, "Sedta had their schedule in full operation again. They had got from Germany, through the lufthansa in Brazil, a magic strip of chemical substance that looked like pasteboard. Dissolved in a tank of ordinary gasoline, it boosted the octane rating to aviation standard."

Pan American officials said they did not know just what the chemical make-up of the secret substance was.

Oil company officials here, however said that American petroleum research men have worked out several formulas for compounds to do the same work that the German one does.

Because refining facilities for the manufacture of aviation fuel in this country always have been adequate for all needs, use of the formulas to date has been only on an experimental basis.

The fact that Germany has had possesion of an "octane-booster," however, raised some questions, answered others that have arisen in many minds since the war started.

With the use of the magic substance, for instance, the fast German occupation of France could have been speeded by fueling dive bombers with ordinary auto gasoline commandeered along the route into France.

On the other hand, if Germany possessed this secret formula, perhaps Axis partner Japan also had knowledge of it, too.

With ordinary automobile gasoline purchased here after the embargo on aviation fuel shipments, perhaps Japan with some of the little chunks of pasteboard, fueled her airplanes which mombed Chinese cities.

ACCEPTS GORILLA

Roosevelt Is Delighted by Gift of Free French.

Washington, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt agreed today to accept as a gift a huge African gorilla, presented by Free French authorities as a symbol of the ferocity of their fight against Nazism.

"It is the largest, and we believe, the most ferocious gorilla that ever left Africa," wrote Gen. de Larminat, High Commissioner of French Equatorial Africa.

"We are not the largest, but, we hope, the most ferocious group of fighting men engaged in the struggle that is taking place today."

Major-Gen. E. M. Watson, presidential secretary, took the matter up with Mr. Roosevelt and replied, "the President is delighted to accept this gorilla in the fine spirit in which it is offered."

What will be done with the beast was not disclosed, but probably it will wind up in the Washington Zoo. It was captured in the French Congo by Philip Carroll, an American citizen, who is now on the way to this country with it.

Union Votes $50,000 To British Relief

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16 (AP)—The general executive board of the A.F.L. International Ladies' Garment Workers union voted today to donate $50,000 toward relief of British war victims.

David Dubinsky, president of the union, said it recently contributed $10,000 to the United Service Organizations.

Pacific Ports Bidding For Trade

SEP 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Sept. 16—Pacific Coast foreign traders started a drive today to make Western seaports the principal bases for American shipments to British forces in the Red Sea area.

A group headed by Joseph F. Marias, president of the San Francisco Harbor Board, sought the support of the Pacific Coast Trade Conference, in session here, to activate the proposal.

Marias said 100 ships operating from Pacific ports could transport as much cargo as 113 ships operating from the Atlantic coast to the Red Sea.

The Arguments Made

Sea lanes would be shorter and safer, Marias said, and if the Red Sea were bottled up or declared a prohibited zone for American ships, the unloading of cargoes at Basra, Iraq, or some Indian port would save time.

William F. Minehan, president of the San Francisco Foreign Trade Association, said the shift of shipping bases from the East to the West Coast would restore a flow of raw materials to Pacific slope industry. The potential shutdown of supplies, he said, was threatening the activity of many defense and non-defense plants along the Western seaboard.

Canal Tolls, Oil Cited

Other points raised in arguments for the change included the saving of Panama Canal tolls and the conservation of Atlantic coast oil supplies. Proponents said that while Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes has been talking about the danger of an oil shortage on the Atlantic seaboard, there is an abundant supply of bunker oil in California.

They also claimed that shifting of Red Sea shipping bases to the West Coast would lighten the heavy shipments of motor trucks and automobiles now crowding railroads between motor-car manufacturing centers and Atlantic ports. There is much lighter traffic over railroads to the West Coast.

More Efficient, Claim

The preponderance of shipments to the East from the West normally forces railroads to bring back two empty cars to the West out of each ten sent loaded eastward, the Western group said.

Some proponents of the plan said that swinging business from the motor-car manufacturing area to the West Coast would tend to balance the nation's rail traffic and make for more efficient use of freight cars during the emergency.

Warns Seaboard Cities Of Raids If War Comes

Admiral Woodward Advises Defense Groups To Train Volunteer Firemen And Policemen

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 16 (AP)—Seaboard cities may expect sporadic bombing attacks designed to terrorize the people if the United States gets into a shooting war, Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, U. S. N., told the San Diego Defense Council today.

"We do not expect continuous attacks such as London received," Admiral Woodward said, "but if we get into actual warfare—we are in the war now—coast cities will be more liable to attack than those in central States."

To cope with such attacks, he urged the council to reinforce the fire and police departments with trained volunteers. He indicated Congress soon would be asked for funds to buy additional fire-fighting equipment for East and West Coast cities.

SAYS JAPANESE HAVE VIOLATED PACT ON FISHING

Senator Wallgren Reports Boats Off Alaska, Hints at Different Reason

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP) — Senator Wallgren (D-Wash.) told Secretary Hull today Japanese fishing boats had violated an agreement not to fish in Alaskan waters and that a Japanese floating cannery had operated there this summer.

First Time in Two Years

Wallgren said it was the first time since the agreement was made two years ago, that Japanese boats had fished in those waters. He added in his letter to Hull that "there is a possibility that they were there for some other purpose."

Wallgren said in his letter he had received pictures of the Japanese floating cannery taken when it was operating about 20 miles northeast of the Pribilof Islands and due south of Nunivak Island off Bristol Bay on June 27 and at later dates. The pictures which he sent Hull showed the Kosei Maru of Tokio and its flotilla of small boats at work.

"Fish taken in this area, "Wallgren wrote, "belong to us. They are being intercepted while moving in to spawn in Kvichak River and other streams in Alaska."

The senator said it was his understanding Japan had agreed not to license boats to fish in Alaskan waters.

"The Japanese have fished the Siberian waters barren," Wallgren said, "and now they are moving into Alaskan waters and taking fish that belong to the United States. We should insist they keep their boats out of our waters."

Machine Tools Now Moving To Russia

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—American Machinists, a trade journal, said today the United States was shipping to Russia machine tools built for the Soviet Government but held in this country for months by export controls. Export of the tools was prohibited while Germany and Russia were apparent allies. Now that they are enemies, the magazine said, several million dollars worth of machinery has been released and is en route by way of Vladivostok.

In addition, the journal said, more may be diverted from British and United States defense orders to help Russia build war industries to replace those captured or destroyed by the invading Nazi forces.

The magazine estimated present machine tool production at above $60,000,000 a month, and said that for 1940 and 1941 production probably would total $1,200,000,000 or more than for the entire preceding ten years.

Harbor At New York Jammed As 104 Ships Arrive In 36 Hours

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—New York harbor was jammed with ships today.

A procession of 104 vessels—53 of them British, Dutch and Norwegian arrived in the thirty-six hours from Sunday midnight to noon today, and harbor officials said that not in years had they seen so many in port at one time. The majority were tankers, but a number were whaling ships.

The Sandy Hook pilots, Customs Service, Immigration Department and Public Health Service at quarantine had all available men on duty.

2 Aides For U. S. Embassy In London Leave N. Y.

E. F. Penrose And Mrs. Edith T. Denhardt To Become Technical Advisers

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—The Dixie Clipper took off for Lisbon today with twenty-three transatlantic passengers, including two aides for the United States Embassy in London.

Ernest F. Penrose, economist, and his assistant, Mrs. Edith T. Denhardt, will become technical advisers for the embassy.

Windsors Are Slated To Be White House Guests September 25

Nassau, Bahamas, Sept. 16 (AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will leave September 23 on a six-week holiday trip which will take them to Canada.

They will leave on a chartered Pan American Airways plane for Miami. Then they will board the Seaboard Air Line's Silver Meteor for an overnight journey to Washington. President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain them September 25 at an informal luncheon at the White House.

From Washington the former king and his wife are expected to go directly to the Duke's ranch near Calgary, Alberta. Edward's last visit to the ranch was made in 1927 when he was Prince of Wales.

Will Scatter Navy Man's Ashes in Bay

Capt. Picking Died in Ferry Command Crash

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP)—The ashes of the late Capt. Sherwood Picking, United States naval officer killed Sept. 1 in the crash of an R. A. F. ferry command plane in Great Britain, will be scattered from a submarine on the waters of Casco Bay, Me.

The Navy announced today that non-military memorial services would be held in the Picking residence overlooking Casco Bay at Falmouth Foreside, Me. The scattering of the ashes would be in compliance with the wishes of Capt. Picking's widow, the Navy said, adding a submarine was chosen because Capt. Picking served much of his naval career in that type of vessel.

The ashes were sent from England Sept. 14, after funeral services in Glascow, Scotland, and memorial services at St. Martin-in-the Fields Church, Trafalgar Square, London, on Sept. 8. Capt. Picking was en route to London to become assistant naval attache when the crash occurred.

The date of the naval ceremony was not made known, but the Navy Department said it would be within the next week.

CALL PUBLISHERS IN NAZI INQUIRY

Grand Jurors to Hear About Flanders Hall, Inc.

SEP 17 1941

Washington, Sept. 16 (A. P.)—The president and former treasurer of Flanders Hall, Inc., book publishers of Scotch Plains, N. J., have been subpœnaed to appear before a special Grand Jury in a Department of Justice investigation of Nazi propaganda.

Siegfried Hauck, the president, and his brother, Adolph, former treasurer, were expected to go before the Grand Jury today. Edward J. Hickey, one of the special assistant attorneys-general directing the investigation, said Adolph had been drafted and would come here from either Fort Dix or Boston.

The investigation, begun by the propaganda unit of the department, was intended to develop facts concerning the financing, management and purposes of a number of publishing houses which have turned out publications critical of the British. Investigators said that Flanders Hall had issued approximately fifteen books in the last two years.

Among others subpœnaed was Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling of Chicago, author of "The Red Network."

in "armed conflict" since President Roosevelt's speech last Thursday ordering the navy to strike first at Axis warships entering American defensive waters.

Approval of the resolution now makes operative a law providing for payment of a $10 monthly bonus to each Vermonter in the army, navy and Marine Corps in the advent of armed conflict.

A sum of $500,000 was appropriated to meet the bonuses.

The resolution said that the term "armed conflict" as used in the existing law "shall be construed liberally and shall include a state of national emergency wherein the President of the United States shall, as commander in chief of the army and navy, order such branches of government to exercise force to protect lives and property which are or may be endangered by the hostile acts of any foreign powers; also a declaration of war by act of Congress."

MacKenzie's Views On War Today

SEP 17 1941

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

This being the day the United States Navy starts operating under orders "to capture or destroy" every Axis raider that so much as casts an eye on lease-lend cargoes en route between America and Iceland, an editor suggests that I put myself in Herr Hitler's place and figure out how he will meet this difficult situation.

Always glad of new ideas, still we must beg to be excused from taking the place of any individual who is to all intents at war with our country. We don't care much either to be in the uncomfortable position of tangling with the U. S. Navy, for which we have a very wholesome respect—and venture to suggest that the Fuehrer has too.

However, there's no harm in guessing what the Nazi chief has in mind. It would seem more profitable though to take a look at his entire war problem, since his action in the Atlantic must be governed to considerable degree by what happens in Russia.

Much will depend, as was pointed out in yesterday's column, on the German position in Russia a couple of weeks from now—or whenever the pre-Winter weather begins to lay a heavy hand on military operations. In trying to assay the general war outlook we must keep in mind these vital points:

Herr Hitler likely will have to hold a line through the Winter between the Baltic and the Black Seas, but if he can bring home his present great offensives, and get himself into a favorable strategical position, he will be able to maintain his defenses much more easily and therefore will be able to release forces for operations elsewhere.

On the other hand, if the Bolshevists can stand the Nazis off—even hold them here they are now—then Hitler will be compelled to keep a great army in the Russian fielr, and so will have to curtail operations elsewhere.

In order to get himself properly set, or so it seems to me, the Nazi leader must capture Leningrad (and what a job that is proving to be); he must maintain at least his present position in the center of the line opposite Moscow; he must capture Kiev and roll the Red forces in the Ukraine clear back to the Don River, thereby putting himself in position to make a drive down through the Caucasus to Persia.

I was chatting yesterday with General H. S. Sewell, the British military expert, and he feels that Hitler's most likely move, if he gets a favorable break in his present operations, will be to the east. The general points out that if the Germans are able to gain control of the Black Sea, and if they can manage Turkey so as to have no active opposition from her, their way will be open to the Caucasus and the rich oil fields of the Caspian. Once in the Caucasus, the Nazis would threaten the whole British structure in the Middle East.

If a drive down through the Caucasus isn't feasible, indications are that Hitler will put the screws on Turkey and try to get passage of his army across that country in order to get at the lower Caucasus and Persia. There is widespread belief in the Balkans that should the Turks refuse, Hitler might attack them probably utilizing Rumanian and Bulgarian troops in the assault.

Should Hitler concentrate on the Middle East, his operations elsewhere probably would be restricted-barring the Atlantic over which is passing a constantly increasing stream of aid for the Allies. Someway he must halt that traffic, else it will overwhelm him.

Now while he ultimately may feel compelled to go all-out in raiding the American - Icelandic route, thereby precipitating open fighting with our warships, he has given plenty of indications that he would vastly prefer to avoid a clash which would bring us into the war and unleash our navy on him.

One would expect him first to try a fresh drive against British shipping as it is coming to England from Iceland. He undoubtedly is holding a large fleet of submarines in reserve, and when the Russian fighting eases off with the coming of winter he will be able to release bombers to renew their assault on merchant ships and harbors.

Meantime of course, the Fuehrer is trying to push Japan into the war with the idea of diverting as much of our navy as possible to the Far East. This effort will be stymied if Washington and Japan reach an agreemnt in their present negotiations.

That there will be shooting between Yankee warships and Nazi raiders there can be little doubt. Still, many observers feel that if Hitler follows logical strategy he will try to confine his activities largely to operations outside our protected zone and thus avoid war.

Europe's Millions Stir Restlessly With Underground Revolt Movements Growing

Executioner Works Overtime To Quell Numerous Uprisings

Hitler Cannot Afford To Relax His Vigilance In Occupied Lands

By Don Whitehead

NEW YORK, Sept. 15. (The Special NOW Service)—Revolt is stirring among Europe's restless millions. From Norway to Greece, dark figures slip through the night to kill, burn, wreck and spy on the occupying forces.

Some are caught in the Gestapo's net or by the military police. Then the firing squads tramp through the gray dawn. Or bodies dangle from the hangman's noose.

The executioner works overtime to throttle this threat in the occupied countries where more than 120,000,000 people live under the invader's gun. But the underground revolt grows to such proportions it can not be hidden under the censor's silence.

Not for a moment can Hitler relax his vigilance over the occupied countries, even though the occupation troops might be needed on the Eastern Front in the Russian campaign.

The Germans defeated the armies, but they haven't crushed the people yet...and many watch hopefully in the belief that Nazi-Fascist hold finally may be broken by revolution.

The vignettes of violence, intrigue and revolt coming out of Europe form a bloody pattern.

Norway—

One night a German sentry plodded his beat on the waterfront in Oslo while the city seemed quietly asleep. His hobnailed boots beat a steady measure. A stealthy figure moved out of the shadows. A thin, steel knife blade gleamed in the moonlight. There was a smothered cry, and a splash in the water.

German military police found the sentry's body next morning. They couldn't find his gun.

The moon hadn't risen when a small boat set out from an isolated fishing village on the West Coast of Norway and headed toward England. The three men aboard waited tensely for a warning shot from shore. None came. They scanned the water for floating mines or Nazi patrol boats.

At dawn they watched the skies, too, for planes that might blast them out of the sea. They ran the gauntlet to England, these three. They could have stayed, safe from the inraders who had overrun their country.

But a few days later they were in their little boat headed back toward Norway. They carried with them a radio transmitter set to establish communication with England, and plans for organizing anti-German elements in their homeland for sabotage and revolt.

This time their luck played out. A firing squad wrote the finish to their adventure.

SEP 17 1941

Street Fighting

Ever since Vidkun Quisling helped the Nazis in their invasion of Norway and his name became synonymous with treason, the Norsemen have openly and passively fought the Germans.

Once a bomb exploded near Quisling, but he escaped injury. Street fighting broke out in many towns. German soldiers were assaulted. Fires flamed mysteriously in buildings housing German equipment. Workers sabotaged plants producing war materials. Provincial officials resigned, refusing to follow Quisling edicts.

The situation pushed to a climax last week when Joseph Terboven, German commissioner for Norway, clumped Oslo and its environs under civil seige. Death or imprisonment to those who opposed the Nazis! And no appeal.

Oslo became a virtual prison for 500,000 Norwegians. Steel helmeted German troopers with tommy guns patrolled the streets.

The invaders had found it easier to overrun a country than to subdue its people. And the story of Oslo is not yet finished.

An automobile filled with German soldiers sped down a highway seemingly free of obstructions...and suddenly turned turtle as it struck a steel cable stretched across the road.

A German colonel entered a Paris subway. There was a scuffle. He was stabbed to death. The lives of French hostages were held forfeit for subversive acts against the Nazi troops of occupation.

Trains running out of Paris were wrecked...Factory production slowed to a snail pace...A Free French sympathizer tried to assassinate Pierre Laval, Nazi collaborationist, and Marcel Deat, former French Air Minister.

Old Marshal Philippe Petain, France's Chief of State, must have foreseen the tempest when he summoned his countrymen to collaborate willingly with Germany, for he said: "Frenchmen! I have grave things to tell you. For the last several weeks I have felt an ill wind rising in many regions of France. Disquiet is overtaking minds; doubt is gaining control of spirits..."

Paris police offered a reward of one million francs (about $20,000) for information leading to the arrest of railroad saboteurs. French civilian watchment were conscripted to guard the railroads under penalty of death if any sabotage occurred in their sector.

The Germans rounded up 6,000 Jews with the announcement they were suspected of opposing German troops.

Greece

Out of ancient Greece come stories of guerrillas and saboteurs at work. German and Italian soldiers disappear. Provisions are stolen. Raw materials for the machines of war are ruined. Forest fires consume timber which was to be cut and shipped to Germany.

Athens dispatches to Belgrade report death sentences for five Greeks. One sabotaged German telephone lines in Crete, another aided two Britons to escape, and three were found in possession of weapons, it was said.

Others less daring have adopted the line of passive resistance.

The Netherlands

A big RAF bomber headed out across the channel from England with a cargo labeled "Berlin." Heavy cloud formations blanketed the coastline and for a time the boys feared their objective would be hidden. But the weather cleared before they reached Berlin.

Searchlights held them in a cone of light, anti-aircraft shells burst in little puffs. The fighters came up to meet them.

They unloaded their bombs and watched the exposions below and then set out for home. A German fighter sent a bullet into one of the motors and it conked out.

The pilot brought the plane down in a field in Holland. The crew anticipated capture and internment when three men ran toward them. But they were Dutchmen loyal to their Queen. They gave the fliers shelter, clothing, food and money and bade them godspeed.

The Dutchmen weren't so lucky when the Nazis discovered what they had done.

Throughout the Netherlands and Belgium trickle the stories of civilian resistance to the Nazis, of daring escapades, and the operation of British spies inciting revolt and revenge.

The Balkans—

The Yugoslavs never had a chance against Hitler's Stukas and mechanized divisions, but in the rugged hills the natives refuse to give up the fight even though their armies were crushed.

A correspondent driven before the German invasion came upon the remnant of an Army division, burying weapons and ammunition.

"Why are you burying your guns?" he asked.

"We'll return one day and have need of them," was the answer.

And that day seems to have arrived. Bands of hardy mountaineers are waging guerrilla warfare in the Balkans, making sudden, fierce forays against the invaders and then retreating to their hideouts.

Firing squads have executed hundreds, but the revolt continues.

From Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary, too, come reports of disorder. The government of pro-Nazi General Ion Antonescu broadcast that 500 "Jewish Communists" had been executed for sniping at German and Rumanian troops.

The general reportedly issued a decree that 20 Jewish and five non-Jewish Communists would be slain for every single act of sabotage in Rumania attributable to Communists.

And so the underground battle of the people rages in Europe, sometimes flaring to the surface, always seething.

American Agents Break German Spy Code

SEP 17 1941

By WILLIAM PINKERTON

NEW YORK—(The Jersey Journal Special News Service)—Have American agents cracked the secret codes of Nazi esponage?

Hints that American spy-hunters have held the keys to the mumbo-jumbo of Nazi military intelligence are being heard in the current trial of a group of men accused of transmitting defense secrets to Germany.

A federal attorney disclosed that an American counter-espionage agent actually had attended the special school for spies in a building next to the police presidium at Hamburg, Germany.

There he was taught how to make and decode German secret messages; How to handle a camera; How to operate a radio, and how to make the tiny microphographs which convert bulky documents into a package small enough to be carried in the back of a watch case.

German agents gave the spy a copy of Rachel Field's "All This and Heaven Too"—an English best-seller novel—and this was the key to the coding and decoding of messages by which he was to keep in touch with the Hamburg headquarters.

FORMULA COMPLICATED

The formula was complicated. The first step was to add the number of the day of the month to the number of the month of the year. The sum stood for a page in the novel.

On that page the novel, with the aid of numbers and squares, he could find the answer to the apparently innocent messages he had received.

For a government to give out such detailed description of a foreign spy-ring's code is unusual. It tips off the foreign power that its code is known.

The fact that American officials were willing to put on court record their knowledge of German espionage methods may indicate that this code already has been abandoned. And that another is in use. It may be that American agents already have solved the new code.

Since World War days, it has been standard practice for espionage agents to change their codes from time to time, as insurance against the code-key falling into enemy hands.

Crytographers say any code can be broken, given time. But, for military intelligence, the enemy's code must be deciphered quickly if information contained in a secret message is to help the battling generals.

DIVER FOUND CODE

In the World War, the British laid hands on the master codebook of the German Navy by sending a diver down to prowl through the cabins of a sunken warship.

The British kept their knowledge a scret, and for months they deciphered German naval intelligence with the ease of a secretary transcribing shorthand.

The idea of using a popular novel as key to secret code is a fresh but not particularly inspired approach to the problems of cryptography.

But there have been few really new discoveries in the art of secret-writing since the coded messages of ancient Romans.

Fundamentally, there are only two ways of arranging coded messages:

1. By pattern. Each letter in the alphabet many stand for another letter; or words may be plucked out of a message according to some prearranged forumla. Patterns may become extermely complicated. But there are limits, and the ingenious cryptographers can always find the pattern at length.

2. By code-book. Here, the sequence of the letters or the words is no clue whatsoever. Decoding depends on possessing the code-book which gives the word-for word translation from code into understandable writing.

MUST CARRY CODE BOOK

The handicap of this method, of course, is that an agent must carry a code-book on his person. The danger of the code falling into the enemy hands is great.

There are hundreds of variations and combinations of these methods. The Germans apparenly used a combination of the two methods, using a novel as the code-key but also using a prearranged formula for plucking the message from the novel's pages.

Apparently the Germans used one refinement. They had a separate code for each agent. Thus, while the American counter-espionage agent was given "All This and Heaven Too" as the key to his code, it was asserted in court that another German operator in United States decoded messages with a detecitive thriller called "Halfway To Horror."

It is probable that the Germans also used separate formulas for each agent.

The whole story of this war's espionage and code-systems will not be written until long after the war is over.

Thus, it is too early now to know what ingenious methods are being used to disguise messages in transit.

MICROPHOTOS USED

The microphoto film is widely used, of course, for it makes possible the transmission of complete plans for a gun, a bombsight or a tank in the tiniest space.

Agents have smuggled such packages from country to country for centuries, using the same devices as jewel-smugglers and other underworld characters — hollowed shoe-heels, suit linings, hollow rings, cane-heads and so on.

Messages can be written in invisible ink, can even be written in invisible ink on the body of a courier going from country to country.

No doubt the radio has brought refinements. During the World War, British listeners kept hearing unintelligible buzzing on German radios. They couldn't make head nor tail out of them. But the British recorded the sounds for study.

One dull day in the Mediterreanean, a group of British officers were lounging around their quarters aboard ship, playing phonograph records for amusement. Someone put the German radio record on, for a lark. The The phonograph ran down, and the squeaking buzz slowed into perfectly-audible German speech.

There have been suggestions that musical numbers and other sound effects might be used to transmit pre-arranged codes.

For short-range communications, between agents not more than 100 miles apart, messages could be transmitted on wave-band of higher-frequency than short - wave radio. These messages would not be picked up by ordinary radio set, but their infra-red rays could be picked up by special small machines.

HAVE THEIR PURPOSE

Such waves, like television, do not carry beyond the horizon. They would be useless, of course, in establishing direct communications between headquarters in Germany and agents in this country. They could, however, be used between ships off shore, for instance, and stations based on the American coast.

Whatever the refinements of espionage, there is plenty of evidence that the messages are getting through—on both sides of the war.

German broadcasts to French soldiers in the Maginot Line, giving in detail the names of their units and even what they had for lunch proved it. German broadcasts to British ports in South Africa, detailing the arrival and depature of troop transports proved it.

The British "V" campign proved it. And so have the British forays onto the European mainland—which could not have been accomplished without aid from within the enemy country.

CANADA A UNIT OF U. S. ARSENAL

Defense Industries of Two Nations Are Fused.

By WADE WERNER

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—Canada, which a year ago was exerting herself to become an arsenal of empire for Great Britain, has in recent months become also an integral part of the United States arsenal of democracy. Her factories today are producing implements of war not only for the United Kingdom, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and India, but also for China, the Dutch East Indies and Russia.

What makes this possible is the Hyde Park agreement announced by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King a little over four months ago. Under the terms of this agreement the United States buys from Canada various defense items which can be conveniently produced in this country, and on the other hand supplies to Canada under lease-lend terms, airplane engines, armor plate and other component parts of equipment which Canada is making for England.

Purchases Go Over Top.

At the time of the Hyde Park agreement it was announced the United States would probably be able to buy between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 worth of defense articles from Canada in the succeeding twelve months. Actually much more than that has already been purchased. The sum total is limited today by the capacity of Canadian factories for putting these parts together and sending them to England as finished articles. Canada thus can throw her war industry into high gear without worrying how to pay for imported American airplane engines, electrical equipment, metals and other essential components of planes, tanks, guns and vehicles being manufactured here for England.

On the other hand, Canadian factories are enabled to share in the defense orders being distributed from Washington as part of the general program of producing weapons for all countries resisting aggression. Thus a Canadian factory which had hitherto been making Hurricane fighters for Britain is now busy on an American order for 400 planes said to be destined for the Dutch East Indies and China.

A Boon to Canada.

The advantage of orders coming from the United States is that articles delivered to the United States are paid for in dollars which can be used to pay for Canada's large imports from that country. Britain's payments in sterling for Canadian food and war material shipments, on the other hand, can be used only for purchase of British goods, repatriation of Canadian securities held in England, or accumulation of sterling balances in England.

Prior to the Hyde Park agreement Canada was exporting enough to the United Kingdom to pay for everything she could import from there, including large amounts of British-held Canadian securities; but she was having difficulty digging up enough American dollars to pay for her rapidly mounting imports from the United States.

BERLIN, Sept. 16 (AP)—A special communiqué from the headquarters of Adolf Hitler said today:

Strong forces of the Soviet Eleventh, Twenty-seventh and Thirty-fourth Armies during past weeks were decisively defeated by troops of the German Army commanded by Col. Gen. Busch, assisted by units of the air fleet of Col. Gen. Keller, in the region south of Lake Ilmen.

Nine enemy divisions were completely annihilated, an additional nine divisions were crushed with the bloodiest losses for the enemy. Over 53,000 prisoners fell into our hands, and 320 tanks, 695 pieces of artillery of all calibers, as well as numerous war matériel, were captured or destroyed.

The Fuehrer's headquarters also issued this communiqué:

In the Ukraine, German Army units in an audacious attack effectively supported by the air force established bridgeheads on highly important points across the broad lower Dnieper.

After these bridgeheads were held and widened in several days fighting against strong, embittered enemy attacks, partly assisted by tanks, German divisions have now pushed victoriously farther eastward on a broad front.

In a fight against British supply shipping the air force yesterday destroyed a 7,300-ton tanker west of the Hebrides. Last night two large merchantmen, including one transport, were set afire sailing in convoys in the waters around England.

In Northern Africa German troops carried out a successful scouting thrust with tanks on the Solum front.

Near Tobruk an important height was taken after a stubborn fight.

On Sunday eight British planes were downed in air fights and by anti-aircraft in Northern Africa without any losses of our own.

Attempts by British planes to attack the Helgoland Bight on the Dutch coast in daylight yesterday were ineffective. Chaser planes brought down two enemy planes.

British planes last night dropped bombs on various places in Northwestern Germany. The civilian population, primarily in Hamburg, suffered dead and wounded. Night chaser planes and anti-aircraft brought down nine of the attacking bombers.

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué today:

In the course of Sept. 16 our troops fought the enemy along the whole front.

Our air force operated against enemy Panzer troops, infantry and artillery and attacked the enemy air force on its airdromes and bombed Balcic [in Rumania].

On Sept. 14 twenty-nine German planes were destroyed in air combats and on enemy airdromes. We lost eighteen planes.

According to precise information, on Sept. 15 warships of our Northern Fleet destroyed three large enemy transports and not two transports as previously reported.

According to precise information now available, during the German attempt to land troops on Oesel Island our coastal artillery, air force and warships destroyed four transports of a total displacement of 28,000 tons, loaded with troops, tanks and other armaments; one destroyer, ten launches and many small craft with German soldiers. One enemy plane was brought down.

The next day the enemy concentrated many transports, small craft and planes and again attempted to land troops on Oesel Island from the sea and air. As a result of the two days' fierce fighting the bulk of the enemy marine and air landing parties was annihilated and the remnants thrown into the sea.

One of the tank brigades operating in the Leningrad sector of the front in a successful engagement destroyed forty-eight enemy tanks and armored cars, twenty-seven guns and thirteen mine throwers.

British

LONDON, Sept. 16 (AP)—An Air Ministry communiqué today said:

Shipyards, factories and railways at Hamburg were attacked for some hours last night by a powerful force of aircraft of the Bomber Command. Many large fires were started.

Other German ports, including Bremen, Cuxhaven and Wilhelmshaven, also were bombed.

The docks at Havre were heavily attacked by another force of bombers. Aircraft of the Fighter Command during the night continued their attacks on enemy airdromes in occupied territory. From these operations nine aircraft of the Bomber Command are missing.

The Air Ministry issued this communiqué tonight:

Blenheim aircraft of the Bomber Command in search of enemy shipping off the Dutch coast sank an enemy patrol vessel this morning. One of our bombers is missing.

An enemy fighter was destroyed by one of our fighters on patrol.

This afternoon aircraft of the Fighter Command have carried out offensive operations over the Channel and the coast of France. In the course of these five more enemy fighters were destroyed and two of ours are missing.

Egyptian

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 16 (AP)—The Egyptian Interior Ministry issued the following today:

High explosives and incendiaries dropped in the course of raid alerts in the Cairo area early this morning, thirty-nine persons being killed and ninety-three injured, with slight damage to property. Anti-aircraft defenses were in action. Alerts also sounded in several provinces.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 16 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued the following today:

German mechanized detachments, with the aid of Axis aviation formations, carried out an energetic offensive thrust into Egyptian territory east of Solum Sept. 14-15, forcing British troops to fall back.

German and Italian fighter craft repeatedly faced enemy air forces, shooting down a total of twelve enemy planes. Ten of our planes failed to return. Others were hit, with several wounded aboard.

Other Italian air units renewed bombing actions at night on the stronghold of Tobruk and the Matrud zone. They hit fortifications and depots in which fires developed, as well as concentrations of motor vehicles and railway installations.

Enemy planes bombed Bengazi without result.

In East Africa, intense firing activity with artillery, mortars and automatic arms is reported in the Uolchefit sector, and enemy attempts to approach the outpost of Culquabert, which were promptly repulsed, are reported.

In the Eastern Mediterranean our planes hit an enemy merchant ship with bombs and seriously damaged it.

Russian

Moscow, Sept. 16 (AP)—Soviet Information Bureau communiqué this morning said:

Throughout the night of September 15 our troops fought the enemy along the entire front.

September 12 Soviet flyers bombed one of the German airdromes in the northwestern direction front, destroying twenty Fascist planes. On the southwestern front Soviet bombers attacked an enemy airdrome and destroyed sixteen aircraft. Ten enemy machines were destroyed in a raid on a German airdrome in the southern direction September 13. On the Western front our aircraft raided a Fascist airdrome and put seven planes and two guns out of action.

In air combats at the approaches to Leningrad Colonel Danilov's air unit in one day brought down sixteen Fascist planes. That day Pilots Neustruyev, Pidtykan, Abramov, Kharitonov, Zhuikov and Plavsky of this unit brought down two planes each.

In the Barents Sea our torpedo boats and a submarine sank two large enemy transports.

At the approaches to Odessa Rumanian troops are sustaining heavy losses in men and armament. This is testified to by letters and diaries found on captives and killed Rumanian officers and men. In a letter he had not time to post, Rumanian Officer Todorescu writes: "In our last engagement we were continuously battered for twenty-four hours by heavy artillery and mine-thrower fire. Only five men survived of my platoon."

The diary of Rumanian Officer Kazaku contains the following description of the destruction of one company:

"The enemy shelled us incessantly. The men could not stand this hurricane of fire and fled. I shouted and drove at them and brandished my revolver. Otherwise I might be accused of doing nothing. At dawn the Russians had completely annhilated our anti-tank company."

Anxious letters from starving families at home are depressing and demoralizing Rumanian soldiers. The sister of Jon Dobres, a private in the First Frontier Guard Regiment, writes to him: "Our position is serious. We have no bread. We are starving. A measure of maize costs 200 leis and even at that it is difficult to get."

Stanka Sarca, wife of a private in the Eleventh Infantry Regiment, informs her husband: "I still am not getting my allowance. I have nothing to live on. I am starving."

A captive, Sergt. Ivan Anziliu, said upon interrogation: "There is famine in Rumania. Everywhere food is being requisitioned for the Germans. They take everything."

Thousands of young workers, collective farmers and intellectuals have joined guerrilla detachments. Many of them have become scouts, observers and signalmen.

In the Ilyinskoye district of the Smolensk region young guerrillas of detachments commanded by "K" discovered an enemy command post. At night the guerrillas swam across the river and noiselessly creeping up on the command post showered it with hand grenades, annihilating thirty German officers and men.

Two guerrillas, the Merkulov brothers, supply the Red army with valuable information regarding the enemy's positions. Recently they established the location of several enemy machine-gun pits and an airdrome where Fascist bombers were stationed. At night our long-range guns destroyed both the airdrome and machine-gun pits.

Lida R., 15-year-old girl whose parents were killed by Fascists, made her way at night to schoolmaster "V.," commander of a guerrilla detachment, and informed him that a Rumanian detachment had arrived at the village of Sverdlovo in the Odessa region and was quartered for the night in a school building. At night the guerrillas noiselessly entered the village and rained hand grenades into the school. Having killed over twenty Rumanians, the guerrillas captured two trucks, five motor cycles, a machine gun and other arms.

Guerrillas commanded by Collective Farm-Team Leader "P" scattered concealed sharp steel spikes on forest lanes used by German motorcycle dispatch carriers. Puncturing their tires on these spikes, the enemy dispatch carriers were forced to dismount and fell under the fire of guerrillas hiding in ambush. Within the last fifteen or twenty days guerrillas of this detachment killed over seventy German soldiers.

Soviet vessels are transporting hundreds of thousands of tons of cargoes for the Red army. Captain Nosskov's motor ship of the Caspian shipping trust each cruise carries a large amount of oil in excess of the normal quota. Captain Shiferman's large tanker of the Caspian shipping trust also systematically exceeds its program of oil transportation.

Semenov, the mechanic of this tanker, was the first one in the tanger fleet to install a compressed air-operation rudder instead of steam, effecting the saving of 800 kilograms of fuel daily and permitting the shipment of additional cargo.

In the northern fleet Captain Semenov's steamship regularly takes on 200 tons of cargo in excess of normal and arrives at his destination ahead of schedule.

An example of heroic labor is being set by the crew of a ship bearing the flag of the Black Sea fleet. This ship was supposed to go into drydock for overhauling in July, but the seamen decided to make all repairs themselves at sea. This was the first instance in the practice of Black Sea seamen that such repairs were made at sea.

MOSCOW--[redacted] ADD COMMUNIQUE TEXT XXX 13 MINE THROWERS.

OUR TROOPS RECAPTURED THE ISLAND OF TAHMASAARI IN LADOGA LAKE. IN BATTLES FOR THE ISLAND ABOUT 800 FINNISH SOLDIERS AND OFFICERS WERE KILLED AND FOUR ENEMY LAUNCHES AND TWO MOTORBOATS WERE SUNK. REMNANTS OF THE ISLAND GARRISON WERE TAKEN PRISONER.

NIGHT LEAD IRAN (BUDGET)

SEP 17 1941

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON, SEPT. 16--REZA SHAH PAHLAVI ABDICATED THE THRONE OF IRAN TODAY WHILE BRITISH AND RUSSIAN ARMIES MARCHED ON HIS CAPITAL TO ENFORCE THEIR DEMANDS FOR EXPULSION OR DELIVERY TO THE ALLIES OF AXIS NATIONALS IN THAT STRATEGICALLY-LOCATED KINGDOM OF THE MIDDLE EAST.

THE 63-YEAR-OLD SHAH WAS SUCCEEDED BY HIS 21-YEAR-OLD SON, THE SHAHPUR (CROWN PRINCE) MOHAMMED REZA PAHLAVI, BUT AN AUTHORITATIVE SOURCE HERE STATED THAT THE ALLIED FORCES NEVERTHELESS PLANNED IMMEDIATE OCCUPATION OF TEHERAN. REUTERS, BRITISH NEWS AGENCY, SAID THESE FORCES WERE ONLY A FEW MILES FROM TEHERAN TONIGHT.

ORDERS FOR THE OCCUPATION, WHICH THE BRITISH AND RUSSIANS PREVIOUSLY HAVE AVOIDED, CAME AFTER THE SHAH AND HIS GOVERNMENT WERE ACCUSED OF DILATORY TACTICS IN COMPLYING WITH TERMS OF THE PEACE THAT ENDED THE RECENT SHORT MILITARY CAMPAIGN.

NO OPPOSITION FROM THE IRANIANS WAS EXPECTED. THE SOURCE HERE CONFIRMED THE SHAH'S ABDICATION, BUT SAID THIS HAD NO EFFECT ON THE ORDERS FOR OCCUPATION OF TEHERAN, WHICH HAD BEEN PENDING FOR SEVERAL DAYS. BRITISH AND RUSSIAN FORCES ALREADY OCCUPY LARGE SECTIONS OF IRAN IN THE NORTH AND SOUTH, INCLUDING THE OIL FIELDS.

IT WAS STRESSED HERE THAT BRITAIN AND RUSSIA BOTH WERE IMPATIENT WITH WHAT WAS CALLED THE SHAH'S PRO-AXIS INCLINATION AND EFFORTS TO DELAY AS LONG AS POSSIBLE THE OUSTER OF GERMAN-ITALIAN, HUNGARIAN AND RUMANIAN NATIONALS AND SURRENDER OF GERMAN AGENTS TO THE ALLIES.

SEP 17 1941

TASS, OFFICIAL RUSSIAN NEWS AGENCY, MENTIONED FINLAND FOR THE FIRST TIME AMONG THE NATIONS WHOSE DIPLOMATS WERE TO BE EXPELLED FROM IRAN, AND SAID THE SHAH HIMSELF HAD APPROVED A PRO-AXIS NEWSPAPER ARTICLE AGAINST WHICH THE RUSSIAN AND BRITISH ENVOYS IN TEHERAN RECENTLY PROTESTED.

THE BRITISH SOURCE AGREED THAT IT HAD BECOME OBVIOUS THAT "HIDDEN INFLUENCES WERE HINDERING OUR WORK WHEREVER POSSIBLE AND WERE HELPING THE GERMANS."

A TEHERAN DISPATCH FILED BEFORE THE ABDICATION SAID RUSSIAN TROOPS ALREADY HAD OCCUPIED THE TOWN OF KARAJ, 28 MILES NORTHWEST OF TEHERAN.

THE TEHERAN RADIO ANNOUNCED THE SHAH'S ABDICATION BEFORE THE IRANIAN PARLIAMENT, ILL HEALTH BEING GIVEN AS THE OFFICIAL REASON.

THUS, AFTER 16 YEARS, ENDED THE IMPERIAL CAREER OF THE PEASANT, ONE-TIME TAILOR'S APPRENTICE AND FORMER COSSACK WHO BECAME HIS MAJESTY MIRZA REZA SHAH PAHLAVI, SHAH OF ALL THE PERSIANS, SHAHANSHAH (KING OF KINGS), CREATOR OF MODERN IRAN AND POSSESSOR OF A GREAT PERSONAL FORTUNE.

ALTHOUGH ALMOST ILLITERATE, HE WAS REPORTED AT ONE TIME TO HAVE $150,000,000 ON DEPOSIT IN AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN BANKS AND TO HAVE AN ANNUAL INCOME OF $10,000,000 FROM HIS IRANIAN FIELDS AND FACTORIES.

AMONG OTHER PROJECTS HE BUILT THE $150,000,000 RAILWAY FROM THE PERSIAN GULF TO THE CASPIAN SEA WHICH NOW PROVIDES A GOOD LAND ROUTE FOR THE MOVEMENT OF SUPPLIES TO RUSSIA. HIS GOLD-PLATED PRIVATE CAR ON THAT LINE WAS MADE IN GERMANY.

REPLACING HIM ON THE THRONE OF DARIUS IS THE 21-YEAR-OLD SON WHOM IRANIANS COMPLAINED WAS SPOILED BY BEING EDUCATED IN SWITZERLAND.

SEP 17 1941

THE YOUNG SHAHPUR, NOW SHAH, IS A TALL, SLENDER YOUTH, STRONG-FEATURED AND BEETLE-BROWED. SCHOOLED AS A SOLDIER, HE HAS FOUND PLEASURE IN RIDING WITH HIS TROOPS ON HORSEBACK. BUT PARTICULARLY IN IP-MILE-AN-HOUR JAUNTS AROUND THE PALACE GROUNDS IN HIS POWERFUL AUTOMOBILE.

HE WAS MARRIED IN 1939 TO FAWZIA, SISTER OF KING FAROUK OF EGYPT. THEY HAVE AN INFANT DAUGHTER, BORN LAST OCTOBER. (WITH FAROUK LOYAL TO BRITAIN, THE NEW SHAH MIGHT BE INCLINED TO SIMILAR FRIENDSHIP. HOWEVER, ADOLF HITLER SENT SPECIAL EMISSARIES BY PLANE TO HIS WEDDING AS A TOKEN OF ESTEEM.)

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, SEPT 17-(AP)-A DELAY IN RECEIPT OF THE DAILY COMMUNIQUE FROM THE BRITISH MIDDLE EASTERN HEADQUARTERS IN CAIRO PRECIPITATED SPECULATION THAT THE SILENCE MIGHT PRESAGE IMPORTANT MILITARY MOVEMENTS, AS WAS THE CASE LAST DECEMBER.

THE COMMUNIQUE REPORTED THAT IN THE FRONTIER AREA BETWEEN EGYPT AND LIBYA THE ARMORED UNITS OF AXIS FORCES WHICH PENETRATED SOME 35 MILES INTO EGYPT BEGINNING SEPT.14 NOW HAD WITHDRAWN TO THEIR ORIGINAL POSITIONS.

ISTANBUL, TURKEY, SEPT 16-(AP)-RUSSIAN SOURCES TODAY DECLINED COMMENT ON PREDICTIONS OF AN IMMINENT SOVIET DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST BULGARIA, BUT SAID THAT ALL WOMEN AND CHILDREN OF THE FAMILIES OF SOVIET STAFF MEMBERS AT SOFIA HAD LEFT BULGARIA.

THE FACT THAT ONLY SYRIA WAS PROCLAIMED A REPUBLIC PROMPTED LONDON SOURCES TO BELIEVE THAT THE FUTURE OF LEBANON, THE OTHER FRENCH NEAR EASTERN MANDATE SEIZED BY THE ALLIES, STILL WAS UNDECIDED.

IT WAS RECALLED THAT GENERAL CATROUX' PROCLAMATION OF JUNE 8 DECLARED BOTH SYRIA AND LEBANON "HENCEFORTH WILL BE A SOVEREIGN AND INDEPENDENT PEOPLES, ABLE EITHER TO FORM THEMSELVES INTO SEPARATE STATES OR INTO A SINGLE UNITED STATES."

MOSCOW, SEPT 16-(AP)-A TASS NEWS AGENCY DISPATCH FROM TEHERAN TODAY ACCUSED THE IRAN GOVERNMENT OF "DOUBLE-CROSSING" THE SOVIET UNION AND GREAT BRITAIN BY FAILING TO CARRY OUT AN AGREEMENT TO EXPEL FROM THE COUNTRY ALL GERMAN AGENTS AND DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES OF GERMANY, ITALY, RUMANIA, HUNGARY, BULGARIA AND FINLAND.

(THIS WAS THE FIRST TIME FINLAND HAD BEEN MENTIONED IN CONNECTION WITH RUSSIAN-BRITISH NEGOTIATIONS WITH IRAN.)

THE DISPATCH SAID THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT HAD BEEN GUILTY OF "UNPERMISSIBLE SLOWNESS" IN FULFILLING ITS OBLIGATIONS, AS A RESULT OF WHICH "A NUMBER OF GERMAN AGENTS WERE GIVEN A CHANCE TO DISAPPEAR AND CONTINUE CRIMINAL ACTIVITY IN IRAN."

ROME, SEPT 16-(AP)-GERMAN MECHANIZED FORCES THRUST INTO EGYPTIAN TERRITORY EAST OF SALUM SUNDAY AND MONDAY, FORCING BRITISH TROOPS TO FALL BACK, THE ITALIAN HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED TODAY.

(THE BRITISH REPORTED YESTERDAY THAT TWO AXIS COLUMNS HAD PENETRATED 35 MILES INTO EGYPT BUT HAD BEEN DRIVEN BACK IN ROUT ACROSS THE BORDER.)

AT THE SAME TIME GERMAN AND ITALIAN PLANES WERE CREDITED WITH SHOOTING DOWN 12 BRITISH AIRCRAFT IN A BIG AIR BATTLE IN WHICH ITALIANS ACKNOWLEDGED AXIS LOSSES OF 10 PLANES.

SEP 17 1941

ON THE EAST AFRICAN FRONT INTENSE ARTILLERY ACTIVITY WAS REPORTED IN THE UOLCHEFIT SECTOR OF NORTHERN ETHIOPIA. BRITISH SALLIES AGAINST THE ITALIAN GARRISON AT CULQUABERT, ETHIOPIA, WERE SAID TO HAVE BEEN REPULSED.

THE ITALIANS SAID THEIR BOMBERS HAD SEVERELY DAMAGED A BRITISH MERCHANT SHIP IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN.

SHAH OF IRAN'S CAREER

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

(NY) AN EX-TAILOR'S APPRENTICE WHO WENT FROM THE RAGGED SHEPHERD'S GARB OF A PERSIAN PEASANT TO THE ROUGH COSTUME OF A COSSACK CAVALRYMAN AND FINALLY DONNED A GOLDEN UNIFORM AS RULER OF IRAN, RIZA

30.24 — 11875

30.24 — 11875

SHAH PAHLAVI STEPPED DOWN TODAY FROM THE PEACOCK THRONE HE ASCENDED IN 1925.

A FIGURE OF PARADOX, THE SHAH TRANSFORMED HIS COUNTRY BY FORCE AND YET ATTEMPTED ONCE TO ESTABLISH A PARLIAMENTARY REPUBLIC, FOUNDED CO-EDUCATIONAL SCHOOLS AND WAS HIMSELF ALMOST ILLITERATE, INDULGED IN A MIXTURE OF REFORM AND ORIENTAL INTRIGUE.

HE WAS SENSITIVE ABOUT HIS PERSONAL DIGNITY OR A FANCIED INSULT TO HIS NATION. WHEN THE IRANIAN MINISTER TO THE UNITED STATES WAS ARRESTED BY A MARYLAND POLICEMAN FOR SPEEDING IN 1936, THE SHAH BROKE OFF RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

TWO YEARS LATER AN OBSCURE FRENCH GOSSIP WRITER MADE A PUN ON THE FRENCH WORD FOR OAT--CHAT--WHICH IN FRENCH SOUNDS LIKE "SHAH." THE IRANIAN MINISTER TO FRANCE PROMPTLY WAS WITHDRAWN.

SEP 17 1941

YET THE SHAH MADE HIS COUNTRY HOSPITABLE TO FOREIGNERS AND ESTABLISHED THE MOST MODERN TYPES OF ROADS, RAILWAYS AND AIRLINES. HE INTRODUCED EUROPEAN HEADGEAR, GOT RID OF WOMEN'S VEILS, INTRODUCED COMMERCIAL AND CRIMINAL LAW, QUELLED BRIGANDAGE AND WIPED OUT THE PUBLIC DEBT.

AND THEN HE GAVE TEHERAN, HIS CAPITAL, A RAILROAD STATION WITHOUT ANY RAILROAD (AN OMISSION LATER REMEDIED), A FINANCIAL DISTRICT BARE OF BUILDINGS, AND AN OPERA HOUSE WITHOUT ANY OPERA.

IN THE EARLY 1920'S, WHEN HE DECIDED THAT IRAN SHOULD IMITATE TURKEY AND BECOME A REPUBLIC, HE DECLARED HE WOULD BE PRESIDENT OF A PERSIAN REPUBLIC. PARLIAMENT, HOWEVER, OPPOSED HIM AND THE CHAMBER ROSE IN AN UPROAR WHILE A SQUADRON OF CAVALRY CHARGED THOUSANDS OF TEHERAN INHABITANTS OUTSIDE THE BUILDING.

MANY OF THE STORIES TOLD OF THE SHAH EMPHASIZED HIS RUTHLESS WAY WITH PEOPLE HE CONSIDERED HIS INFERIORS. HE PUBLICLY BEAT AND KICKED A JOCKEY WHO HAD FOUGHT BACK THE ATTACKS OF ARMY OFFICERS RIDING IN A RACE. ANOTHER STORY RELATED THAT HE PERSONALLY HORSE-WHIPPED A PRIEST WHO INSULTED HIS QUEEN FOR APPEARING WITHOUT A VEIL.

HIS RULE SAW VAST IMPROVEMENTS. TEHERAN, IT WAS REPORTED IN 1938, HAD NO SEWERS BUT IT DID HAVE A DIAL TELEPHONE SYSTEM. WIRELESS STATIONS WERE ESTABLISHED THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, OIL RESOURCES WERE DEVELOPED AND GASOLINE PUMPS WERE INSTALLED IN EVERY VILLAGE.

ONE FOREIGN OBSERVER SUMMED UP THE SHAH'S CAREER IN THESE WORDS: "IN 15 YEARS OF HIS EARLY RULE REZA SHAH BROUGHT IRAN FROM THE 17TH TO THE 20TH CENTURY--AT NO SMALL PROFIT TO HIMSELF."

HE WAS THE BIGGEST LAND AND FACTORY OWNER IN HIS COUNTRY AND HIS ANNUAL INCOME WAS ESTIMATED AT $10,000,000.

NEW YORK, SEPT 16-(AP)-THE COMMITTEE TO DEFEND AMERICA TONIGHT CALLED ON THE ADMINISTRATION FOR IMMEDIATE SEVERANCE OF DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH GERMANY, TOGETHER WITH "POSITIVE ACTION" IN COLLABORATION WITH THE BRITISH NAVY TO DELIVER MUNITIONS AND SUPPLIES "ALL THE WAY TO THEIR PORTS OF DESTINATION."

SEP 16 1941

A NEW STATEMENT OF BASIC POLICY, ISSUED BY THE GROUP'S POLICY BOARD HEADED BY LEWIS W.DOUGLAS, FORMER DIRECTOR OF THE BUDGET, ALSO DEMANDED REJECTION OF ANY AGREEMENT WITH JAPAN "WHICH WOULD SACRIFICE AMERICAN PRINCIPLES RESPECTING CHINA OR OUR PRESENT FAVORABLE POWER POSITION IN THE PACIFIC" AND URGED UNITED STATES RESISTANCE TO ANY JAPANESE CONQUEST OF SINGAPORE, THE DUTCH EAST INDIES, THAILAND OR THE SIBERIAN MARITIME PROVINCES.

INCLUDING FOR THE FIRST TIME A STAND FOR "ONE-MAN CONTROL OF DEFENSE PRODUCTION," THE GROUP ALSO URGED THE ADMINISTRATION TO ADOPT THESE POINTS:

SEP 17 1941

PREVENT AXIS POWERS FROM OBTAINING CONTROL OF ATLANTIC ISLANDS OR AFRICAN BASES; USE AMERICAN GARRISONS ON OUTLYING BASES WHEN NEEDED FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE AMERICAS; RECOGNIZE THE FREE FRENCH AS THE DE FACTO GOVERNMENT OF THE REGIONS THEY CONTROL AND EXTENSION TO THEM OF FULL LEND-LEASE AID; BEGIN STUDYING CONDITIONS OF PEACE BASED UPON THE ROOSEVELT-CHURCHILL EIGHT POINTS; AND COOPERATE IN THE ORGANIZATION AND PRESERVATION OF INTERNATIONAL ORDER AND JUSTICE AFTER VICTORY.

Knox Says Navy Is Using 'All Methods' to Protect Ships, Including Convoys

Double Operations Put In Effect By U. S. In Atlantic Area And Hunting Raider In Pacific

SE. 17 1941

Harbor Jammed By 104 Vessels

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Sept. 17 (AP)—Secretary Knox revealed today that the American Navy was convoying British-bound cargoes on the North Atlantic and, in addition, had been searching for a German surface raider believed to be operating on the Pacific.

But, he added, escorting groups of merchant ships was only one of many methods that were in use. Since the World War, he said, many ways of protecting shipping on the high seas had been perfected and the Navy was "employing them all."

As the Cabinet officer made it clear that the administration had capped the long smouldering congressional debate for and against convoys by simply ordering them into service, other developments on the international and defense fronts attracted Washington's interest:

REDS GET $100,000,000

Secretary of Commerce Jones, the Federal loan administrator, announced that $100,000,000 was being provided to help Russia buy war materials in this country. The transaction involves an advance payment on minerals which Russia is to ship to this country.

In Milwaukee, the American Legion convention approved repeal of the Neutrality Act and a National Defense Committee report which said that "if fighting is necessary to defend the United States, we insist upon being prepared to do the fighting outside of the United States." By a vote of 874 to 604 the convention tabled a minority report opposing Lend-Lease aid to Russia.

It was announced in the House that President Roosevelt would send a new request for Lend-Lease funds to Congress tomorrow.

House debate found Representative Woodruff (R.-Mich.), asserting that President Roosevelt's order to attack German U-boats and raiders was "nothing less than a declaration of war" and that neither the Army nor Navy was ready for war now. Representative Rich (R.-Pa.), said the President should be "taken out of office" because he was "deliberately violating" a pledge to keep American ships out of certain areas." With Representative Hoffman (R.-Mich.), he joined in repudiating Wendell L. Willkie as a party leader. Willkie, last year's Republican presidential nominee, is a supporter of the Roosevelt foreign policy.

New York Harbor was jammed with shipping, 104 vessels, including 53 British, Dutch and Norwegian vessels having arrived within 36 hours. This led reporters to ask Secretary Knox if the concentration of vessels was for the purpose of forming convoys.

He did not reply specifically, but the inquiry did lead to his statement that among other methods, the convoy system was in use. To assume that convoying was the only method, he said, would be to put a narrow construction on President Roosevelt's shoot-on-sight speech of last week.

The Secretary would not disclose how far to sea the American Navy was escorting the convoys, and said it would be "unwise and indiscreet" to go into details when asked if the vessels were being turned over to the protection of the British Navy in the vicinity of Iceland.

He said there had been no brushes between American and Axis warships since the "capture or destroy" orders were given earlier this week, and when asked whether the Navy would inform the public if it "catches a raider," he replied:

"We'll tell the world about it."

He disclosed that the Navy "thinks" an Axis raider is at large in the Pacific in the area of the Galapagos Islands. (There were reports that a Dutch vessel bound for the United States was sunk in that region last week but so far there has been no verification.) The Secretary indicated the Navy was hunting for the raider, but said it had never been able to find out definitely whether it was there or not.

Knox' statement that the Navy would announce sea incidents to the public did not entirely conform with an assertion by President Roosevelt yesterday that whether such announcements would be made would depend upon the naval situation at the moment.

During his press conference, Knox disclosed arrangements for laying nets at the mouths of important United States harbors, and declared plans had been completed for the use of mines to protect naval shore installations.

He reported that net depots had been established at unnamed ports on both the East and West Coasts, and that "practically all" the net material needed for clocking harbors to hostile vessels had been delivered to the Navy.

Officers and men to man the net depots and net-laying vessels and tenders have been trained at San Francisco and Newport, R. I., the Secretary said, and about 21 vessels have been built on converted for use in connection with the net defenses. There are in addition to 25 tugs purchased and about 32 small net tenders which have been built or are under construction.

Jones, announcing the Russian deal, made public a letter from President Roosevelt, saying that Russia was in need of dollar exchange to make purchases of war supplies in this country. At the same time, he added, the United States needs "many critical and strategic materials produced in Russia." Some of these he said, were normally imported from that country.

"To assist the Russian government in paying for war supplies which it wants to buy in the United States, and which it can get in limited quantities, and to expedite our own national defense program," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "I would like you to arrange through the R.F.C. or one of its subsidiaries for the purchase from Amtorg Trading Corporation, a United States Corporation owned intertests of manganese, chromite, asbestos and platinum and other articles and materials which we usually import from Russia, up to the value of $100,000,000 for delivery as rapidly as possible, with proper allowance for dislocation of transportation and of their productive facilities and advances up to $50,000,000 to be made against the purchase price of these critical and strategic materials, to be used by Russia in paying for purchases in this country."

Jones let it be known that $10,000,000 had already been signed over to the Soviet's representatives and that an additional $40,000,000 would be handed to them as soon as they ask for it, probably in the next few weeks. The principal products which Russia agreed to send to this country for the advance cash payments were said to be manganese, chromite, asbestos and platinum.

Delegates At Milwaukee Reject Plan To Bar Lease-Lend Aid To Soviets

By J. Norman Lodge

[By the Associated Press]

Milwaukee, Sept. 17—The American Legion national convention, by voice vote, today indorsed the foreign policy of the President and Congress and urged immediate repeal of the Neutrality Act and removal of all geographical limitations on movement of United States troops.

The delegates swept aside a minority report which sought to forbid the national Administration from giving lend-lease aid to Soviet Russia. A roll-call vote—first of the convention—showed a count of 874 to 604 in favor of tabling the report.

The defeated minority report of the foreign relations committee resolved: "That the American Legion reiterate its oft-stated position on Communism and definitely go on record as opposing aid to Russia under the Lend-Lease Act."

Hitler's Defeat First

The defeat of Adolf Hitler is "our present national objective" the convention decided, and then voted a demand that "if fighting is necessary to defend the United States, we insist upon being prepared to do the fighting outside of the United States."

Near the close of the convention's most important business session the delegates accepted New Orleans' invitation to entertain the 1942 meeting September 21 to 25, after Atlantic City, the other principal contender, withdrew.

The first fireworks of the day came when the Foreign Relations Committee brought forward a three-point program stating:

"We approve and indorse the foreign policy of the President and the Congress.

"We urge the immediate repeal of the so-called Neutrality Act.

"We urge all Americans to join us in a united, wholehearted and unswerving support of our Government's foreign policy; to the end that the American way of life may survive in a world of free men."

Mingled shouts for and against were heard throughout the spacious auditorium.

Comment On Communists

There was bitter comment about "Bloody Joe" and the Communists. On the other side, there were declarations that the fight against Adolf Hitler was an American fight and that, while America need not approve of Communism, it was purely a matter of good strategy to help Russia fight the Nazis.

"We'll take care of the Communists in this country when the proper time comes," one delegate shouted.

Passed By Voice Vote

The foreign relations committee report was adopted by a voice vote after the minority's resolution was laid on the table.

The convention voted a twenty-point program on general aspects of national defense, adopted six points dealing with the army, twelve concerning the navy, seven bearing on aeronautics and five relating to the merchant marine.

"Our present national objective is the defeat of Hitler and what he stands for, and all diverting controversies should be subordinated to the main objective," the defense committee asserted.

"We appeal for unity on this national objective."

The basic elements of national defense, the convention said, were:

(a) The ability to apply any fraction or all of our man power and war industrial resources promptly and efficiently—by universal military training and Federal regulation of war supply agencies.

(b) The ability to carry war, when unavoidable, to our enemy, and thus prevent him from bringing war to us. This ability will require removal of all geographical limitation on movement of forces and adequate provision for corresponding plans and material.

(c) Our great potential bulwarks are the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. These oceans will be our greatest assets or worst liabilities, according to our strength or weakness therein. They represent the base of our world strategy.

For Strong America

This declaration was followed immediately by one to the effect that the Legion wants America strong enough to meet any possible attack before it arrives and to turn an enemy back "so that our homes remain intact and our families secure."

The rapid disposal of these vital questions left the choice of a new national commander as the principal business for tomorrow's final session.

Two candidates appeared to be leading the field—Lynn U. Stambaugh, of North Dakota, the Legion kingmakers' choice, and Edward Scheiberling, of New York, one of the rank-and-file choices.

Both Claim Victory

Both Maurice Stember, campaign manager for Scheiberling, and Ben

Dorris, leading the Stambaugh forces, claimed they had more than the necessary majority of votes for their respective candidates. The ballot under convention rules will be by roll call.

Reports flew fast among the Legion politicians that other candidates would withdraw in favor of one or another of the leading contenders. Other candidates included Roane Waring, of Tennessee; Ray Fields, of Oklahoma; Warren Atherton, of California; Charles W. Crush, or Virginia; Paul Armstrong, of Illinois; Dr. W. J. Danforth, of Texas, and Jack Crowley, of Vermont.

Daniels Makes Address

In the morning session, Josephus Daniels, United States Ambassador to Mexico and World War Secretary of the Navy, told the convention that all American republics desire continental solidarity to uphold democracy and resist totalitarianism.

Speaking of the Western Hemisphere republics, Daniels said:

"Each and all have joined in the high resolve to stand together against any totalitarian invasion by propaganda, gun or bombs, and in the solemn consecration that in mutual protection any attack upon one will call into action the combined resistance of the other twenty-one republics."

Churchill Greeting

Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain in a greeting message to the convention said, "We thank you for the help you are bringing to our common cause, providing the weapons for our forces and bringing much-needed aid to those who toil in our great arsenals."

Among routine committee reports adopted, the employment committee recommended that disability compensation should not be considered as income in determining eligibility for Work Projects Administration employment and that men now serving in the military forces be guaranteed their civilian jobs when they return.

Administrator Frank T. Hines of the United States Veterans' Bureau reported to the Legionnaires that upon completion of its ten-year construction program the bureau will have 100,000 hospital beds available for care of ex-service men.

Further Additions

If national defense required a further increase in bed capacity, he said, it could be accomplished by another acceleration of the building program and war veterans would not be deprived of hospitalization. Hines said that of $3,710,000,000 in adjusted compensation certificates issued, all but $33,000,000 had been presented for payment.

The American Red Cross up to July 1, 1941, spent $47,000,000 out of $70,000,000 entrusted to it for foreign war relief, Robert E. Bondy, Washington, national executive, told the convention. Most of the war-relief funds—$50,000,000 appropriated by Congress and $20,000,000 contributed by citizens—went to Great Britain, he said, with the remainder principally to France, Iceland, China, Greece, Yugoslavia and the British Middle East. Food packages for 120,000 war prisoners were supplied.

Gen. John J. Pershing, World War A. E. F. commander, sent the convention an acknowledgment of the Legionnaires' birthday greeting to him and said he always would "cherish the esteem of each and every one" of the men with whom he served in France.

L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange, a scheduled speaker who was ill, sent greetings and a pledge of Grange support in national defense.

Greeting From Churchill Thanks Legion for Help

By The Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 17—A message of greeting from Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain, expressing thanks to the American Legion for "the help you are bringingto our common cause," was read to the Legion national convention today by Commander Milo J. Warner.

The text follows:

"American Legionnaires, I greet you on the occasion of your annual convention.

"This is the beginning of the third year in which our hard-pressed country has held at bay the powers of evil threatening to engulf the whole civilized world.

"Little more than twenty years have passed since we fought side by side and now once more we speak to you from the forefront of the battle.

"We thank you for the help you are bringing to our common cause, providing the weapons for our forces and bringing much-needed aid to those who toil in our great arsenals.

"Our fighting men, our women and our children have suffered, and will suffer again, grievous losses; but we are upheld in our long struggle by the knowledge that it is not only our future, but our children's that is at stake, and that in spirit the United States is at our side."

Total Nazi Losses Listed By Russians In Two Days Reach 80,000

Victories Near Bryansk And In Smolensk Reported

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Thursday, Sept. 18. All male civilians in Soviet Russia between 16 and 50 years old will undergo compulsory military training outside of their working hours effective October 1, it was announced today.

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Thursday, Sept. 18—Red army troops have smashed the German Panzer forces of Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian, the "phantom general of the French campaign," in a mammoth battle near Bryansk, 230 miles from Moscow, the Russians reported oday.

The maximum German losses announced yesterday and today by the Russians totaled 80,000 including the 20,000 Nazi casualties in the battle with General Guderian.

This was the latest big success reported in Soviet communiques etailing great operations on a curving central front extending from Yartsevo, thirty miles northeast of Smolensk, down past Yelnya to the Bryansk sector.

Called Two-Thirds Of Force

The big-fisted, 53-year-old General Guderian, who drove his Panzer units in a lightning enveloping thrust behind the French Maginot Line in the summer of 1940, "lost two thirds of his effectives" when he collided with hard-hitting Red tanks, the Soviet communique said.

The Germans at Bryansk were said to have lost:

20,000 men in dead, wounded and prisoners.
500 tanks.
70 armored cars.
1,525 trucks.
195 airplanes.
85 heavy machine-guns.
51 trench mortars.
Several thousand rifles and large quantities of artillery and rifle ammunition.

Answers German Claims

The Russian communique supplement replied to German claims of having destroyed three Soviet armies in the Lake Ilmen district with an announcement that in a month of fighting there the Russians lost 30,000 killed and wounded, but the Germans lost 35,000 to 50,000.

Russian artillery losses, it said, were 32 guns as compared with the German claim of 695 guns. It added that only two or three dozen Russian tanks participated in fighting on the Ilmen front so the Reds could not have lost the 320 tanks the Germans claimed.

At Yartsevo on the northern end of the central front the Germans were said to have lost 10,000 killed and wounded, 100 field guns and 100 mine-throwers, to Russians commanded by Marshal Semeon Timoshenko.

New Tactic Boasted In Berlin

The German General Guderian is rated as a great technician and Berlin said recently that he was using successfully a new tactic of mounting artillery pieces on tanks on the central front.

Guderian was attached to the general staff in the World War, was the first man to step across the Austrian border when the Anschluss was ordered and was toasted for his exploits in Poland, Holland and France.

There is still some mystery as to just how Guderian got his heavy German tanks across the Maas river in less than twelve hours in his drive into the Low Countries in May, 1940.

The Germans say he enters the thick of the battles himself and directs the charges of his Panzer units by radio.

Designed To Relieve Flank

Observers here received the impression long ago that the fierce and continuing Red counter-attacks along the Central Front were designed to relieve pressure on besieged Leningrad in the north and Odessa in the Suoth.

The early morning communique reported stubborn fighting all along the jagged front and continued Red aerial activity. On Monday alone Soviet airmen were said to have destroyed 78 German planes, losing 25 themselves.

Aside from the Bryansk and Yartsevo victories the Soviets gave details of other successes without reporting the specific localities.

In one sector, it was said, 60 German tanks, 24 field guns, 51 machineguns, 13 minethrowers and great quantities of smaller arms and munitions were captured or smashed. In another, Red artillerymen in day-long firing reported smashing 46 German machinegun pits, ten minethrowers, 15 Nazi artillery batteries, a series of infantry dugouts and ammunition dumps.

The Nazis, military dispatches reported, had concentrated troops about Yartsevo for a direct drive on Moscow by the shortest route.

This second German offensive upon the capital, it was said, was routed with a series of punishing defeats of German tank and infantry divisions.

The Yartsevo area was reported now in Soviet control through an extension of widespread counter-attacks which previously had resulted in the recapture of the town of Yelnya, 60 miles east of Smolensk, and 26 Soviet villages to the southeast.

(A Moscow broadcast heard in London indicated the Russians now were in position to invade Smolensk itself, one of the major positions held by the Nazis along the center).

Soviet troops likewise claimed the initiative on the Northwestern Front before Leningrad, where a strategic cross-roads village on one approach to the city was declared recaptured by counter-attacks made in the face of concentrated German fire. Military dispatches indicated that the village had been prepared by the Germans as a major position for a new offensive on Leningrad itself.

Still farther to the north, Russian forces reported the annihilation of a Finnish garrison and the recapture of the island of Tahmasaari in Lake Ladoga.

All these actions about and above Leningrad, however, were subordinated to the emerging details of the long-sustained counter-offensive of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's central armies.

New Successes Are Claimed By Russians

Nazis Hurled Back In 8-Day Battle, Soviet Declares

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 17.—The Red Army in a smashing counterattack only 30 miles northeast of Smolensk has thrown German forces back westward in an eight-day battle in which more than 10,000 Germans were killed and wounded, Russian dispatches from the front said today.

The battle occurred in the direction of Yartsevo, which is on the main highway between Smolensk and Moscow. Vast quantities of arms and ammunition were seized, according to the army newspaper Red Star.

(In London listeners heard the Moscow radio assert that this battle put the Russians in position to invest Smolensk.

(In Berlin the German high command reported that the invasion of Russia is "developing into an operation of the greatest extent." Where this operation is proceeding the communique did not make clear.)

Another dispatch reported the ecapture by Leningrad's army defenders of a strategically important ross-roads village lying on one of the approaches to the city—a maneuver declared by the Russians to have wrecked German plans for a new thrust against Leningrad itself.

Island Recapture Claimed.

Another Russian success claimed was the recapture of the Lake Ladoga island of Tahmasaari from the Finns. The Soviet Information Bureau said about 800 Finnish soldiers and officers were killed and four launches and two motor boats sunk in the battles for the island.

The Yartsevo battle was an extension of the Russian counter-attack of last week in which the town of Yelnya, 60 miles east of Smolensk, was recaptured. This in turn was part of a two-week battle in the vicinity of Bryansk, 150 miles southeast of Smolensk, in which large German forces were declared to have been beaten and driven back westward with the Russians, in pursuit, retaking 26 villages.

The account of the Yartsevo battle was written by Lt. Gen. K. Rokossovsky, who was promoted for heading the Russian forces in the engagement.

The Yartsevo battle drew away large numbers of German reserves which had been massed to strike toward Yelnya in an attempt to break through toward Moscow, Gen. Rokossovsky wrote.

The general Red Army counter-offensive on the central front, launched at the start of the month, was unexpected by the Germans, this Russian leader said. He indicated the Yartsevo battle was concluded last week.

Massed Nazi Forces Diverted.

The Russians, he said, widely used camouflage and concentrated their forces gradually to hide large movements, thus amassing great striking power used suddenly to achieve the main purpose of diverting great numbers of German troops.

"We successfully fulfilled our task," he wrote. "The Yartsevo Red Army detachments, enriched with experience, now are firmly blocking the road to Moscow and ready to fulfill new fighting tasks."

The Red Star Leningrad dispatch telling of the recapture of the cross-roads village outside the city—described as village "P"—warned that the Germans were "concentrating tremendous firing facilities and hurling new troops into battle in order to break the resistance of the defenders of Leningrad."

Red Star said a million Leningrad residents were building several rows of fortifications around the city.

The second communique issued today said 60 German tanks were destroyed or captured on the central sector of the front yesterday. Fighting continued along the entire front, the communique said.

Destruction of 48 German tanks and armored cars, 27 guns and 13 mine throwers was officially credited to a Red Army tank brigade in a single engagement in the vast land battle for Leningrad.

Island Seizure Thwarted.

A Soviet garrison guarding the sea front before that second city of the U. S. S. R. was declared to have frustrated a renewed German effort Sunday to seize the Eastonian Island of Oesel, which dominates Baltic approaches to the Gulf of Finland.

"As a result of the two days of fierce fighting," a morning communique said, "the bulk of the enemy marine and air landing parties was annihilated and the remnants were thrown into the sea."

In these and other recent maritime engagements Soviet units were reported to have sunk more than 30 vessels, including seven troop transports, in northern waters.

Again Red Army troops were declared officially to have "fought the enemy along the whole front" yesterday.

"Our air force operated against enemy panzer troops, infantry and artillery," the communique said, "and attacked the enemy air force on its airdromes and bombed Balcic (a Rumanian Black Sea port)."

The noon communique declared a cavalry unit participating in the German-Rumanian attack on Odessa had been routed.

Soviet bombers supporting Odessa's sea and land defenders were said to have destroyed 23 tanks, many infantry-bearing vehicles and an anti-aircraft battery.

The communique said 22 planes were destroyed on a German airdrome on the northwestern front.

Red Army units in one sector of the central front, in addition to destroying or capturing 60 tanks, were said to have seized or silenced 24 guns, 51 machine guns and many other weapons.

Great Developments In East Promised In German Report

Public Told To Await Details—Troops Declared Within 18 Miles Of Heart Of Leningrad

SEP 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 17.—The German people, told by the high command only that the Nazi offensive in Russia was "developing into an operation of the greatest extent," were asked again tonight to be patient as to the details.

The struggle for Leningrad remained the battle of the greatest intensity—a battle being fought over a gradually contracting region.

German war reporters, some of whom said they were on high ground within eighteen miles of the heart of Leningrad, indicated German artillery now was firing freely into the city.

Ordered To Fire Freely

One of these front-line observers, Ulrich Maletzki, said that after the Russians had made known their final decision to defend the metropolis, "there remained then only one order to the German artillery: 'Fire freely on Leningrad!'"

DNB, presenting sparse semi-official reports during the day, said one Nazi armored division had penetrated a fortified park outside Leningrad, later repulsing Red army counter-attacks.

The agency also reported the sinking of two Soviet transports and damage to a battleship and many troop and merchant vessels in scattered Stuka attacks ranging from Lake Ladoga to the Black Sea. The battleship was reported hit thrice in the Black Sea.

In the Leningrad fighting the Russians, unable to fall back much farther, were making, nevertheless, a solid defensive stand, the German correspondents reported. These dispatches said more Russian bunkers were being reduced, but acknowledged that the German progress was only gradual.

Red Artillery Effective

Soviet artillery, it was admitted, was effective because in the long preparation for a defense of the city to the death the ranges had been accurately measured.

Softened areas in the great ring of Soviet bunkers about the city, it was said, had been strengthened by Russian tanks buried so that only their gun turrets protrude, and these usually were defended to the death.

There were indications, however, that the vast operations of which the high command spoke were expanding in the southern and middle sectors.

Running reports told how the Germans now had gained firm positions in the Ukraine east of the Dnieper river, which for some weeks had been a stubborn obstacle. Thus, the valley of the Donets river, lying between the Dnieper and the Don, became the field for a new German war of movement.

At the same time, the Russian Crimea was declared under intensified German air reconnaissance.

German reports indicated that the Luftwaffe in recent days had been smashing twelve Russian planes to each German plane lost. In four days, it was claimed, 288 Soviet craft were destroyed to twenty-two German machines missing.

SEP 17 1941

BERLIN REPORTS START OF GREAT NEW OPERATION

Germans Do Not Mention on What Front This Action Is Concentrated.

NAZIS CLOSER TO LENINGRAD

Panzer Units Beyond the Dnieper Stated to Be Roaring On for Crimea and Donets Basin.

Berlin, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—The German invasion of Russia is "developing into an operation of the greatest extent," the German High Command reported today.

Whether this was in the north, where the Germans were reported within field-glass view of Leningrad, or in the south, where Panzer units were reported fighting their way across the South Russian Steppes toward the Crimea and the Donets River basin, the communique did not say.

A German war reporter on a hill outside Leningrad said that he was eighteen miles from the heart of that great industrial center, and speculated whether the Russians in the apartment houses picked out by his glasses "have any inkling we are so close."

Exposed Plain to Be Crossed.

The hill from which the observation was made was regarded as strategically important, but the reports did not indicate its precise location. Between that elevation and Leningrad itself is a factory district built on a treeless plain, every square yard of which could be swept by fire from the Russian fortifications.

The southern drive was reported sprung from newly won bridgeheads on the east bank of the Dneiper. Military spokesmen said that the Hungarians yesterday repulsed with heavy losses Russian assaults on their positions on the lower Dnieper.

The Germans said their dive-bombers were ranging far east of the river and into the interior of Crimea.

Unofficial German tabulations listed Russian plane losses at 100 yesterday. There was no indication of German losses.

German analysts said Soviet troops had been crowded into such a narrow space on the front before Leningrad that they no longer could wage a "campaign of movement" and must resort now to purely defensive tactics which they acknowledged were tenacious.

Tell of Buried Tanks.

Weak spots in the bunkers girdling the city have been strengthened by tanks buried so only the towers protrude, they said. These are hard to take, it was admitted, because the vulnerable space exposed is small and they usually are defended to the death.

German units approaching from the south reported they were encountering numerous Russian sharpshooting units which yielded ground only after the most desperate fighting.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, authoritative commentary, declared German troops who pierced the Soviet Russian defenses of the Dnieper were now moving eastward on a wide front.

Sevastopol Menace Foreseen

Military writers here said that much of Russia's industrial coal and coke, vital in war as in peace, was produced in the Donets basin. The dash toward Crimea, peninsular Soviet republic, was declared to represent an eventual danger for Sevastopol, Russia's major Black Sea naval base.

At the other end of the long battle-line, the defeat of strong forces of three Soviet field armies south of Lake Ilmen, which the German high command reported yesterday, was interpreted as a means of relieving pressure upon a German flank in the attack upon Leningrad.

SEP 17 1941

Reds Reported Repulsed

Red army detachments driving out of the Waldai highlands, military writers said, twice attempted to break through the German line at Staraya Russa, but finally were thrown back across the Lovat river.

Although progress was reported by Germans in the land drive against Leningrad, Kronstadt Island batteries were said to prevent the Germans from slipping warships or troop transports in from the Gulf of Finland to attack the city from the west.

Reds Promote Oesel Leader

MOSCOW, Sept. 17 (AP).—A. B. Yeliseyev, commandant of Oesel Island off the coast of Estonia, was promoted to the rank of lieutenant general today. Other promotions included: Vice-admirals, V. P. Drozd, A. G. Golovko and Y. F. Rall; rear admirals, A. G. Gorshkov, A. S Frolov, B. V. Khoroshkin and V. V. Chistoserdov; major generals of coastal defenses, P. I. Lakovnikov and T. M. Parafilov. Six pilots of the fleet air arm were designated Heroes of the Soviet Union and 199 others were decorated.

Claim Murmansk Line Station

Helsinki, Oct. 17 (AP)—Finnish forces have captured Syvaeri Station on the main line Leningrad-Murmansk Railway and have crossed the Syvaeri river to the south shore, army correspondents reported tonight.

This appears to refer to the town known also as Svirstroi, 200 miles due east of Leningrad, and to the Svir river.

SEP 17 1941

Swedish Press Attacked.

Helsinki, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—The conservative newspaper Uusi Suomi declared today that certain newspapers in Sweden, through blind antagonism toward Germany, had lost sight of their own interests and were playing into the hands of Russia.

The Swedish papers, it was said, have published rumors injurious to the Finnish cause and have otherwise supported a propaganda campaign, the ultimate purpose of which is to help Russia.

The influential Goteborg liberal organ Handels-Tidningen was singled out for special attack. How, it was asked, can a journal which pretends to represent Scandinavian ideals of freedom and democracy bring itself to defend Russian expansion at the expense of Finland by arguing that Soviet 'conquest" and a winter war are justified?

Bulgarian Reply Displeases Reds

MOSCOW, Sept. 17 (AP).—Soviet Foreign Commissar V. Molotoff tonight termed unsatisfactory the Bulgarian reply to the Soviet note of September 10, which accused Bulgaria of becoming a base for future German operations against the USSR. The Bulgarian reply denied the charge.

Red Parachutists Take Over Teheran Before British Arrive

Seize Roads Into Iran Capital So Quickly That They Even Bar English Allies For Time

SEP 17 1941

By DANIEL DELUCE
Associated Press Correspondent

Teheran, Iran, Sept. 17—Hundreds of Russian parachute troops and strong mechanized forces occupied the strategic outskirts of Teheran today and both Russian and British staff officers entered the capital to forestall any friction with the Iranians.

The 400 Red parachute troops which were dropped on the edge of the capital took control of the roads so quickly that they even barred the way to approaching British troops for a short time. One bespectacled Soviet liaison officer halted a British brigadier twelve miles from Teheran, produced a map, and vaguely waved at the entire Teheran area as filled with the Red army.

The astonished British officer sent his twelve armored cars through the Russian lines with instructions to stop at a bridgehead five miles further on.

Nazi Motorcade Halted

A German motorcade of diplomats, women and children en route to Turkey after the abdication yesterday of Reza Shah Pahlavi was halted by the Russians at Karaj, twenty-five miles northwest of here.

The former Shah himself, ousted because of suspicion of pro-Nazi sentiments, arrived at Isfahan, 210 miles south of the capital. He plans to go abroad as soon as the trouble blows over.

The British and Russians occupying Teheran found fault with his dilatory tactics in getting rid of German agents.

Russian troops under Major-General Novikov moved into the Teheran area some 20,000 strong. Fifty-three Soviet tanks lumbered onto the airfield and Red troops took over Iranian army and air force barracks. A brigade of British troops was approaching from the southwest.

Successor Sworn In

While the troops moved in, Mohammed Shah Pahlavi, 21-year-old successor to the throne, swore before Parliament to uphold the Constitution.

On British initiative, the Government sent a note to the Japanese legation demanding surrender of the exiled grand mufti of Jerusalem, the pre-war leader of Arab revolts in Palestine. He was reported to have taken refuge with the Japanese.

The grand mufti has been a thorn in British sides for years, stirring up Moslem dissidents from his successive refuges in French-mandated Syria, Iraq and then Iran.

Army Leaders Freed

Two Iran army leaders, Gen. Ahmad Nakhjevan, former War Minister, and Gen. Riazi Nakhjevan, former general staff officer, were reported freed from prison along with some other high political prisoners of the former shah.

Mohammed Shah Pahlavi ordered the ousting of Maj. Gen. Rukdunin Mukhter as Teheran police chief. The youthful shah personally listened to a Persian language broadcast of the British radio charging the chief had tried to escape with the crown jewels on the ex-shah's order.

The Russians disclosed they had brought three squadrons of warplanes to Teheran as well as an imposing mechanized force. They indicated they were prepared for a long occupation.

Allied Staff Officers Enter Teheran While Armies Ring Capital

Iran Calls on Japanese Legation to Surrender Jerusalem Grand Mufti

By the Associated Press.

TEHERAN, Iran, Sept. 17.—Russian and British staff officers entered Teheran today as their mechanized forces surrounded the capital.

The Russian forces had come down from the northwest, the British up from the southwest, leaving their previous zones of occupation to take over the capital in the wake of yesterday's abdication of the ruler, Reza Shah Pahlevi, and his succession by his 21-year-old son.

The Soviet mechanized troops had pitched camp on the northwestern desert at the edge of Teheran after the British military attache, Col. W. A. K Fraser, yesterday had urgently suggesting a halt until a brigade of motorized British Life Guards could arrive from Sultanabad.

Demand Surrender of Mufti.

The Iran government, meanwhile, at the insistence of the British, sent a note to the Japanese Legation demanding the surrender of the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, dissident Arab leader in the Palestine revolts of years back.

The Grand Mufti fled to Teheran when Iraq, Iran's western neighbor, was occupied by the British a few months ago. He was reported to have taken refuge with the Japanese when the Allied invasion began late in August.

It also was reported that the former war minister, Gen. Ahmad Nakhjevan, and a general staff officer, Gen. Riazi Nakhjevan, both jailed by the abdicated Shah for mutiny, were liberated by the new Shah, along with other high political prisoners.

The new Shah may have his secular coronation ceremony in his palace on his birthday, October 26.

Troops Guard Teheran Streets.

Iranian troops stood guard in the streets of Teheran as a precaution against disorder as British and Russian forces approached the capital.

(An authoritative British source in London said occupation of Teheran would depend on the situation there, and declared the converging British and Russian forces might remain outside the Iranian capital if an orderly regime seemed likely.

(No program other than one which would give assurance of less autocracy and wider benefits to the Iranian people would satisfy the Allies, however, this source asserted.)

Army Planes Vanish

All Iranian army planes disappeared yesterday from airports.

Reza Shah Pahlavi was reported en route to Isfahan, on the road along which the British forces advanced from the south.

His son and his Cabinet, which continued in office, remained in Teheran.

The Russians' vanguard was composed of twenty-two heavily gunned armored cars and thirty trucks bearing fifteen soldiers each.

It had been expected originally that the British and Russians would enter the capital at the same time. The Russian troops stationed at Kazvan, only ninety miles away, got an early start yesterday, however, and it was not until several hours later that the British began their march from Sulanbad, 200 miles to the southwest of the city.

Russians Look Businesslike.

When it was learned that the Red Army units had reached Karaj, nearly thirty miles northwest of the capital, an Iranian police official went to meet them to discuss conditions of the occupation. This correspondent, who also traveled out toward Karaj to meet the Russians, found their vanguard composed of twenty-two heavily gunned armored cars and thirty trucks bearing fifteen soldiers each—a businesslike outfit.

Russ Forecast Iran Reforms

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 17—Tass, reporting from Teheran the abdication of Reza Shah Pahlavi, forecast today the possibility of important political reforms, including introduction of local self-government and reductions in taxes.

The Government newspaper Izvestia said the Russians were supporting proposed reforms "in every way, because this is a new step forward in the history of the social and political development of Iran."

"Such reforms would only strengthen the independence and state power of Iran," the paper added. "Apparently the intervention of the U. S. S. R. and Britain already is beginning to yield happy results for Iran."

Berlin's View Of Abdication

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 17—The abdication of the Shah of Iran was interpreted in Wilhelmstrasse quarters today as an admission that his policy of yielding to Russian-British demands and trusting their promises has "met with shipwreck."

The German Minister at Teheran and his legation staff are scheduled to leave today, yielding to British-Russian demands, but authorized sources said he would refuse to go unless accompanied by German women, children and old men.

EIGHT PLANES LOST IN RAID ON FRANCE

SEP 17 1941

London, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—The Royal Air Force attacked a power plant at Mazingarbe, near Bethune, in northern France, in a heavy raid this afternoon in which it lost eight planes, it was learned authoritatively tonight. The attack was one of a series of raids made throughout the day on northern France.

Bombs were seen to hit the power plant and fires broke out, it was reported. Six German fighters were reported destroyed in this action.

A strong force of British bombers, heavily escorted by fighters, flashed across the Channel toward Boulogne this afternoon in a continuation of British daylight offensives against German-occupied territory. The expedition returned an hour later.

The offensive followed a night attack in which Karlsruhe, German railway shop center of 155,000 population, was the principal target.

Target Believed Inland

Throughout the afternoon fighters swept up and down the Channel at a low altitude near the French coast. Observers believed the bombers' target was some distance inland.

In the early evening a second large attacking force of the R. A. F. roared out over the Channel, flying toward Calais from over Folkestone.

Karlsruhe is in the Rhineland about eighty miles south of often-bombed Frankfurt.

"Many fires were left burning," the Air Ministry said, in that city and other cities in western Germany.

All Planes Return

"Docks at Le Havre also were bombed. None of our aircraft is missing."

On the home front, only a small number of German aircraft crossed the coast inland, mostly over parts of eastern England, but neither casualties nor damage resulted from bombings, the Government said. One of the invading bombers was reported destroyed.

300 British Fighters Escort Bomber Forces Over Channel

Huge Air Fleet Is Sent Across To Attack Power Plant At Bethune, Northern France

SEP 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 17—More than 300 British fighters escorted bomber squadrons across the Channel today to bomb the power plant at Bethune, in northern France, authorized sources said tonight.

The Air Ministry reported many other fighter planes were engaged over France at the same time. It said at least eleven Axis fighters were destroyed and acknowledged the loss of one bomber and thirteen fighters. Hits were said to have been scored on the power plant.

The fighters and bombers, flying in layer-cake formation, made up one of the strongest air fleets the British have sent over the continent since the aerial offensive started in June. Watchers on the Kent coast said the roar of passing planes was continuous.

The Air Ministry news service said that pilots of the American Eagle Squadron and representatives of all other countries which have provided flyers for the R. A. F. fighter command took part in the sweeps.

Casualties to Civilians Admitted by Germans

BERLIN, Sept. 17 (AP).—A number of civilians were killed or wounded last night as British bombers attacked various points in Southwestern Germany with high explosive and incendiary bombs, a German announcement said today.

Slight damage was caused to residential quarters, it was stated.

Military sources reported that four British fighters attempting to enter a German-occupied region along the English Channel yesterday afternoon were shot down without any German losses.

During the night German long-range guns on the French coast were said to have opened fire on a British convoy in the English Channel.

BRITISH SUBMARINE LOST

P-32, Of New Type, Was Sister Ship Of Previous Casualty

London, Sept. 17 (AP)—Loss of the British submarine P-32 was announced tonight by the Admiralty.

The submarine was a new type and its specifications have not been disclosed. A sister ship, P-33, was reported lost earlier this month.

U-Boats Destroyed 6 Ships, Says Berlin—British Submarine Lost

BERLIN, Thursday, Sept. 18 (AP)—German speedboats in the English Channel pounced upon a British convoy Tuesday night and sank four ships of 25,000 tons, German military reports said early today. The reports said that a fully loaded tanker of about 8,000 tons was among the ships sunk. All German boats were said to have returned to their bases undamaged.

BERLIN, Sept. 17 (AP)—The High Command reported today that German submarines had sunk six freighters, totaling 27,000 tons, in the North Atlantic.

Italy Reports Raids in Africa

ROME, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Italian high command reported today that Fascist outposts had repelled British forces in scouting operations in North Africa and Ethiopia.

The daily war bulletin said Axis planes had attacked British motorized columns near the Libyan oases of Giarabub and Siwa and acknowledged that British planes had bombed Tripoli and Bengasi.

TWO NEW YORKERS MISSING IN WAR

London, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—Two of the four American volunteer members of the Royal Air Force listed on Monday as missing in action, were today identified as natives of New York State.

Egypt Sends Protest On Bombing Of Cairo

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 17—The Egyptian Government has protested to Berlin and Rome, sources here said today, over the Axis bombing of the Cairo area.

Cairo, headquarters of the British Middle East command as well as the capital of Egypt, which is a non-belligerent ally of Britain, was bombed for the first time early Tuesday by Axis warplanes and thirty-nine persons were said to have been killed and ninety-three wounded.

British Warning Recalled

(The raiders defied a British threat April 18 of retaliation against Rome in the event that either Cairo or Athens were bombed.

(In all the fighting incident to the Axis conquest of Greece, Athens itself was not attacked by air raiders.

(The German high command announced today that German combat planes had raided the airport of Heliopolis near Cairo Monday night, causing big fires and explosions in hangars and munitions dumps.)

Moslems Urge Retaliation

Today many inhabitants of this largest Moslem city in the world were asking when Britain would retaliate, as threatened, by bombing Rome. The raid was Cairo's first, the Axis previously having abided by an asserted German intention not to bomb the city. The attack came early in the morning, a bright moon outlining the city for the raiding planes.

Fourteen fire bombs and flares fell in the garden of one of Cairo's American schools, causing slight damage, although no Americans were hurt. The principal and other American staff members were in a shelter when the attack came.

Bombs also fell in the center of the city not far from the famous 1,000-year-old Azhar University, one of the principal Moslem monuments.

Egyptian newspaper reports stressed the theme that the bombing of Cairo is an offense against Islam.

British Tobruk Forces Under Heavy Shellfire

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Sept. 17—Heavy Axis shelling of British forward positions in the Tobruk area was reported by the British Middle East headquarters today as the North African desert warfare continued its stepped-up pace coinciding with the end of the seasonal heat.

The shelling followed British raids from the besieged port and was described as heavy in the east. In the south and west sectors it was reported abating.

British reconnaissance units were especially active in anticpation of a possible major Axis offensive.

British Patrols Active

Britsh patrols in the Uolchefit area have made several deep penetrations, today's communique said.

In the Gondar area of Ethiopia, where remnants of the Italian army have been besieged since capture of their main forces, weather conditons now have permitted resumption of British offensive operations, the British reported.

Tobruk Is Reinforced, Libya Grip Tightened

[By the Associated Press]

With the British Army in the Western Desert in Egypt, Sept. 16 (Delayed)—Replacements recently have arrived at Tobruk to aid in the defense of that Gibraltar of the Desert, and the end of Egypt's hot season finds both flanks of the ever-growing British Army of the Nile firmly resting in Italian Libya.

On the right, Tobruk, now entering its sixth month of siege, stands as firmly as ever.

The forces at this seaside stronghold seventy-five miles beyond the Egyptian border, have proved a constant source of worry to the Axis command which must keep its forces divided between the main advanced front at Salum, Egypt, and at Tobruk.

Flank At Giarabub

To the south 150 miles, Giarabub Oasis, forty miles inside Italian territory, gives the British an anchor for their left flank.

The strategic value of Girarabub, a tiny dot of green amidst the vast sands, is immeasurable. In the hands of the British commander, Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, it points a dagger toward the communications line of any Axis attempt to thrust deeper into Egypt. Tobruk is the other dagger.

There Is No Road

There is no road to Giarabub. You bump southward on a compass bearing, enduring blazing heat in an open truck, coated with dust and tormented by clouds of flies.

Time and again a truck has to be dug out of soft white sand. The nights are bitterly cold.

In wild volcanic country as fantastic as the mountains of the moon, trucks wind down jagged defiles.

The sacred shrine at Giarabub Oasis the mosque which is the burial place of the founder of the Senussi Moslem sect, has suffered damage — from Italian bombs, the British say.

All Giarabub's inhabitants have been removed, but the British officer commanding the outpost has ordered an Indian Moslem sentry to guard the precious carpets and other relics.

Walls of the picturesque Beau Geste-style fort built by Italians have been ripped apart by Italian bombs.

Drive To Force Axis From Libya Foreseen

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 17—Signs of increasing activity on the North African war front stirred belief here today that Britain's Army of the Nile, reinforced by American-made planes and tanks, may be laying the groundwork for new offensive aimed at driving Axis forces out of Libya.

Dispatches from Cairo during the past few days have told of repeated skirmishes along the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, which indicated to observers that the British and Axis forces were cautiously feeling each other out as a preliminary to possible action on a larger scale.

(The German high command said British motor-vehicle columns were dispersed by aerial machine-gun and cannon fire on the Libyan-Egyptian border yesterday and military sources in Berlin said the Luftwaffe was showering British encampments and truck concentration on the Tobruk front with bombs in unabating attacks.)

SEP 17 1941

October Action Foreseen

Official circles declined to speculate on possible developments, but one source declared there seemed every reason to believe the situation in the North African desert would be "boiling" by early October.

Weather conditions in the desert will be ideal by then for military operations.

How many men the British have available for a push into Libya is a military secret, but it is believed here that Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, new commander in the Middle East, has 750,000 at his disposal.

Air Command Strengthened

The Middle East air command is reported now to boast almost as many planes as there were in Britain at the outbreak of the war.

Speculation that the Army of the Nile might already be on the move was stirred last night when the regular communique from Cairo headquarters was delayed unaccountably. When finally received, however, it merely reported that two German columns which had penetrated thirty-five miles into Egypt during the week end had retired to the point from which they started.

This German reconnaissance move was viewed here as an attempt by the Nazis to sound out British intentions. German radio broadcasts heard in London have suggested that a British push was quite possible.

One year ago today Italian forces occupied the Egyptian town of Sidi Barrani, 60 miles east of the Libyan border, in a drive aimed at Alexandria. Not until December 9, however, did the British launch the counter-offensive which drove the Italians out of Egypt and carried almost 400 miles across Libya.

Part of the British forces participating in that drive subsequently was dispatched to Greece, thus paving the way for a German assault which forced the Army of the Nile to relinquish all its Libyan gains except the port of Tobruk.

Spread Of Blazing Oil Prevents Exact Check On Casualties

Authorities At Loss To Explain Cause; Boiler Blast Suggested

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 17—Three of Sweden's best modern destroyers exploded and sank today in a series of mysterious blasts in Harsfjaerden, a fjord south of Stockholm long used as a naval proving ground and anchorage.

(DNB, German news agency, said a troop transport also burned and sank and a mine layer, the Klas Fleming was damaged severely when her cargo of mines blew up. Fire spread to nearby Maersgarns Island, where ammunition dumps are located, it said.)

The destroyers lost were the Goteborg, a 1,040-ton vessel built in 1935, and the Klas Horn and Klas Uggla, sister ships of 1,020 tons each, built in 1932. Normal complements of the three would number 380 men.

Prevents Check Of Casualties

Verified casualties were thirty-one killed and eleven injured, but the toll was believed to be higher. Flaming oil which spread over the sea prevented a thorough check.

Swedish authorities said they were at a loss to account for the disaster.

Although there was a report in civilian circles that a boiler explosion aboard the Goteborg touched off the blasts, the most generally accepted cause was the reported careless handling of a torpedo.

Half of the crew of two of the destroyers was on vacation when the explosions occurred.

[The Swedish-American News Exchange in New York received a Stockholm dispatch saying a boiler aboard the Goteborg exploded, indicating that this touched off another blast. DNB said another account blamed a torpedo explosion on the Goteborg.]

Vessels Speed To Help

All available coastal vessels sped to the scene to help with rescue work and fire fighting. Every ambulance in Stockholm was sent out.

(This heavy blow to the efficient little navy of neutral Sweden occurred as the Finnish press was charging that some Swedish papers through blind antagonism to Nazi Germany were playing into the hands of Russia. Vidkun Quisling, head of the Norwegian Nazi Government, on September 6, demanded that the Swedish press cease what he called "lie propaganda against new Norway and its leaders."

There was no intimation here, however, that these criticisms were in any way connected with the naval disaster.)

Engaged In Naval Building

Sweden for some time has been engaged in a big naval-building program, mostly secret.

She is known, however, to have had at least sixteen modern destroyers, including four bought from Italy before the war, and eight torpedo boats big enough to rate as "junior destroyers."

30.24 — 11887

Sweden also has a combination aircraft carrier-cruiser of 4,775 tons; three 7,000-ton cruisers of World War vintage; four 3,415-ton cruisers dating back to 1901; two cruisers of 4,700 and 4,300 tons lately being modernized; the 4,775-ton Gotland, built in 1933; two new cruisers of 8,000 tons started in 1939, and two which were to have been started this year. She has eighteen or more submarines and a large fleet of mine layers and auxiliary craft.

Informed Swedish sources assert that for the last six months Sweden has added a ship a week to her navy, but it is likely that many of these were not major combat units.

3 Swedish Warships Blow Up Mysteriously in Port at Home

Boiler Explosion Blamed—Destroyers Sink With Heavy Loss of Life—Press Accused of Being Anti-Nazi.

Stockholm, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—Three Swedish destroyers blew up mysteriously and sank today while at anchor in the east coast Swedish port of Haarsfjaerden, south of Stockholm, and first reports said that at least thirty-one men had been killed.

[An unidentified transport was reported in a DNB broadcast also to have been lost by fire, despite heroic efforts. The German news agency said that the 1,570-ton Swedish minelayer Klas Fleming was heavily damaged when mines aboard her exploded. The destroyer Goteborg, on which the first blasts occurred, split in two and sank instantly, DNB said. So fierce were the explosions, said the broadcast, that soldiers on the nearby island of Maergarns had to take refuge in air raid shelters.]

Casualties were feared to be high, but the full extent of the disaster was not known, because flaming oil hampered desperate rescue efforts.

It was established, however, that one officer, six non-commissioned officers and twenty-four marines were killed, besides eleven others injured in the explosions.

Swedish authorities said they could not account for the blasts which, apparently, started on one ship and sank all three one after the other.

The explosions occurred in the Haarfsjaerden Harbor, a fjord on the Baltic sea coast used by Sweden's rapidly expanding navy as a proving ground.

All three destroyers were relatively new and Swedish-built.

The 1,040-ton Goteborg, completed in 1936, was said to have blown up and sunk first. Explosions followed on the sister vessels Klas Horn and Klas Uggla, each of 1,020 tons. The Klas Horn sank quickly and the crippled Klas Uggla went down later.

Details of the series of blasts still were obscure, however, as every available coastal boat put out to rescue survivors and recover the bodies of the dead from the burning waters.

Every ambulance in Stockholm was rushed to Haarsfjaerden to help with medical aid as the victimes were brought ashore.

Meanwhile, the Swedish consulates in Hamburg, Germany, reported today that the newly built 9,050-ton Swedish motorship Yarrawonga has been sunk, but that the crew is safe. No details were given.

Building Many Ships.

Sweden has embarked on a big naval-building program, much of it secret, but informed Swedish sources have asserted it was adding a unit a week for at least the last six months. Many of these vessels, however, are small minelayers and auxiliaries such as supply and depot vessels.

The number of Swedish destroyers was not known before today's disaster, but the Swedish navy had sixteen modern destroyers, of which twelve were Swedish-built and four new ones bought from Italy. There are besides, six old but probably still serviceable destroyers.

Sweden's war fleet is built around three thoroughly modernized armored cruisers of about 7,000 tons each. Although relatively light, being designed primarily for coastal defense, each of those vessels mounts four 11-inch guns as its chief weapons.

She also has an aircraft carrier-cruiser of 4,700 tons which is a floating base for eight seaplanes and its six 6-inch guns makes it serviceable as a fighting ship, a combination minelayer-cruiser and a fleet of small war vessels especially designed for operations among the numerous offshore islands.

The Swedish Government has used Haarsfjaerden for testing and gunnery practice since 1904 and has established shore facilities there including docks, depots and an airfield.

New Decree Follows Death Of Soldier Shot On Street Monday

[By the Associated Press]

Zagreb, Croatia, Sept. 17—The railway between Sarajevo and Brod has been blown up and two bombs were thrown at a bus between Zagreb and the local airdrome, it was learned today. A German air force corporal and a private in the bus were injured.

Serb rebels were blamed.

Budapest, Sept. 16 (AP)—The newspaper Nemzeti Ujsag said today that fifty well-known Communists had been shot in Belgrade, former Yugoslavia, for the slaying of a German soldier.

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Thursday, Sept. 18—The German conquerors last night warned all Parisians that they were liable to be shot as hostages unless attacks on Nazi soldiers cease, and police in the occupied zone early today pressed house-to-house searches for hidden arsenals.

Up until midnight no further violence had been reported in either zone, but the stern warning followed the death of a Nazi non-commissioned officer who was shot in the back on a Paris boulevard Monday night.

Notice Put On Billboards

[A British radio report heard in New York spoke of two German soldiers being killed and one wounded, but this appeared to be a recapitulation of attacks previously reported.]

Hitherto German firing squads have inflicted their multiple reprisals on those described as Communists and Jews. Now every German-controlled Paris billboard and newspaper carries the grave news that any Parisian, regardless of class, creed or occupation, may be shot.

Pierre Pucheu, the French Minister of the Interior, summoned American correspondents for an hour-long interview in which he said he was doing his utmost to prevent serious German reprisals in Paris.

But he expressed fear that if the attacks continued the Germans would take more and more into their own hands; the police administration of the occupied capital, perhaps, imposing a dusk curfew and shooting many more hostages.

On the latter point, the new German warning, from both the Nazi military administration in Paris itself and the German field command in occupied France, was explicit. It threatened that "an increasing number of hostages" would be executed and that they "no longer will be taken exclusively from among the Communists, but from all classes of the Paris population"—in the event the attacks go on.

Termed "Natural" Moves

Pucheu charged the Communists had created this "delicate" situation and spoke of "natural measures" taken by the Germans.

Only Tuesday, the Germans in Paris shot ten hostages, all described as Communists and Jews, in reprisal for three attacks on German soldiers. A few hours before the executions the German non-commissioned officer who died today was shot in the back, his assailant escaping.

In Paris tonight, German and French police worked overtime. One of their jobs was to track down by house-to-house search a so-called terrorist secret headquarters somewhere in the Eleventh Arrondissement, working-class ward which has been the scene of previous disorders and mass arrests. The Arrondissement lies between the Place de la Republique and the Place de la Bastille.

Hunt For Kidnappers

Police also were seeking a woman witness to the shooting of the non-commissioned officer who died today, and trying to find the kidnappers of 20-year-old Manuel Heurteaux, son of an important colleague of Marshal Petain. Heurteaux was snatched nine days ago in the Passy section of Paris.

The two men who kidnapped young Heurteaux were described by some sources as impersonators of German police. They entered a garage which the elder Heurteaux operates near the Trocadero, inspected the papers of Manuel and his brothers, and spirited the young man away in a car.

Police of the Hautes-Pyrenees department in the unoccupied zone, meanwhile, arrested a British Catholic priest, Father Price, at Tarbes, and sent him to a concentration camp on charges of "anti-national activity and disrespect toward the Chief of State." A number of clergymen recently have been interned at Val les Bains since the publication of an allegedly Communist document which said some clerics were working for Marshal Petain's overthrow.

REPRISAL THREAT EXTENDED TO ALL CLASSES IN PARIS

Not Only Reds Face Death as Hostages—57 Die in Yugoslavia.

Paris, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—The German authorities announced today that the shooting of hostages in reprisal for attacks on Germans would be extended to include not only communists but "all classes of the Paris population."

SEP 17 1941

The announcement came as a German non-commissioned officer died of bullet wounds inflicted on Monday by an unidentified assailant in defiance of the reprisals already taken for previous attacks on members of the Army of Occupation.

The new policy, announced in all Paris papers and posted on walls throughout the city, read:

"If attacks continue, the occupation authorities will shoot increasing numbers of hostages and these hostages will no longer be taken exclusively from among communists, but from all classes of the Paris population."

Second to Die.

The soldier was the second slain in Paris within a short time.

Both French and German authorities pressed a citywide search for the person responsible for this attack and for the kidnapers of Manuel Herteaux, 20-year-old son of Lieut.-Col. Alfred Herteaux, vice-president of the Veterans' Legion, which is now the official party of the Vichy regime. Newspapers published an appeal asking a woman who had witnessed the fatal shooting to come forward and help the officials in their investigation.

Police headquarters said that the woman told a subway ticket-taker that she had seen the German shot from a passing automobile. She disappeared without making herself known, however.

Col. Herteaux's son was reported kidnaped on September 8 in the fashionable Passy district of Paris. Thus far no trace of him or his abductors has been found.

The police, meanwhile, have arrested the alleged leader of a strike which halted the public works project in a Paris suburb and have reported finding pamphlets of communist origin on some of the 500 strikers.

Catholic Priest Seized.

In the unoccupied zone, a British Catholic priest, one Father Price, was arrested at Tarbes [illegible] sent to a concentration camp on a charge of "anti-national activity and disrespect toward the Chief of State." The prefect of the Upper Pyrenees Department personally ordered the internment. Father Price was suspended by his bishop a month ago.

Internments at Vals les Bains recently included a number of clergymen. The measures recalled that an alleged communist document recently made public asserted some clergymen were working to overthrow the Petain regime.

Sofia, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—The 2,300-ton Bulgarian steamship Shipka was today reported sunk in the Black Sea on Monday while en route from Varna to Balcic, the Rumanian seaport. The cause of the sinking was not known here, but Balcic was bombed by the Russians on Monday.

1000 Norwegians Arrested.

Stockholm, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—More than 1,000 Norwegians arrested during the week-old state of civil siege were tried by court-martial and sent to prison camps in Germany or in the Norwegian interior, dispatches from Oslo said today.

University professors and many labor leaders were among those sentenced. Jens Tangen, president of the Federation of Labor, was sent to a concentration camp in Germany.

The Hague, Sept. 17 (AP)—Arthur Seysz-Inquart, German commissioner for the Netherlands, ordered today that henceforth the names of no living members of the house of Orange-Nassau be used for establishments of any kind, private or public.

The edict against Holland's royal house, headed by Queen Wilhelmina, now a refugee in England, followed by a day an order confiscating all Netherlands property of living members of the family.

The name ban applies to firm names and trade-marks and forbids use of pictures of members of the royal family.

TRIALS IN BRITISH FOOD RACKETS DUE

First Cases On Dealings Of Black Market May Reach Court Today

Even Stocks For Reserves Against Invasion Said To Be Involved

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 17—Britain is on the verge of stern prosecution of persons involved in a wartime food racket of great magnitude, informed persons disclosed tonight.

The first cases may be brought into court tomorrow. Those in the know say they will deal with black market operations involving hundreds of tons of the most valuable foodstuffs, even those stocks which had been built up as a reserve against German invasion.

Scotland Yard and operatives of the Food Ministry uncovered the evidence of the racket. Traditionally, official sources maintained their silence today, even after the first story broke in the London Evening Press.

Complaints Of Profiteering

It was not unexpected, however, for in both the newspapers and in Parliament there have been complaints for months about black market profiteering in food and clothing supplies, virtually all of which are rationed.

Informants disclosed tonight that the black market has operated both with stolen goods and through shadow corporations with fabricated trad turnover statements which built u large and secret stocks.

Such companies are reputed to hav done a business amounting to hun dreds of thousands of pounds a year.

Food Trucks Hijacked

Scores of food trucks have bee hijacked and stolen throughout th country each week and their content sold at high prices through the boot leg merchandising system.

The Evening Standard, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, charged that substantial quantities of maple syrup intended for Canadian troops in England, have been diverted to the black bourse.

In some cases, informants said, bootleg operators have even obtained large cash advances from banks to carry out transactions masked as legitimate business, and reputable transport companies have been employed to move bootleg goods.

Britain Bares 'Astonishing' Rackets In Food Supplies

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 17—Operations of a "black market" involving big-time racketeering in Britain's wartime food supplies will be disclosed in prosecutions expected to start tomorrow, an informed source said today.

One of the biggest cases may come up tomorrow, this source said, with "another extensive racket" due for hearing the next day.

"Astonishing Discoveries"

The Evening Standard, published by Britain's Minister of Supply, Lord Beaverbrook, reported "astonishing discoveries" by Scotland Yard and Food Ministry authorities investigating operations of black market food racketeers.

SEP 17 1941

A Food Ministry spokesman said the story was "substantially correct," but he did not immediately elaborate on details as reported by the newspaper.

Invasion Stocks Diverted

For one thing, the Standard said, the black-market operators obtained "substantial supplies" of maple syrup which had been sent to England to be issued only to Canadian troops.

The racketeers, the Standard said, have been able to "obtain many hundreds of tons and tens of thousands of cases of the most valuable foodstuffs"—including stocks built up to provide for an invasion reserve.

The authorities, the Standard said, have discovered the channels through which the illegal supplies reached purchasers, and are considering what action to take against them.

Ireland Said to Have but One Month's Coal Supply

DUBLIN, Sept. 17 (AP)—Supply Minister Sean Lemass told the Dail today that Eire has only one month's supply of coal left and that hardship could not be escaped unless Britain allowed more to be imported.

What supplies Ireland has, Lemass declared, are of inferior quality.

U. S. Repair Corps Formed in London

London, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—A civilian technical corps composed of American craftsmen who volunteered for service in Britain or her colonies for maintenance and repair of naval, military and air force equipment has been organized.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, announced today that Donald Gill, secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce in London, had been named commandant.

Darlan Inspects Toulon Base

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 17—Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan returned to Vichy today after inspecting French naval installations at Toulon.

His inspection trip followed a conference with Pierre Boisson, Governor of Dakar, who arrived here yesterday by plane from West Africa. Both Darlan and Boisson were expected to confer later today with Gen. Henri Dentz, former French High Commissioner for Syria and Lebanon.

Admiral Jean Esteva, resident general of Tunisia, who has been in Vichy for several days, left this morning for Algiers en route to Tunis.

'Chungking Frankenstein' Bars U. S. Pact, Tokio Says

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Sept. 17.—The United States is now "in the awkward position of having set up the Chungking Frankenstein" which is proving an obstacle to agreement with Japan, the Foreign Office-controlled Japan Times and Advertiser said today in an editorial.

The American Government is seeking an adjustment of relations in the Pacific, the paper continued, but this policy cannot be applied freely because Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, head of the Chungking government of China, "will not play ball."

(The United States is committed to a policy of aid to China in her war against Japan. Japanese spokesmen have declared that any American-Japanese accord must be at the expense of Chungking. There have been no indications from Washington that any agreement contrary to China's interests will be made.)

Chiang Kai-shek, the Times and Advertiser continued, is trying to force his will on the American people.

Meanwhile, Rightist elements opposing abandonment of Japan's ties with the Rome-Berlin Axis or her expansion program in southern Asia continued their campaign.

The Tohokai, Nationalist party headed by Seigo Nakano, announced it would sponsor a great rally September 27 in one of Tokyo's largest baseball parks to celebrate the first anniversary of the treaty of Berlin, allying Japan with the Axis.

Emperor Receives Admirals

The Tohokai, which has assailed reported attempts of the Government to come to terms with the United States, is virtually the only active political party in Japan, since last year's dissolution of the old-line parties in the Fascist-like "new national structure."

Emperor Hirohito presided at a luncheon at the Imperial Palace today for twenty of the navy's ranking admirals. The occasion was understood to be the return to Tokyo of Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, who has been shifted from command of the empire's No. 1 naval base at Yokosuka, near Tokyo.

Japanese 'Preserve'

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Sept. 17—Japanese control of French Indo-China has reached a point where the French colony is well on the road to becoming a Japanese preserve, according to travelers arriving here.

In the six weeks since the arrival of the first Japanese Army contingents for the alleged purpose of blocking British aggressive plans, the Japanese have abrogated powers of virtually every government office and stamped their influence throughout the economic functions of the country, these sources said today.

Camranh Area Closed

Recent developments marking Japanese control, they said, included:

1. The French commercial airline is restricted to carrying Japanese, French nationals who have obtained permits from the Hanoi Government and foreign consular representatives who have notified the Japanese delegation before purchasing their tickets.

2. The Camranh Bay area, where the French were developing a great naval base, is closed to all travelers.

Land Grant Ban

3. The Government is considering a proposal to prohibit the issuance of land grants to all foreigners except Japanese.

4. Following word from a high Japanese official, a Government order banned newspaper reports concerning the arrival of Japanese troops in Indo-China and their movements.

5. Travelers seeking to go overland to Thailand have been instructed to notify the Japanese military as well as French immigration officials.

Thailand Resists

Persons arriving here said no additional Japanese troops had reached Saigon in three weeks, but supplies still were flowing in by freighters.

At the same time, reports from Bangkok indicated Thailand was stiffening resistance against alleged Japanese efforts to conclude the same kind of agreement with her as enabled Japan to put in military forces and establish bases in Indo-China.

Australia Warned

[By the Associated Press]

Canberra, Australia, Sept. 17—Prime Minister Arthur Fadden told Parliament today that Australian security was imperilled as never before and that vigilance must be maintained for some sudden turn of the war necessitating self-defense near the shores of this commonwealth.

Important aspects of Far Eastern policy now are under discussion with the British Government, he said.

In a general review of the war, he said "against the military ebb and flow in Europe, the Mediterranean and the Near East we are entitled, in a long-term view, to set American and British sea power, industrial capacity and common resolve.

Roosevelt Policy Cited

"This collaboration will enable us in due time to strike decisive blows. Mr. Roosevelt's latest declaration will have an incalculable influence on the course of the war. The term 'American defense waters' is deliberately obscure.

"I say frankly that throughout the critical period in the Far East, Australia has regarded it as of the highest importance that Imperial policy in this area should be coordinated with American policy, besides being based fully on Anglo-Australian consultation."

He warned that the Russian position was serious and that Germany had calculated for a campaign there through the winter.

Wiedemann's Sojourn In Argentina Prolonged

Buenos Aires, Sept. 17 (AP)—Capt. Fritz Wiedemann's stay in Argentina was lengthened today despite the fact that the German Embassy had informed the Foreign Office he would sail on a Japanese steamer.

The Foreign Office had announced that Wiedemann, former German consul general in San Francisco, would sail for the Orient on the Japanese steamer Manila Maru today. Officers of the line operating the vessel, however, said that the ship had never been scheduled to leave before Friday, and that no reservations had been made for Wiedemann. The cabins are fully booked, it was said.

The German Embassy, where Wiedemann is staying, said it did not know how long the agent would remain here.

Cargo Stoppage Angers Saigon

[By the Associated Press]

Saigon, French Indo-China, Sept. 17 (AP)—Informed sources reported today that stoppage at Manila of a large number of cargeos destined for Indo-China had created a serious controversy between this French colony and the United States.

The shipments include asphalt, coal tar, wood pulp, trucks, automobiles, dyestuffs, wheat flour, condensed milk, steel, boiler tubes, leather and butter, it was said.

Protest On Butter

The French were reported to be protesting in particular the delay of a cargo of butter from New Zealand which was scheduled for transshipment at Manila.

All cargoes from the United States were understood to have been licensed and en route when the French-Japanese agreement for mutual defense of Indo-China was announced late in July before the United States froze Japanese assets in that country.

The French were said to have protested officially against action which they called retroactive. They said also that the goods in question were purchased for private use and would not reach Japanese hands.

Russian

MOSCOW, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau said in a communiqué today:

During the night of Sept. 16-17 our troops fought the enemy on the entire front.

As a result of heavy fighting in one sector in the western direction of the front, our troops destroyed or captured sixty enemy tanks, twenty-four guns, fifty-one machine guns, thirteen minethrowers, 316 rifles, forty cases of shells and a large quantity of other munitions.

In another sector in the western direction of the front Soviet artillerymen in one day demolished or disabled forty-six fascist machine gun pits, ten minethrowers and fifteen gun batteries, destroyed seventeen infantry dugouts and blew up five ammunition dumps.

In the course of a successful bombing of an enemy concentration in one sector in the northwestern direction of the front our aircraft destroyed twenty-seven trucks with enemy infantry, five ammunition trucks, five tanks and one anti-aircraft battery and killed nearly 150 men. An air unit commanded by Colonels Toropchin and Daniloff raided an enemy airdrome and disabled twenty-two fascist planes.

MOSCOW, Thursday, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau today issued the following communiqué:

During Sept. 17 our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front.

Seventy-eight German planes were destroyed in air battles and during raids on enemy airdromes on Sept. 15. We lost twenty-five planes.

The tank forces of the German General Guderian were decisively beaten during an attempt to attack in the direction of Bryansk and lost two-thirds of his effectives.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 17 (AP)—The German High Command issued the following communiqué:

In the east the offensive is developing into an operation of the greatest extent.

Submarines sank six enemy merchantmen amounting to 27,000 tons in the North Atlantic.

In waters around England combat planes last night badly damaged two large freighters in low-altitude attacks. Additional air raids were directed against port facilities southeast of the isle as well as several airports.

In Northern Africa German bombers on Sept. 15 attacked British motor vehicle columns on the Libyan-Egyptian border and dispersed them by fire from machine guns and airplane cannons.

During raids by German combat planes on the airport of Heliopolis near Cairo the night before last there were big fires and explosions in the hangars and in munition dumps.

Weak enemy forces last night dropped a small number of explosives and incendiaries in some places in Southwestern Germany. Buildings were damaged in residential sections. Naval artillery brought down two British bombers and anti-aircraft brought down one.

British

LONDON, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued this communiqué today:

Last night aircraft of the bomber command attacked objectives in Karlsruhe and elsewhere in Western Germany. Many fires were left burning.

Docks at Havre [in France] also were bombed. None of our aircraft is missing.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministers said:

During the night a small number of enemy aircraft flew inland, mostly over parts of Eastern England.

Bombs which fell at a few points caused no damage and no casualties have been reported.

One enemy bomber was destroyed during the night.

The following communiqué was issued by the Admiralty today:

The Board of Admiralty regret to announce that H. M. submarine P-32 Lieutenant D. A. B. Abdy, R. N.) is overdue and must be considered lost. The next of kin have been informed.

LONDON, Thursday, Sept. 18 (AP)—The British Air Ministry today issued the following:

Wednesday afternoon two squadrons of Blenheim aircraft of the Bomber Command, escorted by strong forces of fighters, attacked the power plant at Mazingarbe near Bethune [in France]. Opposition by enemy anti-aircraft guns and fighters was unable to prevent the attack.

Bombs burst on the target and fires broke out. Six enemy fighters were destroyed by our fighter escort. One Blenheim and seven other fighters were lost, but the pilot of one of the fighters later was rescued from the sea by the R. A. F. Air and Sea Rescue Service.

Enemy fighters which attempted to interfere with the rescue were driven off by our protecting fighter patrol and one of the enemy was shot down.

In the course of an offensive operation by our fighters Wednesday afternoon four enemy fighters were destroyed. Six of our fighters were lost, but three of the pilots have been saved. During Wednesday, therefore, eleven enemy fighters were destroyed.

Our losses were one Blenheim and thirteen fighters with four fighter pilots saved. It is now known that another enemy fighter was destroyed Tuesday, making a total of seven.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 17 (AP)—British Middle East Headquarters issued the following communiqué today:

Libya—Following our raids from Tobruk, enemy shelling of our forward positions is still heavy in the East, but it has decreased against the south and west sectors.

In the frontier area advanced elements of British and South African mechanized forces are continuing their patrolling activities.

Ethiopia—In the Gondar area, where the last remnants of the Italian Army in Ethiopia have been invested since capture of main enemy forces, weather conditions have now permitted resumption of our offensive activities.

During the last few days, patrols from our troops in contact with the enemy holding defended positions on the Uolchefit area north of Gondar have made several deep penetrations, in one case reconnoitering lines of approach a considerable distance behind the enemy's front line.

The R. A. F. Middle East Command issued the following communiqué today:

On the night of Sept. 14-15 and again the night of Sept. 15-16 heavy bombers of the R. A. F. raided Bengazi. On both occasions fires were started.

Bardia also was subjected to night attacks and damage was caused to the harbor.

Ships lying alongside the Spanish quay at Tripoli were bombed and several explosions occurred.

Numerous reconnaissance flights and fighter patrols were successfully carried out over enemy territory.

From these operations all our aircraft returned safely.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued this communiqué today:

On the North African fronts and the Gondar theatre of operations [in Ethiopia] there were local operations of our advanced detachments, which carried out mass reconnaissance operations and repelled enemy elements.

Effective firing of our artillery batteries against the defense works of Tobruk [in Libya] was reported.

The British Air Force made new attacks on the cities of Tripoli and Bengazi, with no casualties and material damage of slight importance.

Italian and German planes attacked enemy motorized columns in the Jarabub-Siea zones. Numerous motor vehicles were hit and seriously damaged.

MacKenzie's Views On War Today

SEP 17 1941

BY DEWITT MacKENZIE

It is given to wonder whether the Axis may not have uncorked a volcano by bombing Cairo—one of the holy cities of Islam—and causing heavy civilian casualties.

Just as the writer completed this intrductory sentence, there arrived from Cairo a cable stating that the Egyptian Government has protested to Rome and Berlin. That might easily be the forerunner of far-reaching developments.

On the face of it, there seems to be so little for the Axis to gain, and so much it could lose, that the operation is difficult to explain satisfactorily. It looks almost like one of those errors of judgment which happen in war as well as in peace.

The Italo-German brotherhood may be trying to frighten Egypt into demanding that the British withdraw altogether from the country, thus depriving Britain of a military base which is one of the foundation stones of imperial security. That would seem to be a forlorn hope, however, since the only thing which would budge the British out of Egypt would be force, and plenty of it.

An alternative reason for the operation might be to tie British troops and equipment, especially warplanes, to Egypt pending the outcome of Hitler's all-out offensive in the Russian Ukraine—a drive which probably contemplates an invasion of the Middle East, through Iran (Persia) if possible.

As opposed to these possible gains, the Axis runs a chance of turning the entire great Moslem world against it, and that at a time when Germany and Italy badly need the support of the Moslems in view of the projected assault on the Middle East.

Then, too, the bombing of the holy city of Cairo opens up the possibility of British retaliation against Rome. London warned Mussolini last spring that the Eternal City would be attacked if either Cairo or Athens were bombed.

At that time London said the greatest care would be taken to spare the Vatican City, but charged that the Italians were prepared to drop captured British bombs there. The next day high Fascists in Rome characterized this charge as an incredible manifestation of infamous, slanderous and disloyal propaganda.

One does indeed find it difficult to believe that anyone would resort to such an act, the purpose of which of course would be to turn the great Catholic world against the Allies. Knowing the Italian people well, I am sure they would look with horror on such an idea, as would the rest of the civilized world.

Since the British have made this charge, however, one can hardly escape the thought that if the bombing of Cairo did tantalize the British into retaliating against Rome, and if a bomb did fall in Vatican City, then there likely would be a heavy reaction against the Allies. The reaction in America might have a decidedly adverse effect on our program of aid for Britain.

I don't suggest that this was what caused the bombing of Cairo. I merely say that, in view of the British charge, one is forced pell-mell into the thought that it may have been a spot of illogical and unfortunate thinking on the part of some member of the intermediate military command which resulted in the bombing of Cairo.

In view of all these badly tangled circumstances, it may be that the British will decide that the smart thing to do is not to exact any reprisal against Rome.

NAVY TO CHARTER 17 MERCHANTMEN

Rear Admiral Tells Plan For Use Outside U. S. After Attorney General's Ruling

N. Y. Maritime Circles Hear Acadia Will Supply American Air Base In Liberia

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 17—Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the Third Naval District, announced today that the navy had arranged to use seventeen American merchant ships as supply ships to naval bases outside continental United States.

His announcement came two days after Attorney General Biddle interpreted the Neutrality Act to permit American ships to carry passengers and war materials to any parts of the British Empire except the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa.

Under Time Charter

The seventeen vessels have been acquired under a time charter and will be manned by civilian crews, Admiral Andrews said. Several already have been put in active service and the rest are expected to be ready for use in a short time.

At the same time, Norwegian shipping sources reported that Norway has transferred about 150 ships to the British and Allied cause since the first of the year, leaving fewer than 100 vessels carrying vital defense materials to the United States.

No Further Transfers

For the present, these sources said, no further transfers are contemplated although Norwegian shipping is at the disposal of the fight against the Axis.

In August, Norway had 707 vessels, about 550 of which were in the pool operated by the British Ministry of Shipping. Since then Norwegians have promised 42 vessels to the pool, including the last 22 of Norway's pre-war tanker fleet of about 230 ships. All but 2 of the 42 vessels have been transferred.

Acadia Mission Reported

Maritime circles also heard that the liner Acadia, which has been in the Alcoa Steamship Co. West Indies and Caribbean service, would carry technicians and other personnel to a new government air base in Liberia, West Africa.

The base was one which Pan American Airways recently announced it would use in a new air freight service between New York and Lisbon.

Although the Maritime Commission here refused to comment officially, the Alcoa line said that the Acadia would be released to the commission on October 1 and be returned a month later. The line said it did not know what use would be made of the vessel.

F. B. I. MOVIE SHOWN IN ESPIONAGE TRIAL

One Of 16 Defendants Filmed Going Over Military Data, According To Agent

Witness Says Photographed Man Discussed Blowing Up Electric Plant

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 17—A film, shot secretly by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and thrown on a screen in Federal Court today, showed Frederick Duquesne, 63, one of sixteen defendants charged with espionage conspiracy, going over pictures of planes, guns, tanks and copious notes and diagrams.

Government witnesses—F. B. I. Agent William Friedeman, who made the picture from an adjoining office, and Counter-Espionage Agent William Sebold—testified that the silent film recorded Duquesne explaining American war secrets which he had stolen for Germany and discussing several sabotage projects including the blowing up of the Schenectady (N. Y.) General Electric plant and the scattering of minute incendiary bombs on wharves.

SEP 17 1941

In Sebold's Office

The picture, which Friedeman said was recorded in fast motion to obtain better lighting, showed Duquesne with Sebold in the latter's office. Much of the time he spoke so animatedly with his hands that sound effects were unnecessary to indicate his speech.

Friedeman's testimony before the showing served as subtitles.

"Duquesne advised Sebold to be very careful about carrying materials on his person," testified Friedeman. "He said that personally he carried things on his leg."

(The picture showed Duquesne delving into his sock for a sealed envelope, the contents of which he spread out before Sebold.)

Description Of Papers

"Duquesne told Sebold that these (papers and pictures) were materials procured at maneuvers in Tennessee and specifications of a navy speedboat, which he said he obtained in Washington," continued Friedeman.

(The lens caught the pictures clearly.)

Duquesne exhibited drawings of a gun and baby tank for transportation in an airplane—the airplane had not yet been designed—and a large tank with deflector plates, said Friedeman.

"He said he saw in Tennessee," Friedman said, "an anti-tank device which the Government called a 'deep-dyed secret'—a pill box buried in the ground with room for one man to operate against tanks."

Friedeman said Duquesne's gestures pantomimed the preparation and explosion of bombs.

Calendar In Picture

In the background were a calendar—registering July 25, 1941, two days before the roundup of thiry-three persons, seventeen of whom have pleaded guilty—and a clock, whose minute hand went from 6.18 to 6.42 during the showing.

Friedeman testified that from the adjoining room he was able to see and hear everything that went on in Sebold's office.

Duquesne, Friedeman said in a discussion of incendiary bombs that "candy split into two pieces with a combustible phosphorus compound inserted before putting the pieces together again, made a good and safe incendiary bomb.

Chewing Gum Best

"He said it was best, however, to use chewing gum. It was to be well chewed, he said, and then wrapped around a phosphorous compound, which would not ignite until the temperature rose above 75 degrees. He said that in this manner it could be planted on wharves on a cold day and would not set fire until a couple of days later.

"He said a workman could plant these incendiary bombs while speaking to the boss."

Under cross-examination by Frank J. Walsh, Duquesne's counsel, Friedeman said: "Duquesne said he had dropped these bombs in times past on dock facilities."

Checked Electric Plant

Friedeman quoted Duquesne as having told Sebold he had looked over the General Electric Plant a year earlier and that it was Duquesne's purpose to blow it up.

Sebold had testified that he was assigned by the German Gestapo to spy in the United States. He informed the F. B. I. agents of this on his arrival here early in 1940, and the F. B. I. built and operated for him a "spy" radio on Long Island which became a communications system for German agents here.

'Own Overreaching' Will Crush Hitler, Hoover Believes

Former President Says Neither Intervention Nor Isolation Is Wise for U. S.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Neither isolation nor intervention is a wise or possible course for the United States in dealing with the present war, former President Hoover believes.

"We must have impregnable defense" and "we must give the tools of defense to the democracies," he declared in a radio address last night over the C. B. S. network. "We should reserve our strength that, unexhausted, we may give real aid to reconstruction and stabilizing of peace when Hitler collapses of his own overreaching."

"We can do our greatest service to civilization by strengthening here in the Western Hemisphere free institutions and free men and women."

Hoover's Six Points.

American policies, the former Chief Executive suggested, should be based on these six points:

"1. If we prepare we cannot be invaded nor our economic life be dangerously impaired.

"2. England can prevent invasion of her shores if we give her the tools, and even warships, without sending our boys to death, either on ships or land.

"3. Hitler is on the way to be crushed by the vicious forces within his own regime.

Bitter Experience.

"4. We have proved by bitter experience that it is a futility for us to try to impose freedom and justice upon the world by war.

"5. The ideas and ideals of the West can grow and spread abroad by our own demonstration in our own country. They will die in the world if they shall become weakened or die in America.

"6. To send our sons into this war must also be weighed in the scales of future America. Should we not weigh in this scale the dead and the maimed? Should we not weigh the one-third of underfed, undernourished, underhoused, undereducated Americans for another generation that will be inevitable? Should we not weigh the loss of our own freedom?"

Economic freedom, Mr. Hoover said, should be added to the four freedoms enunciated by President Roosevelt—freedom of speech and expression, of religion, from fear and from want. Mr. Hoover said a large number of the men administering the preparedness program did not believe in this freedom.

ISSUE WITH HOOVER TAKEN BY WILLKIE

Latter Says Causes Of Failure Of Last War Weigh Heavily On U. S.

SEP 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 17—Wendell L. Willkie took issue today with remarks made by former President Herbert Hoover in an address last night and said that he would e happy if he could "so readily dismiss the obligations of the last twenty-three years" as he contended Hoover had done.

Speaking at a united China relief luncheon, Willkie read an excerpt from Hoover's radio address in which the former President said that the causes of failure of the last World War lay far deeper "than the viciousness of the Treaty of Versailles or the failure of the League of Nations" and that "the causes of that failure lie deep in the invisible forces which dominate and vibrate through the races which comprise the millions of people of Europe."

Weighs On America

Commenting, Willkie said:

"The causes of the failure of the last war bear very heavily today upon the back of America. The causes of the post war failure lie deeper than the Treaty of Versailles our failure to enter the League of Nations."

30.24— 1189 1

"It was our failure fo twenty-three years to play the part America should have played in world affair that contributed to the present chaos in Europe."

Willkie said that the excerpt he read from Hoover's speech was "a wholly unrealistic doctrine to teach in the United States."

Rallying Point, He Says

"This is the time," he said, "when all Americans, irrespective of party and political beliefs, must rally around the foreign policy of the United States—now—and make it strong and effective."

Willkie said it was because of this belief that he had "taken time to joi nmovements which seek to make America effective. One of these movements ie aid to China.

No one can but appreciate that if Japan dominates the Orient in collaboration with the totalitarian powers, the menace to America will be very great."

He asserted that it lay with the American people whether Japan threw her lot with the Axis or with the United States.

Says President Used 'Depth Bomb' On Congress

New York, Sept. 17 (AP)—United States Senator Charles W. Tobey (Rep., N. H.) charged tonight an an America First Committee rally commemorating the one hundred and fifty-fourth anniversary of the signing of the Constitution that President Roosevelt "has in effect eliminated your Congress just as effectively as a depth charge puts a submarine out of business."

Declaring that the nation needed "a new declaration of independence by the American Congress," he accused war advocates of using fear propaganda or of being under misguided apprehensions that Hitler could conquer the world.

Should Have Share, He Says

"We all should have a share in arriving at such a momentous decision as faces our nation," he said. "No one man—no group of men—should be allowed to make the decision for us."

He described President Roosevelt's order to the navy to shoot first at Axis raiders and submarines as a usurpation of the power of Congress to declare war, which he said was specifically defined under the Constitution.

"We have one clear duty," he said, "to build up our army and our navy and our military production with unceasing determination and thereby demonstrate to Hitler that any attempted in vasion of the Western Hemisphere is out of the question."

FILM HEARING DRAWS RIDICULE

Roosevelt Sees Comedy in Propaganda Hunt.

Washington, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt placed the current Senate investigation of so-called movie war propaganda in the cartoon class today, with a none-too-subtle inference that the investigators compared favorably with Charlie Chaplin in the slap-stick realm.

At the same time, he declared that neither he nor, to his knowledge, any of his subordinates had brought pressure on the movie industry to include propaganda in its pictures.

Promptly, Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, co-author with Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, of the resolution for the movie inquiry, retorted that he was "surprised that the President has not injected himself earlier in the efforts being made to discontinue and stop the investigation."

"I am sure," Senator Nye said, "that these efforts are going to be unavailing."

Reads a Telegram.

Questioned about the movie inquiry at his press conference yesterday, the President replied by producing a telegram sent to a member of the Senate sub-committee by an unnamed Connecticut individual and by suggesting that a cartoon on the subject in the Washington Evening Star merited reprinting.

The cartoon showed Charlie Chaplin in comicc garb with a a subpœna in his hand, asking what he could teach those "past masters" about comedy.

The telegram read:

"Have just been reading book valled Holy Bible. Has large circulation in this country. Was written entirely by foreign-born, mostly Jews. First part full of dangerous war mongering propaganda. Second condems isolationists with fake story about Samaritan. Dangerous. Should be added to your list and suppressed."

Meanwhile, Gov. Culbert L. Olson of California, in an open letter to Senator Clark, chairman of the investigating subcommittee, said that he protested on behalf of the movie industry "against the implications that the service which it is performing in the educational, entertainment and culture life of America it attended with improper exhibitions or abuse of American civil liberties."

"To the extent that it contributes support of America's stand in its foreign relations, during the world crisis, we believe the industry should be praised, not condemned," the letter added.

LUCAS CASTS DOUBT ON MOVIE INQUIRY

Senate Audit Chairman Raises Question of Authority

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 (AP)—Chairman Lucas of the Senate Audit Committee said today that he was studying expenditures by a sub-committee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee which is investigating charges of war propaganda in the motion picture industry.

Mr. Lucas said he was not seeking to halt the inquiry "but as chairman of the Audit and Control Committee I have a responsibility over the expenditure of Senate funds I cannot overlook."

Chairman Clark of Idaho, of the investigating group announced public hearings would be delayed until next Tuesday because of the absence of Senator Brooks, a member of the sub-committee, who is attending the American Legion convention. Nicholas Schenck, president of Loews, Inc., was to have testified tomorrow.

The National Lawyers Guild meanwhile made public letters to Senate leaders contending that the conduct of te investigation "constitutes a shocking misuse of power and usurpation of authority."

NYE DEFENDS RACE TALK BY LINDBERGH

But Says He Wished Speaker Had Not Been So Direct.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 17 (A. P.).—Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, declared today that "as long as interventionists want to inject the anti-Semitic issues" in the debates over United States foreign policy, "perhaps this is the time to be speaking very frankly."

In an interview Senator Nye defended Charles A. Lindbergh against the charge of anti-Semitism although "at first I wished the Colonel had not been so direct," when he declared in Des Moines last week that the Jews, the British and the Roosevelt administration were most active in promoting intervention.

The racial issue was injected by Wendell L. Willkie, attorney for the motion picture industry in the present Senate committee investigation and a foreign policy supporter, "in connection with press announcements at the opening of the hearing," he said.

"As Lindbergh said, without being anti-Semitic, those of the Jewish faith are contributing to the cause of intervention," the North Dakotan continued. "Their interest is very natural. If I were one of them, I should feel as they do toward those who have persecuted my people. But I should try not to let my natural hatred blind me to the first and best interests of my own country."

ROOSEVELT FOES URGED TO STUDY CONSTITUTION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 (AP)—Rep. William H. Sutphin of Matawan (D-NJ) suggested today that persons who questioned President Roosevelt's right to order shooting of Nazi submarines should refer to the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution, Sutphin pointed out, gives Congress the power to declare war, but does not withhold from the executive branch of goyernment a separate right under certain circumstances to employ the army and navy.

"The right to repel invasion can be exercised by the President whenever there is no time to ask for specific authority," the representative said. "An attack on an American ship is considered in international law to be as much of an invasion of American rights as an invasion of territory.

"When an American battleship is fired upon by a Nazi submarine, there is no time to ask Congress for permission to strike back, nor is there any means available to restore the battleship should it be sunk."

Farley Urges People To Back President To Utmost For Defense

Boston, Sept. 17 (AP)—James A. Farley, former Postmaster General, today called upon "all the people to give the President all the support they possibly can in the defense program."

Urging an adjournment of politics, Farley said that the people by their "decisive vote showed their desire to have him in charge of the ship of state and he is worthy of your support and my support.

"I have been a Democrat all my life and, God willing, I will continue to be one," he told the forty-first annual convention of the National Association of Postmasters.

"Everyone who knows me realizes, however, that I have the greatest of respect for the fellow on the other side of the fence. But in these trying times we should forget our differences."

U. S. Imports Of Linen From British Isles Sharply Cut By War

New York, Sept. 17 (AP)—The European war has cut sharply into United States imports of linen and boosted prices, but dealers estimated today the British Isles were sending to this country about 60 per cent. as much as before the war, despite shipping shortages.

One firm reported that during the past year it received linen goods approximately at the rate of 1938 and 1939. A wholesale buyer, however, said his company was able to get only about 40 per cent. as much linen as normally.

United States customs and Commerce Department statistics indicated Britain was concentrating on shipments of high quality goods.

This was interpreted as in line with the British policy of building up credits in this country through sale of a variety of articles, from Scotch whiskey to antiques and tweeds.

An example was the amount of table damask on which duty was paid in June, 60,500 pounds, valued at $106,000. The total for 1939 was 914,390 pounds, valued at $2,051,500, and showed June only slightly below the monthly average.

In some other of the dozen-odd classifications used by the custom houses for duty purposes, however, the flow into United States channels was only about 25 per cent. of normal. At the same time, however, the valuation of most classes, per pound, was higher by as much as 100 per cent.

One of the sharper drops in the amount on which duty was paid was for linen weighing four ounces or less to the square yard, a fine-quality cloth. June totals were 95,461 pounds, worth $220,805. For 1939, however, the monthly average in this classification was 198,700 pounds, valued at $269,950. This also indicated a higher per-pound valuation was placed on the cloth this year compared with 1939.

SYNTHETIC RUBBER FACTORIES URGED

$500,000,000 Program Is Advised as Defense Task; TNT Plant Plans Suggested

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 17 (AP)—Three hundred of the nation's foremost oil men met for the National Petroleum Association's annual convention today and were told the government should spend immediately $500,000,000 for erection of plants to make synthetic rubber.

Dr. Gustav Egloff of Chicago, research director for a large oil company since 1917, told the oil men unlimited quantities of synthetic rubber could be manufactured in the United States from petroleum, but that private companies couldn't be expected to build the necessary plants.

"Compared with other expenditures being made by the government at this time, half a billion dollars wouldn't be a drop in the bucket," said Dr. Egloff, "and if that amount were sent now in preparation for synthetic rubber manufacture, it would assure us all the rubber we might possibly need."

To Assure Ample Supply

Dr. Egloff said synthetic rubber cost about 25 cents a pound to produce, and for that reason private capital couldn't afford to take a chance on building plants. He observed natural rubber now cost 22 cents a pound, but might drop to three or four cents if the defense emergency suddenly ended, and at that price a plant producing synthetic rubber would become worthless.

Dr. Egloff calculated it would take 18 months to erect the plants he proposed, and said assurance that the country would have plenty of rubber under all circumstances would be worth the price.

He also advocated greater preparations for manufacture of explosives such as TNT, ammonium-nitrate, ammonium pictrate, and nitroglycerin from petroleum.

Possibilities Unlimited

He said the possibilities here were without limit; that all components of TNT—toluol, nitric acid, and sulfuric acid—are now derivable from crude oil, as well as glycerine, which heretofore came mostly from edible fats as a by-product of soap.

He observed the petroleum industry could also provide military surgeons with unlimited amounts of a new anaesthetic called cyclopropane. This drug, derived from crude oil, is used like ether but is reputed not to have some of ether's objectionable after-effects.

Sewing Machine Boom After War Forecast

New York, Sept. 17 (AP)—A boom in the sale of sewing machines in the United States but heavy losses in international operations were reported today by Sir Douglas Alexander, president of Singer Manufacturing Company, at the annual stockholder's meeting.

He said the company's sales volume had steadily declined in the last 12 years, its markets in German-occupied countries had been cut off, the business in Japan closed and sales in Great Britain reduced from a normal 100,000 machines a year to 15,000.

However, he added: "We have confidence that after the war we shall be confronted with the greatest demand ever experienced. A long-term rise in installment buying of sewing machines is in prospect when peace returns."

As for the rising sales tide in the United States, Sir Douglas commented: "The increase in consumer purchasing power will probably help the sale of domestic sewing machines although this may be checked by restrictions on installment purchases."

To handle the increase in domestic business, Singer is building an addition to the factory at Elizabeth Port, N. J., and has purchased 68,000 acres of timber in North Carolina. The Electrical Diehl Manufacturing Company has received so much new business that it is building a new factory at Finderne, N. J.

NEW CAR SHORTAGE BY FEB. 1 SEEN

Larger Output Next Week Forecast, But Further Slash Expected

[By the Associated Press]

Detroit, Sept. 18—Another sharp upturn in motor-car production is indicated for the current week, bringing the industry's output nearer the maximum permitted under the schedules authorized by the defense agencies.

Because the level of production still is subject to many factors, among them adequate deliveries of minor parts as well as the normal difficulties peculiar to new model assemblies, figures are given with reservations. Fairly authoritative estimates for the present week, however, place the total at slightly more than 70,000 units, up approximately 20,000 from last week.

Dealer stocking throughout the country is going forward, but many large selling localities still are without initial models of the 1942 lines. Field agents report some would-be buyers admitting a desire to see all models and compare price schedules before making purchases. This tendency is expected to slow down sales for a time, but sales executives say that once all models are on display and all price revisions have been announced demand will pick up rapidly.

Some authoritative trade sources say the further slash in production announced by the Office of Production Management this week will be reflected in a new-car shortage soon after next February 1. The latest curtailment order reduces the aggregate output of passenger cars for the five months of the new model year up to December 31 to 1,023,217 units. This compares with 1,510,167 in the like period of 1940.

There undoubtedly will be a further reduction in output schedules for subsequent months; most of the manufacturers will be surprised if they are permitted to make more than 2,000,000 passenger vehicles during the model year. There are indications, however, that much of what is taken from passenger-car production beyond the originally proposed 50 per cent. slash will be made up in medium and heavy truck output.

Certain it is that as an important defense factor these types of commercial units will be measurably increased over last year's volume. Official figures for the 1940 calendar year show that of the 777,026 commercial cars produced during that period more than three fourths were of one and one half tons or under rated capacity. A production curtailment also has been ordered for this classification of trucks.

PRICE-CONTROL BILL FACES MORE DELAY

Opposition To Henderson As Prospective Head Seen As Barrier

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 17—Opposition to Leon Henderson as the prospective price-control administrator appeared likely today to delay the administrator's control bill still further, despite Henderson's testimony that the nation is in the midst of "mild inflation."

Meanwhile, Henderson revoked a price ceiling on anthracite which the operators had defied Monday in raising their price 15 cents a ton.

Denounces Operators

While acceding to this increase, Henderson denounced the operators for an "unjustifiable act of defiance," and said they had agreed not to advance prices further without his approval. Henderson had sought to peg prices at the August 15 levels, when the so-called "circular price" for prepared sizes at the mine was $6.60 a ton.

As the House Banking Committee resumed hearings on the legislation after a month's holiday, several Democratic members said privately and emphatically that the measure would be revised to insure that Henderson would not have complete authority over prices.

Some suggested that provision would be made for a board to administer the law and others predicted that Senate confirmation would be required not only for the administrator but for his subordinate officials "pretty well down the line."

No Particular Rush, One Says

Committee members conceded that several weeks more would be required for the committee to complete its consideration of the measure.

"There's no particular rush about this thing," one member said. "At least there's no great clamor from the people for its enactment."

On the other hand, Henderson reopened his testimony with a statement that in the month since the committee recessed, prices of basic foodstuffs had increased about eight per cent. and that a special daily index of twenty-eight basic commodity prices had risen from 150 to 157.

"There is now no question," Henderson said, "that wholesale prices everywhere are continuing to increase."

Retail markets, he added, also are beginning to move up in earnest.

Notes 'Mild Inflation'

In response to questions, Henderson said he was quite sure that the country already was experiencing a "mild inflation." He said that in contrast to the situation when the hearing started a few weeks ago, the production of commodities for civilian consumption has leveled off, but prices still are going up.

Renewing efforts previously made by other committee members to explore Henderson's economic philosophy, Representative Sumner (Rep., Ill.) questioned him at length concerning his training and experience as an economist.

Adverse To Czar

Noting that he had once been a teacher of economic subjects, Representative Sumner asked whether he had known any economists at that time who believed that the Communistic form of Government was the best from an economic standpoint. Henderson replied in the negative and said that "most of us had a fine contempt for it."

Some committee members said that in addition to being averse to having Henderson made a price "czar," they had no particular liking for the bill itself although they conceded they did not know what substitute could be offered.

Greater Goods Stock Urged By Wallace

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 17—Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, chairman of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, called today for the establishment "in so far as possible" of "an ever-normal stock pile of critically needed metals and other materials."

"Goods and more goods of the kinds essential to our defense efforts are what we need most to assure the overthrow of Hitler," Wallace said in announcing that all Government departments and agencies would be consulted at once on how critical needs can be supplied.

Approaches Listed

He ilsted these as among approaches which will be considered:

Expansion of production facilities both here and abroad.

Conversion of non-defense plants to military uses.

The working of more shifts.

Payment of premiums for certain metals coming from low-yielding veins of ore.

Wallace said the part Western Hemisphere republics can play in increasing the supplies of needed materials would be given particular emphasis.

He also announced that the Economic Defense Board, which he heads along with his other duties, would absorb the Office of Export Control hitherto managed by Brig. Gen. R. L. Maxwell.

Provides Cheering Service

The Economic Defense Board is to "provide a central clearing service to which exporters, manufacturers and foreign importers may submit proposals for the export of materials and commodities." It also is to "obtain clearance for such proposals from the several Federal agencies concerned with the control of exports and related financial transactions."

An international crisis, Wallace said, "requires a determined intensification of our policy of preventing shipments to Axis-dominated countries."

General Maxwell is returning to his former duties at the War Department.

Aluminum Expansion Plans Made In Capital

Jesse Jones Meets With Supply Priorities And Allocations Board To Discuss Program

Washington, Sept. 17 (AP)—Plans to speed up and expand the construction of aluminum and magnesium plants to produce airplane metals were announced today after a meeting of Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, and the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board.

Jones said the group decided to speed up the present program to expand aluminum capacity to 1,500,000,000 pounds a year and to plan further plants for aluminum, and to take similar action on magnesium for which the present goal is 400,000,000 pounds a year.

Earlier Jones said negotiations were nearly complete to finance an addition to the aluminum plants of the Reynolds Metal Company, near Sheffield, Ala., to increase their capacity from 40,000,000 to 100,000,000 pounds a year.

Roosevelt's Gorilla Dies

Gift of Free French, Accepted Tuesday by White House, Succumbs

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17 (AP).—President Roosevelt's gorilla, presented to him by Free French authorities, is dead. Phil Carroll, animal dealer who captured the beast, said today the gorilla died in French Equatorial Africa after giving birth to a baby.

The animal, six feet two inches tall and weighing more than 400 pounds, had been offered to the President in a letter from General de Larminant, high commissioner of the colony. The White House agreed esterday to accept it.

Army's Morale Good In Third Corps Area, Newspapermen Find

Troops Better Trained Than in World War Era, Writers Say

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 17.—Two newspapermen who spent weeks with Uncle Sam's troops reported today that "America has no reason to be fearful about the morale of the new army it is building for national defense."

The Evening Sun said it assigned men to investigate morale in the 3d Corps Area because it felt the "chorus of allegations that all is not well with the United States Army" is a matter of "serious public concern."

(The District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania make up the 3d Corps Area.)

The newspapermen, Rodney Crowther, 45, business editor and former sergeant-major in the A. E. F., and Ben H. Miller, 34, Washington correspondent and behind-the-news editor, found out about Army morale by living with troops in camp and on maneuvers.

They reported:

"The American Army of 1941, as developed in this area, is a better Army, at this stage of its training, than the World War Army of 1917-8 was at the comparable stage of its training 24 years ago.

"The morale of the soldiers in this area is just as good as, and in some respects better than, the morale of the Army their fathers built 24 years ago.

"The soldiers of today do suffer some sense of grievance over the way things have been handled in Washington, and over the apparent confusion over this country's ultimate objectives, but resentment over the extension of service is not deep enough to interfere with morale."

BRITISH VESSEL AFIRE AT PHILADELPHIA DOCK

400 Bales of Jute Destroyed; Sabotage Scouted

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17 (AP)—Four hundred bales of jute were destroyed by fire today aboard the British-leased Norwegian steamship Maud, but Captain N. Teigland ordered unloading continued so he could sail at midnight for an undisclosed port to take on supplies for the British.

Nine stevedores were almost trapped below decks when the fire suddenly flamed up.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents began an inquiry. Crew members expressed the belief that a short-circuit in the wiring was the cause of the fire.

Authorities said the heat had buckled deck plates and firemen were forced to cut through the deck to get to the blaze. Captain Teigland said as he prepared to sail: "She'll stay afloat all right, fire or no fire."

Hillman Urges Workers To Place Defense First

Says War Will Be Won or Lost on U. S. Assembly Lines

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 17 (AP).—Sidney Hillman, Associate Director General in the Office of Production Management, told the United Rubber Workers' convention today that America must produce "to provide the foes of Hitlerism with planes enough to darken the skies and tanks enough to shake the earth of Europe and Africa."

In a speech he said that course meant "that you and I and the rest of us must make national defense our first thought—the driving force and inspiration of all our days."

Mr. Hillman expressed belief that "this war is going to be won or lost on the assembly lines of the United States."

"The steel workers, the auto workers, the rubber workers, the airplane workers and ordnance workers will largely determine whether Britain is to survive or perish; whether the Americas are to survive or perish," he said.

Britain Sought Tomatoes For Invasion Emergency

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Sept. 17—How the British tried to buy 15,000,000 cases of tomatoes to stock refugee food depots for an invasion emergency and how American growers were caught short was related today by a cannery official.

The tomatoes were wanted for more than their food value. The British figured that in an invasion attempt the Germans would strike first at water systems of the British Isles.

By stocking food depots with quantities of canned tomatoes the British planned to provide the people with a safe and nourishing drinking fluid that would substitute for water in case normal water supplies were destroyed or polluted, explained Preston McKinney, vice-president of the Canners' League of California.

McKinney told a conference group at the Pacific Coast Trade Conference that the Federal Surplus Marketing Administration had tried to fill the fantastically huge British request, but was unable to get the full 15,000,000 cases from this year's pack.

McKinney said the British had planned to establish food depots all over the islands as a safeguard for caring for refugees moving out of actual combat areas in case of invasion.

The depots were to be located at strategic intervals along certain roads and highways which refugees would use. Supplies capable of sustaining large masses of people would be stocked at these points.

Teachers Oppose Wilbur On War

[By the Associated Press]

Palo Alto, Cal., Sept. 17—Taking a stand in opposition to that of President Ray Lyman Wilbur, 176 Stanford University professors issued a joint statement today supporting the Administration's foreign policy and calling for a more dynamic course of action.

"Recognizing the fallacy of the idea that a passive defense is still possible, we support a more dynamic policy of action as the most effective means of security against the totalitarian menace," the statement read.

Lewis M. Terman, professor of psychology, said the statement was not the result of a poll of Stanford's 464 faculty members, and that those who signed did so as private individuals.

Vatican City, Sept. 17--(AP)--The impression was received from Vatican City sources today that Pope Pius' attitude toward the belligerents in the war would remain one of strict neutrality, at least publicly.

SEP 17 1941

This opinion was expressed after completion yesterday of the confidential mission of Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's envoy to the Vatican, who made a special airplane trip to Rome a week ago. Taylor saw the pontiff and other officials last Wednesday after his arrival, and again yesterday when it was assumed the pope gave his answer to whatever proposals had been submitted.

Unofficially, it was understood that Taylor reiterated to the Pope that the president of the United States is determined to help Britain crush Hitlerism, and observers considered it likely that the pope also was informed that the president feels that the Nazi menace to the world is much greater than communism

What the Pope said in reply is not likely to become known, said those who are acquainit acquainted with the ways of the Vatican.

SEP 17 1941

But it was presumed likely that he gave his views on the war and peace aims of the United States and Britain, and expressed an attitude toward maintenance of the Soviet regime in Russia, which the Vatican always has considered an arch-foe of religion.

THE BACK WASH OF WAR(No.1): 8,000,000 tragic tales of battles' victims show Europe's need; International clearing-house connects prisoners and homes.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: the center of mercy in a world of war is now, as often before, the international headquarters of the Red Cross at Geneva, Switzerland. Out of the files and reports of its burdened body of workers, Betty Sargent has put together for readers of the (name of your paper) Special News Service a graphic picture of the backwash of war in Europe today. In this first of four daily articles she describes the size of the Red Cross problem in watching over the welfare of prisoners and internees.

SEP 17 1941

By Betty Sargent

Geneva-(AP)-If you would know of the misery and suffering and heartache in a modern warring world, you must go to a building which was dedicated to a peace that failed.

For the present home of the International Red Cross prisoners' bureau once housed the League of Nations assemblies.

There, impersonally recorded on colored filing cards, you will find 8,000,000 stories of the fate of prisoners of war, of sick and wounded, of civilians interned in belligerent countries, of refugees.

You will learn from the cards how some of these people have died, and their families have been informed; how others have exchanged news with their relatives; how food packages were sent to this or that prisoner.

Others of those colored cards say only: "family asks information, last heard from on Maginot Front."

The cards are the work of a bureau which already has surpassed the total of its work during the 1914-1918 war.

At the end of May of this year--19 months after war began--10,000,000 letters and inquiries had been received or sent by the war prisoners' bureau, as compared with a total of barely 3,000,000 letters and inquiries received or sent at the end of four years of war in 1918.

France's military collapse, followed by the Italian-Greek war, Germany's Balkan campaign, and now the war in Russia has put a colossal task on the shoulders of the International Red Cross committee composed solely of Swiss members, and its prisoners' bureau where more than 2,300 Swiss citizens are employed, largely in a volumtary capacity.

In an effort to keep down overhead and speed results, volunteer groups were formed in 20 Swiss cities to aid the Geneva bureau in the reading and classifying letters sent fromall parts of the world by anxious relatives and friends of missing soldiers, sailors, and war victims. More than 1,200 men, women, and young people offered their services free of charge, bringing the total personnel up to 3,500 International Red Cross workers in Switzerland.

LThe major work of the bureau is to centralize information relating to captured or missing military and naval men.

Information is gathered from official lists of prisoners and lists of those who died in battle sent in by belligerent governments; cards announcing capture sent in by prisoners themselves, special inquiries, and other sources.

Through this exchange the "unknown soldiers" of today's war sometimes are brought back to life--located in a prison camp of perhaps in a x hospital.

As soon as the official lists arrive in Geneva, they are photographed and forwarded to the appropriate enemy government. By the end of last March the bureau had transmitted 269,583 pages of photographed lists. In many cases lists are received and sent telegraphically.

These lists contain all information necessary for identification of the prisoner, as well as the place of imprisonment his state of health and the address of his family.

The personnel of the Geneva Bureau then puts all such information on individual cards, filed alphabetically and cross referenced.

Although prisoners are allowed to send cards direct to their families as well as to the Geneva Bureau, informing them of their whereabouts and state of health, there often is a great delay in arrival because of poor postal communications, or in many cases, to change of families' addresses through flight. More than 1,000,000 cards sent in by French prisoners themselves have been received at the Geneva agency.

Among the best sources of information on missing persons are cards sent in by soldiers reporting deaths of comrades buried in line of battle.

add geneva..... x x x line of battle.

SEP 17 1941

Many families in France went for months living in hope that their sons, husbands, or fathers were alive in a German prison camp, only to find much later that they were buried in some obscure place where they had fallen.

Each belligerent or former belligerent country has a separate room of files and records in the huge headquarters. France, Britain, Germany, Poland, Italy, Norway, Holland, Belgium, Greece, Yugoslavia, and now Russia--printed in large letters above the doorways--tell the story of this war's progress. To date, the French room has been busiest of all, and French records after last June began spreading throughout the bureau like clinging ivy.

Records for each belligerent country are kept on different colored cards--Green for the French, rose for Germans, mauve for Poles. Inquiries concerning each prisoner are kept on white cards attached to the appropriate file.

Machines speed up the laborious filing work and also make possible setting up special classifications very quickly.

For example, after 30,000 French soldiers poured into Switzerland in June, 1940, for internment, each soldier was classified according to profession or trade. When the French internees were repatriated in January, 1941, the classifications proved useful in determining where in France these men should be sent to find employment.

In face of the man-sized war on the Eastern Front of Europe, the Red Cross agencies will have their hands full keeping up with events. There will be a new rush of queries about prisoners, missing and interned civilians.

Dr. Marcel Junod, who has been the troubleshooter of the International Red Cross committee in every hot spot since the Spanish civil war, already has arrived in Ankara, Turkey, to set up a branch bureau.

There, information on prisoners and civilians will be exchanged without the delay of mailing by way of Geneva.

As in the case of the spring campaign of 1940, it probably will be many months before the Red Cross can disclose prisoners' statistics on either the Russian of the German side. # # # #

(EDITOR'S NOTE: REPORTING FROM THE CENTER OF MERCY IN WAR-RAVAGED EUROPE--THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS--BETTY SARGENT TELLS IN THE SECOND OF FOUR ARTICLES FOR THE (NAME OF YOUR PAPER) SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE OF THE MOVEMENT OF FRIENDLY PACKAGES FROM HOME TO PRISONERS OF WAR. TOMORROW: RED CROSS INSPECTORS WATCH OVER PRISONERS OF WAR AND INTERNED CIVILIANS.)

BY BETTY SARGENT

(ADVANCE) GENEVA-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-THE PACKAGES OF MERCY--GIFTS OF FOOD, CLOTHING, TOBACCO, SOAP AND BOOKS--ARE MOVING SMOOTHLY TO THE MILLIONS LEFT IN PRISON BY EUROPE'S WAR IN THE WEST.

BUT OFFICIALS OF THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS ALREADY ARE GRAPPLING WITH THE PROBLEM OF NEW ARMIES OF PRISONERS ON THE EASTERN FRONT BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

POSTAL BAGS OF PRISONERS' PACKAGES ARE PILED HIGH IN THE WAREHOUSES OF GENEVA'S RAILWAY STATION, AND A DOZEN SWISS POSTAL CLERKS WORK SWIFTLY AND CAREFULLY TO DISPATCH THEM TO THEIR GOALS.

THE PACKAGES COME FROM RELATIVES AND FRIENDS, FROM RED CROSS CHAPTERS OR OTHER HUMANITARIAN AGENCIES IN THE HOMELANDS.

IN EACH PRISONERS' CAMP THERE IS "A MAN OF CONFIDENCE" APPOINTED BY THE PRISONERS FROM AMONG THEIR GROUP TO FIND OUT WHAT MEN HAVE NO RELATIVES OR FRIENDS IN A POSITION TO SEND THEM PACKAGES. THESE LISTS ARE THEN SENT TO NATIONAL RED CROSS SOCIETIES OR OTHER ORGANIZATIONS.

SEP 17 1941

SOME 20,000 POLISH PRISONERS WHOSE FAMILIES HAD DISAPPEARED OR WERE UNABLE TO SEND THEM ANY SORT OF RELIEF WERE THUS HELPED AFTER THE POLISH CAMPAIGN.

FACED WITH THE PROBLEM OF ALMOST TWO MILLION FRENCH PRISONERS IN CAMPS ALL OVER GERMANY AND OCCUPIED FRANCE WHOSE NEEDS WERE VERY GREAT IN THE SUMMER OF 1940, A RED CROSS COMMITTEE ORGANIZED MASS COLLECTIONS AND DELIVERIES OF FOOD, CLOTHES, MEDICAL SUPPLIES, JAM AND TOBACCO.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED FREIGHT CARS AND TRUCKS CARRIED 20,000,000 POUNDS OF BREAD, CANNED FOODS AND CLOTHES TO FRENCH PRISONERS AS GIFTS OF THE FRENCH RED CROSS.

BRITISH PRISONERS IN GERMANY FARED LESS WELL FOR A LONG WHILE,

BECAUSE TRANSPORT DIFFICULTIES ACROSS SPAIN WERE HOLDING UP BRITISH RED CROSS PACKAGES FOR MONTHS AT A TIME. BEFORE THE GENEVA RED CROSS WAS ABLE TO NEGOTIATE WITH PORTUGAL AND SPAIN FOR BETTER TRANSPORT, IT BOUGHT 282 TONS OF FOOD ON THE CONTINENT TO SEND TO BRITISH PRISONERS' CAMPS.

LATER IN THE YEAR NEGOTIATIONS AT LISBON ENABLED PACKAGES TO BE SHIPPED TO MEDITERRANEAN PORTS, THUS AVOIDING THE UNCERTAIN RAIL TRIP ACROSS SPAIN. EVEN NOW, IT USUALLY TAKES ABOUT FOUR MONTHS BEFORE PACKAGES FROM AMERICA REACH THE CAMPS.

SEP 17 1941

CARL J.BURCKHARDT, ACTIVE MEMBER OF THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS COMMITTEE SINCE HIS POST AS LEAGUE OF NATIONS HIGH COMMISSIONER AT DANZIG WAS SUPPRESSED, SAYS EVERY BRITISH PRISONER NOW IS ABLE TO RECEIVE AT LEAST ONE PACKAGE A WEEK. DURING THE FIRST THREE AND A HALF MONTHS OF THIS YEAR 329,092 PARCELS ARRIVED IN GENEVA FOR DISTRIBUTION TO BRITISH PRISONERS IN GERMANY, ITALY, AND OCCUPIED FRANCE.

FOR THE SIX MONTHS FOLLOWING THE ALLIED DEFEAT IN NORTHERN FRANCE IN JUNE, 1940, ONLY 146,441 PACKAGES CONTAINING FOOD, MEDICAL SUPPLIES, TOBACCO AND SOME CLOTHING ARRIVED IN GENEVA. MOST OF THOSE PACKAGES ARRIVED SMELLING STRONGLY OF THE SEA--INDICATING HOW LONG THEY HAD BEEN HELD UP IN LOSBON.

IN GENEVA, DAMAGED PARCELS, AVERAGING ABOUT TWO PER CENT OF THE TOTAL, ARE PUT ASIDE, THEIR CONTENTS CAREFULLY SORTED, AND EVERYTHING USABLE FORWARDED IN BULK TO THE CAMP'S "CONFIDENCE MAN".

A CAREFUL RECORD OF EVERY PARCEL--DAMAGED OR NOT--IS KEPT AT THE RELIEF SECTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS PRISONERS' BUREAU, SO THAT THE BRITISH RED CROSS OR ANYONE INTERESTED MAY REFER TO IT.

ALMOST AS IMPORTANT AS PHYSICAL NEEDS OF PRISONERS ARE THEIR INTELLECTUAL AND RECREATIONAL NEEDS. ALREADY MORE THAN 250,000 BOOKS HAVE BEEN SENT TO PRISONERS' CAMPS, OF WHICH 18,000 WERE SENT DIRECTLY BY THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS.

WHILE MOST OF THE BOOKS ARE IN FRENCH, THERE ARE GERMAN, ENGLISH, ITALIAN, SPANISH, RUSSIAN, GREEK, PORTUGUESE AND ARAB BOOKS AMONG THOSE COLLECTED BY NATIONAL RED CROSS AND HUMANITARIAN ORGANIZATIONS LIKE THE YMCA FOR DISTRIBUTION TO CAMPS.

MILITARY AUTHORITIES OF EACH COUNTRY HAVE THE FINAL RIGHT TO SAY WHAT BOOKS MAY REACH THE PRISONERS. A NUMBER OF FRENCH WRITERS, INCLUDING MALROUX, HAVE APPEARED ON THE BANNED LIST IN GERMANY.

SPORTS EQUIPMENT AND MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS ARE OTHER WELCOME GIFTS IN PRISON CAMPS, WHERE "BARBED-WIRE-PHOBIA" IS A CONSTANT DANGER.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: WHAT THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS IS DOING TO PROTECT THE WELFARE OF PRISONERS OF WAR AND CIVILIAN INTERNEES IN THE WARRING COUNTRIES OF EUROPE IS TOLD IN THIS THIRD OF FOUR STORIES BY BETTY SARGENT ON THE BACKWASH OF WAR IN EUROPE, WRITTEN FOR THE (NAME OF YOUR PAPER) SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE. TOMORROW: PREPARING FOR EPIDEMICS.

SEP 17 1941

BY BETTY SARGENT.

(ADVANCE) GENEVA--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)--THE LOT OF CIVILIANS INTERNED IN ENEMY LANDS HAS BEEN BETTER IN THIS WAR THAN IT WAS IN 1914-1918, INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS OFFICIALS REPORT.

DELEGATES FROM THE INTERNATIONAL OFFICE HAVE BEEN ALLOWED TO VISIT INTERNMENT CAMPS, HAVE SUGGESTED IMPROVEMENTS AND OBTAINED THE LIBERATION OR REPATRIATION OF CERTAIN GROUPS--NOT, OF COURSE, INCLUDING MEN OF MILITARY AGE.

CIVILIAN NATIONALS OF BELLIGERENT COUNTRIES CAUGHT AND INTERNED BY AN ENEMY, WHILE NOT PROTECTED LIKE PRISONERS OF WAR BY AN INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS CONVENTION, HAVE BEEN MADE THE CONCERN OF THE GENEVA RED CROSS COMMITTEE ON PRISONERS.

MOST BELLIGERENTS ACCEPTED THE RED CROSS SUGGESTION THAT CIVILIAN INTERNEES BE PLACED UNDER THE PROTECTION OF A WAR CONVENTION OF 1929.

MESSAGES CONCERNING WHEREABOUTS AND WELFARE OF CIVILIAN INTERNEES RECEIVED BY THE GENEVA PRISONERS' BUREAU ALREADY HAVE TOTALED MORE THAN 1,900,000.

THEY INCLUDE 264,010 FROM THE DUTCH RED CROSS, 193,802 FROM THE GERMAN RED CROSS AND 165,709 FROM THE BRITISH.

RED CROSS INSPECTORS ARE PERMITTED BY ALL BELLIGERENT COUNTRIES TO VISIT THE CAMPS OF PRISONERS OF WAR, AS WELL AS THE CAMPS OF INTERNEES.

SEP 17 1941

THESE INSPECTION TRIPS ARE MADE IN AN EFFORT TO INSURE THAT FOOD, HOUSING, CLOTHING, HEALTH CONDITIONS AND MEDICAL TREATMENT ARE AS ADEQUATE AS POSSIBLE; THAT RELIGIOUS OR INTELLECTUAL NEEDS ARE BEING LOOKED AFTER.

DELEGATES HAVE BEEN GIVEN THE RIGHT TO WALK FREELY ABOUT THE CAMPS, TO SPEAK WITH THE PRISONERS WITH NO MILITARY AUTHORITIES PRESENT, AND TO HEAR ANY COMPLAINTS WHICH THE PRISONERS' OWN REPRESENTATIVE--THE "MAN OF CONFIDENCE"--MAY HAVE TO MAKE CONCERNING CONDITIONS OR TREATMENT OF HIS FELLOWS.

DETAILED REPORTS ON CONDITIONS IN THE CAMPS ARE THEN PREPARED AND SENT BY THE DELEGATES TO THE GOVERNMENT HOLDING THE PRISONERS, AS WELL AS TO THE GOVERNMENT WHOSE PRISONERS ARE BEING HELD. FROM TIME TO TIME THESE REPORTS ARE PUBLISHED IN THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS REVIEW.

FOR THE MOST PART ARMY OFFICERS IN PRISON CAMPS OF THE VARIOUS BELLIGERENTS SEEM TO BE GETTING THEIR PAY AT THE RATE FIXED BY THE GENEVA CONVENTION OF 1929. ALTHOUGH RED CROSS OFFICIALS DECLINED TO GIVE ANY STATISTICS OR PRECISE INFORMATION, THEY COMMENTED:

"WE HAVE HAD PRACTICALLY NO COMPLAINTS FROM ANY GOVERNMENT, SO YOU MAY ASSUME THAT PAYMENTS ARE BEING MADE IN ACCORDANCE WITH INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT."

SEP 17 1941

DELEGATES ARE FREE TO SUGGEST IMPROVEMENTS IN CAMP CONDITIONS WHILE THEY ARE ON THE SPOT. WHERE NECESSARY, THE COMMITTEE AT GENEVA INTERVENES TO MAKE SURE THAT THESE SUGGESTIONS WILL BE CARRIED OUT. IN MANY CASES CONDITIONS ARE IMPROVED WITH THE UNDERSTANDING THAT SIMILAR IMPROVEMENTS WILL BE MADE IN THE PRISON CAMPS OF THE ENEMY.

MEDICAL MISSIONS COMPOSED OF TWO NEUTRAL DOCTORS AND ONE DOCTOR OF THE BELLIGERENT COUNTRY WHERE THE CAMPS ARE LOCATED HAVE BEEN APPOINTED TO VISIT BADLY WOUNDED AND SICK PRISONERS. THOSE MOST NEEDING HOSPITALIZATION ARE SELECTED FOR REPATRIATION OR MAY BE SENT TO A NEUTRAL COUNTRY.

TRAINLOADS OF MAIMED, WOUNDED AND ILL FRENCH PRISONERS HAVE CROSSED SWITZERLAND SINCE LAST AUTUMN EN ROUTE TO THEIR HOMES OR HOSPITALS IN UNOCCUPIED FRANCE. IN THE SAME WAY WOUNDED BRITISH PRISONERS IN GERMANY AND ITALY, GERMAN AND ITALIAN PRISONERS IN BRITAIN, AND GREEK PRISONERS IN ITALY HAVE BEEN REPATRIATED UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS.

(INFORMED SOURCES IN VICHY SAID LAST WEEK THAT "A RELATIVELY IMPORTANT PERCENTAGE" OF FRENCH PRISONERS RELEASED BY THE GERMANS ARE SUFFERING FROM TUBERCULOSIS.)

AN AGREEMENT HAS BEEN REACHED BY THE SWISS AND VICHY GOVERNMENTS FOR HOSPITALIZATION OF DEMOBILIZED AND TUBERCULAR FRENCH SOLDIERS IN FRENCH-SPEAKING SECTIONS OF SWITZERLAND. LARGE HEALTH RESORTS IN THE SWISS ALPS HAVE BEEN REPARED FOR MONTHS TO RECEIVE THEM.

-DASH-

(ADVANCE) SEP 17 1941 LONDON(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-THE REPATRIATION OF THOUSANDS OF WOUNDED WAR PRISONERS WHO WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO FIGHT AGAIN IS BOGGED DOWN IN THE RED TAPE OF THE GERMAN, ITALIAN AND BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICES.

BOTH GERMANY AND GREAT BRITAIN MADE SUGGESTIONS BUT EACH COUNTRY SAID A FLAT NO TO THE PLAN ADVANCED BY THE OTHER. THE PROPOSALS WERE:

GREAT BRITAIN--THAT PRISONERS BE EXCHANGED BY MEANS OF HOSPITAL SHIPS WHICH WOULD LAND GERMAN PRISONERS AT SOME CONTINENTAL PORT, BRITISH PRISONERS AT A SCOTTISH PORT. GERMANY OBJECTED TO THE ROUTE WHICH THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY PROPOSED FOR THE VESSELS.

GERMANY--TRANSFER OF PRISONERS TO NEUTRAL COUNTRIES AND REPATRIATION BY PLANE AMBULANCES. FOR REASONS NOT MADE PUBLIC GREAT BRITAIN DECIDED THAT PLAN WAS UNACCEPTABLE ALTHOUGH THE SWEDISH RED CROSS OFFERED TO SUPERVISE IT.

RICHARD K.LAW, PARLAIMENTARY UNDERSECRETARY FOR THE FOREIGN OFFICE, DISCLOSED TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS THAT AN ALTERNATE PLAN OF THE FOREIGN OFFICE NOW IS BEING CONSIDERED BY GERMAN OFFICIALS. IT PROVIDED FOR

30.24 — 11909

REPATRIATION THROUGH NEUTRAL COUNTRIES. NEGOTIATIONS WERE UNDER-WAY, HE SAID, WITH THE NATIONS WHOSE ASSISTANCE WOULD BE NEEDED.

EVEN IF A PROPOSAL IS ACCEPTED, MEDICAL COMMISSIONS WILL THEN HAVE TO SELECT AFTER CAREFUL EXAMINATIONS THOSE ENTITLED TO BE RETURNED.

SOME SOURCES SAID IT IS POSSIBLE THAT THE WAR WILL BE OVER BEFORE ANY SUCH REPATRIATION PLAN IS APPROVED.

BY BETTY SARGENT

(ADVANCE) GENEVA-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-FEARING FAMINE AND EPIDEMIC MAY COME TO WAR-RAVAGED EUROPE, THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS IS PREPARING FOR THE WORST.

ALTHOUGH EUROPE HAS BEEN SURPRISINGLY FREE FROM EPIDEMICS IN TWO YEARS OF WARFARE--DESPITE THE EXPOSURE OF CIVILIAN MASSES TO RIGOROUS CONDITIONS OF LIFE, DESPITE BOMBINGS AND MASS MIGRATIONS--OFFICIALS EXPRESS FEAR FOR THE COMING WINTER AND SPRING.

SEP 17 1941

ORDINARILY, RELIEF FOR CIVILIAN WAR VICTIMS AND NEEDY POPULATIONS HARD HIT BY WAR IS A JOB FOR THE NATIONAL RED CROSS SOCIETIES.

BUT TWO AGENCIES AT INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS HEADQUARTERS ARE JOINTLY CREATING A STOCK OF ANTI-EPIDEMIC SERUMS, TO BE KEPT READY IN CUSTOMS-FREE GENEVA DEPOTS AND SENT ANYWHERE IN EUROPE WHERE AN EPIDEMIC MAY BREAK OUT.

A SPECIAL PLEA WAS MADE TO NORTH AMERICAN AND SOUTH AMERICAN RED CROSS GROUPS TO SEND ALL ANTI-EPIDEMIC SERUMS AND MEDICAL SUPPLIES WHICH THEY COULD POSSIBLY SPARE.

AS EUROPE'S RATIONS GO DOWN TO THE ABSOLUTE MINIMUM FOR BARE EXISTENCE, THE HEALTH OF EUROPE'S POPULATIONS IS NATURALLY AFFECTED. INFANTS AND CHILDREN IN FRANCE, BOTH OCCUPIED AND UNOCCUPIED, AND IN BELGIUM IN PARTICULAR ARE SHOWING SERIOUS EFFECTS OF MALNUTRITION, THE RED CROSS FINDS.

THE SITUATION IN COUNTRY REGIONS NATURALLY IS BETTER THAN IN THE

TOWNS AND LARGE CITIES, AND FOOD SUPPLIES IN SOME TOWNS ARE BETTER THAN IN OTHERS. BECAUSE THE SITUATION VARIES SO GREATLY FROM PLACE TO PLACE, THE RED CROSS HAS FOUND IT PRACTICALLY IMPOSSIBLE TO COLLECT STATISTICS AND TO MAKE GENERALIZATIONS ABOUT THE NEEDS.

AN ALMOST TOTAL LACK OF FAT IS, HOWEVER, THE THING WHICH IS NOTICED MOST. MANY PEOPLE ARE SUFFERING FROM SKIN DISEASES CAUSED BY INSUFFICIENT FATS IN THEIR DIET. MANY PEOPLE DIED OF COLD LAST WINTER WHO, PROPERLY FED, WOULD HAD BEEN EXPECTED TO WITHSTAND THE COLD.

WHILE THE RED CROSS REALIZES THAT ADEQUATE FOOD RATIONS ARE BETTER THAN VITAMIN SUBSTITUTES AND MEDICINES, GETTING THE FOOD TO THE PEOPLE WHO NEED IT IS ANOTHER PROBLEM. EUROPEAN STOCKS ARE DWINDLING GRADUALLY AND THERE ARE FEWER AND FEWER COUNTRIES WHERE FOOD CAN BE BOUGHT BY RED CROSS MONEY.

SEP 17 1941

PORTUGAL AND TURKEY REMAIN THE ONLY REAL MARKETS, AND LARGE-SCALE TRANSPORT PROBLEMS IMPEDE FOOD MOVEMENT FROM THOSE COUNTRIES TO MOST OF THE OCCUPIED COUNTRIES OF EUROPE. DISORGANIZATION OF RAIL FACILITIES IN THE BALKANS HAS MADE IT PRACTICALLY IMPOSSIBLE TO BRING WHEAT AND OTHER FOODSTUFFS BOUGHT IN TURKEY TO WESTERN EUROPE. THE RED CROSS MANAGED RECENTLY, HOWEVER, TO ARRANGE FOR SHIPMENT OF 500,000 TONS OF TURKISH WHEAT VIA THE DANUBE.

GETTING OVERSEAS FOODSTUFFS IS ANOTHER HEADACHE BECAUSE OF THE BRITISH BLOCKADE. LATIN AMERICAN RED CROSS SOCIETIES HAVE LONG BEEN WILLING TO SEND QUANTITIES OF WHEAT, CANNED MEATS AND OTHER FOODS TO EUROPE'S OCCUPIED AREAS PROVIDED THE INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS COULD GET BRITISH NAVICERTS.

BRITISH AUTHORITIES AGREED TO GRANT NAVICERTS IF THE RED CROSS COULD GET A DOUBLE-EDGED GUARANTEE FROM THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT.

THE FIRST CONDITION WAS THAT ALL FOODSTUFFS AND OTHER NECESSITIES SENT FOR DISTRIBUTION TO NEEDY WOMEN, CHILDREN, AND THE SICK IN AREAS UNDER GERMAN OCCUPATION OR CONTROL WOULD REACH THESE PEOPLE AND NO ONE ELSE. THIS CONDITION WAS AGREED TO BY THE GERMANS. WHEREVER THEY HAVE GIVEN THIS GUARANTEE TO THE RED CROSS, OFFICIALS SAY, THEY HAVE KEPT THEIR AGREEMENT.

THE SECOND CONDITION, HOWEVER, WAS NOT AGREED TO BY THE GERMANS. THIS WAS THAT THE GERMAN AUTHORITIES MUST GUARANTEE NOT TO TAKE OUT FROM THE COUNTRY IN QUESTION LOCAL SUPPLIES EQUIVALENT TO THE AMOUNTS SENT IN BY THE RED CROSS.

UNTIL THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT CAN GIVE SUCH AN ASSURANCE, THE BRITISH SAY THEY WILL GIVE NO NAVICERTS, AND LATIN AMERICAN GIFTS STILL ARE AWAITING SHIPMENT ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE OCEAN.

IF THE WAR BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY TURNS OUT TO BE A LONG CAMPAIGN, THE DANGER OF FAMINE MAY BE A VERY REAL THREAT TO PARTS OF EUROPE. WHETHER THAT DANGER CAN BE MET IS OBVIOUSLY OUT OF THE CONTROL OF THE RED CROSS IN GENEVA. IT DEPENDS ON THE BELLIGERENTS.

NAZIS REACH WALLS OF KIEV, SOVIETS ADMIT

SEP 19 1941

By HENRY C. CASSIDY.

Moscow, Friday, Sept. 19 (AP).—German forces have reached one gate of Kiev, industrial capital of the fertile Ukraine, a Soviet Information Bureau communique admitted early today. Kiev, third largest city in Soviet Russia, with nearly 850,000 inhabitants, has important iron smelters and other works. Fighting has swirled to the north and south of it as German forces seeking to advance directly on Kiev found resistance so fierce that they detoured in an effort to squeeze the city in a nutcracker.

(As long ago as July 15 the Germans reported they had reached the Kiev gates. Yesterday they claimed the trapping of 300,000 Red troops in the Kiev area.)

The Soviets said the Germans threw fresh units into the conflicts and succeeded in piercing Russian defense lines in one sector.

The city lies some 500 miles southwest of Moscow and 300 miles north of besieged Odessa.

25,000,000 More Reds Called Up For Reserves

Moscow, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Soviet Union began assembling its almost illimitable man power today for the creation of the greatest reserve military force in history—estimated unofficially at not less than 25,000,000 men—while early autumn fog and rain were declared to be swallowing Hitler's last hope of quick and decisive victories.

Announcement of Premier Stalin's new conscription of every man between 16 and 50 not already in service to train after working hours in the use of weapons was accompanied by declarations that for Russia the struggle just had begun.

Asserting that the German general staff faced the approaching winter with no further hope for a Blitzkrieg in the East, the official organ of the Soviet armies, Red Star, nevertheless warned:

Long War Expected

". . . But we must realize that war will be long and severe.

"Realization of this measure (for conscription) for enormous significance in the entire course of the people's war against German Fascism," Red Star added. "Our nation never was the slave of the Germans or any other enemies and shall not become a slave now."

Millions In The Field

Regular Soviet troops already in the field against the Nazis are estimated at 9,000,000 and Moscow also has another 4,000,000 trained and equipped and ready to go into action at any time, it is reported.

The reserve program, which will not interrupt civilian production, will go into effect Wednesday.

While the tremendous preliminary work necessary to this measure went forward, the Soviet command maintained its now characteristic reserve about the situation on the far-spread fighting fronts.

SEP 19 1941

Heavy Fighting Reported

The afternoon communique reported only a continuation of heavy fighting everywhere and a series of offensive successes for the Red air fleet; it said nothing specific of the situation either about Leningrad in the northwest or in the lower Ukraine and Crimean area.

Soviet bombers were declared to have been active particularly in the Dnieperopetrovsk sector of the Ukraine, where a German troop and ammunition train was reported destroyed, and before Leningrad, where it was claimed that fifteen heavy German tanks and twenty trucks were smashed.

Moreover, Nazi airdromes along 2,000 miles of front were said to have been heavily attacked.

Reds Build Up Army.

Moscow, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Russian spokesmen declared today that a new defense decree broadening compulsory military training was aimed at creating the largest reserve army in history—one capable of bleeding the Nazi Reichswehr until a final Russian victory is scored.

Under the new program ordered by the Soviet Defense Committee in search of fresh reserves to strengthen Russia's resistance all male civilians between the ages of 16 and 50 years will be required to prepare for service in a vast civilian army. They will stay at their jobs, but, starting next Wednesday, will train after working hours for a total of 110 hours with political commissars and older non-commissioned officers as instructors.

"Every citizen capable of bearing arms must have military training so that he may be ready to defend his country with weapons in his hands," the Defense Committee said, and the Red Star, the Russian newspaper, went on to assert, "the realization of this measure is of enormous significance in the entire course of the people's war against German Fascism. Our nation was never the slave of the Germans or other enemies and shall not become a slave now. Autumnal rains have absorbed the dreams of Hitler's General Staff for a blitzkrieg in the East, but we must realize the war will be long and severe."

[The men made available for war service under the new decree will be in addition to those trained by Russia at the rate of 800,000 a year for twenty years under the regular army program of conscription. That program has enabled Russia to put 9,000,000 men under arms against Germany already, and has made her ready, according to London spokesmen, to put an additional 4,000,000 men in the field soon.]

Reds Claim Great Tank Victory.

The mechanized forces of Col.-Gen. Heinz Guderian, the German panzer chief, were today officially declared beaten decisively with a loss of two-thirds of his effectives in battle near Bryansk. The Russians killed, wounded or captured 20,000 Germans, Moscow said, and seized vast quantities of war materials in repulsing an armored thrust at Bryansk, a railway junction 230 miles southwest of Moscow.

Guderian, called the "Phantom General" because of the speed with which his panzer spearheads outflanked the French Maginot Line in 1940, was declared to have lost 500 tanks, seventy armored cars, 1,525 trucks, 195 airplanes, eighty-five heavy machine-guns, fifth-one trench mortars and several thousand rifles.

The 20,000 Nazi casualties were among a total of from 65,000 to 80,000 reported yesterday and today in defensive and offensive operations over the long front. The date of the Bryansk fighting was not announced. Russian newspaper dispatches reported last Saturday, however, the frustration of a drive against that city by two German tank corps and twelve infantry divisions.

The Soviet information bureau challenged a German high command declaration that three Russian armies had been crushed near Lake Ilmen, asserting that the Germans had lost from 35,000 to 50,000 men killed and wounded in a month of fighting in that area south of Leningrad, against 30,000 defense casualties.

Relations between Russia and Bulgaria again were strained.

SEP 19 1941

Bulgarian Relations Strained

Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov termed unsatisfactory the Sofia reply of denial to a Soviet charge September 10 that Bulgaria had supplied bases for future German operations against Russia.

The Soviet communique credited the Red air force with destruction of a German troop and ammunition train in the Dnieperopetrovsk sector of the Ukraine and with blows at Nazi airdromes behind the lines along the entire front. In the approaches to Leningrad, fifteen heavy tanks and twenty trucks were reported destroyed.

MOSCOW, Sept. 18 (AP).—A Soviet delegation headed by Foreign Commissar Viacheslav M. Molotov was named today to confer on Russian war needs with American and British missions expected here soon.

Other members are Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, commander of the Russian northwestern front and a member of the State Defense Committee, who now is supervising the defense of Leningrad; Anastas I. Mikoyan, Foreign Trade Commissar; V. A. Malishev, Commissar of Medium Machine-Building; Admiral Nikolai Kuznetzov, Navy Commissar; A. I. Shakhurin, Commissar of the Aviation Industry, and Colonel General N. D. Yakovlev, director of the artillery department of the Defense Commissariat.

INTACT PLANTS SEIZED, SAYS NAZI DISPATCH

Advance So Rapid Reds Couldn't Use Dynamite, Berlin Claims

Meanwhile Artillery Fire Is Concentrated On Leningrad Front

SEP 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 18—Germans claimed tonight the capture of a key city of the Soviet armament industry in a drive so swift that the Russians had no chance to dynamite the water and electric plants as they had arranged to do.

Identity and location of the city, said to be of 30,000 population, were not disclosed in the account by DNB, but the high command reported that in the Ukraine "offensive operations east of the Dneiper are progressing irresistibly." That region is highly industrialized.

Leningrad Success Claimed

Elsewhere, authoritative German sources said sharp Russian counter-attacks directed at an occupied town on the central front were repulsed, while the high command claimed "great successes" in fighting around the fortifications of besieged Leningrad.

The central sector counter-attacks collapsed when the Russians suffered "bloody losses" and the Germans took hundreds of prisoners, eighteen tanks and four cannon, DNB declared.

The high command's only detail concerning Leningrad credited sections of a single infantry division with storming 119 Russian pillboxes.

German sources, however, described both Nazi and Finnish forces as fighting tediously forward through mine fields and barbed wire encircling the city.

Artillery On Leningrad

They said big German guns now were battering away at all of Leningrad, rather than merely at military objectives, since the Russians had elected to defend the great port to the death. The Leningrad naval base at Kronstadt was reported also under gunfire.

The German air force reported successful raids on both Leningrad and Moscow last night; bombardment of several railroad stations and tracks behind the Russian central lines, including destruction of a trainload of gasoline, and air attacks which cost Russian motor columns considerable losses in men and materials east of the Dnieper.

Report Transport Sunk

DNB said "especially important warehouses in encircled Odessa were set afire," and that out in the Black Sea a 10,000-ton Russian transport was sunk and another of 8,000 tons was damaged.

The high command said that in air attacks yesterday in the Black, Baltic, and White seas and in Lake Ladoga, a Russian destroyer, three transports, two submarines and four torpedo boats were destroyed and sixteen other craft were hit by German bombs and presumed sunk.

the Russian decision to defend the city to the death.

The communique did not elaborate on the claims of progress on the southern flank.

10 Vessels Reported Destroyed

In air operations against Russia, the high command said a destroyer, two submarines and four motor torpedo boats were destroyed yesterday, three transports totaling 3,000 tons were sunk and sixteen other ships so severely hit they were presumed lost.

These attacks, it said, were made in the waters off Crimea, off the island of Oesel in the Gulf of Finland, in Lake Ladoga, the Volkhov estuary east of Leningrad and in the White Sea in the Far North.

New Capture Claimed

Unofficial German sources reported capture of a Russian city of 40,000 which they did not identify but which was described as "the key to the Soviet armament industry."

This city's water and power facilities were mined, DNB said, but quick German action prevented the Russians from setting off the charges.

Backing up the infantry divisions storming Leningrad's bulwark of modern fortresses and imbedded tanks, military reports indicated, Nazi shore guns now have been brought into position to shell the mighty Kronstadt naval base, which bars the sea gate to the besieged city.

The air force was said also to have been particularly active in support of ground troops south of Leningrad and the middle sector and the sweep of Panzer troops across the steppes of the southern front held almost equal interest with the battle of Leningrad.

DNB, reporting far-ranging Stuka dive-bomber attacks, said a battleship of the Marat class was hit three times in a Black Sea raid.

Azov Ports Raided

DNB said fires and heavy damage also were caused by bomb raids Tuesday night on several ports of the Sea of Azov.

Military writers who reported the German menace to Kronstadt pointed out that if Kronstadt could be silenced by the joint efforts of the shore guns and Stukas, German naval units could move up the Gulf of Finland and take Leningrad under fire from another direction.

Commentators however did not minimize the task before the Germans. They declared that the crisscross canals and island character of the city and the three mouths of the Neva river all added to the severity of the soldiers' problems.

The recent crossing of the Dnieper river in the Ukraine was considered by military commentators equally as significant as the Nazi crossing of the Meuse river at Sedan, a turning point in the battle of France last year.

The well-informed news service Dienst Aus Deutschland went so far as to say that the city of Kharkov is in danger and the next natural defense line for the Soviets in the south lies beyond the Donets river.

Syvaeri River and blasted the tracks at each place.

[The references apparently are to Svirstroi, a city 200 miles northwest of Leningrad, and the Svir River, a canalized stream which links Lakes Ladoga and Onega. DNB, the German official news agency, said that the Finns also captured the Lake Ladoga island of Ranmasaari in a two-day battle which ended on Monday with surrounding of the Russian garrison and seizure of munitions and supplies.]

Mud and rain, an army reporter wrote, have slowed even the motorized units of the Finnish Army to a three-mile-an-hour pace on the march.

by the Germans the fort suddenly went dead and has not fired a shot for several days.

Thick smoke was said to have enveloped the Russian batteries after tremendous blasting by many Stukas.

Cathedral Still Stands

The Finns were able to see that the great cathedral and many factory chimneys on Kotlin Island, where Kronstadt is situated, were still standing, the dispatch said. Kronstadt is only fifteen miles from the Finnish shore.

Dispatches from the front said that ship traffic between Leningrad and Kronstadt had been "extremely lively" recently and that a large fleet of Red warships was on constant patrol in waters near Leningrad itself.

A number of Red naval sallies against Finnish coast positions were said to have been repulsed by alert shore batteries.

He cited figures to the end of August as showing the Russians had lost 3,000,000 men, and the Germans, 2,000,000. Moreover, he hinted that Red army losses in tanks constituted one of Russia's most serious blows, and he disclosed that the Germans were repairing captured tanks and using them in their offensive.

Supply Arteries Available

The British, the informant continued, have opened an effective railway and highway route to Russia through Iran, and this can be turned into a supply artery for the Russians, once the supplies are forthcoming.

These expressions of authoritative opinion coincided with the gloomiest of surveys of the Russian military position in the South.

Isolation of Crimea, now regarded here as fact, means the loss to the Russians of service on Crimea's only railway across the Perekop Isthmus.

London sources were pessimistic, too, about the effect on either the German Ukrainian drive or the siege of Leningrad of Russia's counter offensive in the central sector of the long Eastern Front.

The Red Army successes in the center, they said, are too far distant from either the Leningrad or the Ukrainian Salients to constitute a real threat to the flanks of the advancing Nazis.

Official British quarters received in silence a new press campaign for a British offensive in Western Europe to relieve pressure on the Russians. The official view is considered to be that no continental invasion is feasible as long as both Britain and the United States are sending considerable parts of their own armaments to the U.S.S.R.

119 Bunkers Reported Taken, Park Captured

SEP 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 18—German forces besieging Leningrad have achieved "great successes" and the columns driving through the Ukraine east of the Dnieper river are "progressing irresistably," the German high command reported today.

Edging closer to the heart of the great Russian northern metropolis, units of one infantry division alone had overwhelmed 119 pillboxes on Leningrad's strongly-held defense ring, a bulletin said.

Big German siege guns were now reported bombarding the heart of Leningrad, firing freely in a general assault instead of seeking out military objectives as before.

The order to bombard the city as a whole, it was said, resulted from the Russian decision to defend the city to the death.

to have struck in overnight raids on that city, Moscow and Odessa.

A military spokesman said the Luftwaffe was continuing successful assaults on Russian positions, reinforcement columns and communications in the central sector.

DNB reported that Russian attacks on the German lines in the central zone, launched yesterday with the aim of winning back a town held by the Germans, had been repulsed with the Russians losing several hundred prisoners and eighteen tanks.

One armored division already has fought its way into a fortified park outside Leningrad and has thrown back Russian counter-attacks, DNB said.

Reports from military observers said the Germans were making progress in

"Niagara" Of Aid For Russia From U. S. And Britain Urged

Capitulation And Separate Peace Feared If More Help Isn't Sent, London Source Indicates

SEP 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 18—An ominous warning that Russia must have a swift flood-tide of war supplies or face military disaster and, perhaps, capitulation, came tonight from a London source in a position to speak with authority.

With the Crimea apparently cut off by Germany's Ukrainian advance and the Red army's losses in men and tanks described as astronomical, this informant said a "Niagara" of British and American material is essential to continuation of Russian resistance.

He went so far as to predict that Adolf Hitler would offer the Russians a separate peace and that the Russians—failing to get equipment—might be forced to lay down their arms.

Victory Termed In Balance

"The whole history of the world turns on the outcome of this battle," said this source. "We will fight on even if Russia is beaten, but our task then will become much harder."

Now, he asserted, the battle is "swaying either way"—toward Russian disaster or success.

Thus, it was explained, Crimea cannot easily be reinforced when the Germans bring to bear the full force of their attack.

Offensive Expected Soon

This, the London sources expected, would come soon in a land-air-sea offensive to seize not only Crimea but the industrial Donets basin. They considered the present threat to Crimea to be more grave than that to Leningrad, on the north, because "every vantage point to Leningrad has to be won by extremely hard fighting through a very heavily fortified area."

No such fortifications protect Crimea, on which the Germans are reported advancing on a broad front. The Peninsula is connected to the mainland by two narrow strips of land, the wider barely five miles across, and contact with the mainland would have to continue by sea, probably by way of Rostov which is exposed to all the dangers of German air and naval attack.

SEP 19 (A. That battle, he said, now was swaying either way.

He added that Hitler probably would launch a separate peace offensive and warned that if the Russians do not get equipment and weapons they might be forced to lay down arms.

"The whole history of the world," he went on, "turns on the outcome of this battle."

Even if Russia were beaten, he added, Britain would fight on, "but our task then would become much harder."

Saying that casualties in the East were rising to "astronomical heights," he said available data showed that to the end of August there had been 2,000,000 German casualties and 3,000,000 Russian casualties.

Discussing the available means for quick material support to the Russians, he said Britain had found in Iran an effective railway with English guage and a road which also could be turned into a supply line for the Soviet.

Losses in tanks, he indicated, were among the severest blows the Russians had suffered. Those captured by the Germans, he added, were being repaired and put to use in the Nazi offensive.

The only really effective aid Britain and the United States could give, he said, would be supplies.

Entire Crimean Peninsula Cut Off, Report

Communiques On Page 12

SEP 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 18—An authoritative source said today that the Germans at the extreme south of the Russian front apparently had cut off the entire Crimean Peninsula.

Such isolation, it was explained, would mean loss to the Russians of service over the only railway from Crimea, across the Perekop Isthmus, and make reinforcement of Russian forces defending the peninsula difficult.

Supply Hazards Increased

Contact between Crimea and the mainland may have to be continued by sea, probably by way of Rostov, this source said, with increased hazards in supplying the Crimean forces.

This informant held that Russian counter-attacks in the Smolensk area of the Central front probably would have little effect on German drives at the extremes of the front, at Leningrad, in the north, and into the Ukraine and toward Crimea in the south.

Nazi Difficulty

Great distances between the Russians' middle salient and the German salients on the north and south precluded German withdrawls to protect the German flanks, it was said.

Reports reaching London were that in the Murmansk region the Germans were pressing hard for local successes but that the Russians hoped to hold out, thanks to the severe winter which starts soon in that subarctic section.

BRITAIN CONFIDENT OVER DARDANELLES

Hears Italians Sought Right of Passage for Warships— Turks Not Receptive

SEP 19 1941

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP)—An authoritative source said today that reports had been received of an Italian attempt to pass warships through the Turkish-controlled Dardanelles under the Bulgarian flag and that Sir Hughe M. Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to Ankara, "probably" had made representations against this proposal to the Turkish Government.

The British envoy was believed to have asked that Bulgaria not be considered a non-belligerent because two British allies, Yugoslavia and Greece, have declared war on her. Passage of Bulgarian warships, therefore, would be viewed by the British as a violation of the Montreux convention, which regulates transit through the Dardanelles.

Britain herself is not technically at war with Bulgaria, although she has recalled her Minister from Sofia.

The London source expressed the belief that Turkey saw eye-to-eye with Britain in this matter and added:

"The Turkish Government has shown a very keen sense of its responsibility to the British Government under the Montreaux convention."

Warship "Purchase" Related

A highly placed foreign observer at Ankara, recently returned from Rumania and Bulgaria, said that Bulgaria had bought six Italian destroyers in a "smoke screen" sale and had asked permission to take them into the Black Sea. The Bulgarian request was said to have been delivered to the Turks on Sept. 12.

This observer said Rumanian informants told him that the Germans were seven weeks behind their schedule in the Russian campaign and that they had thus far concealed the real extent of their losses. He added he was informed that Adolf Hitler lost a high percentage of his air squadron leaders in the first month of the campaign.

BRITISH DEMAND NEW FRONT IN WEST

Popular Clamor for Troop Landings Is Renewed.

SEP 19 1941

London, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Clamor for the opening of a new front against Germany, presumably by troop landings in western Europe, appeared again in the British press today after a brief respite inspired by disclosure that an R. A. F. wing had arrived in Russia.

The Times, which is ordinarily slow to join press criticism of the Government's policies, devoted a full column editorial to a sober reminder that the British are universally convinced that the nation must make the most of the present opportunity not only to help on the Russian front but also to develop other fronts where the enemy will have to expend his strength.

"No feeling is more discredited than the feeling that time necessarily is on our side," the Times declared, and went on to say that it was very doubtful whether the German air losses were sufficient to prevent the Germans from switching their main air force back to the west and resuming an aerial campaign that would retard Britain's arms production.

Even more pointed was the News Chronicle's demand: "Are we, too, going to play Hitler's game and let him dispose of his enemies one by one? . . . Will invasion of the continent be any easier in six months, twelve months or two years if Russia is broken through lack of timely diversion? The answer is No. It will probably be impossible, and a large proportion of our great army will rot in idleness on our coasts."

BULGARS CALL 350,000 MEN, ANKARA HEARS

Mobilization Hints Nazi Push Toward Suez, Observers Feel

German Forces Rush Help In Road-Building To Southern Border

[By the Associated Press]

Ankara, Sept. 17 (Delayed)—Balkan informants reported tonight that Bulgaria had mobilized 350,000 men in a continuing call to the colors and that German road-building experts were feverishly constructing highways in south and southeastern Bulgaria which would be useful for any land-sea action directed toward Suez.

Three German divisions and other Nazi units also are in Bulgaria, these persons reported in addition to the "Organization Todt," which is building military roads under high pressure.

Germans Active In Yugoslavia

In old Yugoslavia the same informants said, 600 German engineers are directing thousands of Serb laborers in repairing the Belgrade-Nis and Salonika-Sofia railroads, which are essential to eastern Mediterranean movements. The former was destroyed by the Serbs.

On the other hand, a diplomatic observer just arrived from Syria said the British were moving artillery and other military units northward toward the Turkish frontier in a steady stream.

A reported Axis attempt to get Italian warships into the Black Sea via the Dardanelles by "selling" them to Bulgaria appeared doomed to failure, if, indeed, the attempt was seriously made.

SEP 19 1941

Proposal Not Reported

Today the Turks informed the British that Bulgaria had made no proposal for transit through the straits of any Italian destroyers and submarines. It had been reported that the Axis was planning such a maneuver in order to strengthen its forces in the Black Sea, where Russian sea power is predominant.

In any event, a well-informed source said, the Turks would refuse flatly to permit the passage of any warships through the Dardanelles unless they were owned by "real neutrals."

Would Exclude Bulgaria

Presumably this would exclude Bulgaria, which is technically not at war with any of the present belligerents. The Montreux convention which controls operation of the Dardanelles bars the passage of belligerent warships, unless they are on missions sanctioned by the League of Nations covenant.

In a recent note, Russia accused Bulgaria of cooperating in German plans for an attack on the U. S. S. R. by way of Bulgarian soil, and there have been persistent reports of the assemblage for aggressive purposes of 100 to 200 small ships in the Bulgarian Black Sea ports of Burgas and Varna.

ANKARA HEARS BULGARS ARM

Turkey Denies Reports of Plea for Ship Passage.

Ankara, Sept. 17 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Balkan diplomatic sources said today they had information that Bulgaria, whose diplomatic relations with Russia are tense, is mobilizing her armed forces rapidly and already has summoned 350,000 men to arms.

Besides these Bulgarian forces, informed sources said, three German divisions already are in Bulgaria.

British sources said today that the British embassy had been informed by the Turks that Bulgaria had made no proposal to permit warships purchased from Italy to pass through the Dardanelles Straits into the Black Sea, as reported here in high quarters. Turkey controls the Dardanelles.

The Balkan informants said the engineering organization of Dr. Fritz Todt, which built Germany's West Wall and great motor highway system, was working constructing roads in Bulgaria which would be useful in any military action toward the Suez Canal.

Six hundred German engineers and 6,000 Serbian laborers also were reported by these sources as repairing the railroad between Belgrade and Nis, one of the main routes from Germany to the southeast, and the rail line from Sofia to Salonika, also essential for any Ægean or eastern Mediterranean action.

Blind Charged.

The assurance that Bulgaria had made no proposal to permit passage of warships through the Dardanelles was given in reply to an inquiry based on repeated rumors that the Axis was using as a "blind" the sale of six Italian destroyers and submarines to non-belligerent Bulgaria in order to strengthen the Axis navy in the Black Sea, where the Russian fleet is predominant.

The Soviet fleet is considered a substantial stumbling block to German use of the sea lanes to supply and re-enforce the advance Nazi positions in the Ukraine.

A source usually well-informed said that the Turks were planning a flat refusal to pass the warships through the straits to all but "real" neutrals, which presumably would exclude virtually all European nations.

At present all belligerent war vessels have been prohibited.

A highly placed foreign observer said that Germany was anxious to become stronger in the Black Sea.

Ship Purchase Reported.

A highly placed foreign observer who has just returned from Rumania and Bulgaria declared today that Bulgaria had bought six Italian destroyers in a "smoke-screen" sale and asked Turkey to permit their entry into the Black Sea.

This informant said the Turks, whose permission was requested September 12, had not yet answered.

A diplomatic observer arriving from Syria reported today that the British were moving artillery and other military units northward toward the Turkish border in a constant stream. He declined to estimate the total movement.

The visitor to Rumania said informants there told him that the Germans were seven weeks behind their schedule in the Russian campaign and that they had thus far concealed the real extent of their losses.

He added he was informed that Adolf Hitler lost a high percentage of his air squadron leaders in the first month of the campaign.

The Axis has heavy concentrations of troops in Bulgaria, he declared, summarizing them as three German motorized divisions plus units of two others as well as supplementary units of Hungarians. Hungarian anti-aircraft batteries also are augmenting the defense of Varna, Bulgarian Black Sea port, he said.

This traveler said that 100 to 200 small craft were concentrated at Burgas and Varna in Bulgaria and that foreign observers in Bulgaria had predicted the Danube border between Bulgaria and Rumania would be closed soon, permitting the secret assembly of a large number of boats there for a prospective attack against Russia via the Black Sea.

Citing Rumanian dissatisfaction with the war, this informant said foreign observers in Bucharest told him they estimated Rumania already had lost one-fifth of her army.

He said he also was informed the Hungarians had lost half of their 60,000 effectives on the Russian front.

BREWERS MAY STAY IN IRAN

Teheran, Sept. 18 (A. P.). Two brewers making beer for the British and Russian armies of occupation are among 100 Germans who will be allowed to remain in Iran. The others are mostly Jews.

New York, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Vichy radio reported today that because of increasing tension between Bulgaria and Soviet Russia, Bulgarian mobilization is going on "in all haste." NBC heard the broadcast.

Another Vichy broadcast, heard by CBS, said a scheduled celebration in Sofia of the first anniversary of the cession of Southern Dobrudja to Bulgaria by Rumania had been postponed. No reason was given.

Ex-Shah's Riches Given to Iran

Son Turns Over Father's Possessions and Frees His Political Prisoners.

SEP 19 1941

Teheran, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Iran's new 21-year-old Shah has decided to cede all the possessions of his fabulously rich father as a gift to the nation, the Government announced today.

The new ruler, European-educated Mohammed Shah Pahlavi, also has prepared a general amnesty decree for all political prisoners of the regime of his abdicated father, it was announced.

The former Shah, Reza Pahlavi, a one-time Cossack cavalryman, reputedly was the richest man in Asia when he gave up his throne this week because he would not play ball with Great Britain and Rusia. The Allies accused him of aiding the Axis.

Money Banked in U. S.

Almost all of Mazanderan province was his private holding, and the revenue from monopolies, hotels, motor transport and many kinds of stores and factories bulged the royal purse. Vast sums were banked in his name in the United States and England.

This great wealth was amassed as he was modernizing the ancient Persian Kingdom, installing modern methods of production and transportation wherever possible.

Seizure of Reza Pahlavi's property was actually decided upon at a secret parliamentary session prior to the taking of the oath yesterday by the new Shah, who promised to rule as a constitutional monarch.

The former Shah's account of 27,000,000 tomans in the National Bank were immediately attached to pay Government salaries. The new Government's program to reduce unnecessary taxation, trim the budget and abolish the corrupt sale of State property to private individuals was approved.

The British legation said it had received authority from London to recognize the new Shah. Moscow's attitude was not immediately clear.

Anglo-Red Trouble Ends.

Meanwhile difficulties attending the Anglo-Russian occupation of Teheran, including the Russians' detention of the Italian Minister, Luigi Petrucci, for several hours, were reported to have been ironed out at a joint staff conference.

Russian troops arrested Petrucci last night and held him until the British legation intervened.

Russian detachments were ordered to withdraw from a machine-gun factory so that a British brigade in the joint occupation—carried out for the announced purpose of hastening Iranian compliance with the peace terms—might bivouack there. The British had to camp in a desert gully seven miles from town last night because the Russians controlled all roads and refused to let their allies pass without Major-Gen. Novikо's direct command.

Members of the British legation and British nationals were unable to reach their homes in suburban Shemrun until the Russian general gave instructions to the highway guards.

R. A. F. SINKS 4 GERMAN SHIPS, HITS 4 OTHERS

2 Minesweepers And 2 Anti-Aircraft Vessels Sent To Bottom

SEP 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Friday, Sept. 19—British bombers and fighter planes sank two German minesweepers and two anti-aircraft ships and damaged four other vessels in the Channel during extended operations yesterday, the British Air Ministry announced tonight.

The ships off the Dutch and Belgian coast were plastered with bombs and raked by aerial cannon and machine-gun fire, the communiques said.

The R. A. F. also reported offensive sweeps over the Continent, destroying sixteen German planes and losing eleven.

In this raid, Flight Lieutenant C. G. Peterson, of Santaquin, Utah, an American Eagle Squadron pilot, was credited with shooting down his second German fighter plane.

Power Station Hit

Hits were scored on a power station at Rouen, France, despite heavy ground fire.

Bombers and fighters combined made the first attack on shipping, the Ministry said. Two anti-aircraft ships were sunk and a supply ship damaged in this foray, it was stated.

Later, bombers damaged a motor ship off the Dutch coast. The final assault was by four fighters which sank two minesweepers with cannon fire, set fire to a third and left a fourth listing heavily.

German Claim

[A German announcement said the R. A. F. lost sixteen planes, including three bombers, in a raid on the coastal zone. Two other bombers were shot down in an attempt to bomb a German ship in the Channel, the announcement said.]

The Air Ministry said the British losses were two bombers and nine fighters. German fighter squadrons were encountered so near the Channel that bursts of cannon fire could be heard on the English coast.

The day's raids followed up night attacks on Karlsruhe and other Rhineland points in which one British plane was lost.

British Resume Day Raids

SEP 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 18—The R. A. F. today resumed daylight battering of the German-held coast of northern France, following up night raids into Germany in which Karlsruhe and other Rhineland points were bombed.

The whine of fighter planes and the roar of bombing planes resounded over the southeast English coast, and dull explosions later across the water told observers that French targets were being bombed again.

Sounds Of Dogfight

Shortly after the first sweep went over, the fighters came streaking back. A long burst of cannon fire from these escort ships indicaated a dogfigure near the shore.

The night attacks were announced by the Air Ministry.

It acknowledged the loss of one plane but said hits were made and fires started in the target area.

Coastal command bombers were said also to have made a night attack on docks at St. Nazaire, French Atlantic coast port used by the Germans as a U-boat base. All these planes returned, the Air Ministry said.

English Coast Bombed

(Only slight damage was caused by night raiders in southwestern Germany, a Berlin announcement said.)

On the home front, German planes dropped bombs at two places on the southeast coast last night and caused some damage and a small number of casualties, the Government said. Other bombs fell in East Anglia, but caused no casualties or damage, it was said.

British Lost 18 Planes Yesterday, Nazis Claim

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP).—The R. A. F.'s daylight operations against Germany yesterday cost the British 18 planes, 15 of which were downed in combat, the German high command reported today. Germany's losses were listed as three planes.

The communique said German airmen heavily damaged a large merchant ship in a low, diving attack off the Faeroe Islands yesterday and bombed harbor works of Southeastern England last night.

R. A. F. Pounds 4 Italian Bases; No Rome Raid

Bengasi, Tripoli, Bardia and Licata, Sicily, Hammered; Reprisal for Cairo Unlikely

CAIRO, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Royal Air Force and aircraft of the Mediterranean fleet dropped a large number of bombs on the Libyan harbors and shipping at Bengasi and Tripoli and bombed stores at Bardia last night, the British Middle East command said today. Munitions factories at Licata, Sicily, were raided by daylight yesterday and several buildings were wrecked, the British said.

Two bombs were dropped on the Alexandria area in an air raid last night, killing three persons and wounding six but causing only slight damage, the Egyptian government announced.

British and South African mechanized forces captured ten German tanks which thrust across the Egyptian border from Axis-held Libya four days ago, the Middle East command reported. It said the cost to the British was one armored car. British patrolling activities are continuing both at besieged Tobruk and in the frontier area, the communique reported.

RAF Bombs Batter Sicily

Rome Admits 10 Dead in Licata Attack

Rome Sept. 18 (AP).—R.A.F. blows on Axis bases in Sicily and North Africa were reported today by the High Command.

The British, it said, bombed Licata, on the Sicilian south coast, and Tripoli and Bengasi, Axis supply ports in Libya. Ten persons were wounded and slight damage was caused at Licata, the communique said, and casualties and damage were inflicted also on the Libyan ports.

The communique also reported the sinking of a hostile ship of 3,000 tons carrying armored cars by an Italian submarine operating in the Mediterranean.

NAZI SEA DRIVE BIG

Press Reports 400,000 Tons Sunk in Ten Days.

Berlin, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The German press gave considerable prominence to German blows at sea. Dienst asserted that U-boats in the North Atlantic sank 30,000 tons of shipping a day during the last ten days and other reports said speedboats in the English Channel sank four ships of 25,000 tons out of a British convoy Tuesday night.

BELIEVES NAZIS ARE USING NEW U-BOAT TACTICS

Briton Sees Subs Now Engaging in "Wolf Pack" Fighting

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 19 (AP)—A theory that the major proportion of Germany's submarine fleet engaged in "wolf pack" maneuvers during July and August preparatory to a coordinated attack on the Icelandic convoy route was advanced today by H. C. Ferraby, prominent naval author.

Most Not at War

In a BBC war commentary Ferraby said these practice tactics would account for subsiding British shipping losses during those months, a period in which most of the submarines "were not at war at all."

A recent Berlin communique referred to sustained convoy attacks continuing for "several days of hard fighting," and Ferraby cited this as evidence that the new tactics of team play now was coming into its own.

Submarine captains during the summer months, he said, were "trying to forget how to play as individualists to learn the new game of fighting as members of a team.

Successive Waves

"Today we find something quite different. There are several days of hard fighting. They are obviously several successive waves of U-boats engaged, one picking up the trail of convoys as a previous wave drops out of the engagement.

"The Hun is quite right. Revolution not only in German submarine practice, but in that of all navies."

Aside from smashing the North Atlantic route via Iceland he said the German hope was to force British ships farther south so that long-range planes based in France also could strike at them.

Everything From Big Bombers To Peanuts In Single Convoy

Huge Variety Of U. S. Products Revealed In Check At British Port—Volume Stepped Up

SEP 19 1941

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Correspondent

A British Port, Sept. 18—A convoy disgorged today on the docks of this port a truly all-American cargo of everything from California warplanes to Georgia peanuts—part of 850,000 tons of supplies which, officials say, are arriving every week in England.

To a Selma (Ala.) boy watching it unload it was like old home week.

"Hey, you guys!" sang out Arch Masterson, of Hollywood, superintendent of plane unloading, "watch that plane!"

Douglas Bombers

The plane was a grease-smeared Douglas attack bomber from Santa Monica, Cal., which the British call a Boston. At least a dozen others were coming off the ship.

"I have been here for three years unloading these babies," said Masterson. "They are beginning to roll now."

Masterson said the R. A. F. gets the planes into the air three days after he unloads them. He can unload two an hour, he said. They already have undergone test flights.

Beans From Idaho

At the next wharf sweating workers were tackling food, wide-eyed and smacking their lips at what passed through their hands.

The first lot consisted of big sacks of beans from Hansen, Idaho.

"Lots o' soup there, mate," grinned a grimy dock worker.

There was a rumble as men rolled off tubs from Chicago stamped "Wisconsin Brand" cheese.

Another ship, its decks packed high, showed full bright brown cartons bearing the label "seedless raisins from Fresno, Cal."

No Chance For A Bite

At the edge of the docks lay a broken bag of Georgia peanuts.

picked one up and got ready to flip it into my mouth.

"Wait!" warned Col. J. J. Llewelly parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of War Transport, "the penalty for looting is death."

I put the goober down.

An electric-driven truck whizzed by packed high with another kind of carton—"citrus fruit from Lake Wales, Florida."

Atop a big pile of boxes a wall-eyed docker rubbed his stomach and smiled. He sat on white pine boxes marked "skinned hams, Chicago."

An Ambulance, Too

Behind a pile of more beans stood a green, United States-made ambulance, "Gift from the people of Milford, Conn."

Grunting dockers were handling bigger boxes at another wharf bearing the stamp "machine tools, Michigan City, Ind."

Big white boxes with blue designs said "aircraft parts, New Haven, Conn."

At still another place, whistling workers lugged fire extinguishers from Brooklyn and dried applies from San Francisco.

Then was encountered the biggest pile of all: "lard from St. Louis" and "canned pork, Chicago."

Big Speedup Reported

A whirlwind tour disclosed boxes of fiber from Wilmington, Del., insulation material from Trenton, N. J., and tank tracks from Chicago.

The Ministry of War Transport said lease-lend cargoes and other imports had been landed at the 850,000-tons weekly rate for the last ten weeks. The Ministry said there had been a big speedup due to a quicker "turn around" of ships.

Nazis Punish Parisians With 3-Day Curfew

All Amusements to Close by 8, Traffic to End at 9; Violators To Be Hostages

VICHY, Sept. 19 (Friday) (AP).—The Germans announced today that new severe restrictions would be applied to the entire population of Paris as reprisals for attacks on German occupation troops.

The German military authorities imposed a strict curfew to extend for three days, beginning Saturday.

Traffic anywhere in the Seine Department (the Paris region) was prohibited from 9 p. m. to 5 a. m. All theaters, restaurants and places of amusement are required to close at 8 p. m. during the same three-day period.

German military police ordered that any violators of regulations be arrested and held as hostages. German Army units were ordered to patrol streets.

An order signed by Colonel General Heinrich von Stuelpnagel, commander of occupation troops, said, "I will no longer allow the lives of German soldiers to be threatened by murderers."

POLICE OF PARIS SEARCHING HOMES

Hidden Weapons Hunted in Working Class District.

Vichy, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The police in the German-occupied zone, particularly in Paris, seached house by house for hidden weapons today in an effort to forestall new attacks on Germans and the broadened reprisals threatened by the occupation authorities.

Pierre Pucheu, French Minister of the Interior, told correspondents last night that he feared further violence would lead the Germans to take the Paris police administration still further into their own hands, possibly shooting many more hostages and imposing a dusk curfew.

After the death yesterday of a German non-commissioned officer wounded Monday, the German military command warned that "an increasing number of hostages" drawn from all classes and creeds would be shot for future attacks. Previous hostages have been described as Jews and communists.

French police activity was most intensive in the Eleventh Arrondissement, Paris Working-class district between the historic Place de la Bastille and the Place de la Republique, where terrorists are supposed to have a secret headquarters.

They announced they had obtained the first real testimony concerning any of the series of assaults on Germans. A woman gave voluntary evidence on the shooting of the soldier who died yesterday, they said.

ALGIERS, Algeria, Sept. 18 (AP).—Two Frenchmen convicted of treason were executed today by a firing squad. They were found guilty by a court martial last May 27.

Disturbers Of Peace Face Death Penalty In Nazi-Held Norway

Oslo, Sept. 18 (AP)—Penalties ranging up to death for acts which "disturb or endanger security, economic life and labor peace" are provided in a decree published in the official Norwegian Gazette today.

Strikes, lockouts, industrial sabotage and agitation and "wanton decrease of work" are included among the list of acts for which severe penalties are provided.

A second decree extends the jurisdiction of the German S. S. or Elite Guards and of the German police throughout Norway.

De Gaulle Sees Revolt

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP)—General Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French, said in a broadcast directed to France tonight that the whole of that land was rising against the Nazi conquerors while "waiting to wreak organized vengeance."

"The enemy and the Vichy traitors," he declared, "are in open conflict with the French people."

18 KILLED BY TRAIN AT CZECH STATION

Berlin, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—A limited train today plowed through a crowd waiting for a local at Brunn, Moravia, and killed eighteen persons and injured many others, DNB the German official news agency, reported. The crowd had gathered on the track reserved for the limited, the agency added.

Swedish Sinkings Laid To Accident

Stockholm, Sept. 18 (AP)—The most generally accepted explanation today of the explosions which cost Sweden three modern destroyers yesterday was the mishandling of a torpedo. Another report in civilian circles said that a boiler explosion aboard the destroyer Goteborg set off the blasts which also destroyed the Klas Horn and Klas Uggla at their anchorage at Harsfjaerden, south of Stockholm.

Official versions of the disaster remained undisclosed.

The death toll, fixed tentatively at thirty-one, was low because many of the crewmen were on leave.

Swedish Ship Blasts Are Laid To Accident

News Agency Says Officials Blame Explosion On Mine Or Torpedo For Destroyer Destruction

New York, Sept. 18 (AP)—The accidental firing of a depth bomb or torpedo aboard the Swedish destroyer Goteborg has been ascribed officially as the origin of fierce blasts which sank that warship and the destroyers Klas Horn and Klas Uggla yesterday, the Swedish-American News Exchange reported here today.

The latest dispatches from Stockholm, it said, reported that the cause of the explosion was not definitely known, but that no hint of sabotage had been uncovered. An investigation is being made under the direction of Admiral Count Carl August Ehrensward, chief of the coastal fleet of the Swedish navy.

NAZI PRISONER PLAYS RACES

London, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—If a man wants to play the horses, it seems there's hardly anything that can stop him—even though he is in a Polish prison camp and his betting agent is in London, with the International Red Cross their sole means of communication.

That was the situation of Gordon Roll, captured by the Germans at Dunkirk, who has been sending requests to betting agent Warwick Thompson for information on the horses.

Mr. Thompson was not inclined to take the communications seriously until Private Roll ordered a $4,000 bet on the Cambridgeshire race. Now Mr. Thompson has arranged to send weekly racing information to the prisoner.

The International Red Cross operates a clearing service enabling prisoners of war to write home and receive replies. It has no responsibility for the contents of letters handled.

BRITAIN STUDIES REPAYING PRICES

Delay in Fixing Lease-Lend Basis Predicted.

London, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Well-informed financial sources predicted today indefinite delay in fixing a basis of prices upon which Britain plans eventually to repay the United States for lease-lend supplies.

They reported that discussion was proceeding on methods of accountancy to be used in fixing the value of the delivered goods, but the difficult nature of the problems encountered is likely to defer a final settlement.

The Financial Times said that "one school of thought maintains that Britain would do best for herself by agreeing to have all goods accounted for at current world controlled commodity price levels rather than wait for the end of the war, thus risking the possibility of higher prices being then prevalent.

"The decision is realized nevertheless to be one for the United States authorities to take rather than for their British counterpart and it is understood that President Roosevelt himself is anxious to play a leading part in determining the broad lines of policy governing the problems concerned."

The paper said that special attention was being given to prices on cotton tonnage due for shipment under the lease-lend act and added that "settlement of all price levels is now to be regarded as a very subsidiary problem to the major basic issues aroused by the scheme."

FIVE FRENCH BOYS PADDLE TO BRITAIN

London, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Five shivering French boys, all just under 20, landed at Eastbourne today, soaking and exhausted from an all-night trip across the English Channel in a twelve-foot canoe to join the Free French forces. They had battled an unfavorable tide after shoving off from the French coast.

BRITAIN PUNISHES WOMAN WHO QUIT

Auxiliary Service Corporal Reduced by Court Martial.

London, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The "smiling corporal" of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, Frances Maud McConchie, 41 years old, the first woman to be court-martialed in this war, was reduced to the ranks today for being absent without leave.

At the court-martial on September 1, it was stated for the prosecution that Corp. McConchie asked leave from the A. T. S., that the group commandant would not release her and that thereupon she said she would walk out. She was missed from the unit on June 1 and was taken in custody at her home on August 2.

The defense argued that any one who quite prior to July 1—when the A. T. S. came under military law—could not be apprehended by a civil power. Hundreds of girls who have walked out of the women's services have been watching the McConchie trial as a possible precedent for action in their own cases.

Vatican Denies War Opinion

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 18—A report published in the United States, but not carried by the Associated Press, that Pope Pius XII had refused a request of President Roosevelt that he declare a war against Naziism justified was denied at Vatican City today.

Osservatore Romano, semi-official Vatican City newspaper, said: "We are authorized to declare that the request was not made and thus the report is devoid of any foundation."

Spain and Manchukuo in Pact

JAPANESE PROTEST SOVIET SEA MINES

SEP 19 1941

Warn Reds Of Danger From Floating Explosives From Vladivostok Area

Assert Russia Has Taken No Adequate Measures To Check Dangers

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Sept. 18—The Japanese Government protested to Russia today over sinking and damage to Japanese vessels which it said was caused by floating Russian mines in the Sea of Japan.

The sea also is traversed by United States tankers en route to Vladivostok with gasoline for Soviet planes. The Japanese note specifically warned of the danger to vessels of either Japan or "third powers."

The announcement said a Korean sailing vessel was sunk September 1 off Nishisuira promontory at the northern edge of Korea by a mine which drifted from fields about Vladivostok during recent storms in that area. Nine Korean fishermen were said to have been lost.

"Most Categorical Protest"

The Foreign Office statement said the Japanese had filed the "most categorical protest" also on the explosion of a mine under a fishing boat September 10 in which four men were said to have been killed.

Japanese authorities in northern Korea were said to have forbidden navigation of waters off that coast at night and to have begun mine-sweeping operations.

The Foreign Office statement said: "Despite repeated Japanese warnings the Soviet Government has taken no adequate measures to meet probable dangers and consequently a dangerous situation actually arose. The Imperial Government has therefore filed the most categorical protest with the Soviet Government in connection with the outbreak of this case and the continued dangerous situation.

Aim To Preserve Peace There

"It is the most ardent desire of the Imperial Government to preserve peace and tranquility in the Japan Sea, hence it is urgently necessary to do away with the danger that vessels of Japan or third powers be destroyed by mines."

The verbal statement also said that since Aug. 25 more than 10 floating mines had been found either in Japanese territorial waters along the eastern shore of Northern Korea or in the open sea in the same neighborhood.

The Japanese have been engaged in mine-sweeping operations ever since the Vladivostok Russia radio warned that navigation in the Japan Sea was dangerous, the statement said.

JAPAN PROTESTS

Complains Russian Mines Sink Fishing Vessels.

Shanghai, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—A Domei report from Tokio said tonight that Japan had protested to Moscow over alleged Russian mines floating in the Japan Sea.

The news agency said Japan charges that such a mine recently was responsible for the sinking of a sixty-ton Japanese fishing vessel with the loss of nine Korean fishermen.

Japan has requested Russia to prevent a recurrence of similar incidents "in the interest of peace and quiet in the Japan Sea as well as to remove any danger to vessels of third countries navigating there."

[United States tankers carrying fuel for Russia traverse the Japan Sea en route to Vladivostok.]

The Domei report said Japanese authorities in northern Korea had forbidden navigation of waters off that coast at night and had begun mine-sweeping operations.

Japanese Hold British Ship

Shanghai, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Japanese army has been holding the British coastal steamer Tintaitzu in the Whangpoo river for the past few days pending an investigation of her cargo of machinery, it was reported today.

It was said the Japanese believed the cargo might be en route to Chungking via Wenchow, a strategic port which the Japanese occupied briefly in April and May and then left. The British, however, said the cargo was consigned to Hongkong.

Foreigners Quit Japan; "Good Riddance," View

Government-Controlled Paper Says Day Of The Alien In The East Is Now Gone

Tokyo, Friday, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Foreign Office-controlled Japan Times and Advertiser, discussing the forthcoming departure next week of numerous foreigners on a British evacuation steamer, said today—in effect—that it was good riddance.

"The day of the foreigner in the East is gone," said the organ, "the day of exploitation of Pacific states by Western governments likewise is nearly finished."

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda, speaking at a banquet in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the "Manchurian incident," said last night that September 18, 1931, was a landmark in world history because it started a chain of events leading to construction of a world "new order" and gave Japan precedence in "new-order" planning.

Mikado Condoles With Roosevelt

Tokio, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The Emperor Hirohito yesterday cabled a message of condolence to President Roosevelt on the death of his mother.

JAPAN TO SAVE USED TEA LEAVES

Tokio, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Japan set out today to salvage used tea leaves for animal fodder. The Agriculture Ministry reported it expected to collect about 30,000,000 pounds annually from hotels, stores, Government offices and banks. Women's organizations and school children will conduct the campaign.

Seeks Report On Arrest Of Chileans In German

Santiago Asks Its Envoy In Berlin To Ascertain If Action Was Reprisal

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 18 (AP)—Chile asked its ambassador in Berlin today for a quick report on the arrest of several Chileans in Germany in what the press termed reprisal for Chilean arrest of some 30 Nazi leaders of the military Landsgruppe organization.

The reason given for the Berlin arrests was "suspicion of activities hostile to the Reich." Foreign Minister Juan Rossetti indicated Chile would term the arrests an unfriendly act, if they were found officially to be a reprisal.

NAZIS SEIZE CHILEANS

Accuse Them of Hostile Acts Against the Reich.

Berlin, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Several Chileans have been arrested in Germany on suspicion of engaging in activities hostile to the Reich, authoritative sources announced today.

"We regret being compelled to take such measures," one informant asserted, "but reasons of State make them imperative. We are in war and it is essential to eliminate all elements intriguing against us."

Disclosure of the arrests was made in connection with a query concerning twenty-seven Germans taken into custody in Chile. Authorized sources, blaming "the foreign situation," accused Chile of acting frivolously.

Nevertheless Adolf Hitler cabled the President of Chile congratulations on the occasion of Chilean Independence Day, which is today.

Thirteen Germans, ten alleged chiefs of Nazi groups and three officials of German business houses, were held for investigation at Santiago, Chile, last Thursday night. One of them, Otto Zippelius, was a former instructor of the Chilean Army.

Tokyo, Sept. 18-(AP)-The Japanese Home Ministry announced tonight that five Filipinos, 17 East Indians and three Japanese had been fined for dealing on black exchange markets through Shanghai.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP)—The German High Command communiqué from the Fuehrer's Headquarters said today:

In the Ukraine, offensive operations east of the Dnieper are progressing irresistibly.

In fighting around the fortifications of Leningrad, great successes were achieved.

Sections of one infantry division alone stormed 119 pillboxes.

In waters off Crimea, off the island of Oesel, on Lake Ladoga, in the Volkhov Estuary and in the White Sea, the Luftwaffe sank three transports totaling 3,000 tons and hit sixteen other ships so severely they may be presumed lost.

In addition, a destroyer, two submarines and four speed boats were destroyed.

German speed boats attacked an enemy convoy protected by destroyers and guard boats off the British coast yesterday and sank four enemy merchant ships of together 25,000 tons. After successful combat with British destroyers, all speed boats returned undamaged.

A large merchant ship was heavily damaged in a low-diving attack by German sea reconnaissance planes off the Faeroe Islands. German bombers bombed harbor works of Southeast England last night.

During attempts by British aircraft to attack occupied regions of the Channel by daylight yesterday the British Air Force lost eighteen machines, fifteen of which were shot down in air combats, while three were brought down by anti-aircraft guns. Three German aircraft are missing.

A small number of British bomber planes carried out harassing raids on Southwest Germany last night.

British

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 19 (AP)—The British Air Ministry last night issued this communiqué:

Late this afternoon four aircraft of the Fighter Command attacked four enemy minesweepers off the Belgian coast. All the ships were raked with cannon and machine-gun fire.

Two were sunk, another set on fire, and a fourth left holed and listing heavily.

None of these aircraft are missing.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP)—An Air Ministry communiqué said today:

Last night aircraft of the Coastal Command bombed docks at St. Nazaire. None of these aircraft are missing.

Aircraft of the Bomber Command last night again attacked objectives at Karlsruhe. Bombs were seen to burst on the target area and fires started. One of our aircraft is missing.

An aircraft of the Coastal Command on patrol off the Norwegian coast yesterday bombed an enemy supply vessel. It has been confirmed another enemy fighter was destroyed in yesterday's operations over Northern France and the Channel, making a total of twelve enemy fighters destroyed during the day.

The Air Ministry issued the following communiqué tonight:

Aircraft of the Fighter and Bomber Commands carried out a number of offensive operations today.

This morning Blenheims of the Bomber Command, escorted by fighters, attacked a large enemy supply ship off the Belgian coast. The ship, which was strongly escorted by anti-aircraft vessels and screened by fighters, was damaged and two of the anti-aircraft ships were sunk.

This afternoon other Blenheim aircraft, also escorted by fighters, attacked two motor vessels off the Dutch coast and damaged one of them.

Another force of Blenheim aircraft with fighter escort attacked a power station near Rouen. The attack was pressed home in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire, and bombs were seen to fall on the target.

A strong formation of the Fighter Command carried out an offensive sweep over the Channel and Northern France this afternoon.

In these operations sixteen enemy aircraft were destroyed by our fighters. Our losses were two bombers and nine fighters, but the pilots of two of our fighters are safe.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries said today:

A few enemy aircraft came inland over this country during the night.

Bombs were dropped at two places on the southeast coast, causing a small number of casualties and some damage. A few bombs were dropped in East Anglia, but no casualties or damage were reported.

30.24— 11917

Headquarters communiqué said today:

Libya: Our patrolling activities both at Tobruk and in the frontier area are continuing.

During their engagements with enemy columns which crossed the frontier on Sept. 14 British and South African mechanized units captured ten German tanks for the loss of one armored car.

The R. A. F. Middle East Command issued the following supplementary communiqué late today:

Harbors and shipping at Tripoli and Bengazi were attacked by heavy bombers of the R. A. F. and aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm during the night of Sept. 16-17.

Results of the bombing were obscured by a low cloud, but pilots of aircraft over Bengazi saw that one tanker at Juliana Mole, which had been hit by heavy bombers on the previous night, was still ablaze.

At Tripoli a large number of bombs fell in the target area. Dumps of stores at Bardia were raided and large fires resulted from the bombing.

Munition factories at Licata in Sicily were raided in daylight yesterday by bombers of the R. A. F. Two sheds in the north factory were hit. One exploded and the other collapsed.

Large buildings in the center of the south factory were demolished and one big shed was repeatedly hit. Clouds of smoke, visible many miles from the target, rose into the air after the attack.

In Ethiopia R. A. F. bombers attacked enemy positions to the northeast of Azozo. Bombs burst among trenches and buildings.

From all these operations none of our aircraft is missing.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Italian High Command communiqué said today:

In Cyrenaica, on the Tobruk front, attacks by enemy elements were repulsed. German aircraft bombed the stronghold, scoring direct hits on motor cars and hutments.

Also, on the night of Sept. 16-17, Tripoli and Bengazi were raided by enemy aircraft. There were some casualties and slight damage. The population of these two towns, persistently subjected to enemy raids, showed a calm and strong attitude.

In various sectors of the Gondar zone [in Ethiopia] there was activity on the part of advanced Italian elements and artillery. Enemy aircraft raided Italian positions at Uolchefit. One enemy aircraft was shot down.

Enemy planes bombed and machine-gunned Licata, in the province of Agrigento, Sicily, yesterday. There were ten wounded and slight damage.

An Italian merchant ship sailing in the Mediterranean brought down an enemy aircraft.

Roosevelt Asks Six Billion For New Lend-Lease Fund

President Urges Money be Available Until June 30, 1943; New 'Outboard Motor' Ships Adopted as Answer to Subs

SEP 19 1941

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—Congressional leaders tonight predicted prompt action on a new Presidential request for lend-lease money, calling for an additional $5,985,000,000 to buy war equipment for Great Britain, China, and other nations "whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States."

Mr. Roosevelt's request asked that the fund be kept available until June 30, 1943.

At the same time, a new element entered into the principal problem of the lend-lease program—that of delivering the supplies despite the German U-boat campaign. The Navy announced the development of a new type of ship which it said might answer the challenge of Hitler's sea war.

The new vessels are small—carrying 1,500 tons of cargo—driven by a combination of several gasoline engines, with a huge propeller deep in the water amidships. They can be built in two months time, it was said, so speedily that they promise to offset, or more than offset, losses at sea.

President Roosevelt asked for the new lend-lease money, which would run the total of such appropriations to $12,985,000,000, in a letter to Speaker Rayburn. He said the funds were needed to prevent any "interruption in the flow of aid to those countries whose defense is vital to our own."

An accompanying draft of legislation made the stipulation that none of the funds should be paid to any person who "advocates, or belongs to an organization which advocates, the overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence." All those receiving payments from the appropriation would be required to make an affidavit that they were not so involved.

A letter from the Budget Bureau was attached which said that of the total amount $1,875,000,000 was for "agricultural, industrial, and other commodities and articles." The sum of $1,190,000,000 was for ordnance and ordnance stores, including armor and ammunition, and $685,000,000 was for planes, plane engines, parts and accessories.

With Allied sources abroad calling for a "Niagara" of supplies to Russia, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed that financial assistance to that country began a month ago with a Treasury advance of $10,000,000, against a prospective shipment of an equivalent quantity of gold from the Soviet Union.

The Russian ambassador, Constantine Oumansky, informed the government that the gold would be shipped within 90 days, but the Soviet Government needed the money immediately to pay American manufacturers for goods already ordered.

Approved by Hull

The $10,000,000 payment was approved by the State Department. Russia does not receive assistance under the lend-lease act. Yesterday, Secretary of Commerce Jones, the federal loan administrator, announced that an RFC subsidiary was buying $100,000,000 worth of minerals from Russia, for which payment in part would be made in advance.

In requesting the lend-lease appropriation, Mr. Roosevelt noted that of $7,000,000,000 already provided, a total of $6,280,000,000 had been allocated.

The legislative draft, which was suggested, would empower the President to authorize contracts with foreign governments under which this country would supply them with defense articles, information or services, with the foreign governments footing the bill.

It also stipulated that if the President considered any defense article to be exported under the act essential to the safety of the United States, he could retain it here rather than deliver it to another country.

$385,000,000 for Tanks

In addition to the three principal items, the Budget Bureau breakdown included:

$385,000,000 for tanks, armored cars, and other automotive equipment.

$850,000,000 for vessels of various kinds with their equipment and supplies.

$155,000,000 for miscellaneous military and naval equipment.

$375,000,000 for facilities and equipment for manufacturing defense articles, including the acquisition of land.

$175,000,000 for testing or repairing defense items for other countries, including damaged warships.

$285,000,000 for necessary services and expenses.

$10,000,000 for administrative expenses.

New Ships Please Navy

The Navy was obviously delighted with the new type of cargo ship. The first of its kind, named the Sea Otter, has already been launched at Orange, Texas. Authorities said the new vessels could be built by the hundreds in much less time than ordinary freighters, constructed inland and run down to the sea via rivers or canals. They would provide "a new bridge from this country to the free nations of the world," the Navy asserted.

The announcement said:

"The real revolution in design was wrought in the application of power. A means has been discovered of driving a six-foot propeller, not on the stern of the ship, but sunk into the water amidships. No less than 16 gasoline engines, such as are used in propelling motor boats, drive the vertical shaft much after the manner of the outboard motor. The engines are 110 horsepower, six cylinders, developing a total of 1,700 brake horsepower. • • •

"Using many yards, there is no reason why the tonnage produced could not offset the tonnage lost at sea."

Craft to Be Armed

It is proposed to arm the craft with anti-aircraft guns, but some officials believe that its flat, low deck and abnormally small superstructure will afford the principal protection—a low silhouette difficult to sight from hostile surface vessels or airplanes.

Credit for the design went to Weaver Inc., of Orange, Tex. The first full-sized "Sea Otter" was built by the Livingston Shipbuilding Company of Orange.

The propulsion mechanism is an innovation for sea-going freighters. The propeller can be hoisted up and replaced at sea.

Only a small crew is required. At 12 knots the 270-foot ship has a range of 7,000 nautical miles. It displaces 1,900 tons when fully loaded.

Quantity production will start along the Gulf of Mexico, on the Mississippi, and on other inland waterways by a company called Ships, Inc., the Navy said, once results are tabulated from oceon-going tests of the only "Sea Otter" so far launched. The tests will start next week.

Ships, Inc., will build the facilities for producing Sea Otters, as well as the 270-foot craft themselves. The board of directors of the new company will be composed of Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox; Rear Admiral Emory Land, Maritime Commission Chairman; J. W. Powell, special assistant to Knox; a member to be nominated by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and E. B. Germain, who will be president and general manager. Germain is president of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation, and a former officer of Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. The number of the ships to be built has not been decided.

A "sea otter" can be turned out in two months, the Navy estimated, adding that "there is no reason why the tonnage produced could not offset tonnage lost at sea."

New "Sea Otters" Will Be Most Radical Cargo Ships

Mass Production of Vessels Is Believed to Be Answer to War Losses at Sea

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—Development of a small, radically designed cargo ship called a "sea otter"—believed by President Roosevelt to be the answer to Atlantic freighter losses—and plans for its mass production with lend-lease funds were announced today by the Navy.

President's Lend-Lease Letter

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's lend-lease letter to Speaker Rayburn, together with the text of the budget director's letter on the same subject:

I have transmitted to the Congress the second report of operations under the lend-lease act. This report indicates the increasing amount of material aid we are rendering to the democracies.

Of the $7,000,000,000 appropriated six months ago, aid in the amount of $6,280,000,000 is now moving through the successive stages of allocation, obligation, production and delivery.

Additional funds are now needed in order that there be no interruption in the flow of aid to those countries whose defense is vital to our own.

I am, therefore, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation in the amount of $5,985,000,000, details of which are set forth in the accompanying letter from the Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

I recommend its speedy enactment.

Respectfully,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The Budget Director's Letter

The letter of the budget director, Harold E. Smith, dated Sept. 13, reads:

I have the honor to submit for your consideration a supplemental estimate of appropriation to carry out the provisions of the act entitled "an act to promote the defense of the United States," approved March 11, 1941, in the amount of $5,985,000,000, as follows:

DEFENSE AID

To enable the President, through such departments or agencies of the government as he may designate, further to carry out the provisions of an act to promote the defense of the United States, approved March 11, 1941, and for each and every purpose incident to or necessary therefor, there are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, in addition to the sums appropriated by the "Defense Aid Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1941," the following sums for the following respective purposes, namely:

(a) For the procurement, by manufacture or otherwise, of defense articles, information and services, for the government of any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States, and the disposition thereof, including all necessary expenses in connection therewith, as follows:

(1) Ordnance and ordnance stores, supplies, spare parts and materials, including armor and ammunition and components thereof $1,190,000,000
(2) Aircraft and aeronautical material, including engines, spare parts and accessories.$685,000,000
(3) Tanks, armored cars, automobiles, trucks and other automotive vehicles, spare parts and accessories $385,000,000
(4) Vessels, ships, boats and other water-craft, including the hire or other temporary use thereof, and equipeage, supplies, materials, spare parts and accessories $850,000,000
(5) Miscellaneous military and naval equipment, supplies and materials $155,000,000
(6) Facilities and equipment for the manufacture, production or operation of defense articles and for otherwise carrying out the purposes of the act of March 11, 1941, including the acquisition of land and the maintenance and operation of such facilities and equipment.....$375,000,000
(7) Agricultural, industrial and other commodities and articles $1,875,000,000

(B) For testing, inspecting, proving, repairing, outfitting, reconditioning or otherwise placing in good working order any defense articles for the government of any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States, including services and expenses in connection therewith $175,000,000

(C) For necessary services and expenses for carrying out the purposes of the act of March 11, 1941, not specified or included in the foregoing..$285,000,000

(D) For administrative expenses, $10,000,000

(E) In all to remain available until June 30, 1943..$5,985,000,000

(f) Each of the foregoing appropriations shall be additional to and consolidated with the appropriation for the same purpose contained in Sections 1 (a), 1 (b), 1 (d) and 1 (e), respectively, of the "Defense Aid Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1941": Provided that, with the exception of the appropriation for administrative expenses, not to exceed 20 per centum of any such consolidated appropriations, may be transferred by the President to any other of such consolidated appropriations, but no such consolidated appropriation shall be increased more than 30 per centum thereby.

Power Given to President.

Sec. 2. The President may, from time to time, when he deems it in the interest of national defense, authorize the head of any department or agency of the government to enter into contracts for the procurement of defense articles, information or services for the government of any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States, to the extent that such government agrees to pay the United States for such defense articles, information or services prior to the receipt thereof and to make such payments from time to time as the President may require to protect the interests of the United States, and upon payment of the full cost the President may dispose of such articles, information or services to such government.

Sec. 3. Any defense article procured pursuant to this act shall be retained by or transferred to and for the use of such department or agency of the United States as the President may determine, in lieu of being disposed of to a foreign government, whenever in the judgment of the President the defense of the United States will be best served thereby.

Section 4. No part of any appropriation contained in this act shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: provided, that for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: provided further, that any person who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation in this act shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more that one year, or both: provided further, that the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law.

Section 5. This act may be cited as "Title II of the Defense Aid Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1941."

I recommend that the estimate be transmitted to Congress.

Very respectfully,
HAROLD D. SMITH,
Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

NAVY ESCORTS CONVOYS AND HUNTS RAIDER

SEP 19 1941

Fleet's Guns Await Axis Attempt to Sink War Cargoes in Atlantic.

SHOOTING PUT UP TO GERMANY

Pacific Scoured Near Galapagos for Nazi Craft—U. S. to Tell World if Ship Is Captured.

Washington, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—With convoys plowing the Atlantic and a grim raider hunt on in the Pacific, the United States Navy let actions do the talking back today to repeated Axis threats of dire consequences.

When Germany believed there was a possibility of convoys months ago, no less a person than Grand Admiral Erich Raeder openly warned the United States that the Reich would consider such a step an open war act and that the German Navy would use its guns if necessary against American warships on such duty.

But all uncertainty on the question of American convoys was dissipated late yesterday when Secretary of the Navy Knox disclosed that the Atlantic fleet was using all methods, convoys included, to safeguard British-bound lease-lend cargoes in the 2,000 miles of the North Atlantic that are regarded as defensive waters.

The navy chief thought it unwise and indiscreet to go into further details, and he declined to answer a question as to whether the American escorts were turning over the protected cargoes to the Royal Navy somewhere off Iceland for the final 800-mile voyage to port.

Raider in Pacific.

At the same time, however, Secretary Knox revealed that the navy believed an Axis surface raider was operating near the Galapagos Islands in the South Pacific, and, while the fact had not been positively established, the hunt was on.

"We'll tell the world about it," Secretary Knox promised if any raider was caught.

The twin disclosures give official notice that no half-way measures were being employed to enforce the policy which President Roosevelt enunciated in his speech a week ago, when he barred defensive waters to Axis raiders and ordered the navy to protect all shipping in those areas.

"The sole responsibility rests with Germany," Mr. Roosevelt asserted then. "There will be no shooting unless Germany continues to seek it."

As far as words went, the announcement of convoys appeared to join one issue squarely, for Admiral Raeder already has placed himself on record that lease-lend cargoes would be attacked, regardless of the nationality of their escorts.

Regarded As War Act.

"Since the nature of the cargoes of convoyed ships, according to American admissions, was established from the very beginning as contraband," he declared May 25, "resort to this type of convoy system would not be a neutral convoy in the sense of international law or American treaties, but an open war act and a bare, unprovoked attack.

"German naval forces would therefore be justified in taking measures against these contraband carriers, according to the law of sea warfare and would, by exercise of these rights, have to repulse by arms if necessary any hindrance, even against American warships."

Admiral Raeder summed up by saying that convoys mean shooting and attributed authorship of that phrase to President Roosevelt.

Press records of the day the expression first appeared attribute it not to Mr. Roosevelt but to an unnamed high authority here, who said that the administration view was that convoys might result in shooting and that shooting was close to war.

Flare-up Is Expected.

The announcement that convoys and all other means of protection were now in use was expected to kick up a furor of some duration in Congress, where the subject already has caused much acrimonious debate.

When the lease-lend bill was under consideration, there were repeated attempts to write in a no-convoy prohibition, but administration forces defeated them all. As a concession, however, a proviso was inserted that "nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize or to permit the authorization of convoying vessels by naval vessels of the United States." Administration supporters pointed out at the time that this provision in no way circumscribed the power which the President held under the constitution as commander-in-chief of the navy.

Secretary Knox and other Cabinet officers who appeared before congressional committees while the bill was pending counseled against a no-convoy amendment. They said that, while no plans for convoys existed then, the international situation was subject to rapid changes and such a prohibition might tie the Government's hands in an emergency that required immediate action. They also contended the ban would greatly weaken the administration's hand in world affairs.

ICKES STANDS FIRM ON GAS MEASURES

Declines To Heed Senate Group, Says Rations And Curfew Will Continue

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 18—Declining to heed the recommendation of a Senate committee that gasoline restrictions in the East be lifted, Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior and Defense Petroleum Coordinator, declared today such action would be "stupid."

He said the rationing of motor fuel to service stations and the 7 P. M.-7 A. M. station curfew would continue.

"To take off all the restrictions now and yell, 'Come and get it,'" he said—"that would be stupid."

Back From Vacation

Ickes, just back from a month's vacation in the West, stated the position of the petroleum office at his first press conference here since the committee, headed by Senator Maloney (Dem., Conn.), reported there was no petroleum shortage in the East, that "unnecessary alarm was created" and that "we believe that present restrictions should be lifted."

The committee said the only shortage it found was one of surplus storage."

SEP 19 1941

Up to Time"

Ickes said he had no comment on the committee's conclusions except to say that "the whole thing is in the lap of time and time will tell the story."

However, he framed this question:

"When you say there's a shortage in storage, you say there's a shortage, don't you?"

To emphasize his contention that an emergency existed he cited reports of the American Petroleum Institute showing that for the week ended September 13 gasoline stocks on the Atlantic Seaboard dropped 565,000 barrels, making a total decline of 1,023,000 barrels for a week period compared with a drop of only 160,000 barrels during the corresponding weeks of last year.

Demand Up, He Says

East Coast gasoline stocks, he said, now are about 2,700,000 barrels, or 12.5 per cent. less than they were at this date in 1940, while demand is about eleven per cent. higher than last year.

"Those are the facts," Ickes commented. "I'll let the facts speak for themselves."

Criticizes Oil Industry For Silence on Shortage

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 18 (AP)—Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum co-ordinator for national defense, criticized the oil industry today for remaining silent during the recent disputes over gasoline shortage in Eastern States.

He made his criticism, in friendly fashion, before 300 oil men at the National Petroleum Association's annual convention.

"A little more vocal participation and a little less profound silence would go a long way toward enlisting public support and dissipating distrust and suspicion," Davies told the oil men.

Davies declared the need for a new oil pipe line from East Texas to the Eastern Seaboard was considered urgent and that petroleum co-ordinator Ickes' office had worked night and day on plans for the project.

Before Davies spoke the oil men adopted a resolution pledging co-operation with Ickes' policies.

Davies Sees Shortage Of Oil This Winter

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP) — Lack of a reserve supply of oil tankers will cause a deficiency in the Northeastern oil supply this winter, Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum co-ordinator, said today.

He declared in a letter to Senator Walsh (D.-Mass.) that all tankers available for the Gulf-New England ports service are being used to capacity now.

SEP 19 1941

Remarking that usually a reserve fleet was brought into service during the winter to meet increased fuel oil demands, Davies said these needs could be met only by drawing on reserve supplies unless additional transportation was supplied.

Despite a Senate committee's finding that there was no impending shortage, Davies contended that inadequate reserves had been set aside for this winter.

The present tanker fleet, he added, was "not capable of meeting the increased winter demand for oil, nor of laying up a reserve supply during the summer to be drawn upon in the winter."

Replying to Walsh's contention the 12-hour curfew on gasoline stations had resulted only in increased volume of sales even above those of the 24-hour operations, Davies said "it is not expected, however, that this will continue to be the case."

Discussing winter consumption of petroleum products, Davies asserted that in Atlantic Coast states it was 25 per cent greater between October and April than in the spring and summer.

Tanker loadings for Massachusetts alone increased in the winter of 1940 from 28 to 55, Davies reported, but he said that this year the domestic fleet has been operated at capacity and "we have no reserve tied up fleet to meet the peak demand for the coming winter."

WOULD SPEED PRICE CONTROL LEGISLATION

SEP 19 1941

Rep. Kopplemann Declares "Disastrous Inflation" Is Likely in U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP) — A demand that the House committee considering price control legislation act immediately before the country faces "the disastrous inflation of the World War" was made today by Rep. Kopplemann (D-Conn.).

Fears Racketeering

"Unless curbs are put into effect through legislation there will be racketeering on the part of merchants," he said.

As an example he said a friend had attempted to obtain gasoline from a service station after closing hours in order to visit a sick sister.

"The operator whispered that he knew where he could get five gallons for $2.50. My friend had to pay 50 cents a gallon for gasoline," Kopplemann said.

In Connecticut, Kopplemann said, there was evidence of prosperity due to defense work "but complaints are increasing that people are barely able to make ends meet due to increased food, clothing and rent costs."

Kopplemann, a member of the Banking and Currency Committee which has been studying price control for six weeks, declared that prices "have risen so in food, clothing, rents and furniture that we will be confronted by additional demands for wage increases. Wage increases so far granted," he continued, "are far below the extent to which prices on every day items have risen."

Asserting that during the World War the purchasing power of the dollar declined to 48 cents, he told Chairman Steagall (D-Ala.) of the committee that efforts to obtain voluntary co-operation in price control had failed.

Kopplemann suggested that the committee conclude its hearings tomorrow and report out legislation for House action.

MID-WEST CALLED VITAL FOOD AREA

Wickard Terms It Key Region In Campaign For War Supplies

[By the Associated Press]

Chicago, Sept. 18—Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, declared today the mid-West was the pivotal point in the campaign to grow more food for America and the enemies of the Axis.

In a discussion of 1942 food quotas with 400 agricultural agents from twelve central States, Wickard said he knew "the people here in my home territory will answer the challenge."

He spoke after President Roosevelt had asked Congress for $1,875,000,000 in lend-lease funds for agricultural, industrial and other commodities. Wickard said he understood a billion dollars was earmarked for food supplies.

Richest Under Sun

The challenge to grow more food applies first to the upper Mississippi Valley, he said, because "here we have the land—richest under the sun, and farmers who have the know-how."

"No other group of farming people on earth," he said, "can match our skill and efficiency in turning out live-stock products."

He explained the crucial responsibility of the mid-West thus:

Milk and meat are the two chief shortages under the lend-lease program. Since there was no time for large increases in the number of dairy cows, chickens and pigs, the Government program called for greater milk production from existing cows, more eggs from hens, and better fattening of hogs.

400 Agents Attend

The upper Mississippi Valley, he said, has the greatest number of animals on hand and the richest crop of feed.

The 400 State and county agricultural agents at the meeting here will talk over production goals with Wickard, then go home to canvass every farmer in each county.

With the aid of State agricultural colleges, farmers will be shown how they can make more money by increasing the products needed under the defense program.

Next year's production goal of two per cent. over the year's all-time record was calculated, Wickard said, to meet an increased demand for nourishment in defense industries, to supply a quarter of Britain's food needs and to begin piling up food stocks to feed European nations after the war.

Skipper of Illustrious Bitten by Pet Goat

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—A ship's mascot has inflicted the first injury on Capt. Lord Louis Montbatten, who has been through numerous sea engagements and survived the sinking of two British warships under his command.

Speaking to members of the Overseas Press Club yesterday, the cousin of King George VI, here to take command of the damaged aircraft carrier Illustrious, said a friend presented him with a goat for mascot of the Illustrious and the animal bit him.

U.S. PRODUCTION HAILED BY BRITON

SEP 19 1941

Lord Mountbatten Asserts Output of Defense Material Will Tip War's Scales

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 18 (AP)—With the Germans slowed down by the Russian effort, the present world conflict has resolved into a war of production in which America's vast and rapidly increasing output of defense materials must tip the scales, Capt. Lord Louis Mountbatten, a cousin of King George VI, told Myron B. Gordon, vice-president of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation today.

The captain is commander of the British aircraft carrier Illustrious, which is being recommissioned at Norfolk, Va., after being severely damaged by a Nazi airplane attack in the Mediterranean.

While on an inspection of the Wright and Curtiss-Wright plants today, he said he was greatly impressed by the rate of production that could be attained in plants which were free from fear of air raid alarms and bombing attacks. He said, "This is the real thing, this is going straight forward."

The captain has been on active duty for the past 21 months and his only knowledge of American production was what he learned through reading, he said. However, after actual contact with "the real thing" he realized it is on a more vast and gigantic scale than he ever dreamed.

1941

Gordon said the British officer told him trips such as the one he made today gave him greatly increased confidence in what the United States is doing to aid the Allies.

He also told Gordon he noticed that the American defense workers kept hard at it whether or not their supervisors were present.

Boost in War Risk Rates Considered Due to Raider

American Underwriters Fear More Losses On Pacific Ships

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Depredations of a German raider in the Pacific raised the question in New York marine insurance circles today of whether war risk insurance rates would be boosted.

American underwriters, it was learned, lost about $2,000,000 when the Kota Nopan, a Dutch vessel, was sunk recently while carrying a cargo to the United States from the Netherlands East Indies.

All ships moving eastward across the Pacific are heavily laden with shipments of tin, rubber, hemp and other vital defense materials. These, all destined for American importers and the United States Government, are insured against war risks by American underwriters.

Insurance men say they are afraid the raider sank at least two other ships headed for the United States from the Far East.

There have been no changes in war risk rates since the first of the year. Cargoes on United States ships coming from the Far East by way of Panama Canal are charged 50 cents for each $100 value and exports from the United States to the Far East by the same route are assessed 75 cents on each $100 value.

Thus far, despite apparently increasing dangers in the Red Sea, as evidenced by the bombing of an American ship in those waters, the war risk rate to Suez has not been changed from the established 4 per cent of the value of cargoes carried in United States vessels.

U. S. AIR POWER AND FLIERS ARE HIGHLY PRAISED

SEP 19 1941

New Orleans, Sept. 18. (AP)—Two high ranking U. S. air officials expressed the belief in an interview today that this nation's air power is great enough to withstand any assault.

They were Robert A. Lovett, assistant secretary of war for air, and Major General Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, who arrived here yesterday after an inspection trip of art facilities in the vital Louisiana-Texas maneuver area.

Both refused to be quoted directly on the United States' air power, but were emphatic in the belief that it was so strong this nation need not submit to any other nation, that its equipment is as good as any in the world and that its personnel is superb.

They limited their quotable observations to the air facilities in the area where the Second and Third Armies are maneuvering against each other with every modern weapon.

General Arnold, who was taught to fly by aviation's pioneers, Orville and Wilbur Wright, said planes and pilots performed in a highly satisfactory manner in the maneuvers.

"Our boys are new, untried fliers," he asserted. "Some of them have been out of flying school only about three months. They're being turned loose on equipment as good as any in the world, and they're making good, even when, as we have observed in the past week, many of the airports they are using for bases are flooded by heavy rains."

Lovett, a naval aviator in the World War, said air activity in the maneuver area presented "a very fine picture."

SEP 19 1941

"Our boys are doing a fine job under difficult and adverse conditions," he declared, and concurred with General Arnold that "they have materials as good as any in the world and the men themselves are superb."

Lovett also praised the growing quantity of American planes and asserted one squadron of combat planes was being delivered to the country's air forces every other day.

U.S. Forming First Unit of Air Infantry

Huge Planes to Carry Battalion of 500 Men, With 'Jeeps,' Cannons

Army Extends Use Of Guard Officers

To Give Them Posts With Regulars and Send West Pointers to State Troops

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Plans for organization of the Army's first air-borne infantry battalion, which will be equipped with small automobiles, motorcycles and bicycles, were announced today by the War Department after months of experimental work.

The new battalion will be organized at Fort Benning, Ga., on Oct. 10 with an initial strength of 500 volunteers, including fifty from Fort Bragg, N. C., and 450 from Camps Croft, S. C., and Wheeler, Ga.

These men, however, will not use parachutes but will be transported in huge twenty-eight-man cargo planes which will unload them after landing. Such an operation, according to practices highly developed by the German Army, usually takes place after a suitable landing area has been captured by parachute troops.

SEP 19 1941

Two Rifle Companies

The battalion will include two rifle companies, one heavy weapons company and a headquarters company.

Their armament will include .50-caliber machine guns, 60-millimeter guns and 81-millimeter mortars. One rifle company will have quarter-ton "jeep" cars, while forty men will use bicycles and 140 motorcycles.

Commander of the battalion will be Lieutenant Colonel Elbridge G. Chapman jr., now on duty in the tactical department of the infantry school at Fort Benning. He is a native of Colorado.

In announcing the new air-borne infantry battalion the department said that qualifications for the 500 volunteers in it would be generally the same as for parachute troops.

Disclosure of the plans came at a press conference held by Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, at which it also was announced that hereafter National Guard officers may be assigned to non-National Guard units whenever it is desirable.

No Draft for Released Guards

This step was regarded as one of the most far-reaching yet taken toward merging National Guard organizations completely into the broader structure of the Army. It also means that regular and reserve officers will be assigned to command Guard troops. The department said that Guard officers no longer would be promoted without regard to the length of service prior to promotion.

Another announced change affecting the Guard was that Guard-enlisted men returned home in keeping with the Army's intention of releasing as many men as possible in the next few months would be carried on the rosters of their state detachments so that they would not become subject to the draft even though of draft age.

The War Department also announced a change in policy for officer-candidate schools whereby 650 of the 2,600 enlisted men who will take the three-month courses beginning in October will be selectees with four months' service, coming from replacement training centers where they have been held as instructors.

Of the remaining 1,950 officer candidates half will be selectees and the other half will be members of the regular Army and National Guard.

Still another change in officer training policy was reduction of the maximum age from thirty-seven years to twenty-nine years for men taken from the service at large, except that this reduction does not apply to selectees already inducted nor to regular Army and National Guard members who entered service subsequent to Aug. 27, 1940. It was also provided that men who complete officer training but desire not to undertake a year's commissioned duty may receive certificates of capacity instead of commissions, so that they will complete their Army service quickly as enlisted men.

ARMY STRENGTH NOW 1,597,810

Washington, Sept. 18 (A. P.). The United States Army was estimated today to total 1,597,810 officers and enlisted men. Reporting this figure, the War Department said that it included 710,000 selectees, 535,510 regulars, 278,300 National Guard officers and men and 74,300 reserve officers.

33 Sue Spanish Ship For Return Of Fares

Also Ask $20,000 Damages Each For Being Given Unbearable Accommodations

New York, Sept. 18 (AP)—Suit filed in Brooklyn Federal Court today against the Spanish freighter Navemar by 33 of 700 passengers, who arrived last Friday on the ship asked for refund of fares, ranging from $375 to $605, plus $20,000 each in damages, for a total of $676,500 in indemnities.

Their petition said that the ship with normal accommodations for twenty-eight passengers, was unbearably jammed and unsanitary, although they were assured adequate and sanitary conditions when they purchased passage at Marseille.

The Navemar left Europe with more than 1,000 persons aboard. Some disembarked at the Azores and Havana.

British To Get Italian Ship Under Lease-Lend

Passenger-Cargo Vessel Leme First Foreign Vessel Taken Over To Be Used by English

SEP 19 1941

Washington, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Italian ship, Leme, a combination passenger-cargo vessel of 8,059 gross tons, shortly will be turned over to the British under the Lend-Lease Act, it was reported today.

It would be the first of the laid-up foreign vessels requisitioned by this country to go to the British.

So far, the Maritime Commission has requisitioned approximately 60 foreign vessels. All of them which have been placed in service fly the United States or Panama flag.

The Leme was taken over by the commission July 25 at Portland, Ore. Commission officials said today that the vessel now is being repaired, but that it had not yet been formally allocated.

Honolulu Jans Sell Defense Saving Stamps

New York, Sept. 18 (AP)—This bit of news arrived today by courtesy of the National Retail Dry Goods Association:

"In Honolulu, Hawaii, interest in 'Retailers for Defense' week is so widespread and enthusiastic that Japanese and Chinese merchants are actively participating in the sale of defense saving stamps."

The Japanese Chamber of Commerce of Honolulu, said the N. R. D. G. A., lined up 1,000 Japanese firms to aid in selling the United States defense stamps.

NORTH DAKOTA MAN NEW LEGION HEAD

Lynn U. Stambaugh Named National Commander In Three-Cornered Race

51-Year-Old Lawyer Accepts "Order" Of Convention To Make America "Secure"

[By the Associated Press]

Milwaukee, Sept. 18—The American Legion today elected Lynn U. Stambaugh, of Fargo, N. D., national commander in the closing session of its twenty-third national convention, in which the delegates took a strong stand for national defense and the President's foreign policies.

Stambaugh, 51-year-old lawyer, who entered the army as a private in the Three Hundred and Thirty-eighth Field Artillery in the World War and was commissioned a second lieutenant while serving overseas, succeeded Milo J. Warner, of Toledo.

Not To Falter

He was elected in a three-cornered race with Edward N. Scheiberling of Albany, N. Y., and Raymond Fields of Guthrie, Okla. He so outdistanced the field that his victory was assured before the roll call was completed so at the request of his opponents the count was halted and Stambaugh's election was declared unanimous.

"You have proclaimed that in the greatest needs during the months to come you do not propose to falter, that your purpose is to carry on to the end that your America and all that it means shall be secure," Stambaugh told the convention in taking office.

"It is your will, Legionnaires, that in the crisis which confronts America, the American Legion shall take its place in the battle lines forming.

"I have your orders and I take my call."

Before proceeding to the election, the delegates reiterated the organization's previously stated opposition to Communism, Facism and Naziism.

Defense Is Highlight

Defense highlighted the convention. The delegates pledged support to the United States Government, President Roosevelt, and the War and Navy Departments. They called for repeal of the American Neutrality Act and abolition of the restrictions on use of American troops outside of the country's boundaries.

They stated the defeat of Adolf Hitler "and all that he stands for" was of prime importance and that "all diverting controversies should be subordinated to the main objective." They asked for national unity in carrying forward the defense program.

But today they refused to go on record as recommending legislation for conscription of capital, labor, industry and property as well as fighting manpower during time of national emergency or war.

Seen As Fascism

Such a program would set up a Fascist form of government, one delegate told the convention in objecting to the proposition.

Instead of the convention legislative committee's recommendation, the delegates adopted a substitute resolution stating in part:

"The full defense of America and its institutions should be the primary objective of an united American people; that our national defense effort should proceed without discrimination in employment, to the end that all citizens may avail themselves of their opportunity to contribute to and support our all-out defense effort.

Common Sacrifice

"We reaffirm the principle of universal service as applicable equally to the armed forces, capital and labor and we call upon those elements of capital and labor who have been parties to delay, disturbance and strikes in essential industries to examine their responsibility to the nation in the light of the common sacrifice which all have to make."

The substitute also asked Congress to practice a "sacrificing economy in non-defense expenditures" and declared that if necessity exists to peg prices "the price and cost of labor should be covered in the same legislation which may cover the cost of food products, manufactured goods, or other essentials."

The Legion will meet next year in New Orleans. Detroit and San Francisco entered bids for the 1943 session.

Mrs. Mark W. Murrill, of Scituate, Mass., was elected national president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Wage Boost Defended

Speaking at the morning session, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared that the men fighting the battle of production for national defense were entitled to wage increases to maintain the American standard of living.

Green said labor in the United States could pass off insults from enemy sources abroad, but was deeply hurt by "unjustified criticisms directed against it, either through malice or ignorance, by Americans."

SEP 19 1941

World War Veterans

"Many thousands of American Federation of Labor members served in the nation's armed forces during the World War," he said. "I know a great many of them are now members of the American Legion. Today many more thousands of our younger members, or the sons or brothers of members, are again serving their country.

"Yet we hear labor attacked because it seeks wage increases while our soldiers and sailors are getting just a few dollars a month. It seems obvious to me that rapidly rising living costs justify pay increases. And the very fact that members of workers' families have been called away to serve in the nation's armed forces makes it necessary for the remaining wage earners to get more to keep their families from want."

INQUIRY VEERS TO FILM SALES

Senator Clark Says He Will Uncover Finances.

Washington, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Chairman Clark, Democrat, of Idaho, announced today that the special Senate investigation of alleged war propaganda in the movies and on the radio would shift its attention next week to asserted monopoly within the multi-million dollar film industry.

The Senator said he hoped to develop the entire financial and economic standpoint of the movie industry by questioning a series of top-ranking executives, beginning with Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Mr. Schenck had been ordered to appear before the Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee today, but Senator Clark delayed hearings until next week at request of members of the committee. He said Mr. Schenck would appear Tuesday.

The chairman said he would question Mr. Schenck about methods of distributing and booking recent war pictures in an attempt to learn if independent theater operators and exhibitors were forced to show them.

Meanwhile, Mr. Clark scoffed at suggestions that the sub-committee might lack authority to continue its inquiry and he also struck back at a statement of Wendell Willkie, counsel for the film industry, that asserted war propaganda films portrayed only the truth.

SEP 19 1941

Truth No Defense

"The truth is no answer to this," Senator Clark contended. "Murder and rape probably are committed every day in this country. We don't want them portrayed in our films even though they might be the facts and the truth."

Mr. Clark said that recent blood purges in Russia and similar brutal events in other nations might have been the truth, but should not be forced upon the theater-going public in what he called "an effort to develop a mass hate."

Suggestions as to questionable authority for expending Senate funds on the inquiry came from Chairman Lucas, Democrat, of Illinois, of the Senate Audit and Control Committee, which operates the purse-strings on Senate expenditures and funds.

He pointed out that the sub-committee inquiry was merely on a resolution by Senators Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, and Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, asking a Senate investigation on asserted war propaganda and monopoly. The Illinois Senator said a question of expenditures was being studied, although he denied any attempt to shut off or halt the inquiry.

"We have all the powers of any committee of Congress to conduct hearings and call witnesses," Senator Clark told reporters. "We certainly can't pass upon this resolution without some facts and a record of some Blames Roosevelt.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 18 (A. P.).—If the United States enters a shooting war in Europe, "that war must always be referred to by historians as 'President Roosevelt's war,'" say Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota.

The single-vote margin by which the House approved the bill to extend selectees' service eighteen months represented "an alarming state of affairs" to interventionists, Mr. Nye told a Citizens No-War Committee rally last night.

"I never dreamed that there could come into American thinking such a complete transition as has occurred in the last twelve or eighteen months," Senator Nye observed, attributing this shift to "propaganda by newspaper and radio columnists, by moving picture producers and the President himself."

BACKS PRESIDENT

Dirksen, Republican, Makes Appeal to House.

Washington, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Representative Dirksen, Republican, of Illinois, a frequent critic of the administration, appealed to the House today for unified support of President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

The President, Mr. Dirksen said in a speech, "has announced a policy of patroling and clearing the waters which are deemed necessary to our defense and for the maintenance of freedom of the seas" and to "disavow or oppose that policy now could only weaken the President's position, impair our prestige and imperil the nation."

He called for a "moratorium on hate;" for "fair, candid and temperate criticism of every mistake which hinders national defense;" for "commendation for the President and the Secretary of State in their cautious and delicate handling of the problem of the Pacific; for the necessary funds, supplies and authority to make effective the policy of aid to Britain, and for abandonment of partisanship in efforts to keep the United EStates out of war."

Sees Treaty Remote

"Peace by agreement seems remote," Dirksen said in a discussion of what lies ahead for the world. "Exhaustion will come to the embattled nations but nobody knows when . . . There remains, therefore, a continuation of armed effort and the ultimate defeat of one party of the conflict. America has plumped for victory."

Axis defeat, he asserted, can be accomplished either by throwing the massed productive might of the Nation into the balance or by undertaking "the experience of 1917 and sending our manpower."

The American people, he concluded, "want rational and national defense. They want unfriendly forces and potential enemies kept away from this hemisphere. They want to see the Axis powers defeated. They want American soldiers kept at home."

LINDBERGH SPEECH UNDER SCRUTINY

America First Committee To Issue Statement Soon On Flyer's Des Moines Talk

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP)—R. Douglas Stuart, Jr., national director of the America First Committee, announced today that the organization's national committee would issue a statement within a few days on Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's controversial Des Moines speech.

"The * * * committee met in Chicago today to discuss plans for an intensified campaign in answer to the President's threat of undeclared war in violation of the Constitution," Stuart said in a statement.

"Colonel Lindbergh's Des Moines address was discussed and the national committee will issue a statement within a few days."

The national committee is the policy making body of the America First group. Colonel Lindbergh is a member of it, but a spokesman for the committee said he did not attend today's meeting, which was an executive session.

(In his address, Lindbergh accused the Roosevelt administration, the Jews, and the British of pushing this country toward war.)

Senate Probe Urged

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 18 (AP)—The grand domain of New Jersey, Knights of Pythias, today suggested that the United States Senate investigate Charles A. Lindbergh.

Two hundred delegates representing 7,000 members in 85 New Jersey lodges of the order adopted a resolution containing the suggestion, and instructed that it be sent to President Roosevelt.

They suggested "that a Senatorial investigation into Charles A. Lindbergh's activities be caused, and that punishment be meted out as the Senate may deem fit."

Charge Isolationist Leader Seeks to Intimidate Opponents

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP) — The American Jewish Committee and the Jewish Labor Committee, denouncing Charles A. Lindbergh's Des Moines speech, asserted tonight in a joint statement that "our interests and those of our country are one and indivisible."

"Impugns Patriotism"

Declaring that Lindbergh "made an unsupported and unsupportable charge impugning the patriotism of Americans of Jewish faith," the statement said:

"As individuals, each one of us has a right to his views, whether for or against isolationism, without fear that Mr. Lindbergh can intimidate any of us with the low and baseless charge that there are other 'interests' which we place ahead of loyalty to our country.

"In fact, Mr. Lindbergh, in order to secure converts for his own point of view, counsels that we should do just that. He warns Jews to support his policy on the ground that any other attitude would lead to anti-Semitism.

"We are obliged to Mr. Lindbergh for his gratuitous advice and reject completely his un-American appeal to selfish interest. We will not put even what he considers our 'interests' before those of our country—since our interests and those of our country are one and indivisible."

Wheeler Says President Strives to Get U. S. in War

By the Associated Press.

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 18.—Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana said last night that President Roosevelt's recent shooting orders to the Navy indicates he is "doing everything humanly possible" to get this country into the European War.

Senator Wheeler added that the shooting order tended to confirm rumors that Prime Minister Churchill told the President during their recent sea conference that England would have to make peace unless the United States came into the war with its Navy within 60 days.

Montana's senior Senator in an interview said he is now convinced the people of the United States "must read the London newspapers" to find out what the (Roosevelt) administration is going to do about the war.

Texas House Opposes Lindbergh Visit to State

Legislator Favors Sending Him to 'Own People' in Germany

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 18 (AP).—A resolution informing Charles A. Lindbergh that any purpose he has in opposing President Roosevelt's policies will not be served by visiting Texas was passed today by the Texas House of Representatives. Mr. Lindbergh was reported to be planning a series of speeches in Texas.

The resolution, passed by voice vote, recorded the House's opposition to recent utterances of Mr. Lindbergh.

"Lindbergh ought to be shipped back to Germany to live with his own people," shouted Representative Tom W. Deen, Floydada farmer, in one of the speeches preceding passage of the resolution.

"I think it is time this house should say to Charles A. Lindbergh that we do not appreciate his presence here," said Representative Roger Q. Evans, a World War veteran, of Denison.

Representative J. K. Hileman, of Atlanta, a teacher, said he disagreed with the isolationist declarations of Mr. Lindbergh but defended his right "to say what he wants to say."

Isolationists Assail Churchill, Roosevelt

Cincinnati, Sept. 18 (AP)—An America First rally heard assertions tonight that "two men in a boat" had "inflicted a fraud" on their peoples, and that "millions of Americans" regarded British Prime Minister Winston Churchill as a greater menace to the peace of this country than Adolf Hitler.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Rep., N. D.) made the first charge and the Rev. John A. O'Brien, of Notre Dame University, the other in prepared speeches.

Senator Nye, referring to the recent meeting at sea of the President and Churchill, asserted that "these 'two men in a boat have inflicted upon the peoples of their countries, and particularly ours, barefaced frauds, when they undertake to make us believe that our successfully fighting the European war is going to bring freedom of the seas.

O'Brien Speaks For Iciah

". . . It is not freedom of the seas that England wants. What England wants is what she has had for so long, namely sovereignty of the seas, domination of the seas by Great Britain."

Asserting that President Roosevelt was giving "the hard-earned money of American taxpayers by the bushel basket to the British" while the Irish "could not even buy suitable arms to defend their democracy," Dr. O'Brien asked:

"Do you know, Mr. President, that millions of Americans are coming to regard Mr. Winston Churchill and his Canadian spokesman, Mr. Mackenzie King (Premier), as greater menaces to the peace of America and to the lives of American boys than Adolf Hitler or Benito Mussolini?"

"The encouraging fact is "that despite the inflammatory speech of the President, trying to make a mountain out of a molehill for the express purpose of arousing the clamor for war, the people remain calm and unexcited. They are as opposed as before to involvement in the stupid, brutal strife now devouring the peoples and the civilization of Europe."

U. S. WILL MAINTAIN LIBERTIES, HE SAYS

SEP 19 1941

Biddle Asserts They Will Prevail Despite Severity Of Any Crisis

But He Tells California Bar Government Will Deal Firmly With Saboteurs

[By the Associated Press]

Yosemite, Cal., Sept. 18—Francis Biddle, Attorney General, said today he had no doubt the United States Government would maintain "our essential (Constitutional) liberties" regardless of the severity of the crisis through which the nation may have to pass.

He stated, however, it would deal "firmly yet fairly with those miserable saboteurs who make a mask of the very liberties they are seeking to destroy.

"No Liberty Absolute"

"It is, of course, axiomatic," Biddle said in an address before the California Bar Association, "that no liberty can be absolute. Some things permissible in ordinary times cannot be safely tolerated in a time of grave peril."

He recalled that the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, in a case arising during World War days, said:

"When a nation is at war many things that might be said in time of peace are such a hindrance to its effort that their utterance will not be endured so long as men fight, and no court could regard them as protected by any Constitutional right."

Recalls Another Case

At the same time Biddle recalled that Holmes in another such case said, "We do not lose our right to condemn either measures or men because the country is at war."

Biddle referred to a World War-time report of Attorney General Thomas W. Gregory that the Justice Department then was operating on the principle that the "constitutional right of free speech, free assembly and petition exist in wartimes as in peacetimes and that the right of discussion of governmental policy and the right of political agitation are most fundamental rights in a democracy."

Cites "Precedents"

"Whatever contempt we may feel for the misguided malcontents who assert liberties only to destroy them, we need have no fear that Government founded upon the processes and principles of our common law will cease to be just because the emergency compels it to be strong," Biddle added.

He cited a long list of historical occurrences which he said constituted precedents for the Congressional granting of emergency powers to the President.

He also pointed out the Constitutional provisions which make the President commander in chief of the armed forces, and said there were various legal grounds for regarding the President as the voice of the nation in international affairs.

Says All Were Prepared

"Traditionally," he continued, "every President of the United States, from the first to the present, has been prepared to use his Constitutional powers when the nation or its citizens were endangered in circumstances requiring prompt and vigorous action.

"There have been differences of opinion with respect to action taken, both before and after the event; but over the years the wisdom of the framers of our organic law has been repeatedly confirmed.

"If you were to press me for a distillation of principle from the full harvest of our national experience, I would suggest that the magnitude of the threatened disaster is the measure of the President's power and duty to take steps necessary to avert it."

Spy Defendants Sought Gas, Plane Information From Qualified Sources

New York, Sept. 18.—(AP.)—The Government introduced into evidence today a letter asking the Chemical Warfare Division of the War Department for information of their devices and concluding, "We are citizens and would not allow anything confidential to get out of our hands."

The signature was Frederick J. Duquesne, whom the Government has characterized as a spy for 40 years and arch-conspirator among 16 men being tried in Brooklyn Federal Court for espionage conspiracy.

The letter was written on the letterhead of the Securities Service Company, operated by Duquesne, and asked for available pamphlets because "We are interested in the possible financing of a chemical warfare device which may or may not be original. We wish to investigate."

Harry Thorell, 22, of Bridgeport, Conn., testified that Edmund Heine, one of the defendants ordered about 50 pictures of the latest type military plane in May, 1940.

Thorell, now an aerial photographer with the Army General Headquarters Air Corps at Westover Field, Mass., said that Heine came to his photographers shop in Bridgeport in response to an advertisement offering the pictures at 10 cents apiece.

"He gave me $5 for 50 or 60 photographs of the latest military type planes," Thorell said.

Modern Planes

A letter written by Heine to Thorell and introduced into the trial record, said in part: "I am only interested in modern planes now in use, under construction or planned to be produced."

He asked Thorell to state on the back of each picture the manufacturer of both body and engine, armament, and other details, including the city of each plane's manufacture.

U. S. Atty. Harold M. Kennedy introduced into evidence several pictures and papers bearing a green-stamped cat as signature. William G. Sebold, American counterespionage agent, testified that this was the signature of Duquesne.

The cat was stamped upon a War Department basic field manual, on hand grenades and a picture of a model speed boat, which FBI agents said they found in Duquesne's apartment at the time of his arrest.

jail or in forced residence.

Regulations Stricter

Henry Muller, immigration worker of the Unitarian Churches Service Committee, said that because of stricter regulations and the additional expense of attempting to leave Europe by way of Portugal, Lisbon was losing its importance as an escape vent and most refugees were now leaving from Spain.

He arrived today on the San Miguel, of the Flomarcy Line, from Lisbon, where he has been for the last seven months.

"The Portuguese government allows refugees a certain time in which to arrange visas and passage elsewhere," Muller said, "but if they cannot do so, they are first put under forced residence, in a small town near Lisbon. Later, they are placed in jail.

"There are about 200 in jail, and about the same number in forced residence. Their fate is a problem, for many of them are finding it impossible to go to any other country, and some of them have been in jail for months."

The Army withheld details of the machine, including its probable range.

R.A.F. Trains U.S. Pilots For Ferry to Cut Salaries

Will Halt System Paying Up to $40,000 a Year

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 18 (AP).—Purported resentment over high salary guaranties was said today to have led the Royal Air Force to take over training of American pilots for the British Atlantic ferry service.

Reliable informants added the near-by Eagle Nest Flight Center, previously used by Atfero for such training, would be utilized by the Army Air Corps. Atfero is a Canadian corporation formed to recruit civilian pilots to ferry American-made bombers overseas.

Under the original Atfero contract with the Eagle Nest Flight Center it was possible for pilots to earn $25,000 to $40,000 a year under a system of bonuses and pilot salaries of $1,500 a trip.

With the R. A. F. taking over the ferry service—a private subsidiary of Canadian National Railways—it was understood the salary guaranties now would comprise two trips a month at $500 a trip, with no bonus provisions.

The flight center was established some months ago by Transcontinental and Western Airlines, Inc., with War Department approval.

It graduated its first class of advanced pilots—all with thousands of hours of commercial flying—early in August. They went into the British ferry service immediately.

Flying Torpedo Tested, Army Interest Aroused

SEP 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vallejo, Cal., Sept. 18—Army officials expressed keen interest today in a strange-looking, radio-controlled aerial torpedo developed by a Mare Island Navy Yard engineer.

They watched his experiments with a six-foot working model in a field near Vallejo and recommended that he continue tests and make a complete report. Such a torpedo could open up a totally new branch of aerial warfare.

30,000-Foot Ceiling

The winged torpedo, which operates on a gyroscope principle, is designed to fly at an altitude of 30,000 feet. Carrying a load of bombs, it would be set at the sending point to power dive at terrific speed into a designated enemy target, spraying bombs over a wide area.

John Hodgdon, former professor of engineering with the United States Insular Service, developed the torpedo at his home after experiments which he said began thirty years ago. He said he was one of the inventors of wing flaps which aid in decreasing an airplane's landing speed.

Unusually Large Tail

His working model, with a six-foot body, has a wingspread of eight feet and an unusually large tail assembly, some six feet across. The ship is powered with three gasoline motors.

While the torpedo might not prove critically accurate on long-distance flights, it would be highly effective in bombing large objectives, Hodgdon said.

U. S. SEIZES 3 SHIPS TIED UP BY WALKOUT

Move Follows Rejection Of Ultimatum On War-Bonus Arbitration

Union Later Says It Is Willing To Submit Issue "On Conditions"

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 18—The Seafarers' International Union (AFL), whose refusal to submit to arbitration its war-bonus dispute with the Alcoa Steamship Company resulted today in the seizure of three Alcoa ships by the Federal Government, announced tonight it was willing to allow arbitration "on certain conditions."

The conditions, Leonard Tir, union spokesman, said, are that the arbitrators take into account the union's proposal to the Alcoa lines that the company apply a $60-a-month top war bonus to seamen employed on vessels plying the West Indies.

Would Include Indies

Tir said his offer would not hold good unless Harper Lewis, president of Alcoa, included the West Indies in "the war zone," as are Canadian waters where Alcoa seamen now receive $1 daily as a war bonus.

The union's statement at 9:30 P. M. came five hours after the United States Maritime Commission requisitioned three Alcoa freighters at Weehawken, N. J., in the first such action taken by the Federal Government because of a maritime labor dispute.

Notices Are Posted

Capt. Granville Conway, commission manager of the North Atlantic district, posted notices to that effect on the Alcoa Banner, the Alcoa Trader and the Alcoa Scout.

The union spokesman said the recommendation to allow arbitration had been submitted to a vote in Atlantic and Gulf port locals and that the first return—from Mobile—was overwhelmingly for acceptance.

The Sailors' Union of the Pacific (AFL), which yesterday voted to join the East Coast seamen in a walkout, also was said by its business manager, Morris Weisberger, to be ready and willing to meet with all nes and with the Government to discuss arbitration, mediation or anything else."

2 Loaded With Supplies

Two of the siezed ships were loaded with supplies for an American offshore base.

Conway said he did not know when the ships would sail, but added, "I hope it will be soon."

The Government could operate the ships with Government crews if the union refused to supply the men. The commission could draw officers and seamen from the Government's training schools and the army and navy transport services, maritime sources said.

SEP 19 1941

Pickets Patrol Dock

Conway said he had no knowledge of details of operation or personnel proposed to man the ships and declined to release the text of the notices posted.

Six representatives of the Maritime Commission boarded the ships and started to make an inventory.

Four pickets continued to patrol the dock during the proceedings.

Calls Move 'Reasonable'

Mr. Lewis said he thought the requisitioning was a "reasonable move inasmuch as the commission made every effort to make a settlement before taking this action."

Lewis said he believed the requisitioning to be the forerunner of action on fifty-five ships owned or operated by Alcoa.

The Government acted after Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, commission chairman, delivered an ultimatum directing that the war-bonus dispute be submitted to arbitration by noon today. The union rejected the ultimatum after a morning conference with Alcoa officials.

Further Action Likely

Conway indicated further action might be expected with regard to eleven other ships tied up by the strike, which began Saturday.

The Government was understood to consider the three vessels to be vital to the movement of lease-lend supplies to American bases along the Atlantic and in the shipment of bauxite ore, for aluminum manufacture, from Caribbean ports to the United States.

John Hawk, union secretary-treasurer, had said earlier that "it doesn't make any difference how many ships are eventually tied up—we're going to win and get our war bonuses."

"If and when the Maritime Commission requisitions those boats," he said, "we'll take a general strike vote up and down the coast."

Union Proposal Rejected

The union rejected the Government proposal to arbitrate after Hawk and officials of the Alcoa line, against which the strike was launched last Saturday, met at Weehawken.

Hawk said the line rejected the union's proposal for more than $60 a month war bonus and insurance for voyages to war zones as well as an extension of the war zones to cover West Indies ports.

Strike Spreads

During the day the strike spread to three more ships in New York harbor, making a total of fourteen ships. Of the original eleven, six were in New York, and the remainder in Boston, New Orleans and Mobile.

The vessels affected today were the Minnesota and Oklahoman, freighters of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, and the Sea Thrush, of the Shepard Steamship Line.

Many of the ships have been in service between the United States and Government bases in the West Indies, transporting workmen and defense materials.

Departure Delayed

The Alcoa line delayed departure of the liner Evangeline for Trinidad, set for 4 P. M. today. She had booked 406 passengers, many of them engineers, technicians and workmen en route to the Government's offshore defense bases in St. Thomas, St. Lucia, Antigua, Trinidad and British Guiana.

The union announced after the Weehawken conference that it had stated its position to Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the conciliation service of the Department of Labor, as follows:

"The union takes the position that the agreement signed July 8 with the South Atlantic, Seas Shipping, Waterman and Calmar Steamship companies was broken by these companies, and we have so informed the companies and the Maritime Commission.

Not Inclined To Submit

"Under these circumstances, the union does not feel inclined to submit the matter to arbitration."

[The union announced July 8 that it would furnish crews for three ships then tied up in New York if the owners would agree to discuss the war-bonus question with Washington officials. The union had refused to furnish crews for the ships as a result of the sinking of the American freighter Robin Moor, unless guaranteed additional war bonus.]

Weisberger said he expected that nine more ships would be tied up in New York harbor before the end of the week.

SEP 19 1941

Demands of Union

In announcing the strike today of crews of three ships under its jurisdiction, Weisberger said the union demanded a $300 boost per trip for each seaman on vessels entering the Suez Canal, $100 for Red Sea ports and $58 for West African ports.

The Seafarers' Union is demanding $60 a month bonus for seamen on Alcoa vessels which ply the West In-lies trade on the ground that area is in the war zone.

Says Pay Demand Equals $2,150 For Red Sea Trip

San Francisco, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Pacific American Shipowners' Association asked Government arbitration today of its dispute with the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, which it said had presented demands for war bonuses that would raise a sailor's pay to $2,519 for a round trip from New York to the Red Sea.

J. B. Bryan, association president, telegraphed Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, that the sailors' union had struck the freighters Oklahoman, Minnesotan and Sea Thrush in New York to enforce its demands.

"You already are aware," Bryan telegraphed, "that our vessels affected by this strike action are loaded with supplies destined for British interests in and about the Red Sea."

MacKenzie's Views On War Today

SEP 19 1941

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

Secretary of the Navy Knox's announcement that American warships are to be used in convoying our merchantmen should cause little surprise, inasmuch as there is no other way in which the safety of cargo boats can be ensured.

That is the corollary to President Roosevelt's order that shipping be protected in our defensive waters. If that order is to be enforced there is no alternative to the employment of strong naval escorts, well bolstered with the fast, tough destroyers which make a special business of dealing with submarines. Either you convoy your ships or many of them will be sunk.

The situation is emphasized by the statement today from Dienst Aus Deutschland, authoritative German commentary, that U-boats have sunk 30,000 tons of shipping daily for the last ten days in the North Atlantic. There is no confirmation of this claim, but we do know that there has been a steady loss of British ships. Less than four months ago, on May 27, President Roosevelt summed the position up thus grimly:

"The blunt truth of this seems to be this—and I reveal this with the full knowledge of the British Government: the present rate of Nazi sinkings of merchant ships is more than three times as high as the capacity of British shipyards to replace them; it is more than twice the combined British and American output of merchant ships today."

If two and two make four, then a continuation of such a loss must mean that American aid would lie rotting at the bottom of the sea, and that the Allies would meet defeat. Lack of sufficient British warships to protect shipping has been a major cause of these heavy losses. A somewhat similar situation in the World War almost brought disaster to the Allies, and it was the inauguration of strong American naval convoys which had much to do with saving the day.

Will there be shooting between our convoys and Nazi raiders? Of course there will, for it must be expected that U-boats will invade our North Atlantic route to Iceland.

However, it remains to be seen whether Herr Hitler will force the issue far enough to bring on war, or whether he will try to avoid it by devoting most of his efforts to British territorial waters. Many observers hold that the latter course would be the logical one, but it must be admitted that logic not infrequently blows up in one's face in war time.

There has been a distinct slowing down of the U-boat campaign for some weeks now, but we can be sure that this is only a temporary respite. Hitler hasn't been employing anything like the total fleet he is generally believed to possess.

There are two excellent reasons for this. One is that he needs U-boats for operations against the Russian Navy in the Baltic, and the other is that he is getting set for possible operations against the Bolshevists in the Black Sea and has been shipping light submarines across country to Rumanian and Bulgarian ports.

However, the time will come when the Fuehrer will be ready to unleash his pack again in the Atlantic—and it is likely to be a formidable one. As long ago as last February he was reported to have 600 submarines ready for action. Germany has lost some since then, but must have far more than replaced her losses, since she has been turning out these craft by mass production. The number of Italian submarines available is a matter of guess work, but it isn't large. The Vichy Government also has under-water boats—if Herr Hitler can get them. He is doing his best.

By the way:

A notable development of the day is the Russian move in ordering all male civilians between the ages of 16 and 50 to undergo military training, beginning the first of next month. One can only interpret that as indicating that the Reds have no present intention of bowing to adversity but are getting set to carry the war on through the Winter. The Soviet's male population is estimated at more than double that of the Reich.

Nazi Tieups Throughout South America Indicated

Despite Incidents, General Connection Among Fifth Columns Is Hard to Trace

No. 1

By John Lear

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 17 (The Special News Service) — When the Argentine committee investigating subversive activities seized a German short-wave radio transmitter, a coded message was found hidden in the box in which the transmitter was packed.

Translated by Committee

The committee translated it as follows:

"La Paz if unable to stay in Lima. Follow instructions for ambassadors' conference in Santiago to the letter."

* * *

Last March the German diplomatic chiefs in Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Peru and Uruguay held a conference in Santiago, Chile. The meeting was more or less accidental, the five men declared, because they were all on vacation and had gone to Santiago because it is one of South America's vacation spots.

None of the five has said publicly what they discussed, but one of the five, Edmond von Thermann, German ambassador to Argentina who has just been invited to go back home, had just returned from Berlin.

While the minister to Uruguay was attending the meeting, the German press attache in Buenos Aires, Gottfried Sandstede, took over his job as charge d'affaires in Montevideo. Six months later Sandstede fled from Argentina by airplane to escape questioning by the Argentine Chamber of Deputies committee investigating un-Argentine activities.

Transmitter Seized

In July, the committee seized, aboard a commercial plane, the radio transmitter being carried from the German legation in Lima to the German embassy in Buenos Aires under what the German government termed "diplomatic immunity."

The man who carried the radio slept beside it for four nights on airport floors in two Peruvian cities rather than let anyone else handle it even for a few hours.

In La Paz, Bolivia, that month, the German minister to Bolivia, Ernst Wendler, left his post on demand of the Bolivian government after it announced discovery of a letter addressed to Wendler, signed by a Bolivian army officer, Elias Belmont, who was stationed in Berlin discussing a conspiracy to overthrow Bolivia's president.

Now Von Thermann is under a vote of censure of the Argentine Congress and possessor of an invitation to leave; and the German colonies in each of the nations in which the four other men who conferred at Santiago are stationed, are under scrutiny, in one way or another, by the nations in which they live.

General Tie-up Seen

These incidents which have come to light—dated within less than a year—are accepted by many informed quarters as evidence of a tie between Nazi fifth columns in South America.

How many and how strong such fifth columns are depends, in a way, on the definition of a fifth column.

South American definitions range from armed bodies of men and soldiers plotting revolt, to welfare societies, operators of secret radios, scientists mapping strategic rivers and near-by sources of war materials, and wild natives with oil drums hidden in their jungle swamps.

South America has something to fit each of these definitions.

It is difficult to trace a connection between such widely differing affairs.

But here is what persistent investigators have learned to date:

Argentina—The committee found an "almost military" organization of 60,000 men, formed into "cells" under the guise of welfare work, sworn to support Hitler, watched to make sure of their loyalty, punished for lapses, taxed to maintain a system which feeds children Nazi doctrine through fairy tales.

Ambassador von Thermann is accused of collecting money from Berlin through Uruguay, Chile and Peru, distributing it all over Latin America. A definite relationship between Nazis in Argentina and Chile, the Argentine committee declared, was established by membership cards in German societies in Argentina carrying Chilean addresses.

Chile—Across the border from the places where those cards were discovered, Chilean government agents reported caches of guns and ammunition, and battle practices complete with machine guns under direction of a uniformed, army-like organization of 25,000 men wearing swastikas on their coat lapels. Maps seized there indicated the organization controlled air fields and radio stations on islands along the coast and in the southern lake region which afford the easiest entrance to Argentina.

Move to Keep Order

Without saying where they got their information, the investigators declared: "Observers in Argentina and Uruguay discovered a putsch being prepared in our country to coincide with an expected invasion of the British Isles." The reserve maintained over the source of this tip was reminiscent of the lack of explanation for sudden steps to maintain order when Bolivia ejected the German minister, Wendler.

SEP 19 1941

Bolivia—While Chile was putting a careful thumb on her Nazis, Bolivia was arresting the son of her ambassador to Chile. No explanation has been offered for his continued detention. An inquiry into anti-Bolivian activities is continuing. Details of a reported revolt plot have not been given to Congress, but focal points have been named as oil fields — from which the Germans once wanted to run pipelines to the Atlantic Coast.

Brazil—German agitation has been quieter as the result of laws against foreign language schools and centralized control of communications. The heavily concentrated German population has been deemed less dangerous since President Vargas declared himself for the United States and his son-in-law quit a job with the Italian Lati airline which crosses the South Atlantic.

Peru—Peru halted activities of the German-subsidized, so-called news agency, Transocean, and grounded a German airline after Congress voted to protest an unauthorized flight over the Ecuadorian border which precipitated a new outbreak in the border war.

Ecuador—President Arroyo del Rio closed Ecuador's German-owned airline which carried army officers free and sought permission to fly to the lonely Galapagos Islands south of the Panama Canal.

Colombia—Has nationalized the German airline after it was found to be mapping approaches to the Panama Canal. Later President Santos broke up a military plot, seized a group of "scientists" exploring the southeast flatlands which are believed to be rich in undeveloped oil and are called a hot-bed of propaganda brought surreptitiously upstream from Brazil.

The government announced an investigation of reported Nazi air bases on the Caribbean coast mentioned by President Roosevelt in a recent speech. In the hills dividing Colombia and Venezuela, Editor Arturo Reguerros Peralta was shot to death just before he was due to testify in Washington in the United States investigation of the Transocean agency.

Started in Uruguay

Uruguay—The Transocean investigation in Washington really started in Uruguay, where South America's first decisive Nazi inquiry last year disclosed a bomb depot, broke up a cellular organization and put eight Nazi leaders in jail. More recently a pro-Nazi deputy was ejected from Congress.

SEP 19 1941

Uruguay—Decreed death for fifth columnists a week after the Bolivian putsch was smashed. Paraguay decreed a curfew a short time later, then lifted it without explaining "student strikes" and "labor troubles."

Venezuela—German technicians have long since been rooted out of strategic oil fields, but a Nazi agent was seized a few weeks ago on oil fields which specialized in aviation fuel. Secret radios still broadcast anti-Yankee talk.

Organization of Nazi Units In South America Revealed

Action to Oust Agents in Argentina Shows Change in Policy Toward U. S.

By John Lear

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 18 (The Special News Service)—Hitler's representative in Argentina, South America's most influential nation, has been invited to go home.

Feeling Changed

That is the No. 1 sign as to how South America feels today about Nazism.

The Argentine Chamber of Deputies this week adopted by a vote of 79 to 1 a resolution censuring Ambassador Edmond von Thermann "for overstepping the functions of his office." It also requested the Government to deport leaders of German organizations engaged in Nazi activities.

This action of the Argentine Chamber, which followed accusations against Nazi activities by the Argentine committee investigating subversive activities, had significance not only in Argentina but also in neighboring nations which traditionally look to Buenos Aires for guidance.

The Argentine Chamber resolution also strengthened indications that a change has been taking place recently in Argentina, which for years followed a policy of counteracting the major political moves of the United States, on the grounds of prestige and self-defense.

Cites "Blackmail"

What the Argentine chamber committee had previously said to Von Thermann covered more territory than Argentina; he was accused of being at least the paymaster of an organization sprawled all over Latin America, organized army-fashion, sworn to support Hitler and strong enough to enforce not just discipline but what the Argentine committee termed "blackmail."

In the reports it has submitted to date the committee included documents as evidence to show that the Nazi organization it is trying to smash in Argentina is connected directly across South American frontiers and indirectly through Berlin with five of the nine countries on this continent.

Nazi political propaganda money comes from Berlin into Buenos Aires through German banks in Uruguay, Peru and Chile, the committee said, and goes out "all over America, especially that part of America which speaks Spanish."

Membership cards in German societies, whose headquarters in Buenos Aires were raided by the committee, were signed by persons giving Chilean addresses and listed them as units of "cells" in southern Argentina, across the Andes from Chile.

Transmitter Seized

A short-wave radio transmitter which the committee seized in an airplane had been shunted from Brazil to Peru by way of Chile, and back to Argentina by way of Bolivia.

Air freight charges on the radio were paid by the German embassy here, and the messenger who brought the radio back was not the same one who took it to Lima—a fact which the investigators interpreted to mean that the Nazis maintained a regular international messenger system.

Inside Argentina, the committee said the Nazi machine shaped up this way:

Sixty thousand men—practically the entire German-born male population of Argentina—each was registered by name, number and photograph in Buenos Aires and Berlin. The men were organized by 10's into "cells," responsible to an 11th man who was designated as "cell leader."

Unspecified numbers of these cells were organized into "blocks"—responsible to a block leader.

There was a special corps of "storm troopers" and a special "secret police," as well as a tax-collecting squad named by Von Thermann personally to deduct from the workers' pay checks in advance, an assessment up to one third of their salaries to support the Nazi organization.

"Welfare Societies"

This organization was set up under the cover of outwardly genuine welfare societies, workers unions and trade associations.

Organizations which did not exist prior to the time the Nazi party was outlawed in Argentina sprang up the day after the party ban, the committee alleges, occupying the same offices the party had used, having the same membership, electing the same officers.

Argentine-born sons of Germans also were catalogued as friendly or unfriendly to the Nazi regime, one committee report said, adding that a spy system was maintained to keep members in line, and that punishments were meted out to those who strayed.

Some money contributed by these organizations was traced by the investigating committee to the German-subsidized, so-called news agency, Transocean. Other money went to German schools, were the committee charges that Argentine as well as German children were taught Nazi doctrines.

How the German leaders got special privileges which the committee says they guaranteed to organization members in matters relating to the Argentine government, officials have not yet disclosed.

THEY SAID MEXICO WOULD PREFER THAT THE GENERAL AGREEMENT BE DELAYED A FEW WEEKS RATHER THAN LEAVE OUT WHAT THEY CALLED SUCH AN IMPORTANT COG AS THE TRADE MATTER.

THEY INDICATED THAT THE DELEGATES WERE HOLDING OUT FOR UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT-CONTROLLED MAXIMUM PRICES TO BE PAID BY MEXICO FOR GOODS IMPORTEL FROM THE UNITED STATES RATHER THAN LEAVE THE PRICES TO FOLLOW MARKET VALUES.

AN ARTICLE PUBLISHED IN EL NACIONAL MAINTAINED THAT WHILE THE UNITED STATES PURCHASES BY AGREEMENT MEXICO'S SURPLUS EXPORTABLE STRATEGICAL MATERIALS, THIS IS DONE AT PRICES FIXED BY WASHINGTON. SINCE IMPORTED PRODUCTS ARE GOING UP IN PRICE IN ACCORDANCE WITH MARKET VALUES, MEXICO'S TRADE BALANCE IS BEING AFFECTED ADVERSELY, THE PAPER STATED.

Nazis Announce Capture of Kiev And Poltava, Report 4 Red Armies Trapped, Road Open to Kharkov

SWASTIKA IS NOW FLYING OVER CAPITAL OF UKRAINE

Hitler Also Announces Fall of Poltava, Key Rail Junction 80 Miles From Kharkov---Declares Four Red Armies Have Been Trapped in Pincer Drive.

SEP 20 1941

Berlin, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—German forces have entered Kiev and have raised the swastika flag over the citadel of the long besieged Ukrainian capital, Russia's third largest city, the German High Command reported tonight.

The bulletin was the third triumphant message in quick succession from Adolf Hitler's headquarters at the front telling the German people that:

1. Two German Army groups have merged beyond the Dnieper and Desna rivers in great sweeps 125 miles east of Kiev.

2. The city of Poltava, 200 miles beyond Kiev and only eighty miles from Kharkov, has fallen to these mighty forces.

3. So far in the war, on all fronts, the Russians have lost at least 3,600,000 men in dead and captured alone.

4. Four Russian armies have been trapped in the eastern Ukraine and now are in the process of being annihilated.

The whole picture implied that Red Army resistance in the vital southern region of grain fields, oil wells, ore deposits and war industries was tottering under the weight of a fierce German onslaught with hundreds of thousands of men backed by the deadliest mechanized weapons in the German arsenal.

[An earlier communique from the Soviet Bureau of Information in Moscow admitted that the Germans had thrown fresh troops into the fight and had penetrated as far as one gate of Kiev.]

The announcement from Hitler's headquarters told of the German entry into Kiev in this terse message:

"In the course of encircling operations announced today an attack against the capital of the Ukraine, Kiev, was begun.

"After a bold penetration through strong fortifications on the west shore of the Dnieper, our troops have penetrated into the town.

"The Reich flag has been flying from the citadel since this morning."

SEP 20 1941

Thus, for the second time in less than twenty-four years the "mother of Russian cities," an industrial metropolis of almost 900,000 population, has fallen to a German Army. The Kaiser's forces entered Kiev March 2, 1918.

DNB, the official German news agency, said that the Russians were fighting desperately trying to hold back the German tide in the south, but declared this resistance was being smashed everywhere, with some Soviet units fully destroyed.

Poltava, a railroad center and the old capital of Little Russia, apparently fell as the two German Army groups converging east of Kiev swept on eastward toward Kharkov, chief city of the Donets River basin. Kharkov, which now is next in line, is almost at the furthest side of the Dnieperopetrovsk, held by another German force.

DNB said that retreating Russian columns had been outflanked by fast-striking German tank units and had suffered "heavy, bloody losses." In two days of battle alone, the agency said, 5,500 Red Army men were taken prisoner.

The bulletins from Adolf Hitler's headquarters paralleled claims of progress in the siege of Leningrad on the north in which Soviet batteries at Kronstadt, guardians of the naval base's sea gate, were reported silenced. Adolf Hitler's newspaper called for Leningrad's capitulation.

Against the claim of more than 1,800,000 prisoners so far with as many, and probably more, Russian soldiers killed, the Germans acknowledged losses in the first two months of the vast struggle—through August 21—of only 84,354 dead, 292,690 wounded and 18,921 missing in the army, and 1,542 killed, 3,980 wounded and 1,378 missing in the air force.

First Loss Statement.

This total casualty list of 402,865 is the first statement of losses the German high command has made since the invasion began almost three months ago.

Thus, by the high command's own reckoning the Germans have lost in two months of war against Russia almost exactly twice as many killed and wounded as in all their previous campaigns of the war combined. In men missing, however, the figure is only about two-thirds the previous total.

Before the invasion of Russia, Germany had acknowledged these aggregate losses: 42,322 killed, 148,781 wounded, 27,337 missing.

Based on the historic ratio of three men wounded for every one killed in battles of past wars, the German claim of Russian casualties would mean total Red Army losses of at least 9,000,000 men, an almost unbelievable figure. The Germans gave no figure on Russian wounded.

The claim of deep new inroads into the Ukraine imperiling four Russian armies (which, themselves, might contain as many as half a million men)—implied that the German line had been pushed to about 270 miles west of the next great Ukranian industrial center, Kharkov, on the Donets.

The communique acclaimed the part of the Luftwaffe in the drives which, it said, brought together the army groups of Field Marshal Gen. Fedor von Bock, commander of the central army on the eastern front, and those of Field Marshal Gen. Gerd von Rundstedt on the south six days ago.

Moscow and Odessa both were said to have been raided by German bombers again last night.

As early as last August 24 German sources had pictured strong forces of Russian Marshal Semeon Timoshenko as hemmed between Von Rundstedt's troops and the right wing of Von Bock's command.

Kronstadt Chief Navy Base.

Kronstadt, whose guns the Germans said had been silenced, is the chief Red Navy base. Situated on the island of Kotlin in the Gulf of Finland, it dominates the 23-foot ship channel which leads to Leningrad, 30 miles to the east.

Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, declared the mighty Kronstadt emplacements had been so battered by Stukas and German land batteries that they could no longer fire a single shot.

German guns were said to have been arrayed along the southern shore of Kronstadt Bay for cooperation with dive-bombers in the attack on the fortress, one phase of widespread operations for the encirclement of Leningrad.

(This reference to the southern bay shore seemed to indicate that the Germans previously had overcome supplemental Soviet fortifications at Orandenbaum, on the Russian mainland south of Kronstadt.)

The high command evidently has decided the time is ripe to increase pressure on Odessa, now in its second month of siege. In a Wednesday night aerial raid on the Black Sea port, it was asserted, more than 220,000 pounds of bombs were dropped.

Ukraine from the German starting point in Poland and Rumania.

Poltava is about sixty-five miles northeast of Kremenchug, already in German hands, where the High Command said that one German Army group had crossed the Dnieper to meet the other pushing southeast of the Desna. It is about 100 miles north of

Four Russian Armies Declared Trapped In Eastward Push

Drive Is Thrust Toward Kharkov And Donets Basin, Berlin Declares

The Russians have not admitted the fall of Kiev, but acknowledge that Nazi forces are at one of the gates. (Details on Page 2.)

By ALVIN STEINKOPF
[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 19—The grand German Ukrainian offensive, smashing with a terrible momentum through broken Russian resistance, has occupied the provincial capital, Kiev, reached and overrun Poltava, 200 miles to the east, and is striking toward Kharkov, 80 miles beyond in the heart of the industrial Donets basin, the high command announced in a triumphant chain of bulletins today and tonight.

This series of spectacular successes, which by German accounts appeared to lay the greatest surviving Soviet war plants in the whole of the south open to imminent peril, was reported from Adolf Hitler's eastern headquarters, which also put total German casualties to the end of August at 402,865, against Russian losses of more than 3,600,000 to date.

Third Largest City

Kiev, a city of 846,293, the third largest in the Soviet Union and next in importance to Moscow and Leningrad of the three top German objectives, fell during the morning, it was stated, after its last strong fortifications on the west bank of the Dnieper river had been smashed by violent Nazi charges.

Tonight the swastika flew from its ancient towers, said the high command, after intermittent assaults upon its gates since early in July.

All this was accomplished, Hitler's headquarters declared, by the fatal encirclement of four Red armies about 125 miles to the east of Kiev—armies of unstated size (but presumably numbering as many as 500,000 men) which were being steadily cut to pieces.

Reds Called Desperate

Poltava, a railway city of 88,000 where Peter the Great defeated Charles of Sweden more than two centuries ago, was the furthermost point speciafically reported reached in an advance which the Germans said was rolling uninterruptedly over every desperate effort to hold the dissolving Red lines.

It fell to the army of Field Marshal Gerd von Runstedt, which was declared to have crossed the lower Dnieper on a seventy-five-mile-wide front in the vicinity of Kremenchug for a subsequent junction east of Kiev with the forces of Field Marshal Fedor von Bock. The latter turned to the south after forcing the Desna river far above Kiev.

DNB reported that Soviet troops retreating eastward from Poltava were under continuous attack by German dive bombers. Important railway lines and junctions in the area were disrupted, the agency said.

In the Leningrad area twenty-four Russian planes were reported destroyed on the ground and six others in air fights.

Kharkov, the next apparent major objective, is the greatest city in the basin of the Donets river beyond which—with little or no natural obstacle interposing—lies the rich valley of the Don.

The general picture officially drawn was of two mighty Nazi columns—those of von Bock and von Runstedt—moving now as a great and irresistible coordinated striking force, the spearhead thrusting out far to the east and the remaining forces chewing up the main body of the encircled Russians beyond the old Kiev front.

Kronstadt Reported Silenced

Official information as to the remainder of the eastern front—the center and in the northwest—was far less detailed, but another and great step forward in the long effort to conquer Leningrad was reported.

The big naval guns of the Soviet naval base Kronstadt, twenty miles to the east of Leningrad itself, were declared to have been silenced by German artillery and dive bombers.

The high command's first official announcement of casualties in the east—listing 6,900 members of the Nazi air force among the aggregate of 402,865, based its estimate of total Russian casualties on the report that Red prisoners alone numbered more than 1,800,000. "The number of their dead," it was added, "is according to experience at least equally as high but probably higher."

German casualties were thus divided: 84,354 killed, 292,690 wounded, 18,921 missing; air force, 1,542 killed, 3,980 wounded, 1,378 missing. Up to August 31, German plane losses were put at 725—"only a part of our monthly production."

Propaganda Charged

The high command specifically denounced that it termed "enemy propaganda" that German field losses has run from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000.

[In Britain, Germany's casualties were estimated Thursday at 2,000,000, along with 3,000,000 for the Russians. The Nazi high command's figures were characterized by the British wireless as "fantastic."]

The official German estimates in many cases admitted that in two months of the Russian invasion the Nazis had lost about twice as many soldiers and airmen killed and wounded as had been lost in all previous campaigns of the war.

(These losses, that is exclusive of those in Russia, have been put officially at 42,322 dead; 148,781 wounded; 27,337 missing, for a total of 218,440.

(For unexplainedreasons, however, the missing in Russia were given as considerably less numerous than in other campaigns.)

###

Germany Admits Losses in Russia Double Those of Prior Campaigns

By Associated Press.

The first two months of war against Russia cost Germany almost exactly twice as many soldiers and airmen killed and wounded as she lost in all other prior campaigns of the war combined, by the German High Command's own statistics issued today.

For reasons unexplained, however, the numbers missing in the invasion of Russia are only about two-thirds the numbers missing altogether in Poland, Norway, France, the Balkans and Crete.

These are the official figures:

Campaign.	Dead.	Wounded.	Missing.	Total.
Russia	85,896	296,670	20,299	402,865
France	27,074	111,034	18,384	156,492
Poland	10,572	30,322	3,409	44,303
Crete	1,353	1,919	2,621	5,893
Balkans	2,006	3,902	548	6,456
Norway	1,317	1,604	2,375	5,296

Thus as against a total of 402,865 dead, wounded or missing in the Russian campaign, Germany admittedly lost only 218,440 men in all previous campaigns.

British Call Figures Fantastic.

The British radio, heard here today by CBS, characterized as fantastic the figures on German losses issued today by the Reich.

"Today's German communique, which was ushered in with fanfares, gave a fantastic version of Germany's losses in the war against Russia up to the end of August," said the BBC.

"As listeners will remember, Mr. Lozovsky, the Moscow spokesman, toward the end of August, put Germany's losses at nearly 2,000,000 killed, wounded and prisoners, and Mr. Churchill stated that in three months of war with Russia, Hitler had spilled more German blood than was shed in any one year of the last war."

KIEV RESISTS FOE, MOSCOW ASSERTS

Defenders Reported Battling at Gates—Nazi Losses Put at Four Divisions There

By HENRY CASSIDY
By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Saturday, Sept. 20—The Red Army was reported today fighting desperately to stem a German tide sweeping through the Ukraine, and Russia acknowledged that her troops were hard pressed at Kiev, ancient Ukrainian capital.

That bitter fighting extending from the Arctic to the Black Sea was "particularly fierce at Kiev" was all the Soviet communiqué told of the titanic struggle swirling about that city.

In the Far North, near the Arctic port of Murmansk, the communiqué said, "heavy losses" were inflicted on three German Elite Guard battalions and two Alpine regiments. The 136th and 137th Alpine Regiments suffered 3,000 casualties, including 1,000 dead, the communiqué said, and it identified the Elite Guard battalions as the Fuehrer, German and Death units.

German air losses for Tuesday and Wednesday were put at 157, with fifty-two Soviet aircraft destroyed.

Leningrad Battle Rages

Russian dispatches indicated that the conflict for Leningrad was still raging indecisively and that the Red Army's position was improving somewhat on the central front and at beleaguered Odessa on the Black Sea.

But it was at Kiev that the position of the Russian forces was gravest. It was conceded that German shock troops had penetrated to one gate of that historic city, but a communiqué said the fighting was roaring unchecked, with the Nazis recklessly hurling new men and equipment into the inferno.

In stating that heavy fighting was continuing all along the front, the communiqué gave few details. It said, however, that the Germans had lost 15,000 men in a futile attempt to seize Oesel Island, off the Estonian coast. The figure, following up a Russian announcement Tuesday that an attack had been repulsed, was issued in response to German denials that Oesel was assaulted.

S. A. Lozovsky, Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, told a press conference that heavy Rumanian losses had eased the pressure on Odessa, but said the Germans apparently had sent in some reinforcements in response to a warning from Rumanian Gen. Ion Antonescu that the Rumanians could not continue the offensive unaided.

Under Two-Month Siege

Kiev has been under siege for more than two months, the Germans having announced on July 15 that Panzers were knocking at its gates and that it appeared doomed.

As the Germans thus pressed farther eastward, and nearer to the vast territories inhabited by Mohammedans, the chief of that religion in the Soviet Union called upon all Islam to rise up against "the devastation of Fascism."

There are about 235,000,000 Mohammedans in the world, unnumbered millions of them living in the Soviet districts of the Crimea, the Urals, the Caucasus, and in Asiatic Russia.

The head of the Orthodox Church made a similar appeal to members of his faith soon after the German invasion began on June 22.

Great Industrial City

Kiev, one of the oldest cities in Russia and repeatedly overrun during its long history, is important not only as an agricultural and market center but for its iron works and other heavy industries.

In stating that heavy fighting was continuing all along the front, from the Black Sea to the Arctic, the Russian communique gave few details.

Soviet Admits Setback.

Moscow, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The German armies attacking Kiev have penetrated as far as one gate of the city as the result of fierce fighting which had gone on for the last few days, the Soviet Bureau of Information announced early today. The Germans threw fresh units into the fight and succeeded in piercing the defense lines in one sector, the communique said.

"Especially intense fighting took place in the direction of Kiev," this afternoon's communique declared.

The communique said the Germans had lost 15,000 men in a vain attempt to capture Oesel Island off the coast of Finland in the action which the Russians announced last Tuesday. The new claim was made in reply to German contentions that no attempt had been made against the island, the communique said.

Other battles took place along the entire front, the later bulletin reported, and the Red air force struck blows at invading troops and at Axis aircraft on their own airdromes.

The fighting continued along the entire front, the early bulletin said, using the same phrase it has employed twice a day for some time in describing the conflict on the eastern front. In a recapitulation of air losses, it added that the Germans lost 112 planes on Tuesday while the Russians lost only twenty-nine.

Kiev, the ancient capital of the Ukraine, is the third largest city in Russia, with nearly 850,000 inhabitants. It has important iron smelters and other works. It lies some 500 miles southwest of Moscow and 300 miles north of beleaguered Odessa. Fighting has swirled to the north and south of it as the German forces seeking to advance directly upon Kiev found the resistance so fierce that they detoured in an effort to squeeze the city in a nutcracker.

[As long ago as July 15 the Germans announced they were at the gates of Kiev.]

Russians Can Fight Without Ukraine, British Believe

Loss of Kharkov, Donets Basin Would Be Serious But Not Fatal to Effort

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Russians would be able to maintain a large army in the field even if the German threat to the Donets Basin and the industrial center of Kharkov were carried out, authoritative sources asserted today.

Acknowledging that the loss of coal and oil fields, steel plants and other war industries in the Ukraine had been a heavy blow to the Soviet effort, these sources insisted nevertheless that the Russians had alternative sources of supply so that these losses would not gravely curtail their resistance.

Some of these sources of supply are in the Urals, Central Asia, and the Moscow and Leningrad areas, it was pointed out.

Economically Prepared.

It was said that the industrial reserve areas had been operating on a rising scale and that the Russians apparently had prepared economically for such contingencies as the

KIEV IS MOTHER OF SOVIET CITIES

Industrial Center in Heart of Breadbasket.

SEP 20 1941

By Associated Press.

Kiev, "mother of Russian cities," once again appears to be in German hands, this time by conquest instead of by request. It had been under siege about two months.

The ancient capital of the Ukraine, rising in some places 300 feet above the Dnieper River, is almost a different city from the one into which the Kaiser's soldiers marched on March 2, 1918.

It is the third largest city in the U. S. S. R. (only Moscow and Leningrad are bigger) and its population of 846,293 by the last census is almost twice that of twenty-three years ago.

While the Ukraine has been called the "breadbasket of Europe" because from its black soil comes rich wheat, sugar beets and cattle fodder, Kiev is important for its industry and commerce.

Iron smelting, manufacture of tobacco and milling of flour are Kiev's principal industries. Four railroads have terminals in the city, trans-shipping goods carried along the Dnieper.

About 80 per cent of the population is Ukranian, the rest Russian, Jews, Poles, Germans, Moldavians, Greeks, Bulgars and White Russians.

There is no definite date marking the founding of Kiev, but it was the center of Slav dominion of Russia and by 988 it was established as the leading city of the country. In that year Kiev admitted the first Greek church when its ruler, Prince Vladimir rejected Islam and Rome to accept the Eastern Orthodox Church.

Peter the Great "Russified" the city in the seventeenth century.

30.27-11929

Before then Kiev had been destroyed by the Mongols in 1240, had been a possession of Lithuania from 1320 to 1569 and then fell to the Poles who held it until 1654 when it was annexed by Russia.

Probably the oldest landmark in the city is the Cathedral of St. Sophia, constructed in 1037 and rebuilt many times.

Hard-pressed by the Bolsheviks in 1918, the Ukrainians called upon the Central Powers for help. Nothing could have pleased Berlin or Vienna more. Occupation of the Ukraine meant food, iron, coal, manganese and other war essentials.

When the Germans and Austrians under Gen. Eichorn took over, the Ukrainians were called on to produce more than was their custom.

Arguments ensued and on July 30, 1918, Eichorn was assassinated. Ukrainian revolutionary forces finally took possession of Kiev in December, 1918 after the fall of the Central Powers. Soon, however, the White Russians captured the city, but they were driven out in October 3, 1919, by the Bolsheviks.

Combined White Russian and Polish troops took over the city in 1920. Ukrainian independence was recognized by Russia and Poland in the Riga treaties of 1920 and 1921. The Ukraine became a Soviet republic in 1923.

MUFTI ISSUES CALL

Russian Moslems called to battle against Fascism

SEP 20 1941

Moscow, Sept. 19 (AP)—The head of the Soviet Union's central Mohammedan administration, the Mufti Abdurakhman Rasulev, appealed to Mohammedans of the entire world today to rise "in the name of Islam" against the "devastation of Fascism."

The Mufti appealed for "direct aid for the Red army everywhere, at the rear or at the front. In the struggle of Mohammedans against Fascism, which is annihilating religion and science, great and almighty Allah shall aid us Moslems."

The several million Mohammedans in the U. S. S. R., including the Tartars, are scattered in Crimea, the Volga region, the Ural Mountains, on the Kirghiz steppes of Central Asia north of the Caspian Sea, in the Caucasus and elsewhere.

It And Smaller Warship Reported Damaged By Nazi Flyers

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP)—A Russian cruiser and a smaller warship were heavily damaged in the Black Sea by the German air force yesterday, DNB reported tonight. It claimed also that three freighters totaling 10,000 tons were hard hit.

The news agency said a Soviet battleship was sighted in the Finnish Gulf west of Leningrad today and was badly damaged by German bombers.

Tells of Scorched Earth.

SEP 20 1941

Viipuri, Finland, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The Swedish Minister of Health, Gustaf Moeller, who is visiting Viipuri and other Karelian Isthmus cities, said today that the heavy devastation wrought by the Russian troops pursuing their scorched-earth policy in retreat before the Finns exceeded anything he had imagined.

fighting now has brought about.

The informed quarters here said it seemed obvious that the Germans were driving toward Kharkov and Rostov, the first on the Donets River and the second at the mouth of the Don, on the Sea of Azov, arm of the Black Sea. Both are important to maintenance of transportation facilities.

These quarters expressed the feeling that even if the Germans cut the Kharkov-Moscow railway, artery for Southern Russia, the Russians would be well served by other lines operating south and southeast from Moscow.

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Saturday, Sept. 20—One German plane bombed this Soviet capital during a raid last night and today, but other raiders were driven off by anti-aircraft fire and Russian night fighters, it was announced today.

There was no damage, the communique said. The city was under alarm for nearly three hours.

Leningrad Fires Seen From Finnish Territory

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 19 (AP).—Fires in Leningrad have grown so great they can be seen with the naked eye from Finnish territory in broad daylight, Finnish Army dispatches said today.

Finnish troops driving toward Soroka, terminal of the Stalin Canal to the White Sea, have captured Rukajaervi, one of the most important Soviet bases in Karelia and 60 miles from the White Sea coast, front-line dispatches said last night.

Joint Mission Reported En Route To Red Capital

London, Sept. 19 (AP)—The United States and British missions to Moscow were reliably reported tonight to have left for the Soviet Capital.

The missions, bound for Russia to join in three-power conferences to coordinate the war effort against Germany, had luncheon with Prime Minister Churchill today.

W. Averell Harriman heads the American group, while the Minister of Supply, Lord Beaverbrook, heads the British.

Lord Beaverbrook, who has promised the Russians all the tanks that Britain builds in the week beginning next Monday, left the following message to be issued to all tank factory workers tomorrow:

"I am on my way, taking with me to Moscow your pledge and promise to the soldiers and workers of Russia.

"I leave you, each one of you, responsible for production results during my absence, and I rely on you to see the promise I make on your behalf is fulfilled.

"So send me a message September 30 telling me what you've done. And let me tell the Russians then that in the last days of September you devoted yourselves to their needs and that you built more tanks than ever before in the history of your country."

'Chutists Landing In Bulgaria Slain

Moscow blames 'Italian radio liars' for fatal clash

Sofia, Sept. 19 (AP)—It was announced here today that a group of parachutists landed in Southern Dobruja Sunday and were killed in a fight with soldiers and police. Bulgarians said all evidence indicated the parachutists were Russians, and a protest was filed with the Russian legation.

The group managed to kill a Bulgarian lieutenant, a police chief and wound five other persons before they were slain, it was stated.

They had parcels containing explosives, weapons, radios, passports and Bulgarian and foreign money. There were reports that parachutists had also landed in other parts of Bulgaria.

The Soviet information bureau, quoting the Italian radio on a similar account, said, "the Italian radio has contrived to stage the whole battle between Bulgarian troops and six Soviet parachutists." . . . There is no need to prove that the Soviet Union did not and could not send its planes and parachutists to Bulgaria."

SEP 20 1941

A Berlin account said that the parachutists were aided by a "foreign submarine" which brought material and men for sabotage, chiefly against railways.

BULGARS PROTEST ON RED 'CHUTISTS

Berlin Denies Threatening Turks on Dardenelles.

Berlin, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Advices from Sofia today said that Bulgaria had protested to Moscow against the alleged landing of Russian parachute troops in Bulgarian territory.

The Bulgarians said that the parachutists had landed on September 14 near Dobritsch and had been surrounded by the army garrison and police of that town. In an exchange of fire, all the parachutists were reported killed but first they killed a Bulgarian lieutenant and a police chief and wounded five Bulgarians.

Authorized sources said today that Germany was satisfied with the situation of the Dardanelles and asserted that reports of German and Bulgarian troop concentrations on the Turkish border were "deliberately spread to cause uneasiness in Turkey."

Last March Turkey closed the Strait to all ships except those having special permits and employing Turkish naval pilots. In June Germany signed a ten-year friendship treaty with Turkey pledging each country to take no direct or indirect measure against the other.

These sources said that Dr. Karl Clodius and his aids in Ankara were limiting themselves to negotiating details for executing the German-Turkish trade treaty. They denied that he was also conferring about the Dardanelles.

"We have no cause to desire a change," these sources said with regard to the Dardanelles.

200 Britons Who Fought For Finland Interned

Volunteers In 1939-40 War With Reds Held In Sweden, Tanner Discloses In Berlin

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP)—Some 200 British volunteers who fought with Finland against Soviet Russia in the 1939-40 war now are interned in Sweden at Finland's expense, Vaino Tanner, Finnish Trade Minister, disclosed today.

"There was no way for them to get back home and we could not keep them," said Tanner, who arrived today with a Finnish delegation for trade talks with German officials. "So Sweden agreed to take them, but we could not expect the Swedes to pay for their keep and this we are doing."

Tanner will leave for the Vienna Fair tomorrow and to visit the Slovak Government at Bratislava.

Publisher Sees Germans Halted

Ralph Ingersoll says U. S. material "to be felt"

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 18 (Delayed (AP)—Ralph Ingersoll, publisher of the New York newspaper PM, who arrived in Ankara today from Moscow, said he believed the Germans might take a few more "limited objectives" in Russia, but ultimately would be stopped.

Then a mass of American material appearing on the Russian front will be felt, he said.

He praised the Russian staff work, which he declared demonstrated its excellence by holding together a 2,000-mile line against "the most efficient army in the world."

The front is actually 2,000 miles deep, with fighting going on all through that distance, Ingersoll stated. He described the German panzer tactics as continually surrounding Russian forces ranging from companies to divisions, with the Russians repeatedly sifting out of the encirclement, though often losing their equipment in doing so.

Allies Will Recognize New Shah of Iron

By the Associated Press.

TEHERAN, Iran, Sept. 18 (Delayed).—Russia and Britain will recognize the new shah of Iran, Mohammed Shah Pahlevi, by sending envoys to his reception for the diplomatic corps soon, it was authoritatively reported today.

Meanwhile, Britain's Gurkha riflemen from Nepal replaced Russian sentries at the Teheran radio station near the factory where the British are quartered. The Red Army continued to guard other communications centers, however.

By agreement, the Allies will not march through the capital's business section. The tanks and armored cars that the Russians furbished up yesterday in expectation of a triumphal review on Reza Shah boulevard remain parked at the airfields and in suburban gardens.

The Red troopers included women in blue-gray army tunics and forage caps who shopped in the picturesque bazaars for bouquets of flowers.

The Russian force appeared to be a second-rate reserve outfit by Russian standards of equipment, but its discipline, march technique and supply system impressed neutral military observers.

Youngsters do the minor guard duties, but important points are watched over by hard-jawed Asiatic looking troopers armed with submachine guns.

Second Protest to Soviet

TOKYO, Sept. 19 (AP)—A strong Japanese protest against floating Russian mines in the Sea of Japan has been brought to the attention of the Soviet Government for the second time. The protest was made some time ago but no reply was received and the matter was put before the Soviet again yesterday through its Tokyo embassy.

Announcement of the protest yesterday said a Korean sailing vessel was sunk Sept. 1 off Nishisuira Promontory, at the northern edge of Korea, by a mine that drifted from Vladivostok fields. It was said nine Korean fishermen were lost.

The Foreign Office protest also embraced the explosion of a mine under a fishing boat Sept. 10, in which four men were said to have been killed.

The Sea of Japan has been traversed by American tankers en route to Vladivostok with gasoline for Russian planes. The Japanese protest note specifically warned of the danger to vessels of either Japan or "third powers."

2 U. S. FLYERS BAG 2 NAZIS OVER FRANCE

Shoot Down Messerschmitts During Attack On Supply Trains

Both German Planes Said To Have Been Destroyed Over Channel

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 19—Two American Eagle Squadron pilots destroyed two German ME-109 fighter planes in offensive patrols over France today during which German troops and supply trains were strafed and German shipping bombed, the Air Ministry said.

One American pilot was said to have shot a German fighter into the Channel and severely damged another when the Eagle Squadron tore into a formation of Messerschmitts.

Another American knocked a second German into the sea when the squadron was attacked by four Messerschmitts on the way home, the account said.

The Eagles scoring today's successes were Pilot Officer G. A. Daymond, of Great Falls, Mont., and Pilot Officer J. Flynn, Chicago.

Hit Nazi Supply Ship

Meanwhile, a British bomber scored four hits on an Axis supply ship in the Bay of Biscay, off the coast of France, after diving down almost to funnel height, the Air Ministry reported.

Shrapnel from the ship struck a cartridge belt in the bomber's turret, exploding cartridges and wounding the gunner.

Last night, an authoritative British source said, a small force of R. A. F. bombers attacked docks at Le Havre, German-occupied French port.

DOCKS AT LE HAVRE ATTACKED BY R.A.F.

Yesterday's Toll of German Planes Is Put at 17.

London, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—A small force of British bombers last night attacked the docks at German-occupied Le Havre, authoritative British spokesmen said today.

The German Air Force sent only a few night raiders against Britain, the Government announced, adding that bombs fell in South Wales and East Anglia, but that no casualties were reported and little damage was done.

In extended operations yesterday, the Air Ministry declared, Royal Air Force bombers and fighter planes sank two German minesweepers and two anti-aircraft ships and damaged four other vessels in the Channel off the Dutch and Belgian coasts. In another operation, hits were reported on a power station at Rouen, France, in the face of heavy ground fire.

The R. A. F. said it destroyed seventeen German planes and lost eleven yesterday.

London Says Dutch Sub Sank Two Italian Ships

London, Sept. 19 (AP)—Sinking of a 6,000-ton Italian supply ship and a 1,200-ton Italian sailing vessel by a Dutch submarine operating with British naval units in the Mediterranean was announced today by the Admiralty of the Netherlands Government in exile.

The announcement added that another Axis supply ship reported sunk by a Dutch submarine in the Mediterranean September 13 was the 5,915-ton Italian vessel Isarno. The captain and twenty-one crew members were saved, the Admiralty said.

MAXON KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

SEP 20 1941

Memphis Resident Was in Canadian Air Force.

London, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—James M. Maxon Jr., of Memphis, son of the Episcopal Bishop of Tennessee, was killed yesterday in a crash during a test flight somewhere in Britain, the Royal Canadian Air Force announced today.

He had made at least ten trips over Germany as bomber and rear gunner in British air forays. On only August 30, after his ninth bombing expedition, the Air Ministry News Service quoted him as saying that he was yet to get into an air fight.

No details were disclosed regarding the fatal accident in relatively safe home air.

James M. Maxon Jr., who was reported killed in an English bombing plane of which he was said to be the rear gunner, is remembered in New York as the young journalism student who in 1931 was acquitted by a jury in Court of General Sessions of a charge of murder in connection with the death of David Paynter, 73-year-old printer, in a rooming house at 550 West End avenue.

Paynter died of injuries received in a free-for-all fight. The fight started, it was brought out in court, after Maxon had tried to awaken the landlady in the rooming house to find out where the illuminating gas cut-off was located so that he could turn off leaking gas pipe in a bathroom. On awakening she screamed that he was trying to attack her. The fight began when other roomers came running in response to her screams. In the scuffling, Paynter was felled.

Maxon, then 21 years old, had come to New York to study journalism at Columbia University. He was the son of the Bishop Coadjutor of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Tennessee.

While he was out on bail, pending trial, he worked on a St. Louis paper and after his trial he worked on a number of papers.

On August 14 last, an Associated Press dispatch from London told how Sergt. Maxon had devised his own style of bombing—dropping milk bottles from his rear gunner's position in the tail of a bombing plane in an attack on Berlin. It was explained that the milk bottles set up a fiendish whining noise on the way down.

Italians Waving To R. A. F.

London, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Air Ministry news service issued the report today that some Italian civilians, like some Belgians, French and Dutch, are waving encouragement to R. A. F. bombers when they go raiding.

Describing a raid on munitions plants at Licata, Sicily, two days ago, a South African squadron leader said that about ten miles off shore he flew over a fleet of fishing vessels. Nearly all the crews stood up and waved cheerfully.

We were only a few feet above them. It was the same over the fields of southern Sicily."

BERLIN, Saturday, Sept. 20 (AP)—William Henry Nichols of San Carlos, Calif., one of many Royal Air Force pilots shot down recently, now is in a German prison camp, the official German news agency D. N. B. reported today.

Pilot Nichols and two other American Eagle Squadron pilots were reported missing on Sept. 9 by the British Air Ministry. The others were Eugene Quimbly, (Red) Tobin of Los Angeles and H. S. Fenlaw of Lewisville, Texas.

Tripoli Also Is Attacked by R. A. F. in North Africa.

Rome, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command today announced that British warplanes had again bombed Bengasi and Tripoli.

A British attack on an advanced Italian position at Uolchefit, in northwest Ethiopia, was beaten off at a cost of "numerous dead" to the attackers, the communique also reported. The immediate intervention of Italian troops and artillery repulsed the raid, which was attempted under cover of heavy mist, it was added.

Suez Canal Is Raided Again

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 19 (AP)—An Egyptian communiqué said three persons were injured in an early morning air raid on the Suez Canal area today, but that damage was insignificant. Alerts were sounded in Cairo and several provinces.

A severe sandstorm hindered British patrol activities at Tobruk yesterday, the Middle East Command reported. British mechanized forces, nevertheless, were said to have been active again along the Egyptian-Libyan frontier.

Berlin, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Authorized spokesmen said today that the German air force sank a 6,000-ton British merchantman yesterday off the Faeroe Islands, 250 miles northwest of Scotland.

U. S.-Made Tomahawk Proves Toughness In Smash Desert Landing

Cairo, Sept. 19 (AP)—America's Tomahawk fighters are tough, an Australian pilot testifies.

One Tomahawk, forced down by four Messerschmitts during a dogfight in Libya, hit the sand at a terrific speed and wrecked the undercarriage, yet the pilot suffered only a cut on the head.

"There was only just enough of the plane's belly left to hold me inside the cockpit," said the pilot when he returned to his squadron.

The Australian tramped seventy miles back to British lines and twice passed through strong German patrols without being challenged.

His experience qualifies him for membership in "the Western Desert Late Arrivals' Club," whose emblem is a winged boot.

Dentz Praises Australians

VICHY, Sept. 19 (AP).—General Henri Dentz, who was commander of Vichy troops in Syria, today paid a tribute to the Australian troops who defeated him there. He told newspaper men in an interview, "they are sportsmen and men who fought well. They are very hard on others as well as on themselves."

AIR-RAID ORPHANS TO WED IN EGYPT

Cairo, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Several scores of girls orphaned by air raids on Alexandria and other Egyptian cities will meet their husbands-to-be today under Government auspices.

The girls had become wards of the Ministry of Social Services. Many Egyptian bachelors in quest of wives wrote offering marriage, although they had never met the girls. The Minister sifted the applications and accepted them.

ALEXANDER THANKS U. S. FOR CONVOY AID

It 'Cannot Be Overestimated,' Says British Navy Minister

LONDON, Sept. 19 (AP)—The material and moral support of the United States in protecting war shipments part of the way on their Atlantic voyage to Great Britain "cannot be overestimated," First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander declared today.

Mr. Alexander, addressing the Institute of Mechanical Engineers, made the comment in connection with the disclosure Wednesday by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that United States naval vessels were convoying merchant vessels in the North Atlantic.

"The United States is undertaking duties which will greatly help us," Mr. Alexander said.

He said: "We are with Russia to the end in this business," and declared that British help to the Soviet Union was "conditioned only by physical difficulties."

"We are watching with profound admiration but deep anxiety also the swaying fortunes of the heroic resistance our Russian allies are offering," he added.

2,000 British Ships Constantly Employed In Carrying Supplies

U-Boats Believed Engaged In Wolfpack Maneuvers In July and August

Associated Press War Correspondent.

A BRITISH PORT, Sept. 19.—The British are keeping at least 2,000 ships constantly at sea and "never less than 400 in the danger zones," a War Transport Ministry official said today as an all-American cargo was being cleared through this port.

The cargo—including airplanes, Idaho beans, California raisins and Florida citrus fruit—was part of a steady stream of lease-lend goods coming from the United States.

The British said the flow of British imports, including lease-lend shipments, had averaged 850,000 tons weekly, for the past 10 weeks.

The War Transport Ministry official reported a big speed-up in the landing of lease-lend goods through a quicker turn-around of ships.

Items Brought in Convoy.

He said dock workers as well as officers of the Royal Navy and the mercantile marine "can take pride that Britain maintains never less than 2,000 ships at sea and never less than 400 in the danger zones."

Here's a quick run through some of the goods brought over in the latest convoy reaching here:

A dozen or more attack bombers from Santa Monica, Calif.; big sacks of beans from Hansen, Idaho; tubs from Chicago stamped "Wisconsin Brand" cheese; piles of brown cartons labeled "seedless raisins" from Fresno, Calif.; citrus fruit from Lake Wales, Fla., and hams from Chicago.

There was an ambulance, "gift from the people of Milford, Conn." Also machine tools from Michigan City, Ind.; aircraft parts from New Haven, Conn.; fire extinguishers from Brooklyn; dried apples from San Francisco; lard from St. Louis; canned pork from Chicago; boxes of fiber from Wilmington, Del.; insulation material from Trenton, N. J.; tank tracks from Chicago—and peanuts from Georgia.

BLAZE IS SET AS GERMANS PUSH REPRISALS

Meanwhile, 2 More Are Executed For Attacks On Soldiers

Toll Of Purge Against Revolt Now Placed At Twenty-Three

[By the Associated Press]

Brussels, Sept. 19—Three alleged Communists were executed at Lille, France, for sabotage, a German newspaper here announced today.

Twelve Belgians already had been condemned to death here for espionage and other anti-German activity, and one Belgian woman was sentenced to seven years in prison, it added.

AT MIDNIGHT

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 19—Ten men set fire to a German army garage in Paris tonight in defiance of strict Nazi repressive measures. All escaped.

The German-requisitioned garage on Boulevard Gouvion—St. Cyr, near the Champeret gate, was set afire less than eighteen hours after two Communists died before a Nazi firing squad for anti-German demonstrations.

A passer-by saw the ten men leave as the garage burst into flames, but not one of them was caught.

Second Fire Of Kind

Another German garage was set afire in Paris on September 6, the day the first three Communists held as hostages were executed by the Germans in reprisal for attacks upon occupation forces.

Even before tonight's latest act of violence the most rigid restrictions were put in force by the Germans in the occupied capital and in the whole of the Seine Department surrounding it.

A German command announcement described the two persons executed today as Communists, although the Germans now say they will shoot as hostages Parisians of any class whatsoever unless there is a halt to attacks on German soldiers.

23 Killed To Date

Altogether twenty-three persons have been executed by the Germans since the outbreak of what is known here as the "terror" in Paris, corresponding roughly with the course of the German-Russian war. Thirteen of these were killed as hostages, others were regularly condemned by German military courts.

Within the last twenty-four hours, however, the Germans claim to have broken up three separate bands of "gangsters," arresting eleven persons, including an Apache called the Escape King because he has eluded nine condemnations to date.

The French themselves were reported planning to bolster their police administration in Paris to help deal with the recent waves of night attacks on Germans, shifting part of the famed Surete Nationale back to the capital.

Communists Blamed

The newest victims were Raymond Gandon and Eric Louis Texier, who were condemned by a German military tribunal for "aid to the enemy by taking part in Communist demonstrations directed against Germany." It was not known whether this concerned the fatal shooting Monday night of a German non-commissioned officer.

At the same time French authorities in Paris sentenced the elderly valet of former President Albert Lebrun to a month in jail for "insulting remarks" about Marshal Petain, the Chief of State. They also interned the deposed Parisian judge, Paul Didier, for refusing to swear allegiance to Petain.

9 P. M. To 5 A. M. Curfew

For three days, beginning tonight, a curfew goes into effect in the Seine Department from 9 P. M. to 5 A. M. Between these hours all traffic is prohibited. Theaters, restaurants and other public places of amusement must close at 8 P. M. Violators of the regulations will, themselves, be arrested and held as hostages.

The commandant of the German forces in the occupied zone, Col. Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel, declared he could no longer allow the lives of his soldiers to be threatened, although he blamed the attacks not on the general public, but on "paid agents of anti-German powers and criminal Communist elements."

Newspapers Play Up Decree

It is up to the French, he said, to decide whether the repressive measures will be further extended.

The newspapers of Paris used half their front pages to broadcast Von Stuelpnagel's warning and two others by Gen. Ernst von Schaumberg, commandant in Paris, announcing the curfew. The latter, based on the principle that the whole population is held responsible for the acts of the soldier attackers, said the public "has not sufficiently supported the searches" for the culprits.

In the unoccupied zone the Government purged Henry Chavin, secretary general of police, and the army dismissed nine generals, one of them a would-be leader of the anti-Soviet expeditionary force, as Freemasons.

Nazis in Paris Shoot Two Communists for Demonstrations

Executions Follow New Restrictions on All In Seine Department

By the Associated Press.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Sept. 19.—The Germans announced today that two Communists were shot this morning for demonstrations in Paris against the German occupation as strife between the population and Nazi troops continued.

The executions followed new restrictions effective today on all residents of the Seine Department, which includes the city of Paris.

"I will no longer allow the lives of German soldiers to be threatened by murderers," declared the German commander for Occupied France.

Three-Day Curfew.

In the latest of a series of restrictive measures, which began August 23 after a German officer was stabbed to death in a subway, Col.-Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel imposed a strict three-day curfew, beginning tomorrow.

Traffic in the department was prohibited from 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. and all theaters, restaurants and amusement places were ordered to close at 8 p.m. during the three days. Violators of regulations will be arrested and held as hostages. German Army units were ordered to patrol all streets.

On August 23 Lt. Gen. von Schaumberg, commander of the German troops in Paris, ordered all Frenchmen arrested by or for German authorities in France held as hostages for the subway assassination.

This order also declared that for any further acts hostages would be shot in numbers according to the gravity of the offense. There have been a number of incidents since then, including attacks on German soldiers in Paris, and some Frenchmen have been shot in reprisal.

"Paid Agents" Sow Unrest.

In imposing the new curfew, Col. Gen. von Stuelpnagel said he felt the majority of the French population was conscious of its duties, but that "paid agents of anti-German powers, criminal Communist elements," were seeking to sow unrest between the occupation forces and the French. It is up to Frenchmen, he said, whether his measures will be expanded further.

In declaring he could no longer allow the lives of German soldiers to be threatened, he said he would not hesitate to enforce "the sharpest measures in the fulfillment of my duties."

His declaration appeared this morning in all Paris newspapers.

It was announce dthe Paris branch of the state tribunal for persons inspiring, but not directly guilty of active opposition, had begun functioning. Special summary trials of Communists were reported from Paris, Amiens, Boulogne and Clermont-Ferrand.

Vichy Army Purge Brings Removal of Nine Generals

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 19 (AP)—Nine French generals—one of them a would-be leader of an anti-Soviet expeditionary force—were today removed in a government and army purge of Freemasons.

With the generals in the anti-Masonic purge went Henry Chavin, secretary general of police.

The ousted generals were Maj. Gen. Joseph Hassler, once announced, but never confirmed as head of an anti-Russian volunteer corps, Brig. Gen. Constant Lamiable, Paul Aeuser, Andre Hillairet and Francois Hupel and four generals from non-combatant services.

22 Amsterdam Citizens Sentenced In Strike Purge

Amsterdam, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Civil Supreme Court at The Hague imposed sentences ranging up to twelve years yesterday upon twenty-two Amsterdam citizens accused of instigating strikes last February and March.

The men were described as Communists, but because they had no leading functions in the Communist party and the alleged offenses occurred before the Russo-German war, the court said heavier punishment was not imposed.

The Dutch were warned, however, that persons charged with Communist activity after last June 22—the day the Russo-German war started—would be subject to capital punishment.

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—The authoritative Fascist spokesman-editor, Virginio Gayda, wrote today that "the majority of Frenchmen" are pro-British and that "the single, dominating idea of France is to beat Germany," according to a British radio broadcast heard here by CBS.

Gayda was quoted as writing in Il Giornale D'Italia:

"In the hearts of Frenchmen reigns one unshakable sentiment: Anti-German victory. All hopes are placed in Britain and the work of De Gaulle (the Free French leader).

"Today De Gaullism appeals to all the wishes of a people which refuses to recognize defeat. The majority of Frenchmen are the spiritual agents of Britain and supporters of De Gaulle."

115 Have Lost Lives In Week of Revolt

UNQUIET AXISLAND UNREST

By the Associated Press.

Bombs and gunfire in rebellious outbreaks in Axis-conquered lands and the answers of firing squads have taken the lives of at least 115 persons, wounded 71, and resulted in sweeping arrests of uncounted hundreds within a week.

Already 15 Frenchmen have died by the firing squad in retaliation for attacks on German soldiers. Twelve of them were shot this week.

The first attack on a German soldier occurred several weeks ago. He was stabbed to death in a Paris subway. Another German was clubbed on leaving a theater, and still later another was shot in the back on a Paris street. His subsequent death caused the grim warning that any Parisian was liable to seizure and death as a hostage.

Bombings Mark Serb Resistance.

Bombings and gunfire marked the continued resistance of Serbs in the mountain hamlets of Yugoslavia.

An explosion in the Zagreb, Croatia, central telephone exchange last Sunday wounded at least 12 German soldiers, one of them a major, and seven Croats. In another section of that city other Croats were attacked by four gunmen. The four were reported captured, and one of them, still clutching a hand grenade, was shot dead and left lying in the street as a warning.

A D.N.B. (German news agency) dispatch from Zagreb said today five alleged Communists had been condemned to death by a special court at Tuzla, Bosnia, and that the sentences was executed immediately.

At Sarajevo 61 Serbs were reported executed for such offenses as firing on military patrols.

The Sarajevo-Brod railway was blown up by saboteurs, and two bombs tossed at a bus wounded two German soldiers.

Courts Grind Out Sentences.

Trouble in France was not confined to the occupied zone. Anti-Communists courts in the Vichy-controlled area continued to grind out prison sentences, and at Marseille one Frenchman was sentenced to death for treason. In Algiers, French Africa, two others were condemned to death on the same charge.

In Japanese-held Nanking and Canton, China, the 10th anniversary of the Mukden incident which sent the Japanese marching into Manchuria was marked by bomb explosions which killed more than 30 persons, some of them Japanese. At least 50 persons were injured in the blasts allegedly set off by anti-Japanese agents.

Martial law was declared in Canton, and Japanese troops rounded up hundreds of suspects.

In Shanghai, gunmen recently shot and killed two men and seriously wounded two Japanese. One of the slain men was a former Chiang Kai-shek official, the other was N. A. Ivanow, chairman of the pro-Japanese White Russian Emigrants' Committee.

In Berlin five men died under the ax Tuesday, four charged with "preparation for treason," the other with espionage. Those executions in the heart of Naziland brought the year's total to 29 in Germany.

This week also marked the lifting of a state of civil siege in German-occupied Oslo which was imposed for exactly a week after strike movements had begun to trouble the administration. Two union leaders were executed at the outset of the period and hundreds were arrested, many being sent to concentration camps.

U. S. OIL SHIP FINED

Japanese Punish Owners for Switching Consignment.

Shanghai, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Japanese spokesmen said today that a fine of 5,000 Mexican dollars (about $250) had been imposed upon the 6,750-ton American freighter Zoella Lykes because of irregularities in her manifest on a voyage in which her cargo included 2,000 barrels of fuel oil.

The oil was consigned originally to a Japanese firm in Shanghai. Recent embargo revisions prohibited Americans from selling such oil to the Japanese, however, and the shippers instructed the captain to take it to Manila. The Japanese-controlled Customs authorities blocked the sailing of the ship for Manila on Wednesday, and the spokesman said that the American President Line, agent for the freighter, had agreed to pay the fine and that the ship would head for the Philippines shortly. Officers of the line refused to discuss the case.

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Sept. 19.—Alfred Duff Cooper, British co-ordinator for the Far East, arriving here today from Singapore, declared it was not intended to work out a settlement with Japan at the expense of China.

Mr. Duff Cooper said he had come here to get acquainted with Gov. Gen. A. W. L. Tjarda van Starkenborgh Stachouwer and planned to fly back to Singapore today. Later he intends to visit Australia.

Mr. Duff Cooper told a press conference that "he would not allow the Netherlands East Indies to be attacked without giving every assistance." He said Dutch troops might be dispatched to British Malaya and that British troops might be sent to the Netherlands Indies, "depending on the danger point."

Asked whether an agreement existed under which the United States would use the big British naval base at Singapore in event of war, Mr. Duff Cooper laughed and said, "I shouldn't think it necessary to put in writing such an understanding."

Anti-Nazi Bombing Is Farewell For Wiedemann At Buenos Aires

Argentine Group Sets Off Two Blasts At Embassy Just Before Envoy Leaves For Orient

By Joseph M. McDaniel [By the Associated Press]

SEP 20 1941

Buenos Aires, Sept. 19—A crowd of Argentine anti-Nazis set off two small bombs near the residence of the German Ambassador early this morning, a few hours before the envoy, Edmund von Thermann, escorted his much-discussed guest, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, to a boat en route to a new consular post in the Far East.

Von Thermann, whose expulsion has been demanded by Argentine Congressmen, laughingly described the demonstration as "a farewell to Captain Weidemann by our old friends the (anti-Nazi) Accion Argentina." Both he and Wiedemann said the bombs didn't disturb their slumber.

Damage Was Trivial

Police reserves dispersed about twenty men in the demonstrating group and arrested one. Nobody was hurt and the damage was trivial.

A small fire bomb exploded about 130 yards from the house and stones rattled against the wall during the disturbance.

Only a few persons were at the dock to witness Wiedemann's early departure aboard the Japanese cargo ship Manila Maru on a forty-day voyage to Tokyo, by way of the Straits of Magellan.

Expelled From U. S.

Wiedemann, former Consul General at San Francisco and expelled with other Axis consular employes from the United States, reached Buenos Aires last Sunday on his way to the Far East. It is reported that he will be assigned to North China. An Argentine Congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities failed to carry out its threat to question him during his stay here.

From the deck of the Manila Maru he waved to Von Thermann and called: "I hope we don't strike any Russian mines."

It was reported the Manila Maru would not make any ports en route to Tokyo.

Argentina

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 19—Two small bombs were thrown today in front of the fashionable embassy residence of German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann during a hostile demonstration.

Von Thermann has been the object of a Congressional attack which reached a virtual demand for his expulsion from Argentina for alleged abuse of his diplomatic privileges.

Police made one arrest and dispersed a group of about twenty persons after extra police had been called out to suppress the disturbance shortly after midnight.

No damage was done the building other than stains left by a tar bomb thrown by demonstrators. Stones were also flung at the embassy, while a small fire bomb exploded about 500 feet away.

Fritz Wiedemann Leaves

Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, formerly German consul at San Francisco, Cal., boarded the Japanese cargo boat Manila Maru to sail for the Far East this morning.

Von Thermann and several members of the German embassy staff went down to see him off.

Von Thermann said no damage was done by last night's demonstration and "I did not even wake up."

Laughs At "Friendly Farewell"

Von Thermann laughingly described the demonstration as "a farewell for Captain Wiedemann by our old friends of Accion Argentina" (an anti-Fascist group which advocated von Thermann's expulsion).

Wiedemann, waving good-by as the ship pulled out, said, "I hope we don't strike any Russian mines."

German Press Launches Anti-Argentine Campaign

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP)—The German press tonight began a strong editorial campaign against Argentina and said that anti-German agitation in that country could have "a reaction on diplomatic relations" between the two countries.

DNB, summarizing the press comment, said, "For some time we have been experiencing anti-German agitation in Argentina which barely fall short of that in the United States."

The Congressional committee headed by Raul Taborda Damonte which is investigating anti-Argentine activities was said to have "crowned its lying campaign with an unparalleled attack on Ambassador Edmund von Thermann."

SEP 20 1941

DNB said, "It is surprising that the Argentine Government raises no obstacles to this activity. . . . Should it turn out that the sovereign rights of the Argentine Government already have been so curtailed that it no longer is in a position to protect Germans, diplomatic relations certainly will be affected.

"Has it already come to a point in Argentina, as is Bolivia, where Roosevelt sets the limits of the Government's freedom of action?"

The Government's prohibited zones are: The whole coast of Europe except between Vigo, Spain, and the mouth of the Guadiana river (thus leaving the whole coast of Brazil's mother country, Portugal, and a small part of the Spanish Atlantic coast open to Brazilian ships); the coast of West Africa north from Luanda, Angola; the East African coast north of Lourenco Marques, Mozambique; the South Atlantic coast below Bahia Blanca, Argentina, and the whole Pacific Ocean.

37 Dutch Ship Survivors Reach Brazil on Tanker

Marken, Carrying War Cargo, Sunk by U-Boat Sept. 10

SANTOS, Brazil, Sept. 19 (AP).—The big Panamanian tanker Stanvac Manila docked here this afternoon with thirty-seven survivors of the 5,719-ton Netherlands freighter Marken, which was torpedoed Sept. 10 off the South American coast. The tanker previously had radioed news of the rescue.

The Marken, under British control, sailed from England with a cargo of war supplies which included airplanes and presumably was destined for Capetown, South Africa. Her last port of call before the torpedoing was Port-of-Spain, Trinidad.

Crewmen of the Marken said their ship was torpedoed about 400 miles off the Brazilian coast by a German submarine. They related that the U-boat halted them about 6 a. m. on Sept. 10, ordered the crew to abandon ship and fired three torpedoes into the Marken.

The three lifeboats bearing the survivors, well supplied with food and water, kept together for fifty-four hours until the Stanvac Manila came to the rescue the evening of Sept. 12.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 19 (AP)—The German High Command issued the following today:

Concentric offensive operations of the army groups of Field Marshal von Rundstedt and Field Marshal von Bock led to a new gigantic battle of encirclement. Following the battle of Gomel strong forces proceeded against the lower and upper reaches of the Desna to force their way across the stream in stubborn fights.

From here the attack was continued toward the south in order to link up with the group of forces which had crossed the Dnieper River on both sides of Kremenchug under difficult conditions on a front of seventy-five miles and was attacking toward the north.

Since Sept. 13 the union of these forces 125 miles east of Kiev has been completed. A ring has thus been closed around the four Soviet armies. Their annihilation is now in progress.

The air fleets of Col. Gen. Alexander Loehr and Field Marshal General Albert Kesselring have played a large part in these operations.

German bomber planes attacked Moscow and the city and harbor of Odessa with good effect during the night of Sept. 19. Numerous fires were caused.

Bomber planes bombed various important war targets on the British east coast. During attempts by the enemy to attack Holland and the occupied territory on the Channel yesterday afternoon twenty British planes, including four bombers, were shot down by German fighters, anti-aircraft guns and minesweepers.

The enemy did not fly over Reich territory either by day or by night.

Losses of the Soviet forces up to now in prisoners have exceeded 1,800,000. The number of their dead is, according to experience, at least equally high, but probably higher.

On the other hand, enemy propaganda, intended to weaken the importance of German successes, which the enemy is unable to deny, has invented German losses in the field alone at from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000.

In reality, according to precise establishment, our losses for the period from June 22 to Aug. 31, 1941, are as follows:

Army, including armed Elite Guards, 84,354 killed, 292,690 wounded, 18,921 missing.

Air force, 1,542 killed, 3,980 wounded, 1,378 missing.

The German air force lost on the Eastern Front up to Aug. 31 only a part of our monthly production. The total was 725 aircraft.

The German High Command also issued this communiqué:

German troops with a continued attack northeastward after crossing the Dnieper at Kremenchug took Poltava, seventy-five miles southwest of Kharkov.

A special communiqué from Adolf Hitler's headquarters said:

In the course of encircling operations annouced today, an attack against the capital of the Ukraine, Kiev, was begun.

After a bold penetration through strong fortifications on the west shore of the Dnieper, our troops have penetrated into the town.

The Reich flag has been flying from the citadel since this morning.

Russian

MOSCOW, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau said in a communiqué today:

During Sept. 18 our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front.

Our air force dealt blows at enemy tanks, artillery and infantry as well as at planes on his airdromes.

During Sept. 16 our forces destroyed 112 planes. Our losses were twenty-nine planes.

Fierce fighting has taken place before Kiev during the last few days. The enemy threw in fresh units and succeeded in piercing our lines in one sector, penetrating as far as a gate of the city.

Fighting continued.

Later the Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué:

During the night our troops continued to fight along the entire front.

Especially intense fighting took place in the direction of Kiev.

Our aircraft struck blows at enemy troops and enemy aircraft on their airdromes.

MOSCOW, Saturday, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau today issued the following:

On Sept. 19 our troops fought th enemy along the whole front, particularly fiercely at Kiev.

On Sept. 17 in air combat and on enemy airdromes forty-five German planes were destroyed. We lost twenty-three planes.

In the course of stubborn fighting in the Murmansk direction our troops inflicted heavy losses on three German Elite Guard battalions and two Alpine Chasseur regiments.

The Elite Guard battalions were named "Fuehrer," "German" and "Death," and the 136th and 137th German Alpine Chasseur regiments lost about 1,000 men and officers killed and more than 2,000 wounded.

British

LONDON, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Air Ministry today issued this communiqué:

Aircraft of the bomber command attacked the docks at Havre last night. None of our aircraft is missing.

It is now known another enemy aircraft was destroyed in yesterday's offensive operation, making a total of seventeen destroyed during the day.

The Air Ministry issued this communiqué tonight:

Blenheim aircraft of the Coastal Command this morning attacked a small enemy supply ship in the Bay of Biscay. Four bombs hit the vessel.

Fighters have carried out a number of offensive patrols over occupied territories and the Channel today.

In the course of these, supply trains, enemy troops and a patrol ship were attacked with cannon and machine-gun fire.

Two enemy fighters were destroyed. One of our fighters is missing.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries said:

During the night a small number of enemy aircraft flew over this country, mainly in coastal districts.

Bombs were dropped at a few points in South Wales and East Anglia.

No one was reported to have been hurt and little damage was done.

CAIRO, Sept. 19 (AP)—The British General Headquarters communiqué said:

Libya—A severe dust storm yesterday interfered with our patrolling activities at Tobruk.

In the frontier area advanced elements of mechanized forces have again been active.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Italian High Command communiqué said:

Nothing particular to report from the land front in North Africa. British aircraft again bombed Bengazi and Tripoli.

In addition to enemy aircraft reported shot down yesterday two more enemy planes were shot down by merchant ships at sea.

In East Africa the enemy, under cover of heavy mist, attempted to attack our advanced position at Uolchefit. Owing to immediate intervention by our troops and artillery the enemy was put to flight, leaving numerous dead on the battlefield.

TWELVE BRITISH WAR VESSELS IN PORTS OF U. S.

SEP 20 1941

Navy reveals presence in first major modification of policy; Battleship Warspite included

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, D. C., Sept. 19 (AP)—The presence of twelve British war vessels in United States harbors—among them the 35,000-ton battleship Warspite—was officially revealed by the Navy today in the first major modification of Anglo-American publicity policies since such ships began streaming into American ports for repairs and supplies.

The decision to give out this information and follow it up with similar reports in future apparently was designed to enable both American and Britons to comprehend the full extent of naval assistance being given Britain by the United States under the lend-lease program.

(A few days ago, President Roosevelt reported that under the lend-lease program $78,169,377 had been spent in repairing and outfitting naval vessels and on military and naval bases. He gave no breakdown on this figure).

Policy Change Announced

Secretary Knox announced the policy change in a release issued by the Navy Department and said that it had been agreed upon after several weeks of consultation with British authorities. It was promulgated on the general basis that while a "reasonable degree' of information would be given out "no information will be disclosed which might be of value to the enemy."

The Navy statement then listed the names of the twelve vessels and the ports in which they are. The Warspite, completed by the British in 1915 and armed with 15-inch guns, was reported at Bremerton, Wash. Why she was there and the extent of her damages, if any, were not disclosed, nor were such facts given about any of the other vessels, listed as follows:

Aircraft carriers: The sister ships Illustrious and Formidable, both of 23,000 tons, finished in 1940, 735 feet long and normally carrying 1,600 officers and men each. They are at Norfolk, Va.

Cruisers: The 4,850-ton Delhi and the 5,450-ton Dido at Brooklyn, N. Y.; the 9,100-ton Liverpool and the 7,215-ton Orion at Mare Island, Cal.; and the Asturias, which Navy officials said was a "converted cruiser," at Newport News, Va.

Submarine: The 260-foot Pandora at Portsmouth, N. H.

Smaller vessels: The Corvettes (pocket-size destroyers) Nasturtium and Primrose at Charleston, S. C.; and the Menestheus, described as a coastal mine-sweeper, at Baltimore.

SEP 20 1941

Restrictions Listed

Only twice before had the Navy broken its silence—and relaxed its policy of so-called "voluntary censorship"—regarding the presence of British men-o-war in U. S. ports. In the first instance, several months ago immediately after the policy was instituted, it was acknowledged that the battleship Malaya had put into New York. Within the last few weeks it was also disclosed that the Illustrious was at Norfolk and it was there recently that her new captain, Lord Louis Mountbatten, ceremoniously took command.

Along with its modification of policy, the Navy listed half a dozen restrictions regarding British ship information. Among these it was specified that "information as to methods employed in any operation in which the ship may have been engaged shall not be published."

This was said, however, not to bare references to known facts of engagements such as the battle in which, the British admiralty reported, the illustrious was damaged in the Mediterranean on January 10th. Repeatedly attacked by dive-bombers, she was badly battered and 80 of her crew were reported killed.

Not the Only Ones

Less was known about the particular reasons for the Warspite's presence in Bremerton. That veteran of the World War battle of Jutland has seen much service in the present conflict, however. She led the April, 1940, attack on Narvik, Norway, in which seven German destroyers were sunk, and in May, 1941, as Mediterranean fleet flagship, led the fleet into the great battle of Cape Matapan which cost the Italians three cruisers and two destroyers sunk and a battleship and other cruisers and destroyers damaged. Two months later she beat off an Axis torpedo plane attack on a convoy between Crete and Libya.

Rear Admiral A. J. Hepburn, chief of the navy's public relations bureau, made plain at a press conference that the twelve ships listed were by no means the only British vessels anchored in U. S. waters, but that they were the only ones which, as the official statement said, "may be regarded as cleared for publicity" at thist ime.

Have Votes to End Neutrality

SEP 20 1941

Senate Foes of Law Could Win Repeal of Law by Margin of Twelve.

Washington, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—A leading opposition strategist conceded today that the administration could win Senate approval—by the margin of a dozen votes—if it sought outright repeal of the neutrality act in furtherance of its program of aiding Britain.

Pointing out that any such proposal was likely to provoke heated and lengthy debate in both houses, this legislator said that an informal count of noses indicated senatorial opponents of repeal could muster no more than thirty-seven votes, twelve short of a majority.

He declined, however, to speculate on the outcome in the House. Some observers have said that the division of opinion there is sharp and much in doubt, although the action of the American Legion this week in urging outright repeal of the law was expected to have some effect.

May Seek Part Revision.

This evident uncertainty, as well as the prospect of a long argument on all of the aspects of the act, has caused administration leaders to consider seeking only partial revision of the law to permit the arming of American merchant ships plying in the defense waters from which President Roosevelt has ordered the navy to clear Axis warcraft.

A proposal of that nature would leave temporarily undisturbed the law's other major prohibition against American vessels carrying war supplies directly to belligerent ports, but Senator La Follette, Progressive, of Wisconsin, one of the Senate's so-called non-intervention bloc, said the two issues ought to be joined if Congress was to pass on them.

In any event, Senator LaFollette told reporters, there was certain to be full discussion of the moves already made by the administration. He was especially critical of the disclosure by Secretary Knox that the navy was convoying ships of other nations carrying war materials.

Sees Pledges Broken.

"According to the President's own definition of convoys," he declared, "he has ordered the American Navy into a shooting war. He has taken this drastic action without the approval or consent of Congress, which, under the Constitution, has sole power to declare war."

Senator LaFollette charged that the administration had promised there would be no convoying and said this pledge had now been broken. Senator Van Nuys, Democrat, of Indiana, took the same view.

Senator Van Nuys, who supported repeal of the neutrality act's arms embargo in 1939 and voted for the lease-lend bill, told reporters he was absolutely opposed to convoys because he believed they would lead to this country's involvement in war.

But Senator George, Democrat, of Georgia, a supporter of the administration's foreign policies, said he could see no objection to the navy's convoying war supplies within American waters. Any attempt to extend this protection of shipping into belligerent areas, he added, would require revision or repeal of the neutrality act.

Agreeing to some extent with this view, Senator Burton, Republican, of Ohio, said he doubted that Congress could interfere with what he regarded as the President's right, as Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces, to order convoys. He made it clear, however, that he was not indorsing the course that had been followed.

FULL SPEED AHEAD FOR NEW LEND BILL

House Chiefs Seek Quick Vote on $5,985,000,000.

Washington, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Administration leaders in the House set the machinery in motion today for quick approval of President Roosevelt's $5,985,000,000 lease-lend request as all factions predicted little opposition.

Representative Cannon, Democrat, of Missouri, called for an informal meeting of the House Appropriations Committee, of which he is chairman, during the day to arrange formal hearings on the big fund, starting Tuesday.

Speaker Rayburn and Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts announced that they expected to have the legislation before the House for a vote in less than two weeks and said they saw no fight in prospect.

Republican leaders were reported to have decided that the appropriation would encounter no formidable opposition and they, too, predicted that the final vote would not be close.

Reports circulated that a Republican would propose to deny Russia any of the new appropriation and that attempts would be made to reduce the total, but all seemed certain to be defeated.

"It would be very unfortunate,"

Mr. Rayburn said, "if the Russian amendment—or any other change in the legislation as submitted by the President—were to be accepted."

PRESIDENT BARS ARMY CONTROL OF DEFENSE JOB

SEP 20 1941

Roosevelt to Keep Industry in Civilian Instead of Military Hands.

NEW DEAL VICTORY IS SEEN

Placing of Exports Under Wallace Board Sends Maxwell Back to War Department.

By LLOYD LEMERCIER

Washington, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt, informed quarters reported today, has rejected proposals that would have placed a greater degree of control over defense industry in military, instead of civilian hands.

Refusing recommendations designed to extend the army's authority, Mr. Roosevelt took action to insure that the civilian-dominated governmental agencies administer measures affecting the supply of raw materials, priorities, production and export control.

The President's decision was the major development to date in what was described as a long and spirited behind-the-scenes battle for control of defense production and regulation of export trade.

The disclosure of the conflict followed the President's executive order of September 15 which transferred the export control administration to the economic defense board headed by Vice-President Wallace.

By that order the President not only transferred the hitherto separate, army-controlled export control administration to the Vice-President's board, but reduced it to a subordinate division which will be headed by a civilian, Milo Perkins, former head of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Maxwell Back to Army.

At the same time Brig.-Gen. Russel L. Maxwell, who has acted as administrator of export control since the office was organized July 2, 1940, was relieved of that assignment and ordered back to duty in the War Department.

SEP 20 1941

More than 100 other army officers—mostly from the reserves—are now on duty with the export control administration but there has been no decision yet as to their future disposition.

In the behind-the-scenes conflict, informed sources said, members of one faction described the others as New Dealers and were, in turn, called army bureaucrats.

The so-called New Dealers charged that the army bureaucrats had ambitious plans—even to the point of preparing proposed executive orders for the President's signature — which would expand and extend the export control administration's powers until it would be in control of the major part of defense industries.

Army Denies Ambitions.

This, the non-military faction argued would be detrimental to the best interests of American industry.

The military faction denied any ambitions to control industry, asserting the export control administration's powers were clearly defined in various presidential orders and had not been overreached.

The New Dealers, they charged, were chiefly interested in placing their proteges in the considerable number of positions in the organization and utilize the emergency opportunity to experiment with reforms.

Unchallenged facts in the controversy are:

After issuing a proclamation setting up the Export Control Administration the President, on July 2, 1940, issued a military order as commander-in-chief which stated that control of exports was essentially a military function, and designated Gen. Maxwell as administrator of export control.

On September 15, the President, reversing his position that export control was essentially a military function, transferred the Export Control Administration's functions to the Economic Defense Board as a branch of that organization.

As the official reason for the change, Vice-President Wallace announced that "the powers of the office of export control will will be more closely integrated into the broader work of the Economic Defense Board."

PRESIDENT STUDIES TAX BILL AS PASSED

Takes Huge Measure To Hyde Park—Does Not Know When He Will Sign

Holds Press Conference, But Refuses Comment On Foreign Situation

SEP 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 19—President Roosevelt came home today for the week end and indicated he would spend part of it studying the $3.553,400,000 tax bill. He said he did not know when he would sign it.

Some Treasury analysis of the bill were on the President's desk, and he said he did not think forty-eight hours was too long to consider the nation's biggest revenue measure.

Immediately after arriving by special train from Washington, Mr. Roosevelt busied himself in the library of his home, going through part of his extensive collection of naval books These are being put into condition for inclusion in the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library.

No News To Give Out

The work with the books was interrupted for the usual Friday morning press conference, which set some thing of a record for a lack of news

Reporters tried with complete futility to sound the President out on the battle of the Atlantic, Japanese-American relations, and even domestic politics.

Over a direct telephone line linking the temporary White House with Washington, the Chief Executive received a report on foreign affairs from Secretary Hull. Then he had the afternoon free for a drive over Dutchess county roads.

Arnold Blames Industries And Unions for Defense Delay

SEP 20 1941

Tells California Bar Big Plants Restrict Output to Avoid Prospective Overproduction After War.

Yosemite, Cal., Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Organized basic industries have been restricting defense production in order to avoid prospective overproduction after the war, Thurman Arnold, Federal anti-trust enforcement officer, told the California Bar Association today.

For the last ten months, Mr. Arnold asserted, defense work has been hampered by powerful private groups, including "a few strategically located labor unions," working for their own selfish motives.

The industrial groups fear the expansion of production, he said, "because it may destroy their domination of industry after the war. . . . They have concealed shortages by over-optimistic predictions of supplies."

"The labor union restrictions, which have nothing to do with wages or hours or conditions of labor, are today costing the American consumer over one billion dollars a year," Mr. Arnold declared. "The cost is increasing."

Assails Bottleneck.

"I am not talking about wages. I am talking about holdups and bottlenecks in housing and in food, and in fuel and in transportation. "They are created by powerful labor unions which claim the legal right to institute strikes and boycotts for the following illegitimate objectives: to enforce price-fixing agreements and free channels of distribution; to eliminate small competitors and owner-operators; to restrict the use of labor-saving devices; to keep more efficient materials off the market which might interfere with static jobs; to prevent self-employment; to make arbitrary classifications of jobs which retard the efficient use of labor; to tie up huge industries in the struggle to determine which of two unions will dominate the field."

Mr. Arnold said that these corporations and organizations were not unpatriotic, but had "trained themselves to resist the development of new enterprise."

"They are obsessed with the idea that overproduction will interfere with their future domination," he said. "While they are willing to expand their own war production, they do not want others to expand, and they reserve the right to dictate to civilian consumers what they can buy and the prices which they can pay.

Says England Suffered.

"In dealing with the anti-productive ideas of these groups we are only repeating the experiences of other democracies which prior to this war had gone a long way down the path of static cartelization of industry. England, because of this set of ideas, wasted all the precious months before the fall of France."

The anti-trust official charged that during the past year "the leaders of our basic industries have been demanding that priorities be used, not to expand production but as an excuse not to expand it."

Mr. Arnold contended that the awarding of huge defense contracts to a relatively few large industrial organizations, leaving smaller firms without priority standing and unable to get raw materials for civilian production and also unable to obtain subcontracts for making defense materials was threatening to cause the disbandment of thousands of small businesses.

"Whether they ever can come to life again is doubtful," he added. "The loss to national defense is irreparable."

Mr. Arnold said the imposition of price control would not work effectively if costs were raised by artificial restrictions. He declared that the building industry was enmeshed by these, and that monopoly and private pools were taking advantage of a golden opportunity to raise prices for food in large cities.

He said that the situation called for the full use of the Government's anti-trust powers to protect the farmer, the small business man and the consumer.

BARUCH WOULD CONTROL WHOLE PRICE EDIFICE

Tells Congress Universal Ceiling Is Greatest Necessity of Crisis.

SAYS INFLATION PERIL GROWS

Urges Single Administrator and Declares Henderson Best Qualified for Job.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 19 (AP)—Bernard M. Baruch appealed urgently to Congress today to toss the "business as usual" theory out the window for the duration of the emergency, urged universal price curbs under one-man rule and, in passing, criticized the British conduct of the war.

The tall, white-haired New York financier who, as chairman of the war industries board ran the nation's industrial mobilization for the World War with what he said were inadequate price controls, urged the House banking committee to revamp the Administration's price controll bill drastically.

One Ceiling Proposed

Criticizing the measure as "piece-meal," he said it should provide for establishment of a ceiling over the entire price structure—commodity prices, wages and rents.

His mild criticism of the British war setup came when Representative Smith (Rep. O.) asked whether it would not be better, in providing for administration of the price law, to take a cue from the British who put it in the hands of the Board of Trade, rather than to give it to one man to handle.

"I don't think much of the British system of handling the war," Baruch replied, adding quickly he did not want to seem unpleasant. "But they have had a lot of trouble—a lot of disagreements, I wouldn't want to follow them."

In advocating a one-man administration of the law, Baruch turned to Leon Henderson, present head of the Office of Price Administration, and said "here is the best qualified man for this job."

Straddling a chair and folding his arms over its back, the witness repeatedly told the legislators that he and his associates had made many "grievous errors" during the World War and reiterated that in the light of those experiences, he had decided that the "greatest single necessity of our present crisis" was a strong price-control law.

SEP 20 1941

Unpleasant, Unavoidable

"No matter how you look at it, price control is unpleasant," he said, "but I just don't see any way out of it."

At the conclusion of his testimony, several members who had been critical of the administration's bill professed themselves much more in favor of Baruch's more drastic proposal.

"Talking among ourselves, some of us agreed," one Democrat said, "that a weak bill would be worse than no bill at all."

"We should go whole-hog, or nothing," Representative Kean (Rep. N. J.) told Baruch.

Questioned as to what date Congress should select as the base for the price control plan, Baruch replied amid guffaws from the spectators "as far back as you think you can get away with." When pressed for a more specific answer, however, he suggested January 1, 1941.

Under his plan, all prices would be "frozen" at the levels of that date but readjustments could be made by the administrator whenever conditions or governmental policy warranted. Much the same procedure would be followed as to wages.

Baruch said that the "danger of an inflationary price rise is imminent" and if not taken firmly in hand in time "may get beyond the possibility of control."

"Time is Essential"

"Time is very essential," Baruch said, rising at the conclusion of his prepared statement. "There are leaks in the dike all along the line."

The committee has had price-control legislation under consideration, since August 4th, including a month-long recess period, and even after Baruch's testimony, some members expressed belief there would be at least six more weeks of public hearings.

30.24-11935

30.24 - 11935

Excerpts From Baruch's Testimony on Inflation

Baruch criticized the pending bill as "piece meal" because instead of providing for the over-all price ceiling which he advocated, it would merely authorize the President to establish such ceilings for prices which get out of line. It would not cover wages and it specifically stipulates that no ceiling could be fixed for farm commodities at less than 110 per cent of the parity price.

"Won't Stop Inflation"

"The bill before this committee will not stop inflation," Baruch said. "It may lessen the degree of inflation that we will have."

Clashing with viewpoints expressed by several members on a number of phases of the problem, Baruch said he favored a single administrator for the proposed law, instead of the board advocated by some of the legislators, and then asserted that Leon Henderson, present head of the office of price administration, was the "best qualified man for this job."

Turning to Henderson, who sat a few feet away, Baruch said with a smile:

"It isn't going to be easy; here you have a man of courage and vision."

At another point, Baruch said "this poor fellow is going to be like a flea on a gridiron" and said he, personally, would jump off the dock with two anchors tied to his feet if he thought the job was going to be saddled upon him.

Some committee members have privately expressed opposition to Henderson being made what they called "the czar of this country's economy" and indicated they would fight for revision of the bill to put its administration in the hands of a board.

Baruch took issue with the effort to prevent fixing of ceilings for farm commodities below 110 per cent of the parity price. He said they could be fixed "up to the parity level—and no higher" and added that those demanding the 110 per cent limitation "are inviting the farmer to go on another binge which will leave him with the same terrible hangover he suffered after the last war."

(A parity price is a price which would give farm products the same purchasing power, in terms of industrial goods, that prevailed in 1909-14.)

Wants Low Price Structure

The witness emphasized that the United States must preserve a low price structure so as to "win the peace."

"If ours is a high price structure," he warned, "the lean and gaunt nations, which have learned to do without, even if defeated, will be able to undersell us in the markets of the world. The economic and social dislocations that would result might destroy all of the freedom for which we say we are fighting."

If England falls and this country is left to carry on against German domination, he said, "in the inescapable trade war that would follow, the higher our price structure, the weaker we would be."

During a lengthy discussion of his proposal to put ceilings over wages as well as prices, Baruch emphasized that he was not advocating any abridgement of the workers' right to strike or bargain collectively and said that they still would be able to take complaints to the defense mediation board if they were unsatisfied with wage levels set. He agreed with Chairman Stegall (Dem. Ala.) that the controlling of prices would go far toward removing the cause of strikes.

SEP 20 1941

Lucas Backs Control.

Differing widely from other farm-minded members of Congress, Senator Lucas, Democrat of Illinois, today urged immediate enactment of price-control legislation.

"I think we've waited six months too long now," he said in an interview. "I believe the country would be in much better shape if we had put in some effective price stabilization before recent increases in living costs and materials."

Senator Lucas's support for price-fixing was expected to sharpen the controversy now growing in Congress over this issue. The Illinois Democrat has been a leader and spokesman for the Midwestern corn and wheat belts in the bi-partisan Senate farm bloc which has won most of its battles for farm legislation and large benefit payment funds in recent years.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Excerpts from the text of Bernard M. Baruch's prepared statement before the House Banking and Currency Committee today in support of passage of a price control bill follow:

I am not only in agreement with the objective of the bill, which is price control, but I have been a crusader for that objective for twenty-four years. For reasons I shall state, I regard it as the greatest single necessity of our present crisis. I think we have to do it not only to win the war, but also to win the peace, and above all, in both peace and war, to protect our people from unnecessary suffering and our American economic system from dissolution.

Before proceeding to a more general discussion and as a sort of index to my two main points of disagreement — and I think they are vital—they are these:

1. I don't believe in piecemeal price fixing. I think you have first to put a ceiling over the whole price structure, including wages, rents and farm prices, up to the parity level, and no higher, and then to adjust separate price schedules upward separately, if necessary, where justice or governmental policy so requires.

2. I don't believe that you can treat price control as a separate effort. It must be intimately tied up and move in step with all other war controls, wage and rent controls, priorities, conservation, commandeering, war trade, war finance and so forth. They are like the fingers of a hand. Without all together, the job can't be done satisfactorily.

Outline for Total Defense

Price control must be treated as only a part of the whole of total defense made necessary by the threat of total war. By itself price control has no value and will fail. Therefore it must be discussed in relation to the whole scheme of industrial mobilization.

Total defense must plan to fight, to win and, above all, to survive war. It must mobilize men, money, materials, morale, all resources, so they can be tapped at will for national defense and without exploitation and with the least dislocation of civilians. The needs of the Army and Navy and other war agencies of our country and of those nations we desire to help through the Lease-Lend Act change and expand overnight.

It is not the function of industrial mobilization to decide what those needs are but to supply the materials, labor and organization to meet these demands. To do this, we must know what he have to do and then plan to do it.

A general formula of action must be evolved to coordinate and synchronize the multiplicity of national and international efforts and to organize supply and demand so that the things that are needed are provided when and where they are needed with the least injury to the industrial fabric of the nation.

Need for Full Mobilization

If we are to keep the war from reaching these shores or win any war into which we are thrust, it will not be done by "business as usual" but by the full mobilization of our economic resources as in 1918 and it must not be too little or too late.

Full mobilization means transforming American industry from a highly competitive economy to a practically single unitary system under which all producers will cooperate, sharing trade secrets, pooling patents, resources and facilities.

Production must be speeded up to disgorge unprecedented volumes of supplies, military and civilian, with the fullest use made of every factory, worker, machine, dollar, tool and material.

This means regional organization to discover untapped sources of supply and plants which can be converted to defense needs. It also means special emphasis on subcontracting, using small businesses, particularly those businesses which would be deprived of work because of shortages of material or labor.

Because the conversion of facilities from peace to war production was not begun soon enough, we now face virtually overnight widespread dislocations, temporary unemployment and possible business failures.

SEP 20 1941

What this postponement has cost the country is impossible to reckon. But it is comforting that the present organization apparently appreciates the seriousness of the problem.

An adequate flow of materials must be maintained. Great stockpiles of strategic materials must be accumulated. We can develop substitutes for many things we now buy and free ourselves for all time, as others are trying to do, from many of our present-day imported necessities.

Because shortages will occur, total defense envisages the establishment of a priority so that materials will go not to the longest purse but to the most necessitous use. Less essential industries must yield precedence to those more essential and conversion made from less essential to more essential uses. However, in no instance must an industry be destroyed. The fat can be taken off all business but the skeleton and vital organs must remain. I note with some gratification that the new SPAB is now discussing this.

Commandeering of Resources

Under conditions of war production there is no such thing as a competitive price. There is more business than all the producers in the nation can possibly handle. It is unthinkable that the government or the people should become the victims of "what the traffic will bear" or of runaway markets, or that essential goods can be withheld by profiteers and speculators who believe they can command higher prices later. The government must be able to get what it needs at reasonable cost, to fix fair prices and to commandeer supplies and materials for just compensation.

This power of Congress to commandeer the nation's resources was the true basis of our control of industry during the last war, supplemented by priorities, price control, conservation, simplification, substitution and conversion of facilities. These things remain the essence of control for effective industrial mobilization today. They all go together. None will work successfully without the rest.

Cites Perils of Inflation

Except for human slaughter and maiming and all that goes with them, inflation is the most destructive of the consequences of war. It might double or more the cost of the war, it imposes the severest hardships on our people and, through inevitable deflation that follows, burdens the future with a constantly increasing debt and a long period of painful and bitter readjustment destroying the confidence of people in themselves and their government, leaving them open to all the old and new isms. Nor is inflation a danger which will hold back and wait for a formal declaration of a shooting war.

Some persons have said they fear price control might mean the end of our free economy. The demands of total defense already have suspended our competitive economy. The question to be answered is, will our industrial mobilization prove effective? If it is not, we may lose the chance ever to return to a free economic society. We returned after the last war, with such changes as we found necessary and helpful in the relationship between government, labor and industry.

The Question of Profits

We have talked for years of taking the profit out of war. Price control is one of the ways to do it. The inflationary process affords an opportunity to many to heap huge rewards, while the average person with a fixed income must tighten his belt.

More than a million young men have been drafted into the nation's armed services, taken from their homes, jobs and futures and given $21, $30 or $40 a month. Recently Congress decided the safety of our country required these youths to stay in service eighteen additional months. It is patently unfair to ask such sacrifices while other portions of society are permitted to accumulate exaggerated profits.

There is a great deal of concern these days over the state of morale of our soldiers. What will be the effect on their morale if the families of these soldiers have their budgets slashed by rising living costs while others wax rich?

America, which has refused to take a foot of territory for its own war profit, should show the way so that its citizens shall not profit from war. I cannot emphasize this too strongly. We have talked about it, we have written about it, we have preached about it, we have radioed about it. Veteran organizations and Congress both have adopted resolutions about it—that there shall be no profits from war. Let us now make good that promise.

Increased Taxes Expected

Of course we will also have to tax away the profits of war. In 1938 I advocated a two-ocean Navy, increased Army and an economic and cultural understanding with Latin America, the buying of strategic materials and a tax program to pay for it.

There has not been a time when increased defense has been discussed that I have not advocated increased taxes. In the two bills of 1940 we only played with it. The current bill is more like it, although it still doesn't go far enough. But I must emphasize that no tax program alone can recapture all excessive profits. Profits must also be controlled at their source, which is rising runaway prices. We must not have a crop of "defense millionaires" to parallel 1918 "war millionaires."

The second point I want to raise is that price control is essential if government salaries and appropriations are to have any meaning.

What will happen to the teachers, war veterans, social security beneficiaries, policemen, firemen, all the hundreds of thousands of government employes, Federal, State, county and city, if prices are allowed to run wild?

Will the Federal, State and city governments advance the wages of these people to meet increased costs of living? Or do they propose to leave them victims of fortuitous circumstances?

Chance to Save 20 Per Cent

Again with appropriations, so much is voted for guns, tanks and airplanes. Before they have been produced prices have jumped and to get the same number of tanks and guns and airplanes additional appropriations are needed.

Many members of Congress, worried over the size of government expenditures, have been urging economies in non-defense expenditures.

I say to them that no action could effect greater savings in the cost of government than to prevent inflation. Billions—20 per cent or more of all appropriations—can be saved. There is no

Important to "Win Peace"

The third point, not generally considered in the discussion of price control and of very great importance to us in the years to come, is that unless America has a low-price structure when the war ends we may win the war only to lose the peace.

When peace comes, as it eventually must, what will be our position at the peace table and in world trade?

SEP 20 1941

If ours is a high-price structure the lean and gaunt nations, which have learned to do without, even if defeated will be able to undersell us in the markets of the world. The economic and social dislocations that would result in this country might destroy all of the freedoms for which we say we are fighting.

With a low price structure, America can hold her own and demand as a price for economic collaboration just terms of peace.

If we have such a low price structure we can insist upon living standards everywhere being raised so that our own shall not be destroyed and we shall not be forced to undersell everybody.

With higher living standards and wages, the purchasing power for fuller world trade will be provided. What greater preventive of war can you effect?

Danger in High Prices

But with a high price structure we shall be powerless to write a peace treaty that will protect our own standards of living from attack by other nations. We will lose our foreign markets and to protect our home workers will have to take refuge in artificially high trade barriers.

The disparities between various segments of our economy, between farmers producing for export markets and industries producing for home markets, will be aggravated. We will be unable to provide full employment for all our workers. Such a situation created by our own lack of foresight and lack of planning might well wreck us.

If England falls and we be left to carry on against German domination, in the inescapable trade war that would follow, the higher our price structure, the weaker we would be. In economic war, a low price structure might very well be the deciding factor for victory.

So great are the stakes, there must be no compromise in drafting an effective program of price control.

Since every price is a resultant of the combination of all other prices, it is both unjust and impractical to regulate one segment of the industrial fabric while exempting or providing special concessions for other segments.

Administratively there might be good reasons why the agency controlling prices of raw materials and finished products should not be entrusted with the task of regulating wages or rents. I do not think so. Still, that is an administrative detail to be decided by Congress and the President.

Opposes Any Exceptions

As a matter of basic principle, a price control law should make no exceptions. All citizens should be treated alike as part of one nation joined in a great emergency and every segment of our economy, agriculture, labor, business, should be treated as parts of a single, living, sensitive organism.

In all plans for industrial mobilization, I suggested a method of price control. I proposed that some date on which the normal operation of the law of supply and demand can be said to have controlled prices, be selected and that the entire price structure be stabilized, I mean not freezing but subjected to a ceiling, as of that date.

Prices, rents, wages, commission fees, interest rates—in short, the price of every item of commerce or service—would not be permitted to rise above the maximum on that date. They could fluctuate below this ceiling.

A competent tribunal would then adjust any of these maximum prices, upward or downward, whether to cure incidental injustice or undue hardship or to increase production.

Foresees Plight of Farmer

The over-all ceiling does not mean that the producers of agricultural commodities or labor would get less. If the cost of all things were kept down, they might get more. Every one knows that after the war it will be impossible to maintain excessively high prices without debasing the purchasing power of the dollar.

Agricultural prices and probably wages will fall further than other prices—they always do.

If prices are allowed to skyrocket now, the post-war disparity between various groups will be far greater than if all prices are kept at a low level now. I have particularly in mind the unhappy plight of the farmer in the years following the last war.

The ceiling for agricultural prices can be set at "parity" which has become an accepted principle and this same "parity" relationship can be retained after the war. Thus agriculture could shift from war to peace with a minimum of dislocation.

Those who demand 110 per cent of "parity" and more are inviting the farmer to go on another binge which will leave him with the same terrible hangover he suffered after the last war.

Labor's Right to Strike

The plan I propose would not affect labor's right to strike or the right of every worker to bargain collectively.

What of the millions of workers who are unorganized—the vast army of white collar workers whose incomes are fixed and who have no pressure group to fight for them? Who is going to take care of them? How will they get the wage increases to which they are entitled if rising living costs cut their real incomes?

In times of war or great preparations for war when sacrifices are demanded of every one, all are entitled to equal government protection. There should be no tampering with labor's or agriculture's gains or with the status of industry. The status quo of all should remain until the war is ended.

Lease-Lend Shipments Boost Exports in July

Month's Total Is $359,000,000, Highest for Year—Imports Decline Slightly —Figures Are Tentative.

Washington, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The Department of Commerce said today large shipments of lease-lend food and other supplies to England boosted United States merchandise exports in July to the highest level of the year.

Food exports, particularly, jumped in July, although they have been declining almost steadily since the war began. Food shipments totaled $46,000,000, more than double the monthly average so far this year, and included $11,000,000 of meat, $6,000,000 of lard, $9,000,000 of dairy products and $4,000,000 of eggs. The department no longer gives the destination of individual commodities, but indicated nearly all of this food went to England under lease-lend.

July reports so far available show that exports totaled $359,000,000, but the department said that delay in filing and tabulating export documents made it inadvisable to accept this as a final figure for comparison with other months. However, the figure compared with $329,737,000 in June and $316,669,000 in July of last year.

Imports Declined.

Imports declined slightly to $277,847,000, compared with $279,536,000 in June and $232,393,000 in July 1940.

For the first seven months of the year, exports totaled $2,445,676,000, imports $1,871,944,000, and the export excess was $573,732,000.

In the similar period last year exports were $2,381,056,000, imports $1,526,455,000, and the export excess was $854,601,000.

Aeronautic exports showed little change in July. Compared with June, shipments of airplanes increased from 352 to 360, but shipments of airplane engines declined from 478 to 298.

Farm Shipments.

Comparisons in foreign trade in certain leading agricultural commodities in July follows: (Figures given in this order—July 1940, June 1941, July 1941, first seven months of 1940, and first seven months of 1941):

Exports of unmanufactured cotton (pounds) — 74,341,000, 39,241,000, 31,745,000, 1,716,224,000, 268,916,000.

Imports of unmanufactured cotton (pounds)—12,196,000, 19,027,000, 19,483,000, 70,744,000, 151,288,000.

Exports of unmanufactured tobacco (pounds) — 14,495,000, 14,916,000, 26,793,000 171,432,000, 127,616,000.

Imports of unmanufactured tobacco (pounds)—7,780,000, 6,630,000, 6,042,000, 43,381,000, 43,347,000.

Exports of wheat (bushels)—1,888,000, 106,000, 30,000, 10,322,000, 4,895,000.

Imports of wheat for milling and re-export (bushels) — 598,000, 603,000, 53,000, 5,449,000, 4,382,000.

Export of corn (bushels)—6,670,000, 69,000, 1,354,000, 26,143,000, 4,073,000.

Exports of meat products (pounds) —6,561,000, 46,661,000, 51,954,000, 109,950,000, 128,109,000.

Imports of meat products (pounds) —6,771,000, 10,219,000, 10,279,000, 62,095,000, 86,582,000.

Exports lard (pounds) — 28,239,000, 20,101,000, 53,819,000, 148,449,000, 159,817,000.

Exports of dairy products—$2,041,000, $7,827,000, $9,200,000, $6,353,000, $28,105,000.

SPY SUSPECTS REPORTED AT SHIPS' RADIOS

Navy Officials' Senate Committee Testimony Protested By Labor

SEP 20 1941

Bill To Bar Operators Suspected Of Subversion Called "Anti-Union"

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 19—Testimony by Navy Department officials that a number of spy suspects were radio operators aboard American merchant vessels roused a volley of protests from Maritime Union spokesmen at a Senate hearing today.

Rear Admiral S. C. Hooper told a Senate Commerce subcommittee that it should give speedy approval to a House-approved bill for denying or suspending licenses of ship radio operators suspected of being "subversive individuals."

Urged To Kill Bill

A group of labor representatives for both AFL and CIO martime unions urged the Senate to kill the House bill as "anti-union" and unconstitutional.

Senator Radcliffe (Dem., Md.), who conducted the hearing alone as chairman of the maritime subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee, indicated that the controversial measure would be sent on to the Senate sometime next week.

James V. Forrestal, Under Secretary of the Navy, informed the committee by letter that unless the bill were given speedy approval navy radio operators must be placed aboard all merchant ships.

Says Most Are Loyal

Although the navy classed most ship radio operators as loyal, the Under Secretary wrote, "There is an appreciable number of these operators who are suspected of being members of subversive groups."

Joseph P. Selly, president of the American Communications Association (CIO), offered a substitute plan.

It included control by the master of a ship of all power for radio communications, reduction of such communications to a minimum and an automatic permanent record of all messages sent.

Record Defended

Hoyt S. Haddock, appearing for the CIO maritime unions, defended the record of American radio ship operators. He said they already had demonstrated willingness to face death in order to carry supplies to the "nations of Europe engaged in the fight against Hitlerism."

The only union spokesman supporting the measure was Andrew MacDonald, of the radio officers' division of the AFL Commercial Telegraphers' Union, who said this group was formed when other maritime unions came under domination of the Communist party.

Says Party Line Changed

Since the break between Russia and Germany, MacDonald testified, the Communist party line changed from peace to war and "cleared the way for thousands of comrades to work their way into controlling positions in labor politics, defense and government."

Lawson Wimberly, of the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said the pending bill was an "anti-union" measure and suggested numerous modifying amendments.

EX-FORD OFFICIAL SPY TRIAL TARGET

Former Plant Manager Accused In Alleged Plot To Give Data To Nazis

SEP 20 1941

Witness Tells Of Showing Edmund Heine Through Martin Plant

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 19—Middle-aged Edmund C. Heine's quest for American aviation information was translated by the Government late today into an alleged scheme to transmit to Germany important technical intelligence on prized developments in the aircraft industry.

Heine, a former $30,000-a-year plant manager for the Ford Motor Company, raised no objection to testimony of a dozen witnesses regarding his travels and his correspondence asking information on aviation subjects.

Among the day's witnesses was Gordon Spittel, a distant cousin of Heine, who said he showed Heine through the Glenn L. Martin plant, in Baltimore, and answered many of his questions about production there and in Hagerstown, Md.

Spittel, about 22 and a former employe of the Martin company, said Heine visited with his family for several days during the latter part of August, 1940. He said he took Heine on a tour of the airport, the Martin plant, the harbor and other places of interest.

Tells Of Letter

Then, some days after Heine's return to Detriot, the witness said, the Spittels received a letter in which Spittel quoted Heine as asking:

"Please ask Gordon was it 12,000 men working in the Glenn Martin plant for the three shifts per day, making 4,000 per shift, or was it 12,000 for each shift? Does he happen to know the figures for the Fairchild plant in Hagerstown, Md.? They would be very interesting for me."

Spittel said he furnished the figures asked and said that in another letter Heine asked "whether I knew about two other factories around Hagerstown—I forgot the names but one had Clark in it." He said he told Heine he did not know about them.

Other Witnesses

Other witnesses of the day included:

HARRY THORELL, now an army aviation photographer stationed at Westover Field, Mass., who testified that Heine came to his shop in Bridgeport, Conn., and purchased for $5 about fifty or sixty pictures of the "latest type" military planes.

NORMAN DAVIDSON, assistant contract administrator for the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, Cal., who identified correspondence with Heine in which information was asked on the construction and facilities of a new bomber.

WILLIAM A. BAKER, president of the Firestone Steel Products Company, Akron, Ohio, who said that on a letter of introduction from his company's licensed dealer in Germany he had shown Heine through his plant and discussed a process for painting rubber used on planes.

Action By Defense

To the testimony of these and several other witnesses, Heine's counsel, George Gordon Battle, raised virtually no objection, developing these aspects of the case with a few friendly questions in each cross-examination.

But when two lengthy technical articles were offered, signed "Heinrich"—which the indictment cites as one of Heine's several aliases—Battle was on his feet protesting vigorously. He contended that the Government had not shown the connection between Heine's curiosity and the details which the Government said were passed on to a spy ring for transmission to Germany.

Proof Called For

Federal Judge Mortimer L. Byers, presiding at the trial of Heine and fifteen others charged with espionage conspiracy, admitted the papers subject to the Government's establishing Heine's authorship.

William G. Sebold, who said he was assigned to espionage by the German Gestapo and then turned his commission over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, identified the papers as having been given him by Lily Stein—one of seventeen who pleaded guilty to one or both counts of the indictment.

Sebold said that in June, 1940, he had queried the Hamburg Gestapo as to how they wanted the data sent. He was in charge of a secret "spy" radio on Long Island, which the F. B. I. helped him build and operate.

Nature Of Data

The papers, embracing several thousand words of condensed specifications, told of:

The development of Diesel airplane engines by S. A. Guiberson, of Dallas, Texas, and the Lawrence Engineering Company, of Linden, N. J.

The supply of Pratt & Whitney motors, in East Hartford, Conn., to Grumman, Lockheed, Bellanca, Waco and other planes.

A new General Motors engine, designed in Indianapolis, which developed one horse-power for each pound it weighed.

The Bell Airacobra, which "operates efficiently at 36,000 feet" altitude.

The principles of the Boeing stratoliner.

Bendix motors.

Hydraulic fuel systems.

Propellor types used by the army and navy.

New devices in landing gear.

A vast amount of other technical data.

MORGENTHAU GOES TO MEETING OF CIO

Notes Worry About Jobs. Says OPM Should Explain Funds To Them

SEP 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Detroit, Sept. 19—Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, spent several hours today as an incognito observer of industrial and human problems involved in turning production of huge automotive units here into armament and defense channels.

He visited a CIO union meeting and he stopped to put nickels in "Juke boxes" that had recordings of the Treasury's defense bond sale theme song.

Hears Discussion

When his tour ended, he expressed belief in an interview that "somebody" in the Office of Production Management should explain to workers worried over unemployment that "a very small percentage of the money which Congress has appropriated for national defense has been spent."

Secretary Morgenthau, his indentity unknown except for one union officer, heard a discussion of the pay-roll allotment plan of defense savings at a meeting, in nearby Pontiac, of members of Fisher Body Local No. 596 of the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

"Many people have urged forced savings," he said later. "I came away from the meeting convinced that it can be done on a volunteer basis, and unless we can do it this way something is wrong with the program."

Says Somebody Should Explain

Morgenthau said the workers "don't understand why provision is not made to give them other jobs when automobile production is curtailed."

"Somebody in the OPM should explain to working men and women," he added. "The money is there to pay, and it is up to the OPM. There must be and should be work for these skilled people. They did not question the necessity of the changeover or its purpose, but wanted to know what they were going to do in the meantime."

Morgenthau arrived last night in a Coast Guard lane. He arranged to depart for New York this evening after conferring with CIO and AFL officials, attending a luncheon meeting with Detroit bankers to discuss sale of tax anticipation bonds.

SHIP SEIZURE HELD URGENT BY COMMISSION

Maritime unit says transporting of supplies to defense bases necessary

SEP 20 1941

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Maritime Commission said today it had requisitioned for a single voyage three struck merchant ships, which ply between here and United States Caribbean defense bases so that there would be no further delay in the transportation of supplies.

They will be manned by present officers and such members of the crew who wish to rejoin the ships under the wage scale currently paid by their former employer, the Alcoa Steamship Company, the commission said.

Eleven Other Ships Affected

The ships, the Alcoa Banner, Alcoa Trader and Alcoa Scout, were seized yesterday after the Seafarer's International Union (A.F.L.) refused to submit to arbitration their demands for increased bonuses for war zone travel. The strike of unlicensed personnel called Saturday, has affected eleven other ships docked here, in Boston, New Orleans and Mobile.

Capt. Granville Conway, district director of the commission, said that "for the time being" the other vessels would not be requisitioned.

Both the Alcoa Banner and the Alcoa Trader are loaded with defense supplies and ready for departure. The commission said the Alcoa Scout was ready to load "but has not been able to commence loading since September 13th because there are no men on board the ship to supply steam for winches."

War Bonus Asked

The union is seeking a bonus of $60 monthly for travel in the West Indies, which they ask to be considered a war zone, as are Canadian waters where a $1-a-day bonu is paid. These demands were backed by the sailors union of the Pacific (A. F. of L.) which called its members off three ships here.

Seizure of the three vessels represented the first time the government has taken over ships because of labor trouble.

The commission said in a statement issued in Washington that the Alcoa seamen struck despite a clause in the existing labor contract stating "there shall be no strikes, lock out, or stoppage of work during the life of this agreement."

SAYS U. S. PREPARES FOR WAR ON NAZIS

Assistant War Secretary Calls On People To Face Realistic Fact

McCloy Asserts All Efforts Are Aimed Directly At The Germans

[By the Associated Press]

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 19—American defense preparations, John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War, said today, "are not made in the abstract—they are pointed at only one source of infection and that is Germany."

McCloy, addressing the Michigan State Bar Association, ridiculed the isolationist viewpoint that the present conflict is no concern to the United States.

"We can no more ignore this war than a man can ignore an elephant in his parlor," he declared. "Whether we should take part in this struggle strikes me as about as realistic a debate as the medieval dispute as to which equidistant bale of hay a starving but theoretical donkey would move."

No Abstract Preparations

McCloy asserted that the American people, after years of apathy, now demand modern weapons in vast quantities and "would tear apart any government which failed to meet that demand."

"The preparations we have been making have not been made in the abstract," he said. "They are pointed at only one source of infection and that is Germany.

McCloy said we must not delude ourselves with isolationist argument that, since Germany could not invade England across the twenty-two-mile stretch of the English Channel, the United States is safe from the Nazi drive for world domination.

"It is generally felt in military circles," he told the lawyers, "that without sending a single soldier across the Channel, Germany could subjugate England with the full weight of her air force."

10,000,000 Under Arms

The War Department official said it is estimated by United States military experts that Germany has 300 divisions totaling nine to ten million men under arms and that perhaps 100 of these divisions are yet to be thrown into the battle of Russia.

He said it was probable that hostilities would spread to the Mediterranean area, Spain and North and West Africa.

Turning to the results of "our preparation for war," McCloy catalogued the ever-increasing variety of American fighting planes and described some of the bombing and pursuit ships as superior to anything yet produced by Germany or England.

He assailed those who complain over the slowness of American preparedness, declaring that after a country has permitted its munitions industry to die out and its army to evaporate it takes two and a half years to prepare for war.

"The United States is going to best that formula by a considerable margin but it cannot be done overnight," he said.

NEW LEGION HEAD BACKS WAR POLICY

Stambaugh Would Use Army Wherever It's Needed.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Lynn U. Stambaugh of Fargo, N. D., new national commander of the American Legion, took charge of the organization's affairs today with the statement that he would carry forward the decision of the national convention to promote "unswerving support" of the Government's foreign policy.

He is a 51-year-old attorney who entered the world war as a private in 1917 and was commissioned a second lieutenant while serving overseas. He succeeded Milo J. Warner of Toledo, Ohio.

Mr. Stambaugh listed among the objectives of the legion the defeat of Hitler, repeal of the United States neutrality act and the use of American troops wherever the Government needs them to keep war away from the United States.

He said that the legion's refusal to go on record against lease-lend aid to Russia did not change its views against Communism, but resulted from a feeling that there should be no conflict with policy as determined by the President and Congress.

Mr. Stambaugh was elected on the first ballot as the legion's twenty-third national convention came to a close yesterday. Two other candidates, Edward N. Scheiberling of Albany, N. Y., and Raymond Fields of Guthrie, Okla., joined in making the choice unanimous.

Co-operation in the legion's defense program was pledged by Mrs. Mark W. Murrill of Scituate, Mass., who was elected president of the national auxiliary. Mrs Murrill also is a legionnair through her service as chief pet officer in the Naval Intelliger Bureau during the world war.

2 Russian Flying Boats Leave U. S. For Home

Brought Military Mission Of 47 Men—Take Off From Seattle For Alaska

Seattle, Sept. 19 (AP)—Two Russian flying boats which brought a military mission of forty-seven men to this country two weeks ago took off today en route back to Russia via Alaska.

Aboard were ten Russians, all but one of whom made the original flight.

The expedition, headed by Brig. Gen. Mikhail Gromov, was non-communicative on the purpose of the mission.

LaGuardia Says Cities Must Plan Own Defense

Asserts It Would Take Nation Year And Half To Equip Self Against Attack

Cleveland, Sept. 19 (AP)—It will take a year and a half to equip the nation for adequate protection of its civilian population against the possibility of attack by a foreign power, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, asserted today.

The director of civilian defense said preparations primarily are a responsibility of municipalities, which he said must plan also to meet financial problems that will follow the present emergency.

"An auxiliary fire-fighting force three to five times the normal personnel will be needed, on the basis of England's experience," he told the Cleveland Citizens' League.

U. S. and Mexico Seeking Reciprocal Trade Pact

Hull Discloses Negotiations, Now in Preliminary Stages

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP).—Secretary of State Hull disclosed today that preliminary conversations were under way, seeking a reciprocal trade agreement with Mexico.

At present the United States does not have such an agreement, but has worked out previously a strategic-materials deal with the Mexican government.

The Secretary said the proposed reciprocal-trade agreement would not in any way be tied up with an over-all agreement now being discussed. That reportedly includes a proposed loan to Mexico and payment by the Mexican government to American firms whose oil properties were expropriated.

The Secretary said the reciprocal agreement was still in the preliminary discussion stage.

U. S. Ferry Plane Victim Leaves Widow $52,000

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 19.—Capt. Sherwood Picking, United States naval officer killed in an R. A. F. ferry plane crash, named his widow, Elizabeth Warner Picking of Falmouth Foreside, Me., sole legatee of a $52,000 estate, his will filed for probate yesterday showed.

Capt. Picking was killed in England September 1 while going to London to assume the post of assistant United States naval attache.

Radio Warfare Planned On Naziism Inside Reich

Short-Wave Station Designed To Be Most Powerful In World To Send Programs

Boston, Sept. 19 (AP)—Plans to "try to break the German people away from the yoke of Naziism" by means of "intensified" radio broadcasts from an American short-wave station that is designed to be the most powerful in the world, were disclosed today by Walter S. Lemmon, president of the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation.

Founder of Station WRUL which now is the strongest short-wave unit in the Western Hemisphere, Lemmon said the Federal Communications Commission had just authorized the establishment of new transmission facilities that would eventually add another 100,000 watts of power to the foundaiton's radio arm.

In the beginning, he said, the broadcasts will be directed to reach German listeners at night, but he said it was the foundation's hope eventually to broadcast other programs to them "before breakfast, before they have a chance to hear the Nazi propaganda that beleaguers them in busses, in factories and everywhere they go."

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

Hitler's powerful and unrelenting offensives against the Russians on both flanks of the 1,100 battle line are creating a grave threat to the present Red positions.

The crucial engagement—having regard to its effect not only on the Russo-German war but on the European conflict as a whole—is in the Ukraine, which will provide a gateway to further tremendous adventures if the Nazi chief can force it.

There certainly is nothing in the strategical setup of the moment to guarantee that the fiercely resisting Muscovites won't be compelled to make widespread withdrawals to defenses further east. Indeed, the likelihood is that they will unless they have a quick break of luck.

Thus far the Bolshevist high command has pulled back its great, unwieldy front in such soldierly fashion as to keep it intact. But retreats are among the most dangerous operations of war, for once a line gives way there may easily be a debacle, and frequently the situation becomes more critical with each retirement.

Eyes Turned Toward Tokio.

This increasing pressure on the Reds will make the Allies turn their eyes toward Tokio, where among the momentuous problems the Japanese government has been considering undoubtedly is whether Japan shall seize the opportunity to attack Russia. The feeling has existed in some Japanese quarters that war might be made on the Reds without bringing Nippon into conflict with the United States.

Thus it is interesting to note that today for the second time the Japanese government has protested to the Soviet against floating mines in the Sea of Japan. Here we have a possible basis for war—if Tokio feels that Russia is hard-pressed enough to warrant such action.

The military position in the Russian theater today gives the picture of a front which is flaming with death from end to end.

The Germans report they are now in Kiev.

The great city of Leningrad, Russia's doorway to the Baltic and the Red fleet, is still on its feet, but it is bathed in blood and fire. The defense by troops, and civilian men and women, is an epic.

Berlin claims to have silenced the big guns of Kronstadt, the Soviet naval base which has guarded the ancient Czarist capital from sea attack. The Nazis now may be able to capitalize this with a naval assault to support their land operations.

In the center of the front near Smolensk, on the road to Moscow, the opposing forces are in a bloody grip which is swaying the line like a reed. The protracted engagement in this sector probably will be listed as one of the most costly of the war in human life.

The Crimean Peninsula, on which lies the Russian naval base of Sevastopol, is threatened if not actually cut off from the mainland. Meantime, the Nazis are reported to have gathered naval ships in the Bulgarian harbors ready for a drive across the Black Sea in an effort to land troops in the Caucasus and storm the Russians from the rear.

The development of the German strategy will be worth watching, for the scheme is a vast one. Should they be able to get a foothold in the Caucasus they not only would have the Bolshevists fighting on two fronts in Southern Russia, but they would have severed the Soviet lifeline to the Persian Gulf—a major disaster for the Reds.

At that juncture, of course, the Russian and British forces in Iran (Persia) would come into action. On this clash would depend whether Hitler could gain control of the Near East, thereby at one and the same time opening up the road to the riches of India and paving the way for an attack on Egypt.

The Hitlerian program which is now unfolding is one of the most colossal in all the history of the conquerors.

BRITISH NIGHT FIGHTERS TAKE JOB IN STRIDE

They're up, they're away, they do their work, and they're back to bed again

SNS ADV

By EDDY GILMORE

A Bomber Station in England, Sept. 19 (AP)—They're cranking up the Bremen bus—that's what they call it now.

The night is warm, the moon a bright crescent. Young fliers dress outside the billets and lie around on the grass, talking and laughing. When all are ready, they climb into the bus, which once took vacationers over these country roads.

The bus winds through the village, past the old parish church. The villagers wave and the bomber crews wave back.

At the airdrome the night's flying rations are handed out. Someone discovers some oranges in his pack and whoops for joy.

Ambulance Rolls Up

An ambulance rolls up. The fliers show no notice. More buses roll in.

The crews pile into the bombing planes. They take off systematically, the engines' roar making the ground shake.

When all have gone, the night is strangely quiet. Back in the mess hall the radio blares. A blues singer moans . . . but finally the broadcasting ends. With the radio silent, there is no sound at all.

Then the engines of the first returning bombers roar in the distance.

One by one they land. The crews filter into the interrogation room. Sandwiches, coffee and cigarets are handed out.

Everyone talks freely, as though commenting on a cricket match. The reports start:

"Bremen hit hard . . many big fires . . . saw lots of bombs burst . . . lots of light flak (anti-aircraft guns) . . . heavy ones, too . . . plenty of searchlights . . .

Could See Everything

"Lucky we got a good patch . . . we could see everything . . . we glided in quietly, bombed and turned around to glide out again . . . terrific fires . . . could see girders standing out on flaming buildings . . .

"On way back beyond the Dutch coast we ran into that searchlight belt. It must be 60 to 80 miles long, twenty deep. They're working in cones . . . 20 to 30 lights in one cone."

It is nearly dawn when the last report is completed.

Outside, the bus is cranked up again to roll the heavy-eyed crews back to their beds. In five minutes they're all asleep on the bus as it rumbles past the old parish church again. The crescent moon is almost down.

The bus stops, the crews roll out. There's never a word about those who are missing.

The bus moves away. The night's work is over.

Our Navy Changes the Maps

Keeping Close Guard Over Ships Plying Between the United States and Iceland.

SEP 20 1941

By MORGAN M. BEATTY,
AP Feature Service Writer.

Aboard United States Navy Patrol Bomber Over the Atlantic.—Hot cakes for early breakfast in New England and a snack of Danish pastry for late supper in Iceland! That would be possible in these huge flying boats. They can cross whole time zones while you're taking your Sunday afternoon nap, but our flight's no stunt. We aren't proving anything about hot cakes and pastry. We're out on a serious mission in an area that's notorious for the worst weather in the world.

It's our job to watch over American merchant ships and navy vessels between the United States and Iceland. And we're doing it, precisely and accurately. At the moment, we have reached our farthest point east. Several hours ago we took off from our floating air base "somewhere off the coast of the American side of the North Atlantic." We're about opposite the southern tip of Greenland and it's time to back track.

"Station men in the blisters; keep a sharp lookout."

It's the voice of the flight commander through the plane's phone system. Gunners move along the runway aft, take observation posts in the big windowed area near the tail.

* * *

The navigation officer forward awaits order. He's got a lot of fast work to do. The commander speaks:

"Chart the course —— miles on either side of our outbound course. . . . Give us a turn at specified intervals. . . ."

The navigator bends over his big table. In a minute or two he passes a tiny strip of paper to the commander. It says: "Two-three-zero-m." That's our magnetic compass course for the moment. The commander relays the course to our accompanying plane, and we begin a slow turn.

"I'm crossing over. . . . You cross under . . ." says my left earphone. "Wilco," comes back the answer, signifying compliance.

The navigator sends an officer to drop a smoke bomb and get the wind-drift. Then he picks up the artificial horizon and squints at the sun, calculates rapidly. This checks the drift of the plane and our position in the wastes of the North Atlantic.

Our course develops in lines on the blank chart like a ladder. We cross and recross our outbound course, repeat the process endlessly. This is the way the navy air arm makes tracks in a trackless ocean. No guesswork, no fuss, no confusion. Just headwork and precise co-ordination.

Our aircraft and every man aboard is a team. The plane with us is another team, and our floating airbase is still another, holding us all together with the magic waves of radio. The commander back on that base is responsible to the chief of operations in Washington, Admiral Harold Stark, who reports to the Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox. Mr. Knox is under the President.

The navigator calls me to a chart, points to a tiny spot on the American shore.

"We're heading for that lighthouse."

We receive a message from the base.

"Return not later than sixteen thirty plus X time. . . ." That means we must get in by 4:30 P. M., time zone X, west of Greenwich, plus one-half hour.

* * *

Just before 4 P. M. the navigator sights a jutting piece of coastline. Soon a tiny white lighthouse appears. The flight commander turns, makes a circle with his thumb and forefinger. We're right on the nose.

We had scanned more than 6,000 square miles of the North Atlantic in our ten-hour flight. As the crow flies, we'd gone more than 1,100 nautical miles. If we'd flown a great circle bee-line course eastward, we'd just now be landing in Iceland, instead of coming back to our base.

Boy, oh boy; If Miss Greene only knew what Uncle Sam's Navy has done to the geography she taught me back in the fifth grade!

No Easy Chair on Navy Plane

Every Inch of Space Is Taken Up by Some Gadget of Importance.

SEP 20 1941

By MORGAN M. BEATTY,
AP Feature Service Writer.

Aboard United States Navy Patrol Bomber Over the Atlantic.—Jonah in the whale is perfectly plausible to the crew of a navy flying boat. That's the shape of their workshop, and you've got to play corkscrew to get around inside.

The men around me savvy the crooks and turns. That makes it simple for them, but I find dozens of gadgets to step on, trip over and bang my head against. Lucky the designer thought to pad some of these objects.

I seem to have developed a positive genius for sitting down on ration-filled seabags and knocking flare pistols sky-winding into the solarium—that's what they call the blisters on the fuselage aft. It's bright and sunny out there. It's the home of the gunners.

Things seem confused, as if it were moving day aboard a flying boarding house, but confusion turns out to be convenience, the way these men go about their work. This big whale belly is fantastically compact. There's a place for everything, and everything's fastened down, including ash trays and anchors. Smoking's permitted everywhere except near the compartment carrying the fuel lines.

Every inch of space is taken up by something. Neat squares of canvas tacked to the hull carry most of the stowage, including the yellow life jackets. These are rubber contraptions. Dangling down from them are two pieces of plastic about the size of dice. Pull them and you punch a hole in a carbon dioxide gas cartridge. Then your belt blows up like a pouter pigeon and you're supposed to be saved from drowning. If we get a ducking in that ice water down there I wonder whether that ten minutes of life would really be worth while.

There's no mistaking the wing de-icing mixture and drinking water, or vice versa. Everything's labeled but the paper towel rack. That's a recent addition, screwed to the back of the meck's (mechanic's) chair in the tower. You "wash" your hands with these towels.

The tower is a flying dash board. It's tucked in the space where the fuselage fastens on to the wing. There's room enough for duplicate sets of all the instruments in front of the pilot up front. The meck's chair hangs down from the roof. The tower watch climbs up narrow ladders takes his perch between windows, where he can see those two motors. His orders come from the flight commander through the phone system.

High pressure fire extinguishers are all over the place. They handle like pistols. Each engine carries a special extinguisher. It operates from the tower. The plane can take off, fly and land on one motor. That makes me several notches happier.

* * *

Almost underfoot along the sixty-odd feet of runway are chests of tools, spare parts and whatnot, all screwed down. Near each man's normal position is oxygen apparatus and mask. The ship will climb to 25,000 feet. At 15,000 men sometimes go silly without oxygen, try a waltz or play tag.

The various banks of indicators carry clocks, all of them with different brands of time. One usually is on Greenwich time. A copper still fills one small gap of space. In case of a forced landing the men can brew fresh water indefinitely.

We've got all the comforts of home except the easy chair in the living room. Somehow I don't seem to miss it up here.

All-American Vs. the Ocean

Men Live Streamlined Lives in the Great Bombers on the Sea Patrol.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY,
AP Feature Service Writer.

SEP 20 1941

Aboard United States Navy Patrol Bomber Over the Atlantic.—Men live a streamlined life in these big aluminum tunnels. Everything's planned just like it is in those folding stove and bed apartments in New York, only ten times more so.

The men around me in this tiny speck over the ocean are all plain, alert, healthy Americans. They hail from various parts of the United States; have all kinds of backgrounds.

Take our commanding officer. He's from Washington, D. C. A few short years ago he was romping up and down football fields, urged on by thousands of fans. All-America mentio.., too.

He's calling signals up front right now, but they're vastly more complicated—and important—out here in mid-Atlantic. A slip means precious lives—trained lives—and taxpayers' money. There an poise and authority in his matur face.

The navigator's from the Mid-West. His is the same small town background I know so well. The radio operator's a New Englander, sharp featured. He's got nimble fingers, a quick mind. Crazy about radio since childhood. Now he's doing the ultra-ultra kind boys dream about, and he loves it. He works out our position on a direction finder; gets the same answer as the navigator. Quite a feat.

* * *

Accents are mixed. Piercing New England twang relays orders. A Southern drawl shoots back "Aye, aye, sir." Nasal Mid-western farmer voices tell us to come forward to balance ship for the take-off.

A gunner comes from the Southwest. I talk to him in the center section, where bunk bedding muffles the noise.

"Good jobs were scarce in Little Rock," he says. "Dad works in the post office. I'd pick him up often. I got to talking to the navy recruiting officers in the post office building a couple of years ago—and here I am with a steady job."

At this time of year the men wear summer weight coveralls that zip up all over the body. Watch them get in and out of this gear and you're reminded of an actor making a quick change. Some use flying helmets. Some don't. There are white caps cocked over eyes, just like you see them ashore; blue toboggan caps too.

The navigator sometimes wears the tradition aerial navigator's cap. Like a baseball or jockey cap. Each squadren has its special color or combination. The cap seems odd up here, but it protects the eyes from brilliant cloud glare, and you can wear the headphones over them.

The navy has put itself out for the comfort of these crews within the limits of military efficiency. They have special flying rations, a large seabag full of vitamin-packed food. The bread isn't white like a bakery's but infinitely better than any of the advertised kinds. They bake it aboard the floating base.

* * *

And do these boys annihilate the rations!

"We seem to get hungrier on these long flights," says the navigator, chomping down on a fig newton. Many sweets for quick energy: they need them. They're constantly climbing through, up down and around.

The navy wastes no weight or space in these patrol bombers on bathrooms and lavatories. Water comes in aluminum cylinders about the size of big fire extinguishers. There's little shaving or handwashing aboard. Some of the men especially the mecks (mechanics) wear beards. They stay aboard more than other members of the crew. Hair s forever mussed. Blame it on headsets.

Close quarters and common concern for safety develop a sense of toleration and comradeship aboard, but nobody wastes times on Alfonse and Gaston gestures.

Some conversation is pantomime, with smiles and frowns and eyebrow lifting. A slice with the hand across the neck means "Cut the engines" or "Bad weather ahead." Everybody seems to understand which. A frown means "I don't understand," a slap of the flat hand at the air means "Never mind."

* * *

The most frequent sign is the circle with the thumb and forefinger. It means, "O. K."

The flight commander peers just now through the port, grins a huge grin and makes that sign. We've sighted home base through the haze. Our flight is almost over, and efficiency or no efficiency—I want a good hot shower like nobody's business. This is downright plain hard work.

Whale Boats Keep 'Em Flying

Brave Men Who Man Them are Life-savers for Those Who Fly Bombers.

SEP 20 1941

By MORGAN M. BEATTY,
AP Feature Service Writer.

Aboard United States Navy Patrol Bomber Over the Atlantic.—White caps are pretty from the air, but they're just plain brutal when you land in them in the North Atlantic at this time of year. It's risky for the plane, the crew and the boatmen who take their lives in their hands to come out and get us, but the navy's got a job to do and it's doing it, short of unduly risking men and material.

Today the whitecaps are unusually high. You don't know it from the air, but when you come down you bounce off a four-footer and leap many feet into the air. The darn things fall out from under you too. The shock puts accordion pleats in your spine, but somehow you emerge whole.

The floating base is always anxious during a landing—anxious for all the crews required to moor a plane safely. The crews'll be glad this winter when that $28,000,000 Argentia air base in Newfoundland is completed. Planes can be handled there with much more ease and safety.

Everybody admires these stout fellows who come out to get us. They drive their whale boats through the spray, unconcerned, risk arms and legs to get you off your boat. Minor accidents are not unusual. For instance, when we took off a big roller pitched a whaleboat up against the under side of a wing, ripped a big tear.

* * *

Our floating base is ready for all that. Like the plane's armament, the technical equipment is secret, but it can be told that a tear in the wing is only a few minutes' work for the monster of the sea we call an airplane tender or floating air base. They simply hoist the craft aboard and do the work. The tender is a cool $9,00,000 worth of the machinery required to keep a twenty-four-plane squadron flying. What she can't do for an ailing plane or an ailing seaman just can't be done anywhere.

The operating room is a surgeon's paradise. It may not be as dainty as Bellevue, but it's every bit as sanitary and effective. Dentist, barbers—every kind of service a sailor can get ashore he can get there.

And when a plane is hoisted aboard for attention they work about as fast as your small son with a toy plane. The ship's rolled into a giant hangar, where the mecks prescribe for her ills. If the motor's not working right they pull the thing out, put in another one quicker than you'd dream it's possible.

The emergency equipment is almost unbelievable. If fog closes in on a patrol, and they can't see to land, boats put out to clear water, give them a landing beam and bring 'em in right side up.

* * *

As we descend with benefit of sun from our ten-hour flight toward Iceland our floating air base, anchored "somewhere in the North Atlantic off the American shore," looks like the old homestead.

Now the boat puts out from the tender, then another. We aren't the only patrol in this man's ocean, it seems. The boat shoots up mountains of spray, and it's a leap for life like in the old movie serials to get aboard. But the trick's done, and in a few minutes we're alongside the tender.

After our shower and a change of clothes, we go after that dinner we've wanting ever since lunch. But it's no harum scarum affair—dinner aboard a floating naval city's wardroom. The officers are required to wear ordinary dress uniforms, with coats. They gather around, discuss the movie of tonight, the day's work. Banter is light-hearted, keen.

All this is another shock to an outlander. Down from a long patrol over ocean wastes to a drawing room conversation with remarkably courteous gentlemen is a pretty big adjustment, but it's everyday business for these f llows.

* * *

Tomorrow some of them are going to get up at an odd hour as we did today. They'll trek up to the operations officer's cabin for a conference. He'll sit at his desk, give them last minute orders.

They'll nod, pick up their gear, and leap aboard a bobbing boat for another foray into the Atlantic, just like driving to the office. The navy does things that way.

ANKARA--FIRST ADD INGERSOLL X X X IN DOING SO.

LOSS OF MATERIAL ON BOTH SIDES HAS BEEN HEAVY, HE SAID, AND IT IS PLAIN THAT THE ISSUE IS ONE OF GERMAN FACTORY PRODUCTION AGAINST THAT OF THE UNITED STATES PLUS THE PROBLEM OF DELIVERING AMERICAN PRODUCTS VIA VLADIVOSTOK AND THE TRANS-SIBERIAN RAILWAY, VIA ARCHANGEL, AND THROUGH PERSIA.

THE RUSSIANS ARE LOADING ENTIRE FACTORIES ON TRAINS AND SHIPPING THEM BEHIND THE LINES TO NEW SITES EAST OF THE CASPIAN SEA, INGERSOLL SAID. HE OBSERVED THIS WORK BOTH AS HE WAS ENROUTE TO MOSCOW FROM CHINA AND WHEN LEAVING, IN A SOUTHERLY DIRECTION.

HE DESCRIBED RUSSIAN MORALE AS "SPECTACULARLY GOOD," THE RUSSIANS BEING AS PROUD OF THEIR WAR EFFORT AS A FATHER OF HIS FIRST-BORN.

"I'VE GOT THE REAL FEELING THEY WILL WIN THE WAR," HE DECLARED.

INGERSOLL HAD AN HOUR'S CONVERSATION WITH PREMIER JOSEPH STALIN, WHOM HE DESCRIBED AS CONFIDENT, DIRECT-SPEAKING AND IN VERY GOOD HEALTH.

THE PUBLISHER SAID HE WENT TO RUSSIA TO "FIND OUT ABOUT A LOT OF FEARS" WHICH ONE BY ONE HAD BEEN DISSIPATED.

TRANSPORTATION NOW IS BETTER THAN A MONTH AFTER WAR BEGAN, HE SAID, WITH NO SIGNS OF CONGESTION ON THE RAILROADS OR ON THE SIX-LANE MOSCOW-SMOLENSK HIGHWAY, PART OF WHICH HE TRAVERSED.

THERE WAS NO SIGN OF CIVILIAN PANIC SUCH AS PRECEDED THE COLLAPSE OF FRANCE, INGERSOLL SAID. HE FOUND FOOD ADEQUATE AND GOOD, "CERTAINLY IN MOSCOW AND IN THE ARMY."

SEP 20 1941

HE CATED THE MOSCOW AIR RAID PROTECTION AS EXTRAORDINARILY GOOD, "AS GOOD NOW AFTER THREE MONTHS OF WAR AS LONDON HAD AFTER A YEAR BECAUSE MOSCOW PROFITED BY THE LONDON EXPERIENCE."

TWO MEN ARE POSTED ON EVERY ROOF, HOUSES ARE SANDBAGGED UP TO THE SECOND STORY, THE BAGS ARE COVERED WITH PAINTED PLANKING TO PRESERVE THE BAGS AND KEEP UP APPEARANCES, AND PERSONS NOT ON ESSENTIAL TASKS ARE REQUIRED TO TAKE SHELTER DURING CAIDS, INGERSOLL EXPLAINED.

HARRY HOPKINS' VISIT WAS A "BIG SUCCESS," INGERSOLL SAID, BECAUSE HE REACHED MOSCOW WHEN THE GERMANS WERE CROSSING INTO RUSSIA PROPER AND THE RUSSIANS WERE FEELING A BIT DOWNCAST.

"THEN HOPKINS CAME, AND THEY DISCOVERED A REAL FRIEND." 1A

ANKARA, TURKEY, SEPT 19-(AP)-GERMANY IS UNDERSTOOD TO BE OFFERING TEMPTING MILITARY GOODS TO TURKEY IN AN EFFORT TO BREAK DOWN THE ANKARA GOVERNMENT'S RESISTANCE TO NAZI REQUESTS FOR PART OF THIS NATION'S QUARTER-MILLION TON ANNUAL PRODUCTION OF CHROME.

HOWEVER, FOR YOUR INFORMATION AND FOR USE WITHOUT ASSOCIATED PRESS CREDIT IF DESIRED, THE DISPATCH IS GIVEN BELOW:

(DAILY EXPRESS DISPATCH)

SEP 20 1941

BY C.V.R. THOMPSON.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 18---AS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SENT CONGRESS TODAY A REQUEST FOR ANOTHER 1,500 MILLION STERLING TO PROVIDE LEASE-LEND EQUIPMENT FOR THE ENEMIES OF GERMANY UP TO 1943, THE UNITED STATES NAVY TOOK THE OFFENSIVE IN THE BATTLE OF THE OCEANS TO ENSURE SAFE DELIVERIES OF CARGOES AND THERE ARE RUMORS THAT THE FIRST KILL ALREADY HAS BEEN MADE.

THESE CAME FROM PANAMA, WHERE IT IS REPORTED A RAIDER HAS BEEN SUNK BY AMERICAN WARSHIPS.

COL. KNOX, NAVAL SECRETARY, HAD ALREADY ANNOUNCED THAT WARSHIPS HAD SEARCHED ISLANDS IN THE VICINITY OF THE CANAL TO FIND OUT WHETHER A SUSPECTED RAIDER WAS OPERATING THERE.

WASHINGTON KEPT SILENCE ON THESE REPORTS BUT DID NOT SPECIFICALLY DENY THEM. NAVAL OFFICIALS AT BALBOA IN THE CANAL ZONE ALSO SAID NOTHING.

ADMIRAL FRANK SADLER, BALBOA COMMANDANT, SAID "I'VE NO NEWS TO RELEASE TODAY ON THAT MATTER."

WASHINGTON, SEPT 19-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT'S STATEMENT OF POLICY CONCERNING BRITISH SHIPS IN UNITED STATES WATERS (ABOUT 325):

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY KNOX TODAY ANNOUNCED THAT AFTER SEVERAL WEEKS OF CONSULTATION WITH BRITISH AUTHORITIES, A MODIFICATION WITH RESPECT TO THE MENTION OF THE PRESENCE OF BRITISH WARSHIPS IN UNITED STATES WATERS HAS BEEN AUTHORIZED.

SEP 20 1941

IT HAS BEEN MUTUALLY AGREED THAT DEMANDS OF SECURITY CAN BE MET AND A REASONABLE DEGREE OF INFORMATION RELEASED TO THE PUBLIC IF EACH SHIP BE CONSIDERED INDIVIDUALLY AND ALL RELEASES BE SUBJECT TO THE FOLLOWING SPECIFIC RESTRICTIONS:

(A) THAT MENTION OF A SHIP'S PRESENCE IN ANY PORT WILL BE WITHHELD UNTIL THAT INFORMATION IS RELEASED BY THE NAVY DEPARTMENT. IN NO CASE WILL THE RELEASE BE MADE UNTIL SEVEN DAYS AFTER ARRIVAL.

(B) THAT NOTHING SHALL BE PUBLISHED WHICH MIGHT INDICATE THE PROBABLE LENGTH OF STAY, AND IN PARTICULAR NO MENTION OR SPECULATION AS TO DATE OF DEPARTURE OR FUTURE MOVEMENTS.

(C) THAT ANY DAMAGE A SHIP MAY HAVE RECEIVED SHALL NOT BE

30.24-11943 30.24 - 11943

DISCLOSED.

(D) THAT NO MENTION AS TO MOVEMENTS IN THE IMMEDIATE PAST, I.E., THE ROUTE TAKEN ON PASSAGE TO THE UNITED STATES.

(E) THAT INFORMATION AS TO METHODS EMPLOYED IN ANY OPERATION IN WHICH THE SHIP MAY HAVE BEEN ENGAGED SHALL NOT BE PUBLISHED.

(F) THAT IN GENERAL, NO INFORMATION WILL BE DISCLOSED WHICH MIGHT BE OF VALUE TO THE ENEMY.

SEP 20 1941

AFTER THE PRESENCE OF A SHIP HAS BEEN RELEASED BY THE NAVY DEPARTMENT FURTHER PUBLICITY MAY BE RELEASED LOCALLY BY COOPERATION BETWEEN THE COMMANDANTS OF THE NAVAL DISTRICTS CONCERNED AND THE SENIOR BRITISH NAVAL AUTHORITY IN THAT LOCALITY.

IN CASE OF DOUBT AS TO THE ADVISABILITY OF CERTAIN TYPES OF PUBLICITY THE MATTER WILL BE REFERRED BY THE LOCAL AUTHORITIES TO THE U.S.NAVY DEPARTMENT AND THE BRITISH NAVAL ATTACHE IN WASHINGTON FOR CONSIDERATION.

ACCESS BY THE PRESS TO BRITISH VESSELS BERTHED AT U.S.NAVY YARDS, OR IN RESTRICTED WATERS, WILL BE GRANTED ONLY UPON THE INITIATIVE OF THE BRITISH COMMANDING OFFICER CONCERNED AND WILL BE SUBJECT TO THE EXISTING LOCAL REGULATIONS APPLYING TO ALL VISITORS.

WASHINGTON,SEPT.19-(AP)-CHAIRMAN CLARK (D-IDAHO) OF THE SENATE INTERSTATE COMMERCE SUBCOMMITTEE STUDYING THE MOVIE INDUSTRY REPORTED TODAY HE WAS PREPARING A LIST OF SENATE PRECEDENTS TO SHOW "THAT THERE IS NO QUESTION ABOUT THE LEGALITY OF AN INVESTIGATION OF THIS TYPE."

WENDELL L.WILLKIE, COUNSEL FOR THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY, HAS QUESTIONED THE LEGALITY OF THE INQUIRY ON THE GROUND THAT IT HAD NOT BEEN AUTHORIZED BY THE SENATE. TECHNICALLY, THE COMMITTEE IS INVESTIGATING TO SEE WHETHER AN INVESTIGATION SHOULD BE CONDUCTED.

CLARK TOLD REPORTERS THAT "THIS PROCEDURE CONSISTENTLY HAS BEEN FOLLOWED IN THE SENATE--THE ONLY QUESTION IS, WHOSE OX IS GORED? BEFORE WE CAN ASK THE SENATE TO AUTHORIZE A FORMAL INVESTIGATION WE HAVE TO HAVE SOMETHING TO PRESENT."

CLARK SAID THAT THE LENGTH OF HIS PRELIMINARY HEARINGS PROBABLY WOULD DEPEND LARGELY ON TESTIMONY RECEIVED NEXT WEEK, WHEN HEADS OF MAJOR MOTION PICTURE PRODUCING COMPANIES WILL APPEAR.

SEP 20 1941

"IF THE EVIDENCE SHOWS THAT THERE IS A COMPLETE MONOPOLY IN THE PICTURE BUSINESS AND THAT THE MONOPOLY IS PRODUCING PICTURES FOR PROPAGANDA PURPOSES," HE CONTINUED, "THEN WE MAY GO DIRECTLY TO THE SENATE AND ASK A FORMAL INVESTIGATION.

"ON THE OTHER HAND, IF NOTHING MUCH IS DEVELOPED IT MAY TURN OUT THAT A MORE EXTENDED INQUIRY IS NOT NECESSARY."

NEW YORK, SEPT 19-(AP)-SENATOR CLAUDE PEPPER (D-FLA) DECLARED TONIGHT THAT THE TIME FOR DEBATE AS TO WHETHER AMERICA IS AGAINST HITLER HAD PASSED AND THAT THE ONLY QUESTION WAS HOW THE NAZI RULER COULD BEST AND QUICKEST BE DESTROYED.

HE SPOKE AT THE OPENING OF A TWO-DAY CONFERENCE IN HOTEL ROOSEVELT, SPONSORED BY THE NEW YORK FIGHT FOR FREEDOM COMMITTEE TO DEFEND AMERICA. DELEGATES FROM 14 PATRIOTIC AND LABOR ORGANIZATIONS ATTENDED.

"THE ISSUE OF THE STRUGGLE NOW BEING WAGED ON THE RUSSIAN FRONT," HE DECLARED, "PROBABLY WILL DETERMINE THE OUTCOME OF THE WAR AND CERTAINLY THE TIME THE WAR SHALL LAST."

HE PREDICTED THAT THE GERMAN WINTER CAMPAIGN WOULD BE FOR THE SUEZ CANAL.

"IF HITLER SUCCEEDS IN THE SUEZ DRIVE," HE SAID, "THE QUESTION WILL BE NOT OF WHETHER WE WILL GO TO WAR BUT WHEN.

"THE FRONT OF AMERICAN PUBLIC OPINION IS NO LESS CRITICAL. THE REAL QUESTION IS WHETHER AMERICA HAS LOST THE CAPACITY TO DEFEND ITSELF OR WHETHER LIKE DECAYED FRANCE IT IS INCAPABLE OF UNITY EVEN FOR ITS OWN LIFE."

MANY PROMINENT MEN, HE DECLARED, HAD REPUDIATED DEMOCRACY "NOT ONLY FROM SENTIMENT BUT REFUSING TO RECOGNIZE DECISIONS REACHED BY DUE CONSTITUTIONAL, DEMOCRATIC PROCESS."

AMERICAN NATIONS BAN SALE OF WAR MATERIALS TO OUTSIDERS

JOIN HANDS IN RIGID
EXPORT COONTROLS (550)

BY LLOYD LEHRBAS

SEP 20 1941

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON, SEP 19-(THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-BULWARKING PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S APPEAL TO UTILIZE ALL NATURAL RESOURCES AGAINST THE AXIS, THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS HAVE PLACED APPROXIMATELY 95 PER CENT OF THE STRATEGIC RAW MATERIALS PRODUCED IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE UNDER STRICT EXPORT CONTROL.

COLLABORATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES, AS THE ARSENAL OF DEMOCRACY, AND THE OTHER AMERICAN NATIONS IS SAID BY OFFICIALS TO BE INSURING AN INCREASING FLOW OF THE RAW PRODUCTS NEEDED FOR CONVERSION HERE INTO WEAPONS, MUNITIONS AND OTHER SUPPLIES FOR BRITAIN, CHINA AND SOVIET RUSSIA AS WELL AS FOR STRENGTHENING HEMISPHERE DEFENSES.

A SHORTAGE OF SHIPPING FACILITIES, WHICH DELAYED TRANSPORTATION OF SOME OF THE NEEDED RAW MATERIALS AS WELL AS FINISHED PRODUCTS TO LATIN AMERICA, HAS BEEN GREATLY REMEDIED, OFFICIALS SAY, BY THE ACTION OF THE AMERICAN NATIONS IN TAKING OVER LONG IDLE GERMAN, ITALIAN AND DANISH VESSELS IN AMERICAN PORTS.

AGREEMENTS FOR UNITED STATES PURCHASES OF RAW MATERIALS IN LATIN AMERICAN COUNTRIES WILL EVENTUALLY TOTAL MANY MILLIONS OF DOLLARS AND, IN PART, MAKE UP FOR SOME OF THE TRADE THEY HAVE LOST WITH EUROPE AS A RESULT OF THE WAR.

THE COOPERATING NATIONS, IN TURN, HAVE IMPOSED STRICT EXPORT CONTROL REGULATIONS WHICH INSURE THAT NONE OF THEIR PRODUCTS WILL GO TO NATIONS WHOSE POLICIES ARE CONSIDERED DETRIMENTAL TO THE BEST INTERESTS OF ALL THE AMERICAN NATIONS.

DIPLOMATIC NEGOTIATIONS ARE NOW IN PROGRESS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CHILE, PERU AND ARGENTINA BY WHICH IT IS HOPED VIRTUALLY ALL THE RAW MATERIALS PRODUCED IN THE AMERICAS WHICH ARE NEEDED FOR DEFENSE PRODUCTION WILL BE RESERVED FOR THIS HEMISPHERE.

CHILE--ALONG WITH GUATEMALA AND EL SALVADOR--ALREADY IMPOSES SOME EXPORT RESTRICTIONS AND THE NEW DISCUSSIONS ARE PLANNED TO EXPAND AND TIGHTEN UP CONTROL OVER SHIPMENTS OF CHILEAN PRODUCTS. THE UNITED STATES HAS MADE HEAVY PURCHASES IN CHILE, PARTICULARLY OF COPPER AND NITRATES.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH PERU ARE UNDERSTOOD TO BE MAKING FAVORABLE PROGRESS.

30.24-11945

30.24-11945

WHAT OFFICIALS DESCRIBE AS DIFFICULTIES HAVE ARISEN IN THE ARGENTINE NEGOTIATIONS AND THEY ARE ADMITTEDLY MAKING SLOW PROGRESS. LACK OF AGREEMENT ON ARGENTINA'S MINERAL AND WOOL EXPORTS, LEAVES THE ONLY MAJOR LOOPHOLE IN PLANS FOR INTER-AMERICAN SOLIDARITY IN EXPORT CONTROL.

SATISFACTORY TWO-WAY AGREEMENTS HAVE BEEN REACHED, OFFICIALS REPORT, FOR UNITED STATES PURCHASES OF RAW MATERIALS FROM COLOMBIA (PARTICULARLY PLATINUM), BOLIVIA (TIN AND TUNGSTEN), MEXICO, BRAZIL AND CUBA. THOSE NATIONS, IN TURN, HAVE SEVERELY LIMITED EXPORTS OF STRATEGIC MATERIALS OUTSIDE THE AMERICAN CONTINENT.

OTHER NEGOTIATIONS ARE IN VARIOUS STAGES OF PROGRESS WITH MINERAL AND METAL PRODUCING NATIONS OUTSIDE THIS HEMISPHERE, INCLUDING INDIA, TURKEY, CHINA, SOVIET RUSSIA, PORTUGAL, THE PHILIPPINES AND THE FRENCH NORTH AFRICAN COLONIES.

SEP 20 1941

TO ENCOURAGE THE UNITY OF ACTION ASKED FOR BY THE PRESIDENT, THE UNITED STATES, IS PREPARED TO PROVIDE AN ASSURED MARKET FOR MINERALS AND OTHER STRATEGIC RAW MATERIALS WHICH THE AMERICAN NATIONS FORMERLY EXPORTED TO EUROPEAN OR ASIATIC NATIONS, PARTICULARLY RUBBER, TIN, COPPER, MERCURY AND A LONG LIST OF MINERALS.

THE UNITED STATES SET THE PACE FOR THE OTHER AMERICAN REPUBLICS BY PLACING APPROXIMATELY 95 PER CENT OF ALL EXPORTS FROM THIS COUNTRY UNDER EXPORT LICENSE CONTROL.

HIGH-GRADE AVIATION OIL AND GASOLINE AND SOME OTHER STRATEGIC SUPPLIES, ARE BANNED FOR SHIPMENT TO MOST COUNTRIES, BUT MAY BE SHIPPED TO NATIONS ON THIS CONTINENT, AS WELL AS BRITAIN, CHINA AND SOVIET RUSSIA, WHO COLLABORATE IN PREVENTING SUCH GOODS IN REACHING THE AXIS OR AXIS SATELLITE COUNTRIES.

Bulgaria Joining Axis In War, London Says

BORIS REACHES DECISION WHEN 'INDUCEMENTS' ARE OFFERED, REPORT STATES

Command Of Black Sea, Control Of Crimea Among Promises

SEP 21 1941

State Of Emergency Declared—Tension At Sofia High

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 20—The diplomatic correspondent of the Sunday Dispatch today said King Boris of Bulgaria has decided to bring his country into the war on the side of the Axis.

British news dispatches from Turkey said the Bulgarian radio announced the declaration of a state of emergency in the Balkan kingdom.

A Bulgarian police statement, relayed from Turkey, said a number of Russian parachutists and "other persons who had succeeded in reaching Bulgarian soil" had been arrested.

"Inducements" Offered

The Sunday Dispatch's correspondent said "among the inducements" which won Boris over were:

1. Naval command of the Black Sea.
2. Granting to Bulgaria a "protectorate" over the Crimea, Soviet territory which juts into he Black Sea and which has been reported cut off from the mainland by German armies.
3. A trading and transport monopoly in the Black Sea.
4. In event Turkey opposes Germany's plans, Germany and Bulgaria would establish a joint protectorate over the Caucasus with Bulgaria given part of the administration of the Baku oil fields.

Would "Protect" Thrace

Bulgaria also would get a protectorate over Thrace—the Greek and Turkish lands at the southern end of the Balkan peninsula.

Military sources put Bulgaria's total war strength at 500,000 men in the army. The Bulgarian navy and air force are virtually non-existent, having been forbidden by the World War treaty of Neuilly, whose restrictions were only lifted by the treaty of Salonika signed with the Balkan Entente powers in 1938.

Until 1938 Bulgaria was permitted to have an army of only 20,000 men, all volunteers.

Compulsory Service

Since May, 1940, military service has been compulsory for men between the ages of 17 and 65, who were eligible for two years of service.

Bulgaria was reported to have had 100,000 men under arms at the beginning of the year, but later demobilized some to harvest crops. Partial mobilization was ordered September 15, with the calling up of the class of 1921 and part of the classes of 1922 and 1923.

Twenty-seven high-ranking officers were retired last December for desiring to enter the war on the side of Germany.

SEP 21 1941

Premier Stiffens Discipline

Premier Bogdan Filoff issued a special statement calling on all officials to report any "breach of discipline," the broadcast reported.

Although the reasons for the emergency decree were not immediately clear, it was recalled that reports received in Turkey recently have indicated extensive military preparations were under way in the Balkan kingdom.

Russia has accused the Bulgarian Government of permitting its territory to be turned into a base of military operations against the Soviet, and the Bulgarians are reported to have mobilized several classes.

Sofia Reports Russian Saboteurs Wiped Out

Sofia, Sept. 20 (AP)—Police said today that three groups of Communists trained at the Russian naval base of Sevastapol for military and political sabotage in Bulgaria landed in this country in the last six weeks.

All have been wiped out, it was declared.

The first group arrived August 11 and immediately established contact with the Russian legation in Sofia through a Czech radio operator, police said.

These men, believed responsible for the blowing up of a munitions and fuel train at Varna, immediately committed suicide when traced by the authorities, the chief of police declared.

The second group landed August 28 and intended to operate in the Balkan mountains. These men also shot themselves, it was declared.

Parachutists who dropped from the sky September 14 were killed after a six-hour engagement, police reported.

Kiev Taken In Perfect Blitzkrieg, Nazis Say

SEP 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 20—A house-to-house mop up has completed the capture of Kiev to conclude what German war dispatches called today a perfect Blitzkrieg with all the elements of surprise, speed and irresistible might of man power and weapons.

Although in restrained language, the bulletin from Hitler's headquarters indicated that the high command counts the Ukraine capital as a captured city. It reported Russian forces in flight and said the garrison had capitulated.

Kiev saw the application of most of Germany's most terrible weapons—flame throwers, dive bombers and tanks—in a furious burst of military power, German reports said.

Strategic Plan Described

According to these advices, the weight of the German assault fell first on one small point and fit in with a broad strategic plan for an offensive in the whole Ukraine.

They said the Russians apparently misjudged the long pause at the city's gates, presumably thinking the besiegers too weak to storm the city. Actually, they declared, "the reduction of Kiev was awaiting development of a large encirclement being worked out far to the north and south."

When the attack started, they said, everything began at once: Dive bombers smashed at fortifications, engineers swarmed forward to clean up land mines and clear the way for tanks, flame-throwers shot their blinding fire at bunkers, infantry charged with a barrage of hand-grenades.

Civilian defenses for which elaborate preparations had been made quickly collapsed, the Germans said.

The Citadel, one of the bulwarks of the Kiev defenses, was said to have been reached at 11 A. M. yesterday and the red and black German warflag unfurled from its tower ten minutes later.

Although resistance still continued, mopping up progressed rapidly and the Kiev garrison shortly signaled its readiness to surrender.

Destruction Reported Prevented

Reports still were scanty on what the Germans found, but it was said the reduction of the city took place so swiftly the Russians had no opportunity o start many fires or explosions and it was presumed, therefore, that destruction was not as great as it might have been.

A communique from Hitler's headquarters said today:

"After the higher leadership of the Soviet troops had fled, the whole garrison threw down their arms and ceased further resistance."

Northern Gains Claimed

New gains toward mastery of the waterways leading to Leningrad were claimed by the communique which said German forces had held the Riga Gulf islands of Muhu and Vormsi, stepping stones to Oesel, Russia's sentinel island at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, since mid-September.

Muhu and Oesel are linked by a causeway and the German attacks toward eastern Oesel had created conditions for operations aiming at the occupation of this island, it was asserted.

Air Assaults Reported

Air attacks on Odessa and Moscow were reported by the high command and other German sources said twenty-four grounded Russian planes were destroyed on airdromes in Luftwaffe assaults yesterday on Leningrad's defense lines.

DNB said the Luftwaffe "successfully" attacked Russians fleeing eastward from Poltava and said important railway lines and junctions in the area were disrupted.

Extent Of Control Vague

(Conflicting German and Russian reports of the battle of Kiev and the vague language of the communiques still left in doubt today whether the Germans are masters of the city or only have thrust a foot across its threshold.

(In speaking of "the retreating enemy," the German high command did not make clear whether it meant all Kiev's defense forces or merely fortress troops at the point of the breakthrough.

(Neither did it specify whether the top officers said to have retreated were commanders of the stormed citadel or of the whole city. Hence, it was not clear whether only that strong point of resistance or all the defenses of Kiev had capitulated. The citadel is on the river front, and most of Kiev lies behind it to the northeast.

200,000 Estimate Made

(If the Russians stuck to their determination not to yield the city without a house-to-house defense, therefore, capture of the citadel might mean only the opening blow.)

A military spokesman, asked about the strength of the four armies, said 200,000 men would be a conservative estimate. Some sources thought the number considerably greater (perhaps as high as 500,000).

Report Capture Of Two Islands In Drive On Leningrad

Hitler Program Envisions Annihilation Of Trained Red Soldiers

BY ALVIN STEINKOPF

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 20—Flame throwers, dive bombers, tanks and infantry, working in perfect unison, have completed the mop-up of Kiev in a Blitzkrieg operation, German dispatches reported today, while Nazi armies rushed forward to carve out the heart of European Russia's industrial system, the rich Donets basin.

As Germans marked up their greatest victory to date in their 91-day war in the East, authoritative sources disclosed that Hitler's five-point purpose in invading the Soviet on June 22 included annihilation or capture of the last trained Russian soldier and paralyzation of Russia's centralized government.

Claim Dnieper As Own

The Dnieper for all practical military purposes is now a German river, said German quarters, who declared the thin band thrust far east to encircle Kiev had now been strengthened.

SEP 21 1941

The breaking of resistance in Kiev was regarded as complete, although it was admitted a few snipers and isolated strongholds may have been overlooked in the first mopup.

A steady stream of prisoners is being produced by the encirclement operations east of Kiev, where one large town, ten trains and other material were reported taken despite wild Russian resistance and attacks to break out.

The Germans claimed their troops now occupied the eastern portion of Oesel Island, "Leningrad's natural Baltic fortress."

Called Perfect Blitz

Front line dispatches pictured the operation against the capital of the Ukraine as a perfect blitz, with the elements of surprise, terrific military power applied all in one place, and a localized campaign all fitting neatly into full-scale operation.

These dispatches declared the German infantry for weeks had been waiting within the outer ring of casemates protecting Kiev until large encirclement drives were worked out from the North and South.

In this respect, it was recalled that German dispatches reported in mid-July that the German armies were at the gates of Kiev. Nothing more was heard of this column, however, until yesterday, when the high command first reported the entrance into the city.

Every Weapon At Once

When the hour struck for the final attack, German reporters said, every weapon in Germany's armory was released at once. Dive bombers thundered down on fortifications and strong points.

Flame throwers crept forward from house to house, shot their fire into windows from which snipers operated, and scorched out the defenders of gun turrets and bunkers. Shells screamed into dugouts and trenches.

Waves of engineers rushed to eliminate land mines and to bridge or flatten tank traps. Tanks charged along the streets, and infantry well supplied with grenades came close behind.

Citadel Reached From South

In a surprisingly short time, the war reporters said, crossings of the small Weta and Irpen rivers were effected, and by 11 A. M., yesterday the citadel had been reached from the south. Ten minutes later Germany's black and red war flag fluttered from the tower.

Elaborate preparations for a civilian defense speedily collapsed, and a concerted onslaught by militarized units of the OGPU, Russian secret police, was repulsed, said these reports.

The Soviet officers fled, the high command said, and the rest of the garrison speedily offered to surrender.

Reports still were far from complete on the condition in which the Germans found the city. It was said, however, that the desperate defenders lacked the time to carry out the far-reaching demolitions which they had prepared.

Kharkov Believed Target

While the Germans were officially declared to have completed an encirclement 125 miles behind Kiev, trapping 200,000 to 500,000 Russian troops, the progressing operations were presumed to be aimed at Kharkov, vital communications center eighty miles east of Poltava, which already has been occupied.

The Germans thus were nearing the vital Donets basin with its complex of mines and mills upon which a great part of Soviet industry is based.

Planes Blast Leningrad

DNB reported tonight that "a very heavy" air attack was carried out yesterday against Leningrad and Soviet troops encircled in the city's defense zone.

A number of fires were started in the city and anti-aircraft positions, supply centers and barracks were hard hit, the dispatch said. The main force of the Luftwaff's attacks, however, was said to have been directed against Russian artillery positions and bunkers.

The high command only reported the capture of the islands of Muhu and Vormsi (Moon and Worms islands), which are stepping stones from the mainland to the island of Oesel where the Russians are basing air and naval operations off Estonia.

Linked By Causeway

Muhu and Oesel are linked by a causeway, and the high command said infantry advance over this causeway four days ago had opened the way to further operations. Air and naval units aided in the capture of Muhu and Vormsi, it was said.

What arrangements will be made to govern the Ukraine, now that its capital is in German hands, the Germans were not prepared to say today. It was recalled by observers, however, that the Ukraine was in the hands of a German-sponsored Ukraine government for a time during the World War, and that some Ukrainians long have agitated for a separate Ukraine nation.

Five Points Listed

"But you may be sure Bolshevism and all its works will be uprooted," said one spokesman.

Authorized sources said Hitler's five-point military program was:

1. Tap the Russian reservoir of men until "the last trained soldier is either killed or captured." Untrained rookies are not a problem.
2. Destroy or capture Russian war material—already accomplished "to a certain degree."
3. Weaken the economic and war potentials to prevent a rally for new offenses later.
4. Disrupt vital communications between the various sectors and between the front and the industrial rear.
5. Paralyze Russia's administrative centers by encirclement or air attack so as to break up Russia's centralized system of government.

Capture of Kiev and encirclement of Leningrad are huge steps in this direction, it was pointed out.

In the opinion of these quarters Hitler's plan thus differs radically from that of Napoleon, who permitted the Russian armies to retreat before him.

Kiev Is Resisting Bitterly, Reds Assert

London, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Moscow radio said today that a "savage, life and death struggle" is raging in the northern suburbs of Kiev.

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 20—The Red army announced today it was waging a terrific fight for possession of Kiev, indicating that all was not lost there, and that ten German divisions—perhaps 150,000 men—had been wiped out on the approaches to the Ukrainian capital, along with hundreds of planes and tanks.

That picture of the defense of Kiev was given by the Soviet Information Bureau and the army newspaper Red Star.

"During the night of September 19-20," said the communique, "our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front. Fighting was particularly heavy at Kiev."

Heavy Cos. Forecast

Red Star said, "The gunners of Kiev are fighting the enemy until death.

"The Germans shall pay dearly for the city. The Red army is sparing no efforts to inflict the greatest possible losses upon the German hordes."

Dispatches said that "a savage life-and-death struggle" still was raging in the northern suburbs of the city.

At the same time, dispatches from the Leningrad front indicated a stiffening in the defense of that industrial center.

The defenders were said to have adopted the slogan, "No step in retreat."

SEP 21 1941

Kiev Called One Phase

The battle for Kiev, with Red army tanks, artillerymen and infantry opposing encircling Nazi units, was one phase of a vast struggle to decide the fate of the whole territory between the lower Dnieper and the Donets river basin.

Fifteen hostile planes were declared to have been destroyed by pilots of the Red navy's Black Sea fleet on the approaches to beleaguered Odessa.

On the approaches to Leningrad planes of the Baltic fleet were said to have shot down sixteen German aircraft. The communique added that there was "great activity" by guerrilla groups in the Leningrad area.

Foe Admitted At Gate

The long battle for Kiev was reported by the Soviet Information Bureau in an early morning communique to have flamed yesterday into exceptional violence, but the bulletin did not say how the fighting was going. It was officially admitted previously that Nazi detachments had driven to a gate of that Ukrainian political, industrial and shipping center.

Nazi planes struck at Moscow during the night for the first time in ten days, but the Government said only one plane succeeded in bombing the capital, which was under alarm almost three hours.

"No damage was caused," an announcement reported.

Crack Troops Reported Lost

Three German S.S. battalions and two German Alpine chasseurs regiments were said to have "lost about 1,000 men and officers killed and more than 2,000 wounded" in fighting in the Murmansk zone in northernmost Russia.

A communique identified the units (which may have totaled 6,000 men) as the "Führer," "German" and "Death" S.S battalions and the One Hundred and Thirty-Sixth and One Hundred and Thirty-Seventh Alpine Chasseurs regiments.

German Losses Of More Than 150,000 Estimated By Moscow

Sinking Of Large Nazi Transport In Barents Sea Reported

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 20—Soviet marines at Odessa were reported, in a Moscow radio broadcast tonight, to have routed a mixed force of German and Rumanian troops in a "fierce night battle."

The report, picked up by CBS, said the Germans and Rumanians withdrew to Lake Leman at the mouth of the Dniester river.

BY HENRY CASSIDY

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sunday, Sept. 21—A "savage life and death struggle" is still raging about Kiev, the Russians said today.

The Germans have lost upwards of 150,000 men and are hurling a quarter of a million more of their best troops into the great battle, Russian dispatches declared.

The Red army pledged itself to a last ditch resistance to make the Germans pay as dearly as possible for this Ukrainian capital — Russia's third largest city—and for every inch they advance beyond.

Say Foe Lost Ten Divisions

Russian advices from the Kiev front said that bitter no-quarter fighting swirled back and forth in the northern suburbs of the city while today's early-morning communique of the Soviet Information Bureau, without giving details, said fighting continued along the whole Western front and was "particularly fierce at Kiev."

All told, the Russians said the Germans had lost ten divisions in this vast struggle with fifteen more Nazi divisions pounding in endless waves at the Red army defenders.

With the struggle about Kiev apparently storming toward an imminent climax, the Russians reported a victory in the far northern waters of the Barents Sea—the sinking of a big Nazi transport by Soviet warships.

Sum Up Air-War Results

Summing up the results of the air war in the three-month-old conflict, today's communique said that the Germans had lost more than 8,500 planes. The Red air force, it added, continues to blast the Luftwaffe in the air and on airdromes behind the lines with Panzer troops, infantry and artillery providing additional targets.

But despite the continuing fierce tempo of the struggle from the Arctic to the Black Sea, the battle of Kiev provided the outstanding action of the moment.

The Russians seemed ready to carry out previously announced plans to yield Kiev only after a house-to-house defense.

[The Germans flatly acknowledged Saturday that fierce fighting was going on in the immediate vicinity of Kiev, reporting that the Russians trying to break out of a trap just east of the city, had fallen back before heavy German fire.]

The ferocity of the battle was thus described in the Russian army's official organ, the newspaper Red Star:

"The gunners at Kiev are fighting the enemy until death. The Germans shall pay dearly for the city. The Red army is sparing no efforts to inflict the greatest possible losses upon the German hordes."

Into the assault the Germans were reported to be throwing fully fifteen divisions, including numerous Panzer units and great concentrations of aircraft.

All reports indicated the struggle might continue, at least in the vicinity, for days.

SEP 21 1941

Credit Navy Pilots

Before Odessa, important Soviet Black Sea port encircled at the southern end of the front, fifteen German planes were said to have been destroyed by pilots of the Soviet Black Sea fleet.

In the North, the Russian defenders of Leningrad continued to hold off German forces, according to Russian reports, with planes of the Baltic fleet shooting down sixteen German aircraft. In addition extensive Russian guerrilla activity was reported in the Leningrad area.

To Uphold City's Record

Dispatches from Leningrad said the Red Army and people's army fighting in the approaches of the city had adopted as slogans:

"No step in retreat. Victorious Russian troops once were in Berlin, but no invader ever has set foot in St. Petersburg; our enemies perished of the approaches of Petrograd; they shall find their doom on the approaches of Leningrad. These three names of our city are three eras of great glory unstained by defeat."

To Produce New Tank

The determination of Leningrad's defenders was declared to be reinforced by all the city's enormous industrial machine, supplying the front with all needs—planes, tanks, guns and munitions.

The Putilov works announced it had launched mass production of a new type tank designed to check and repulse the Nazi Panzers.

Z. Y. Kotin, creator of this tank, was designated by the Supreme Soviet as a hero of Socialist labor, and 186 workers and engineers in the plant were decorated for bringing it to reality.

Street Fights Reported

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Berlin correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Tidningen reported today that street fighting was continuing in some sections of Kiev. The report was relayed here by Reuter.

Moscow Raided.

Moscow, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—One German plane bombed this Russian capital last night but other raiders were driven off by anti-aircraft fire and Russian night fighters, it was announced today. There was no damage, the communique said. The city was under alarm from 11:40 P. M. to 2:20 A. M.

Russian Radio Kibitzer Tells Berlin Listeners He Cannot Be Stopped

London, Sept. 20 (AP)—"Ivan the Terrible," the Russian kibitzer the Germans tried to shake by switching their news broadcasts to different wavelengths, broke in on the Berlin radio tonight and shouted: "my voice cannot be suppressed."

"Hitler does not want you to hear me," said the "ghost voice" interrupting a 9 P. M. news period of Berlin's powerful Deutschland-sender station. "He does not want you to know the truth but I shall come again and again."

Finns Intern British Brigade

Volunteers Who Fought for Little Nation Against Reds Now in Swedish Camp.

BY LOUIS LOCHNER

Berlin, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Some 200 British volunteers, who fought for Finland against Russia in the 1939-40 war, are now interned in Sweden at Finland's expense, the Finnish Trade Minister, Vaino Tanner, disclosed today.

"There was no way for them to get back home and we could not keep them," he said. "So Sweden agreed to take them, but we could not expect the Swedes to pay for their keep and this we are doing."

[These Britons presumably include many recruited in England by Major Kermit Roosevelt.]

Dr. Tanner arrived here today with a sizable delegation for economic talks in the Wilhelmstrasse. He will leave for the Vienna Fair tomorrow and will visit the Slovak Government at Bratislava.

Envisions U. S. of Europe.

In an interview he envisioned a United States of Europe as an outcome of the present war.

"You mean only an economic United States of Europe, don't you?" he was asked at the Finnish legation.

SEP 21 1941

"No, also political—why not?" was his quick reply. "Unfortunately, it does not seem possible to achieve such a United States without war."

A prerequisite of such a union, however, is the elimination of Bolshevism, Dr. Tanner said, adding: "This unhappy doctrine must disappear from the world. It has wrought nothing but misfortune."

Has Not Heard Nazi Plan.

Dr. Tanner declined to answer directly the question of a German correspondent concerning Finland's attitude toward the Axis plans for a new order.

"I cannot answer that question," he said with a smile as, leaning back comfortably, he puffed at a cigar. "We Finns don't yet know the plans for such a New Order. Even when I asked our German friends for details they could not tell me."

"But how do you stand personally with reference to the New Order for Europe?" the German persisted, and it was here that Dr. Tanner referred to a possible United States of Europe. "Customs barriers on forbidding frontiers have brought Europe no luck," he added.

Norse Back at Moscow.

Moscow, Sept. 19. (Delayed) (A. P.).—Diplomatic relations between Russia and the refugee Norwegian Government were restored today when Ivar Lunde arrived here to reopen the Norwegian legation as Charge d'Affaires. It was expected that Rolf Andvord, newly appointed Minister to Moscow, would arrive shortly from Buenos Aires, where he has been serving as Minister to Argentina.

Ousted Before Russian War.

The diplomatic representatives of Norway and other German-occupied countries were asked by Russia to leave Moscow prior to the beginning of the Russo-German war on the ground that their governments could no longer be recognized. The Norwegian Government-in-exile in London instituted negotiations recently for a resumption of diplomatic relations through the Russian Ambassador in London.

Trap East Of Kiev Doubted

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 20—Strong doubt that the Germans have completed an encirclement move reported east of Kiev in the Ukraine was expressed today by an authoritative source.

This authority also scouted German claims that four Russian armies were in process of annihilation within the circle.

"On the basis of recent news," this source said, "the reports of German successes probably contain some truth." But, he added, it is strongly doubted whether the Nazi pincers have closed over so wide an area.

Russian sources were not inclined to consider the possible loss of Kiev as tragic.

"What many people fail to realize," asserted one source, "is that the traditional Russian strategy is that of planned withdrawal.

BUT KIEV TRAP IS DOUBTED

British Think German Success and Activity in Bulgaria May Shift Turks' Policy

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AP)—A qualified source declared today that Russia's situation in the Ukraine was more precarious than ever in the face of German claims of a juncture of Nazi columns behind Kiev, the capture of Poltava far to the southeast and a drive across the Perekop Isthmus to isolate Crimea.

Should the Germans succeed in the manoeuvre they are apparently attempting, this source said, they would virtually shut the door against entry of United States and British arms through the Persian Gulf and Iran.

Kharkov, Rostov and the rich Donets Basin would also be exposed to the next German pincer thrust, it was added. The Germans would be in a position to cover and support a new drive along the north coast of the Black Sea.

Doubt was expressed, however, that the Germans had completed the encirclement move reported east of Kiev. Authoritative sources discredited Berlin claims that four Russian armies were being annihilated within the Kiev circle.

A reliable neutral military expert said a first-hand study of the conflict convinced him the Russians were still "fighting magnificently," but he added that danger lay in the preponderance of weapons and equipment possessed by the Germans.

Rostov, some 200 miles east of the Perekop Isthmus and the obvious objective of a north-coast drive along the Black Sea, is the terminus of one of the Baku oil lines. Strategists regard it as an ideal jumping off place for a land offensive toward Stalingrad and Astrakhan on the lower Volga, or southward toward the Causasus.

Another possible danger from the German victories, authoritative sources said, lay in the psychological effects on Turkey. With indications that German naval preparations were proceeding in Bulgarian ports and that a German attack upon Turkey through Bulgaria still was a real possibility, these sources observed, Turkey's determination to resist would be likely to decline proportionately with Nazi successes against Russia.

Russian sources were not inclined to consider the possible loss of Kiev as tragic.

"What many people fail to realize," asserted one source, "is that the traditional Russian strategy is that of planned withdrawal.

'We might be obliged to give up Kiev, Leningrad and Moscow—not willingly or easily, of course—but that is not defeat. We would not even think about defeat or collapse until forced into the eastern depths of Siberia."

would take the place on the Moscow delegation of Gen. George H. Brett, now in the Middle East, because Brett will be unable to complete his business there in time.

Harriman's press conference spiked a report that he already had left.

"Hundreds Of Planes"

Regarding the particular supplies which will be sent, Harriman said: "There will be hundreds of American planes and tanks sent to Russia, but I would not wish to specify when or what types. The flow will be constantly increasing and eventually will be limited only by problems of transport."

It is "reasonable to assume," he added, that the question of replacement of raw materials lost by Russia through German conquests or bomb damage, also will be considered by Britain and the United States.

London, Sept. 20—W. Averell Harriman, head of the United States mission to Moscow, wound up his London conferences today making ready to hasten to Moscow to join in British-American arrangements to stiffen Russian resistance in the face of terrific German onslaughts.

A qualified source declared Russia's situation in the Ukraine was more precarious than ever in the face of German claims of a juncture of German columns behind Kiev, capture of Poltava far to the southeast of Kiev and a drive across the Perekop Peninsula to isolate the Crimea.

Would Shut Door For Arms

Should the Germans succeed in the maneuver they are apparently attempting, this source said, they would virtually shut the door against entry of the United States and British arms through the Persian Gulf and Iran.

Kharkov, Rostov and the rich Donets coal valley would also be exposed to the next German pincer thrust, it was added, and the Germans would be in a position to cover and support a new drive along the north shore of the Black Sea.

Doubt was expressed, however, that the Germans had completed the encirclement move reported east of Kiev, and authoritative sources scouted Berlin claims that four Russian armies were in the process of annihilation within the Kiev circle.

Says British Understand

Declaring "the British people have a much better realization of the gravity of the Russian situation than do the people of America," Harriman said the United States and British missions to Moscow already had reached an agreement on immediate material aid to Russia.

He will follow Lord Beaverbrook, head of the British mission, to Moscow as soon as possible to continue their planning there on replenishing of Russian supplies.

The two missions were agreed, Harriman said, that the flow of guns, tanks, planes and raw materials to Russia should be limited only by the physical problems of transportation. He intimated he shared increasing British concern over the gravity of Soviet losses of material.

Fears Freeing Of Nazi Machine

The British are repeatedly emphasizing that unless production is maintained and supplies sped to Russia, Hitler may achieve another one-enemy-at-a-time victory and free his whole war machine for a power drive against Great Britain.

A reliable neutral military expert said a first-hand study of the conflict convinced him the Russians were still "fighting magnificently," but added that danger lay in the superior quantities of weapons and equipment possessed by the Germans.

Rostov Obvious Objective

Rostov, lying some 200 miles east of the Perekop Peninsula and the obvious objective of a north shore drive along the Black Sea, is the terminus of one of the Baku oil lines. Strategists regard it as an ideal jumping-off place for a land offensive toward Stalingrad and Astrakhan, on the lower Volga, or southward toward Caucasia.

Another possible danger from the German victories, authoritative sources said, lay in the psychological effects on Turkey. With indications that German naval preparations were proceeding in Bulgarian ports and a German attack upon Turkey through Bulgaria still was a real possibility, these sources observed, Turkey's determination to resist would be likely to decline proportionally with Nazi successes against Russia.

Moscow Aid Conference Viewed As Turning Point

Moscow, Sept. 20 (AP)—The English language publication Moscow News in the first Russian press comment on the forthcoming United States-British-Russian conference called it today "the turning point in the present gigantic struggle, opening new perspectives for those combating Hitler."

The vital task now, the paper said, was "concentration of forces against the common enemy on the decisive front and frequent shattering blows on all other fronts."

"Hitler," the article said, "is compelled to concentrate at least nine tenths of his resources in the East. He is now faced with a hard winter which will render his position still more precarious. The simple, obvious conclusion is that Hitler must be smashed by a united effort in the East, for it is here that the forces of the aggressor have been concentrated. Hence, the first line of defense of world civilization and democracy lies in the East."

British Report Nazi Convoy Blasted

SEP 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 20—The R. A. F., continuing its smashing one-two offensive of night raids on Germany and day attacks on German-occupied coastal zones, was reported today to have set fire to at least four ships in a Nazi convoy off the Netherlands.

At the same time waves of bombers swept over the Channel to France this afternoon. Watchers on the English shore heard the clatter of heavy anti-aircraft fire and the crunch of bombs a few minutes later, then saw the British planes winging homeward.

An early unofficial report said one R. A. F. squadron alone shot down six German planes over occupied territory during the day.

Nazi Baltic Port Blasted

Considerable air activity throughout the Channel area was reported, with Blenheim bombers said to be leading the attacks, but no official details were published.

Last night the R. A. F. heavily bombed Stettin, Germany's largest Baltic seaport.

Many fires were left burning among Stettin's docks, warehouses and railroad yards, an Air Ministry communique reported.

Coastal command planes, it said, bombed Nantes, in German-occupied France, overnight. The communique said only two British planes were lost, both in the Stettin raid.

Berlin Attack Denied

German reports that Berlin also was the object of air attack brought from the authoritative Press Association, however, the assertion that the R. A. F. had not attempted to raid the Nazi capital.

The assertion stirred speculation here that Soviet bombers might have struck at Berlin.

Stettin, on the Oder, is the German seaport closest to Berlin. Lying about one hundred miles northeast of the German capital, it was last bombed by the R. A. F. August 12.

In a heavy raid there last October the British said an important synthetic oil plant, producing 1,000,000 metric tons of motor fuel annually, was the main target.

The Germans apparently made no attempt to attack Britain last night, the morning communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security being limited to a terse "nothing to report."

Berliners Driven To Shelters

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 20—Citizens sought refuge in air-raid shelters early today as bombers stabbed at Berlin, but an official announcement which identified the raiders as British said they failed to penetrate the city's defenses. One was reported to have been downed.

In northern Germany, however, the announcement said, British raiders dropped explosive and incendiary bombs on several cities, causing "a number of dead and wounded among the civilian population."

(The authoritative Press Association said in London that the R. A. F. made no attack on Berlin last night.)

special communique on the radio tonight that the British lost 38 planes in fierce battling along the English Channel coast today.

SEP 21 1941

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AP).—Fifteen German planes were shot down in RAF sweeps over the Channel and northwestern France today, the British reported tonight. Seven British fighters and three bombers are missing.

At the same time, a special German radio announcement, picked up here, claimed 35 British fighters and three bombers were brought down over the Channel this afternoon and that only two German planes were lost.

Blenheims escorted by fighters attacked a convoy off the Dutch coast early this afternoon. Four ships were left on fire and another with its back broken, it was said.

Other air forces attacked railway centers at Hazebrouck and Abbeville, shipyards near Rouen, docks at Cherbourg, and a fish oil factory on the coast of Norway. Fortress planes also attacked Emden, it was said.

Berlin, Sept. 20 (AP)—DNB reported that thirty-one R. A. F. planes were shot down over the Channel coast today in "bitter and extensive" combat which was said to have cost the Germans only two planes.

New York, Sept. 20—The German radio asserted today that a total of 3,480 "enemy" planes were brought down by German anti-aircraft artillery from the start of the war through last August 31. The broadcast was heard by the NBC here.

Russia's War: General Policy Still Unsettled

Moscow, Sept. 20 (AP)—The English-language publication Moscow News in the first Russian press comment on the forthcoming United States-British-Russian conference called it today "the turning point in the present gigantic struggle, opening new perspectives for those combatting Hitler."

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 20—An agreement on immediate material aid to Russia has been reached here by the United States and British missions to Moscow, W. Averell Harriman, head of the American delegation, said today.

Harriman emphasized that the agreement was on immediate shipments only and that no settlement had been reached on general policy. The American delegation expects to go to Moscow soon.

Replace Brett

Saying that Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply and head of the British mission, already was in the Russian capital, Harriman added laughingly: "I have no concern over who arrives first as this is a contributing mission."

He said that Gen. James E. Chaney, special military observer in London,

R. C. A. F. Lists Casualties

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 20—Seven airmen whose next of kin live in the United States were named today in the Royal Canadian Air Force's seventieth official casualty list which reported fifty-four men dead and missing overseas and in Canada. Dead and missing since the outbreak of hostilities total 760.

The American casualties and their next of kin included:

Killed on active service overseas:

Smith, William Henry, sergt., Mrs. W. H. Smith (mother), Evanston, Ill.

Missing after air operations overseas:

Park, Thomas Hill, sergt., Mrs. J. Park (mother), Jersey City, N. J.

Malkemus, William R., sergt., D. Malkemus (father), Knoxville, Tenn.

Killed on active service in Canada:

Percival, Loriman Samuel, flying officer, Mrs. V. P. Nickel (mother), Oakland, Cal.

Seymour, John Paul, leading aircraftman, Mrs. E. Seymour (mother), Topeka, Kan. (Seymour was killed September 15, near Rathwell, Man.)

Shand, William Simon, lac., Mrs. R. F. Shand (mother), Kerville, Texas. (Shand was killed in same crash as Seymour.)

Drowned in Canada:

Holt, Charles Ray, lac., no next of kin listed. H. Ferguson (friend), Portland, Ore.

Alexandria, Raided 130 Times, Speeding Bomb-Shelter Work

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 20 (AP)—Alexandria, Egypt's most-bombed seaport, is rushing construction of 200 new air-raid shelters.

About 230 public refuges providing for 49,000 persons already are in use. The city has been bombed 130 times in twelve months by British count.

Ancient Roman cisterns, once the source of the city's water supply, now protect thousands during air attacks. Four enormous underground chambers supported by pillars of dark green marble where Roman inscriptions nearly 2,000 years old still can be read, have been converted into other shelters. They are several hundred feet deep. One accommodates 1,080 persons.

The city is surprisingly undisturbed by the frequent bombings. The streets and shopping centers throb with activity, and restaurants, bars, cabarets and cinemas do a rushing business.

Italian Troop Ships Sunk

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 20—Two Italian motor ships transporting troops to Libya were torpedoed and sunk off the coast of Tripoli, but nearly all the soldiers and crew on board the vessels were saved, the Italian high command reported today. The rescue was made by other ships in convoy with the motor ships, the high command added.

British planes bombed Tripoli, the principal point of entry into Africa for Axis forces, and Bengasi, the advance coastal base of the German-Italian troops.

Raids Repulsed

A British armored car raid on Italian position ni North Africa was repulsed, the high command's report said.

The Italians told of two "daring operations" by their troops in East Africa.

The garrison of Uolchefit, in Ethiopia, "attacked and conquered an important position after strong resistance on the part of the enemy," the communique declared. "The enemy was routed and suffered heavy losses. Arms, ammunition and large quantities of supplies were captured."

300 Reported Killed

The other sortie was at Chilga, Ethiopia, north of Lake Tana, where, the communique said, Italian national and colonial troops beat strong enemy forces.

"After a hard fight, the enemy troops were compelled to retreat in disorder, leaving over 300 killed on the battlefield," the communique said.

The high command also reported Fascist planes attacked and heavily damaged a small merchant ship in the eastern Mediterranean.

Japan's Legation In Iran Put Under Close Watch

Teheran, Sept. 19 (Delayed) (AP)—The Japanese Legation was under strict surveillance of the British and Russians today, partly because the legation's diplomatic mail pouches and radio code messages have greatly increased in recent days.

The Allies suspected the Japanese of helping the Nazi cause, especially since Axis legations have been forced to close.

Neither had the Japanese replied to a demand of the Iran Government for the surrender of the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem and a number of Nazi fugitives. The Grand Mufti long has been a leader of Arab dissidents against the British in the Middle East.

The abdicated Shah was confined to his quarters at Isfahan while the government began an inquiry into his wealth. The British Legation said that a republican faction in the Iranian Parliament had demanded a trial of the former Shah.

Refugees Drift 2 Days At Sea

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 20—The adventurous escape of four Belgian men and a British woman, who drifted in a nine-foot dinghy for three nights and two days on the choppy English Channel in their flight from Nazi-held Belgium, was related today by the New Chronicle.

Their outboard motor worked at first, the fugitives said, but later it sputtered out and finally an SOS signal on a handkerchief smeared with lipstick was flown from an upraised oar.

They said they almost had given up hope of reaching land last night when they were sighted by a Spitfire twenty miles from England.

The woman, wife of a Belgian subject, was the mother of one of the men in the group.

Dutch Stone Troops

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 20—Aneta, the Dutch news agency, said today that sabotage and anti-Nazi demonstrations are on the increase throughout Holland and that resistance has reached a point where the Nazi-controlled newspaper Nieuwsblad van Het Noorden has had to appeal against the spreading of the slogan "The more chaos the better."

Among incidents mentioned by the news service were these:

A 9 P. M. curfew has been imposed on the town of Hoensbroeck in reprisal for thefts from the German armed forces.

Storm Troopers Stoned

Inhabitants of the town of Enschede have been fined 50,000 guilders for sabotage.

A group of fifty W. A. men—storm troopers of the Dutch Nazi Party—were stoned by local air-raid wardens from a roof as they paraded through the village of Wouw and the Mayor and clergymen looked on while police refused to interfere.

Special bicycle-mounted park guards have been called to assist police in Utrecht as a result of rowdyism, robbery and vandalism.

The Rotterdam public prosecutor announced during a trial the inability of the authorities to cope with the wave of "outrageous offenses" and demanded heavy penalties to meet the situation.

Report Nazis Kill 12 More in Paris Reprisal

Slaughter Follows Attack on German Soldier 3 Days Ago

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Reuters quoted the Nazi-controlled Paris radio today as saying that the Germans in occupation of the French capital had shot 12 more hostages in reprisal for attacks on German soldiers.

An announcement by Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel, commander of German forces of occupation in France, was quoted as saying that the men went before the firing squad as reprisal for an attack on a German soldier three days ago.

Aneta, the Dutch news agency, said today that sabotage and anti-Nazi demonstrations are on the increase throughout Holland, and that resistance has reached a point where the Nazi-controlled newspaper, Nieuwsblad Van Het Noorden, has had to appeal against the spreading slogan, "the more chaos the better."

Germans Shoot Twelve More In Paris

SEP 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, German-Occupied France, Sept. 20—The Germans announced today the shooting of twelve more hostages as a reprisal for an attack in which a German non-commissioned officer was killed September 16.

For the first time the Germans announced the specific reasons for the selection of hostages.

Seven Were Communists

Col. Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel, commandant of the occupying forces in France, said that seven of the twelve were picked and shot as Communists, two for attacks against German soldiers and three for illegal possession of arms.

Two of those shot were formerly minor Government employes.

One of the twelve was listed as a Jew who allegedly had engaged in Communist propaganda.

25 Hostages Die

Stuelpnagel in curt phrases warned that in case of further attacks "many more hostages will be shot."

The new executions raised to twenty-five the number of hostages brought before Nazi firing squads and to thirty-five the number of persons executed as hostages and on charges.

Vichy Releases Laborites

Vichy, Sept. 20 (AP)—Interior Minister Pierre Pucheu announced that twenty-four more union leaders interned in seven different concentration camps had been released. This made a total of sixty-four labor leaders liberated in the past month.

Officials have explained that bona fide labor leaders, erroneously arrested as Communists, were being freed.

At the same time it was announced that three more persons had been released from internment at Val-les-Bains.

The arrest Wednesday of Marcel Cachin, communist Senator for the Paris area and former director of the communist daily, L'Humanite, which was banned by the Daladier government, became known today.

Nazis Take 12 Lives For 1

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Sept. 20—A dozen Frenchmen went before a German firing squad today in a twelve-lives-for-one reprisal.

This mass execution of hostages was a ratio increase in punishment of the Paris population for acts against the occupying force and was the occasion for a warning that the reprisals would be further stepped up in the event of more attacks against German soldiers.

The twelve died in retaliation for an attack in which one German non-commissioned officer was killed early last Tuesday. It was the largest number of hostages yet shot and raised the total to twenty-five.

3 To 1 For Previous Attacks

The ratio which previously had stood for reprisals was three hostages executed for each German attacked. None of the other Germans was killed, however.

The executions were announced by the German military commander of occupied France, Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagel, who warned that in case of further attacks against the Germans "many more hostages will be shot."

Today also saw Paris subjected to the stiffest penalties yet imposed by the German administration. Starting tonight restaurants, cafes and movies must be closed on the dot at 8 P. M. for a three-day "mourning period," and the populace must be off the streets from 9 P. M. to 5 A. M.

Adds Somber Note

To this General von Stuelpnagel added a somber note in a proclamation: "Observation of these orders will be controlled by German patrols."

The grand total of persons executed since a German ensign was shot in a Paris subway August 21 now is thirty-five. In addition to twenty-five shot as hostages, seven were executed as Communists and three as spies.

The German non-commissioned officer whose death was responsible for today's mass execution was shot in the back early on the morning of September 16 while walking home through one of the city's busiest commercial districts.

A woman, the only real witness to any of the series of attacks against Germans in the capital, said she saw a number of shots fired from an automobile in the Boulevard de Strasbourg. She ran into a subway station, where she babbled her story to a station attendant. Later she answered a police appeal to testify, but so far as announced none of the attackers has been arrested.

Explain Choice For Penalty

For the first time today the Germans announced the reasons for the selection of the hostages. General von Stuelpnagel's announcement declared that seven were picked and shot for being Communists, three for illegal possession of arms and two for attacks against German soldiers.

Two of the twelve were listed as former Government employes, apparently in minor positions. One was Jewish. Some of the others came from the "Red Belt" of Parisian suburbs where Communist propaganda is recognized to be widespread.

Reports Indicate Rise In Acts Hostile To Nazis

An apparently growing wave of hostile acts against German occupying authorities throughout the Nazi-dominated continent was indicated Saturday in a flood of reports from abroad. Such activity, frequently bringing German repressive measures, was reported from Holland, Belgium, Yugoslavia and Czecho-Slovakia as well as from France.

The Dutch news agency Aneta said that sabotage and anti-Nazi demonstrations are on the increase throughout Holland. A 9 P. M. curfew was reported imposed on the town of Hoensbroeck in reprisal for thefts from the German armed forces; inhabitants of the town of Enschede were said to have been fined 50,000 guilders for sabotage and in Rotterdam a public prosecutor was reported to have announced during a trial that the authorities were unable to cope with the wave of "outrageous offenses" against them. Heavy penalties were demanded.

Windows At Ypres Broken

The Belgian Government-in-exile announced in London that fresh incidents of sabotage and demonstrations against the Germans was reported from Belgium. At Ypres a 9 P. M. curfew was imposed in punishment for the smashing of windows of a German army building.

At Lille, France, near the Belgian border, three Belgians were sentenced to death by a court-martial for starting fires. Another Belgian was reported sentenced to die for attacking a German soldier, and many acts of sabotage were reported, with many prison sentences imposed.

The British radio reported that Yugoslav guerrilla soldiers were fighting against both German and Italian troops on an extensive scale.

Italians Admit Losses

"In one district," a broadcast said, "the occupying forces lost 200 killed and wounded during a fight which lasted eight days. The Italians admit losing 1,300 soldiers in killed and wounded in Herzogovina and Montenegro during August. It is believed the true figure is even higher."

In Paris, according to the British radio, a platoon of German soldiers was attacked Friday. "Several of them were wounded and in the exchange of shots five Frenchmen were killed," a broadcast said, adding that so far no reprisals had been taken. Another British report said that a demonstration was staged in Paris Friday night against the pro-Nazi legions formed to fight in Russia.

Nazi Garage Set Afire.

Vichy, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Defying stern Nazi repressive edicts, ten men set fire to a garage requisitioned by the German Army and calmly walked away from the blazing building in Paris last night. A passer-by saw them leave, but none was captured.

The French Council of Ministers, with Mashal Petain present, discussed today the "situation created by attacks on isolated members of the German Army and studied proposals to end foreign propaganda which inspired these acts," an announcement said.

The fire—the latest in a series of acts of sabotage and violence against the Germans—came less than eighteen hours after two communists had died before a Nazi firing squad for anti-German demonstratioins. It also came to pass in spite of the fact that Paris and the entire Department of the Seine are under a strict, three-day curfew imposed by the Germans to protect their soldiers. The curfew became effective only last night.

The Germans have executed twenty-three persons since the recent beginning of what is known in Vichy as the Paris Terror. Thirteen were described as hostages, while the others were condemned by German military courts.

Meanwhile today the Germans claimed to have broken up within twenty-four hours three separate bands of "gangsters," while the French were reported planning to strengthen their police in Paris.

More Union Chiefs Freed.

Interior Minister Pierre Pucheu announced that twenty-four more union leaders interned in seven different concentration camps had been released. This made a total of sixty-four labor leaders liberated in the past month.

Officials have explained that bona fide labor leaders, erroneously arrested as communists, were being freed.

At the same time it was announced that three more persons had been released from internment at Val-les-Bains. These were Aviation Gen. Cochet, Jacques Cazaux, former Inspector-General of Colonies, and Deputy Tixier Vignancourt, former head of the information services.

Vignancourt was arrested on July 26 for "insulting remarks" against Marshal Petain. The other two were arrested on September 3.

It was disclosed that 2,976 persons are being held in six internment camps of the unoccupied zone for what are considered crimes against the Petain regime. In addition about 17,000 foreigners are held in eight camps.

had met their death at the hands of German firing squads in Paris.

The Parish branch of the State Tribunal, created to forestall the spread of German reprisals against terroristic outbreaks, sentenced Adolphe Guyot, Communist leader of the Seine (Paris) Department, Jacques Woog and Fosco Fosserdi, an absentee, to death.

Two Life Sentences Given

The State Tribunal was created to show the Germans that the French could deal with the problem of opposition themselves.

In addition to the three death sentences, two persons were sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor, one in absentia, and a number of others were sent to jail for shorter terms without hard labor.

A number of persons were acquitted, including five women.

Reprisals Stir Vichy

The German execution of twelve hostages in Paris today in reprisal for the killing of a single German soldier has created a stir here.

In the first comment on the executions authorized circles acknowledged that French public opinion was "sadly hit" by the reprisal measures, even if it could not approve of acts of violence against German-occupying troops.

VichyCalls Story 'Fantastic'

Says Division and a Half of Regulars Are Not Fighting for Nazis

VICHY, Sept. 20 (AP).—Authorized French sources described today as "fantastic" reports frequently heard in Vichy that a division and a half of regular French troops are fighting for the Germans on the Russian front.

Some sources described as "equally fantastic" other reports that Vichy has signed an agreement with the Germans to send even more troops to fight Russia. The only French aid thus far, it was said, consisted of two small contingents, which left the occupied zone recently to be trained and outfitted by the Germans at Posen, in Poland.

Race Excluded From Almost All Public Places, Including Cafes, Hotels, Theaters

Amsterdam, Sept. 20 (AP)—Drastic limits on the movements of Jews in the Netherlands were decreed today by Arthur Seysz-Inquart, Reich commissioner.

Jews were excluded from public parks and zoos, restaurants, saloons, coffee houses, hotels, pensions, sleeping cars, restaurant cars, theaters, cabarets, vaudevilles, cinemas, sports grounds, concerts, artistic performances, libraries and public reading rooms.

Jews might change their residences only with official permission, and beginning October 1 they will be barred from public markets, auctions, produce exchanges and slaughter houses.

Edinburgh, Scotland, Sept. 20 (AP)—Home Secretary Herbert Morrison told the annual conference of the Scottish Labor party today that he hoped the United States "will not turn its back on Europe after the war" when, he said, armed strength will be necessary to preserve peace.

When a delegate criticized the clause in the Roosevelt-Churchill war-aims declaration proposing post-war disarmament of only aggressor nations, Morrison replied that somebody must be in a position through "force and arms" to insure peace during reconstruction.

He suggested that the job be done by Britain, the United States, Russia and "other peaceful nations."

TOKIO SOFT PEDALS AXIS CELEBRATION

Treaty Anniversary to Be Observed Quietly.

SEP 21 1941

Tokio, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—The newspaper Miyako complained today that an official movement was under way to restrain public celebrations on September 27 of the first anniversary of Japan's alliance with Germany and Italy. Recalling Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda's reiteration of Axis ties upon his assumption of office recently, the newspaper said:

"Now it is reported that our Government is disposed to hold in check the intentions of the nation to whip up re-enforcement of the Axis. If true, we can only say that it is incomprehensible."

The Government seems determined to limit the anniversary observances to a formal ceremony under the Imperial Rule Aid Association, Miyako said.

Meanwhile today Japanese Army and Navy planes flew above the municipal airport, wheeled over the business section of Tokio and dropped explosives in Tokio Bay in a martial observance of Aviation Day. A heavy fog obscured the craft and only seven were visible over the city. Reverberations of the bay bombing were felt slightly.

The Ministry of Commerce announced a 20 per cent increase in the 1941 subsidy to oil importers and refiners, and the Ministry of Agriculture announced that the Government would take control of the distribution of meat effective October 20 to spread inadequate supplies more evenly. All available poultry, beef, pork, horse meat, goat meat and mutton will be purchased thereafter solely by the Japanese Meat Control Company, which will resell quotas to wholesalers' guilds.

The Ministry of Commerce and Industry announced a twenty per cent. increase in the 1941 subsidy to oil importers and refiners. Oil storage establishments are supposed to keep a six-month supply on hand.

Bangkok, Thailand, Sept. 19 (Delayed)—A bill to ban entry of foreigners of any nationality into Thailand was rejected, 32 to 24, by the People's Assembly today.

Major Chaveng Sanki Songgram, Minister of Interior, expressed Government sympathy for the bill, which was presented by an Assemblyman, but declined to indorse it.

He said Thailand already has adequate means of suppressing fifth-column activities, at which the bill was aimed.

He admitted, however, the possibility of fifth-column work among certain sections of the foreign population and warned citizens against disclosing any national secrets.

Noting that agents of a certain country had recently been buying automobiles in Thailand at unusual prices, the Assembly approved a Government bill for control of transfers of title.

Recent embargo revisions prohibited Americans from selling fuel oil to the Japanese here and the shipping company ordered the Zoella Lykes to take the 2,000 barrels to Manila. The President Line said the matter was settled by negotiation.

New Argentine Steps Proposed

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 20—Argentina's "Dies" committee has made public the text of four bills to be presented to the Chamber of Deputies, probably Monday or Tuesday, to prohibit totalitarian propaganda, regulate or prohibit anti-democratic news agencies, tighten laws governing "diplomatic valises" and prevent political use of Axis-controlled investments in Argentina.

A street group in Buenos Aires—in one of a series of demonstrations which the German press said could have "a reaction on diplomatic relations"—shouted denunciations of Germany last night and tossed leaflets attacking the Reich's Ambassador, Edmund von Thermann. Nine persons were arrested.

In Rio de Janeiro, Brazilian police closed offices of an organization known as "the Juvenile Crusade for a Good Press," charging that it had been distributing anti-democratic and anti-Jewish propaganda.

Mexico Aims At Agitators

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, Sept. 20—The Government, considering adoption of a bill providing severe penalties for fifth-column activity, was said by authorized circles today to be notifying many German, Italian and other European tourists that they would have to leave Mexico.

Times of departure depend upon the expiration dates of six-month visiting permits. Most of these already have expired, it was eported, and visas will not be extended.

Authorized circles said several hundred Germans and Italians were affected by the action, interpreted as a precaution against the possible presence of agitators.

Presiden Manuel Avila Camacho has asked Congress to adopt immediately a bill providing prison sentences ranging from six to fifteen years for espionage and from three to six years for spreading propaganda or inciting the public to favor any foreign power.

Nye Hails German-Americans, Condemns Roosevelt Policies

Senator Assails "Will To Instill Racial Strife" In Address Before Steuben Society

SEP 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 20—Senator Gerald P. Nye (Rep., N. D.) said tonight that "nothing is so destructive of the grandest ideals of Americanism as the will to instll racial strife and racial prejudice" which has pointed the finger of suspicion at Germanic Americans.

In an address prepared for brodacast before the Steuben Society of America, marking the two hundred and eleventh anniversary of General von Steuben, of George Washington's Revolutionary War staff, the Senator added:

"Here are you, who pay annual tribute to the memory of one who contributed so largely to the divorcement of America from the hates, the intrigues, the jealousies, the politics and the wars of Europe.

"But you who continue year in and year out that tribute—you are under suspicion. Those who spring from a race that contributed General von Steuben to the winning of independence for America, you are under suspicion."

The meeting, also marking the one hundred and fifty-fourth anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution and the twenty-second anniversary of the founding of the society, was held at the Biltmore Hotel where a guard of nearly 250 policemen was ordered stationed.

Nye paid tribute to "your splendid record of Americanism" and added that "with all my heart and soul I detest the planting of foreign 'isms' in our land and among its people."

Charges 'Deception'

The Senator declared there never can be unity in this country as long as "it is proven that deception is resorted to in winning that unity.

"For example," he added, "we once heard it said by our leadership that 'there might be Nazis in Greenland' when there were no Nazis in Greenland.

"Again we have been told that the Nazis were infesting South America and especially Colombia; that they had secret air landing fields in Colombia.

Congressmen Report

"Recently a delegation of Congressmen visited Colombia and returned with the word that there wasn't even Nazi sympathy in Colombia; that there were no hidden air fields in Colombia."

President Roosevelt referred to reports of hidden air fields in that Latin American country in a recent speech.

SEP 21 1941

"Americans, when America is at stake, will give every ounce and every measure of unity that an intelligent people can and will afford," Nye said.

He Urges "Frankness"

"But that unity can be invited only by frankness, that unity can never be won on the issue of hunting for and building for a war for America.

"If the danger to America is as great as some would have us believe," he said, "we ought not to let loose of a single ounce of powder, a shell, a ship, a gun or a plane.

"When, if ever, war is declared by the Congress . . . America will stand united. But until that time there cannot be, there must not be, unity in inviting involvement in war."

Sees Fifty-Fifty Choice

In an interview before the meeting, Nye said there was still a 50-50 chance for this country to stay out of war if it followed a policy of making those nations receiving lease-lend aid carry it in their own bottoms.

"Whatever degree of emergency that confronts the country now has been deliberately created by the President and his foreign policy," Nye said.

Pickets Kept Away

Police kept pickets away from the hotel entrances when Nye arrived. One picketer carried a sign which read, "Senator Nye, the Führer Thanks You For Your Many Services." Told later about the sign and its inscription, the Senator said with obvious sarcasm: "Well, that's very nice of him."

In a message to the society, Theodore H. Hoffman, national chairman, said Americans of German extraction would not be found in any fifth column "but in the first column,' ready any crisis dealing hard blows for the priceless heritage of liberty and justice fighting for the preservation of the ideals, institutions and Constitution of our beloved country, the United States of America."

Nye Indorses Lindbergh

[By the Associated Press]

Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 20—Senator Nye, North Dakota isolationist, said here last night "I agree with Charles Lindbergh that the Jewish people are a large factor in our movement toward war.

"There is no evasion of the truth that the Jewish people are among the leaders in this movement," he said. "I do not say they are the largest factor, but they certainly are one of the leading factors. This is only natural for the Jewish people have suffered under the Nazi regime."

Senator Nye addressed an America First Meeting. About 2,000 people attended.

In an earlier speech at Cincinnati, Senator Nye referred to a recent speech by Lindbergh at Des Moines in which Lindbergh listed the Jewish people as among those leading the United States into war.

"I know . . . there is not a shred of anti-Semitic spirit in the mind and heart of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh or of Senator Burton K. Wheeler," Nye said.

Lindbergh Reference to Jews Rejected by Anti-War Group

Keep America Out of War Congress at Meeting Here 'Deeply Disagrees,' Says Protestants, Catholics and Jews Work Alike for Peace

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Keep America Out of War Congress today announced its "deep disagreement" with what it said were the implications of Charles A. Lindbergh's recent statement on the relation of the Jewish race to efforts to involve the United States in the war.

Speaking at Des Moines on Sept. 11, Mr. Lindbergh said the "British, the Jewish and the Roosevelt administration" were the three most important groups "which have been pressing this country toward war."

The anti-war organization, holding its quarterly meeting in New York on Thursday, unanimously adopted, it announced, a statement which said:

"Mr. Lindbergh quite properly stated that 'no person with a sense of the dignity of mankind can condone the persecution the Jewish race suffered in Germany.' But the Keep America Out of War Congress most deeply regrets and disagrees with Mr. Lindbergh's implication that the American citizens of Jewish extraction or religion are a separate group, apart from the rest of the American people, or that they react as a separate group, or that they are unanimously for our entrance into the European war."

Meanwhile, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, New York, said in a message to American Jews on the approach of their new year that "Hitler's well known, well worn tactics of weakening his prospective victims from within by inciting racial animosities and divisions, will never succeed in free America."

The anti-war congress said that both itself and the America First Committee, of which it noted that Mr. Lindbergh was a member, had received "most valuable help" from Jewish Americans, and from Catholic and Protestant Americans, too, in "their efforts to keep this country out of war." The statement continued:

"The Keep America Out of War Congress has made no distinctions on that score, and no American organization interested in preserving, strengthening and extending our democratic institutions can make such distinctions."

The statement said the Lindbergh speech had been "improperly used by leaders" of what it called "the war party." The latter, it said, had "concealed" Mr. Lindbergh's denunciation of the treatment of the Jews in Germany, and also had concealed "the fact that" their greatest support comes from "the Southern states—those with the least democracy in the country, poll taxes, unpardonable racial prejudice and discrimination against Negroes."

The Keep America Out of War Congress was organized some months ago with the announced aim of uniting efforts of various groups opposing entry of the United States into the war. Among members of its governing committee are Norman Thomas, Socialist leader; Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War; Dorothy Detzer, executive secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom; Helen Alfred, secretary-treasurer of the Citizens Peace Petition Committee, and Fay Bennett, executive secretary of the Youth Committee Against War.

Jewish Congress Defies "Threats" Of Lindbergh

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 20—A Rosh Hashana message from the American Jewish Congress today expressed "confident hope that the day of deliverance from Hitler is not far off" and advised Charles A. Lindbergh that "Americans Jews will neither be bribed nor blackmailed into renouncing their just and equal status as citizens of the United States."

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, congress president, released the message which added that American Jews intend "to stand four-square for the defense of the American way of life, whatever the consequences with which Mr Lindbergh dares to threaten them."

Praises Jews In Palestine

Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, national chairman of the United Palestine Appeal, praised the 550,000 Jews in Palestine for their stand at the side of England and said it had been "a source of inspiration and hope to Jews everywhere, especially to those Jews who have been imprisoned behind the ghetto walls set up by the Nazi regime in so many parts of the European continent."

The Church Peace Union said in a message to Jewish organizations that "the rise of anti-Semitism and the more recent attempts in the United States to arouse racial hatreds must be faced with right thinking by all democratic-loving peoples."

In Washington, Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, paid tribute to the contributions which the Jews have made to American life.

North Carolinian Tells Young Democrats 18 Months May Bring End To Hitler's Plans

Winston-Salem, N. C., Sept. 19 (AP)—Senator Bailey (Dem., N. "Sooner or later the morale will crack somewhere and it must not be in Great Britain, nor shall it be in the United States of America," the State's senior Senator said.

Bailey came out wholeheartedly for aid to Russia, saying that the United States was "not condoning Communism, but defending the security of the democracy of our republic."

Another Lindbergh Speech

[By the Associated Press]

Chicago, Sept. 20—R. Douglas Stuart, national director of the America First Committee, announced tonight that Charles A. Lindbergh would address a rally under the organization's auspices at Fort Wayne, Ind., October 3.

Stuart said Lindbergh's speech at an America First rally in Des Moines September 11 had been discussed Thursday at an executive session of the group's national committee and that a statement would be issued later.

In his Des Moines address Lindbergh declared that "the British, the Jewish and the Roosevelt Administration" were the three most important groups "which have been pressing this country toward war."

Lindbergh, a member of the national committee, did not attend Thursday's meeting.

La Follette Plans 1942 Fight On Foreign Policy

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 20—Senator Robert M. La Follette (Prog., Wis.) served notice today that the foreign policies espoused by President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie would face a vigorous attack in the 1942 Congressional elections.

Charging that the President had broken his pledges to the American people by "ordering the navy into a shooting war," the Wisconsin Senator called upon all those "who are opposed to entering this war to mobilize for the political battles which lie just ahead."

Sees Two-Party Purge

Reelected last year with Administration backing after he had indorsed the President's bid for a third term, La Follette has been a frequent critic of Administration foreign policy moves although a strong supporter of its domestic program.

Despite Mr. Roosevelt's press conference rebuke this week of those who would inject party politics into the present critical world situation, La Follette told reporters there appeared to be a "collaboration to purge the Democratic and Republican parties of all those who do not agree with the Administration's foreign policies." He said this issue was going to be such an important one in next year's Congressional campaigns as to force a political realignment.

Charges Broken Promises

"President Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie both promised to the voters of this country that they would keep us out of war," he said. He declared that the President, evidently with Willkie's approval had accomplished "the breach of this promise by short-circuiting the constitutional power of Congress to declare war" when he told the navy to shoot on sight at Axis warcraft in "defensive waters."

"The first primaries of the 1942 campaign are but a few months away," he continued. "As one who hopes and believes that democracy can survive here at home, I urge those who are opposed to entering this war to mobilize for the political battles which lie just ahead."

WALKER ACCLAIMS ROOSEVELT COURAGE

Postmaster General Says War Policy Is Aimed At Creeping Monstrocity

SEP 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

French Lick, Ind., Sept. 20—Postmaster General Frank C. Walker said tonight that President Roosevelt's decision to protect the America "is an action of inescapable defense against a creeping monstrosity of terror."

In an address before the annual fall meeting of the Indiana Democratic Editorial Association, broadcast nationally, Walker said the President's pronouncements on international affairs bore witness "to a remarkable insight and a prophetic struggle carried on by him before most of us had heard the roar of guns or knew the direction of their firing."

For Self-Defense

"As Chief Executive of the United States, prayerfully mindful of his grave responsibility, President Roosevelt has declared that the time has come when the Americas themselves must now be defended and stand their ground against assault upon their sovereignty and freedom," the Cabinet member said.

". . . This is no action of intervention. It is no action of isolation. It is not an action selected by choice; it is an action compelled by circumstance. It is an action of inescapable defense against a creeping mostrosity of terror."

The American people do not want war, Walker continued, "but we know now that the war is upon us; it is upon us through the necessity of defense."

Aggressor Called Maniac

"We are poised on no arbitrary adventure; we are aligned by no artificial choice," he added. "But we stand embattled before an insane and fratricidal tyranny that strikes, with the lawlessness of a maniac, to enslave the world.

"To that tyranny our President has said: 'You shall go no further.' And at his summons we, all of us, stand ready, watchful, waiting."

HENDERSON SEES BELTS TIGHTENED

SEP 21 1941

Tells Trade Editors All Must Aid Defense.

Princeton, Sept. 20.—With a new spirit visible in Washington which recognizes that an era of business as usual is out, the American people as individuals are going to have to pull in their belts as the civilian goods output is curtailed, Leon Henderson, Federal Price Administrator, declared here last night.

Mr. Henderson spoke at a dinner at the Nassau Tavern given to editors and publishers of trade papers by the John A. Roebling's Sons Company, in celebration of its 100th anniversary.

Warning that as the durable-consumer-goods industries feel an increasing squeeze due to the defense program, those companies, particularly in the metals-fabricating line, which have no defense contracts, will fall victim to priorities, Mr. Henderson said that the only real answer to the defense program is actual curtailment of consumer goods.

"The American people are even yet not fully aware of what an all-out defense production effort will mean to them," Mr. Henderson said. "As individuals we are going to have to pull in our belts.

"There is a new spirit in Washington. During the past few weeks there has come a clearer realization of what is required from industry, from labor, from the rank and file of American citizenry if we are to win. There is growing recognition of the clear fact that business as usual is out," he stated.

END EASY LIVING, IS FARLEY'S PLEA

Addressing Testimonial Dinner At Syracuse, N. Y., He Says Defense Comes First

Warns Capital And Labor Not To Wear Out Patience Of Public

SEP 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 20—New York State Democratic Chairman James A. Farley, speaking to a party gathering for the first time in a year, expressed belief tonight that capital and labor will cease bickering "lest they wear out the patience of the American public."

In a nation-wide broadcast at a testimonial dinner honoring his services to the party, the former National Democratic Chairman and Postmaster General called for "a moratorium on easy living" because, he said, "defense comes first."

Earlier, as more than 1,200 Democrats of national and State prominence gathered for the affair, Farley quickly discouraged a movement booming him as a candidate for governor next year. He made it clear to leaders and newspapermen he would not even consider such an office, mainly because of business reasons.

Says U. S. Must Lead

The chairman, whose relations with President Roosevelt were reported cooling in last year's campaign, asserted in his address that "no matter how hard we Americans might try, we could not avoid leadership in the world today."

"And that leadership," he added, "is embodied in the shining spirit of our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Expressing "complete confidence in the astute administration of our foreign affairs" by Secretary of State Hull, Farley declared the major premise of America's policy, as he saw it, is "the stronger we can make ourselves and the stronger we can make the enemies of Hitler, the less likely it is that we will be called upon to do the job ourselves."

Action, Not Words, Needed

"If we have learned anything in the last two years," he asserted, "we have learned that mere words will not help us. We must take to heart the lessons of the European countries now living under the iron heel. In a world where force alone talks, it would be folly to rely on words.

"There must be a moratorium on easy living. I believe that capital and labor will forego the luxury of unnecessary squabbles lest they wear out the patience of the American public. Defense comes first."

Auto Rationing Seen By Spring

[By the Associated Press]

Denver, Sept. 20—Take good care of your automobile—the time may not be far off when they will be rationed to buyers who need them most.

The tip came today from L. Clare Cargile, president of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, who said in an interview that this country's automobile production has been curtailed fifty per cent. and the curtailment "will be far more drastic as time goes on."

SEP 21 1941

Cargile also said this may result in a jump in driving hazards because with the new-car output cut, fewer old cars will be junked. "Then the percentage of unsafe jaloppies on the highways will go up," he asserted.

Expects Rationing Next Spring

Cargile believes some sort of rationing system may be made effective next spring when "the problem will be to see to it that the fellow who needs a car the most gets first chance at one."

"How far the curtailment of automobile production can go is a headache for all of us in the industry," he added. "Deprive Americans of automobiles entirely and your whole modern system of national life breaks down."

He said that "production is going to be flush during September, October and November because many automobile manufacturers with defense contracts have not yet been able to build and equip their armament factories. To curtail production now, before labor and materials are needed in those factories, would create a serious unemployment lag."

Film Inquiry May Perish by Lack of Funds

Lucas, Ruler of Senate's Cash, Says He Will Not Approve Its Spending

Would Limit Outlay To $250 Maximum

May Ask Legislators to Vote Curb on Costs of Unauthorized Sessions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—A dispute over how much a Senate committee may spend on an unauthorized investigation threatened tonight to put the brakes on the inquiry into charges of war propaganda and monopoly in the film industry.

Senator Scott W. Lucas, Democrat, of Illinois, who handles the Senate's own purse strings as chairman of the Audit and Control Committee, said he would not approve any expenditures for the film inquiry "until I am informed how long this is going to run and how much will be spent." Furthermore, he said he might ask the Senate to limit to $150 or $250 the sum which may be spent on an investigation which has not been approved by the Senate itself.

Such a Senate decision might abruptly halt the film investigation, since its costs for expenses of witnesses and keeping a record of its hearings presumably have already passed $250.

SEP 21 1941

Merely Considering Resolution

Technically, the Interstate Commerce subcommittee conducting the inquiry is merely considering a resolution, introduced by Senators Bennett G. Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, and Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, proposing an investigation.

In the past Senate committees frequently have conducted long and expensive hearings on legislative proposals, and the costs always have been paid without question.

In view of these precedents, D. Worth Clark, Democrat, of Idaho, chairman of the Interstate Commerce subcommittee, insisted that his group had ample authority to continue its hearings and, in fact, was obligated to do so.

Sees Vast Difference

But Senator Lucas said that in his mind there was a vast difference between lengthy hearings by a Senate committee or subcommittee on a proposal for definite legislation and a "mere proposal that an investigation be conducted into this or that."

Under Senator Clark's view, Senator Lucas said, a subcommittee of two or three Senators could prolong hearings and "spend $5,000 or $10,000 or several times that much just on fees for reporting and witnesses."

Limiting such costs to $150 or $250, he said, would force any Senate committee to win express Senate approval before spending more on an inquiry or hearing.

30.24 - 11953

Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., is to testify about the financial background of the film industry at Tuesday's session.

Americans Are Taken On Tour Of British Warships On Coast

Officers Of Liverpool, Orion And Warspite Tell Of Experiences In Mediterranean Battles

SEP 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vallejo, Cal., Sept. 20—British naval officers, speaking from their battered ships, told calmly and dispassionately today of England's battles at sea during an unexpected break in the secrecy which has guarded the presence of British warcraft in American harbors.

At Mare Island Navy Yard newsmen were conducted on tours of the 9,100-ton cruiser Liverpool and the 7,215-ton cruiser Orion. At the Bremerton (Wash.) Navy Yard reporters boarded the huge British dreadnaught Warspite.

Damaged By Bomb

Commander T. C. T. Wynne, skipper of the Orion, said his vessel was damaged by a German bomb during the evacuation of Crete.

He described the battle of Calabria, in which three Italian destroyers were sunk, as a "brush—just a late-evening chase" and prosaically told of the battle of Matapan, near Crete.

"The battle started with contact about 8 A. M. During the early stages there were maneuvers by cruisers on either side. Then one of the new vast Italian battleships appeared on the scene.

Heavy Ships Come Up

"Heavy ships came up to the battle area. During the night three 8-inch cruisers were destroyed and probably some destroyers, too."

Commander R. S. Dawson, chief engineer of the Liverpool, said an engagement "in the neighborhood of Crete" brought damage to his ship from an aerial torpedo.

"I was in the after part of the ship and I knew we had been hit by a torpedo from the way the ship shook.

Worked Out Best Plan

"After we were hit, all the organization we had been working on so long to deal with this sort of thing went into operation. I found myself doing all the things I had trained so long to do.

"When we found out how much damage was done, we worked out the best plan of action and within a short time had everything under control."

As to the pilot of the plane launching the torpedo, the commander said:

"He was observed to be flying rather shakily afterward. I think we hit him."

At Bremerton, the Warspite's commanding officer, Capt. Douglas Blake Fisher, told how his ship disabled two Italian cruisers and blew a destroyer to bits in the brief span of four minutes last March 28 in the battle of Cape Matapan.

"Our light forces had been engaged during the day with an enemy force that included at least one battleship," he said. "Our forces had caused damage to the battleship and at least one cruiser with gunfire and torpedo aircraft attacks.

"The Italians, as usual, were running for home and our battle fleet was panting after them. We were miles behind at first, of course, clear out of sight.

"Then about 10.30 at night we came across three Italian crusires and at least one destroyer.

"One of the destroyers illuminated one of the cruisers with her own searchlights. We turned slightly away to get all our guns to bear and fired a broadside of sight 15-inch guns.

Result Astonishing

"The first broadside hit her right along—I mean every shot went through her—and the result was really astonishing. Her stacks and all her upperworks went off her like the lid off a burning box.

"Then we put two more broadsides into her, just to make sure, and illuminated the next cruiser with our searchlight. We gave her just one broadside with the same result.

"By this time the battleships behind us, the Berham and the Valiant, were firing on the third cruiser so we looked around for other ships and found a destroyer which had been following the cruisers. We put a broadside into her and she simply disappeared.

"The whole thing took four minutes—of course, we didn't time it carefully but it was right about that time."

Proud Of Part Played

Captain Fisher was proud of his ship's part in the battle of Crete, in which the vessel was damaged.

He said the action was continuous and furious from May 20 to 23.

"The final outcome was that we had to evacuate Crete. We found it quite impossible to contend against the enemy's overwhelming air superiority. I don't know how many planes there were in action against us, but I've never seen so many aircraft at one time in my life. The air was simply full of them."

NEW NAVY NEWS POLICY PRAISED

SEP 21 1941

Lifting of Ban Gratifies Seattle Paper.

Seattle, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—The Post-Intelligencer, outspoken critic of the Navy Department's relations witn the press, expressed gratification today over the new navy publicity policy which permits publication today of news of twelve British warships being in American ports.

The newspaper, published by John Boettiger, son-in-law of President Roosevelt, said in a page one editorial that it always has felt that publicity regarding the presence of British warships in American repair yards "could only serve the most helpful purposes."

"In the presence of the Warspite and its crew in our midst (it is at Bremerton, Wash., across Puget Sound) is an eloquent demonstration of the aid which America is giving to Britain, and could not but inspire people to a wholesome realization of this fact," added the editorial.

While agreeing that vital naval and ship news of value to an enemy should be withheld during the period of danger, the paper added:

"There are still in effect, however, some trifling and unnecessary naval restrictions concerning the navy's relations with the press.

"It is to be hoped that the Secretary of the Navy and his staff will now move to a more enlightened policy throughout and insure the American Navy a place of highest affection and support from the American people."

The newspaper criticized policies of Secretary of the Navy Knox toward the press after a naval station guard fired four shots to stop a boat carrying another paper's photographer in a restricted zone at the arrival of a Russian military mission on September 4.

Nazis See Long Drive

The German radio, recorded here today by CBS quoted the announcement of the United States Navy Department that twelve British ships were being repaired in American shipyards, and said that these ships would be out of service for at least three-quarters of a year.

Said the German radio:

"This fact shows with complete clarity, what deficiency is caused to Britain through damages which the British Admiralty is carefully concealing. To take only one example, the aircraft carrier Illustrious has been bombed and severely damaged many months ago by German bombers. More months will pass before the ship can be put into service again. A very conservative estimate is the assumption that the ship cannot be used by Britain for three-quarters of a year."

Tanks Need Land-Air Support, Says Chief

[Associated Press]

With Second Army In Louisiana, Sept. 20—Air superiority and motorized infantry are needed for complete success of tank attacks, Maj. Gen. Charles S. Scott, commander of the nation's only complete tank corps, declared today.

"The day of trying to operate without airplanes is past," he asserted, "and putting foot troops with tanks is like sending a plow mule and race horse out together and expecting them to go at the same speed."

This was demonstrated in the Second-Third Army maneuvers this week when General Scott's armored forces led a spearhead of an armored infantry-cavalry-air attack to split the Third Army's central front.

SEP 21 1941

"Had To Wait For Infantry"

"Because we had to wait for infantry troops to move on foot, we could not attack with our tanks when we were in a position to cut the Third army to pieces," Scott said. "We should have gone right in and hit them before they got set."

In a combined attack on the Third army, General Scott's tanks drove ten miles from Leesville, La., a point behind the Third army's lines chosen for the tank columns to fan out and disrupt Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger's rear communication and supplies.

But infantry troops were unable to follow the rapid pace because they were on foot. General Scott was forced to withdraw his tanks, and before they reached safety several were surrounded by Third army artillery and infantry.

Men Resting Till Monday

All infantry troops move over long distances by motor, but shuttle in several trips. Even with full equipment all foot troops cannot be transported.

A half-million men of the two armies are resting until Monday night, finished with five days of gruelling test in which a smaller army with armored divisions lost the popular decision to a bigger but slower force. Combat planes stole the show.

From before dawn Monday to late yesterday the men of the Second and Third Armies toiled in hot, sultry central Louisiana. There was no immediate official decision but the Third Army claimed an "unquestioned victory" in a communique.

Opposing commanders and pilots, Dargue said, carried out the precautions faithfully.

Among "don'ts" listed for airmen in the war games were: head-on flights, formation flying close to other formations, individual dog fights, engagements as low as 500 or 1,000 feet, and bad-weather flying for the highest speed planes.

New Bombers Draw Praise

[By the Associated Press]

Lake Charles, La., Sept. 20—Maj. Gen. H. A. Dargue, praising the safety tactics of pilots of 800 planes in the Louisiana war maneuvers in which five airmen have been killed, said today that the air force's new-type bombers have withstood their first tremendous field tests.

Among the new ships tested under simulated war conditions was the B-26 bomber, which Robert A. Lovett, Under Secretary of War for Air, has described as the fastest in the world. Army airmen said it could fly faster than 350 miles per hour.

"Handled Superbly"

Dargue, commanding 400 planes assigned to work with the Third Army against an equal number with the Second Army in the maneuvers, said: "These maneuvers have been a test of new equipment of the most powerful type and highest speed we have had in our air force. It has been handled superbly by the pilots, but it is highly significant that it has withstood the gruelling test that has shown its worth."

Other planes which airmen said were given their first real field test were the A-20, a light attack bomber, and the A-24, an army dive-bomber.

Other ships used included pursuit planes, P-38 and P-39, the B-25, a medium bomber, and navy and marine dive-bombers.

"Record Remarkable"

Dargue said the 800 planes were flown "many thousands of hours" in the maneuvers and declared their pilots' "remarkable record" was made as a result of safety precautions in protecting life and property, and was an excellent example of discipline and control.

What The French Wanted

His son interposed diffidently, "I don't know, Pa," he said. "The Russians are doing what everyone else wanted to do to the Jerries—let them come through and then hit them in the rear. The French wanted to do it, but they couldn't pull it off."

One of the dock workers said heavily, "Don't know about all this strategical stuff. But I ain't going to believe no one about Russia no more. Thought they was great, I did, until I kept readin' and hearin' from the nobs in Whitehall that they weren't no good, that they didn't have no church and that they starved folk for the fun of it."

He paused as though he expected an argument, then continued:

"'Eard as how they'd fall apart if anyone touched 'em. Well, they ain't fallin' apart and there ain't no signs they will. Looks as though they've shown some of these War Office toffs how to fight Jerry."

I asked the dock worker if there was a feeling of sympathy for the Russians.

"People Like Us"

"I hope to see my wife again, there is," he replied. "Why shouldn't there be? They're people like us. They're fighting bloody well. I ain't never been a Commie, but damned if I don't think we all oughta be after seeing what they can do."

He told me there were only a few Communists in his borough of Stepney. "There's a lot who thinks things are all wrong but not many really in the party. Probably be a hell of a lot of them if this keeps up"—he gestured around the ruined bar—"and the Russians keep fightin'."

Now these people are important. They have endured and survived the greatest air attack in history. They were singularly unprepared by their Government to meet this attack. They currently are getting ready to endure another such attack.

The coming winter holds no terror for them. They can, they say, "stick it and come out" no matter how many bombs are dropped. They place their faith in underground shelters such as subways and cellars. When I mentioned the new surface shelters the Government is building, I was greeted with a shout of laughter.

"Nice for kids to play in during the daytime," said the young soldier, "but they ain't no good in a raid. You don't feel safe, so you don't sleep."

"East End" Looks At Russia

A Report On What The British Worker Thinks Of The New Ally---And Of West End

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

(SNS CORRES.)

LONDON, Sept. 20.

The bobbie said, "They'll be talkin' about Roosia in the pub; seems as though that's all they ever talk about these days."

It wasn't much of a pub. Bomb blasts had knocked out the windows and cracked the mirror in back of the bar. The air was heavy with cheap tobacco and the smell of stale beer. Even so you could catch the sickeningly sweet smell of decay which covers the East End on heavy, foggy nights.

It comes from bodies buried under ruins. You never mention it. The men you mention it to may be the husbands, fathers or sons of those bodies. If you keep your pipe lit and don't think about it, it isn't bad.

For And Against

They were talking about Russia, just as the bobbie said. Two dock workers, an infantryman on leave from an old and famous regiment, an A. R. P. warden off duty, a quiet kid in army uniform with the white band on his cap that signifies officers' training unit and a man who looked like a small shopkeeper. He was the kid's father.

He and the infantryman were arguing about Russia. The soldier kept saying, "The Reds have them stopped, by God! They kept their eyes open, they did. Knew what was comin', they did."

The shopkeeper said, "It's just luck for us so far. When 'Itler gets really going they'll hand the Bolshies a 'iding, you wait and see."

East End And West

One thing about which these people were uneasy was whether the hazards and risks of bombing were evenly distributed. They wanted to know about the West End. I told them it had been heavily bombed and that a great many people who made in a week what they make in a year had been killed.

"Ho, jus' that's all right," said the docker, "but them's the folks who gets out of town nights there's a big one on. Why, they get out of town seven nights a week. Them that's killed in the West End is almost all soldiers and their girls in night clubs and such."

I went around to see a dwarf I know in that section. His name is Mickey Davis. He is about three feet in height and about ten feet in courage. When his optician's business was blown out from under him last September, he went to an underground shelter. He found it a hell of misery and chaos.

"Used To It Now"

He has remade it with Government help. This night it was clean, well ventilated. There was a canteen and bunks for all. The shelter holds a maximum of 4,500. Even this summer, during the long lull, there have been between 1,100 and 2,000 people sleeping there each night.

"Poor people, they ain't got any homes and they won't leave their old neighborhoods for the billets the Government offers them," said Mickey.

I asked him what he thought about the coming winter.

"It don't matter how much they bomb us, it won't be so bad as last year," he said. "We know how to live down here now and people are used to it. If we are lucky about disease it will be all right."

He said "his people" weren't going into the new surface shelters. "They ain't crazy. Those things may be safe against a direct hit, but who wants to stay above ground when it's noisy. You can't sleep and sleep's what you miss most."

East End And "Winnie"

In politics the East End curiously is more strongly Conservative than a year ago. This is mainly because "Winnie" is a Conservative and these people have faith in Winston Churchill—as he has in them—despite all they've gone through.

"They may turn Commie in another year or so," Mickey said, "but they ain't thinking that way now. Course they think lots of Russia. When they hear the admiral of the Baltic Fleet started life as a tailor and this fella with the big mustaches, Budyenny, was a sergeant and now is a marshal, it gets 'em to think. They figure the tailor and the sergeant a e doin' pretty well compared with some of our admirals and marshals who thinks tailors are dirt and sergeants just a funny fella for cartoons in Punch."

Ruins At Night

Mickey and I walked down to the subway station. We passed block after block of ruined homes, crossed streets still pocked with bomb craters, saw vast and stately St. Paul's rising above the ruins of the city.

It was nearly dawn and the piles of debris, the shattered buildings were strange and eerie in the half light. It was hard to believe you were in London.

You remembered Louvain and the ruined buildings near the library on another dawn. You caught yourself listening for the 155's to open up. That was the front line. This is one, too.

Strong and confident from the cloudy skies came the drone of a bomber returning from a target in Germany. Mickey lifted his little head, his eyes bright.

No Complacency

"Terrible, ain't it?" he said. "Those fellas been doin' to them what they did to us. But it's good, too. I used to think you could do your part by takin' care of old people in shelters, seein' the kids get food and stuff like that."

He sighed and his frail body shook. "I know now you can't stop at that. I don't want to live in a world where this sort of thing goes on. But them Nazis ain't goin' to stop. We know that down here. This complacency I read about in the papers, there ain't none of it in East End."

The drone of the bomber was dying in the distance. Mickey waved his hand in its direction.

"Bombs is what'll stop the Jerries." There was immense pride in his voice when he added, "They can't take this stuff like us. We'll keep bombing and then some day, please God, it'll be over."

We shook hands and I went down the stairs into the subway picking my way over the sleepers lying along the wall.

Communiques

Russian

MOSCOW, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued the following communiqué today:

Throughout the night of Sept. 19 our forces fought the enemy along the entire front, and especially fiercely in the vicinity of Kiev.

MOSCOW, Sunday, Sept. 21 (AP)—A communiqué issued today by the Soviet Information Bureau said:

During Saturday fighting continued along the entire front. Particularly fierce fighting took place at Kiev.

Our air force operated against the enemy's Panzer troops, infantry and artillery, bombed his planes and airdromes and destroyed pontoon bridges.

On Sept. 18 sixteen German planes were brought down in air combat. We lost fourteen planes.

In the Barents Sea our warships sank a big German transport.

In the last three months 8,500 German planes have been destroyed on the Eastern Front in air battles, by anti-aircraft fire, or on airdromes, not counting German losses in taking off and landing.

The German claim to have lost only 725 planes and 6,900 airmen killed, wounded or missing from June 22 to Aug. 31 is a crude and transparent falsification.

On Sept. 19 the German Air Force made several raids on Leningrad. A considerable number of enemy planes were dispersed and driven off at the city's approaches. Isolated groups of enemy planes managed to break through to the city and drop explosive and incendiary bombs. The Nazi Air Force selected dwelling houses, public buildings, cultural and hospital institutions as the main objectives of their attacks.

According to preliminary figures, seventeen enemy planes were brought down by our air force and anti-aircraft artillery.

BERLIN, Sept. 20 (AP)—Today's German High Command communiqué:

As already reported by a special announcement, infantry divisions of the German Army, supported by the Luftwaffe, have after several days of fighting broken through the strong ring of fortifications of Kiev on the west bank of the Dnieper River.

In a bold attack they penetrated yesterday into the town behind the retreating enemy and hoisted the Reich war flag on the citadel. After the higher leadership of the Soviet troops had fled, the whole garrison threw down their arms and ceased further resistance.

As was also announced, the city of Poltava, 120 kilometers southwest of Kharkov, was taken Sept. 19.

In cooperation with formations of the navy and air force, troops of the German Army captured the islands of Worms and Moon, in Riga Bay, in the middle of September. Captain Panko, on Sept. 16 at his own decision, penetrated with his company over a dam toward the eastern part of the island of Oesel. With this coup he created conditions for operations aiming at the occupation of this island.

The German Air Force bombed Odessa and Moscow.

In the battle against British supply shipping, German bomber planes sank two merchant ships, including a tanker, a total of 17,000 tons, sailing in convoy east of Hull last night. Another freighter was heavily damaged by bomb hits off the British southeast coast by daylight yesterday.

In North Africa German bombers attacked oil depots of Suez and harbor works of Port Said and Alexandria with good effect Thursday night.

Minor enemy forces flew over North Germany last night. Isolated planes penetrated surroundings of the Reich capital. Bombs dropped on residential quarters of Stettin caused a small number of casualties, including some fatal, among the civilian population. Two of the British bombers were shot down by anti-aircraft artillery.

The text of another German communiqué:

30.24 - 11955

British bombers attempted in the night of Sept. 19-20 to attack various cities in North Germany. Explosive and incendiary bombs dropped in residential quarters resulted in a number of dead and wounded among the civilian population.

Strong and well-aimed anti-aircraft fire forced the enemy to drop his bombs unaimed from a great height.

Some few planes which tried to push on to Berlin did not succeed in breaking through the anti-aircraft belt of the Reich capital. One enemy plane was shot down.

Later the Germans issued this communiqué:

Offensive efforts of the British Air Force on the Channel collapsed this afternoon with heavy losses for the enemy.

According to reports so far, German fighters shot down thirty-five pursuit planes in heavy air fighting. Two of our own planes are missing.

In addition, naval artillery brought down three British bombers, so that the total loss of the enemy was increased to thirty-eight planes.

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AP)—An Air Ministry communiqué issued today:

Docks, warehouses and railway yards at Stettin, the largest enemy port on the Baltic, were attacked by aircraft of the Bomber Command last night. The weather was good and many large fires were left burning. Two of our aircraft are missing.

Aircraft of the Coastal Command, without loss to themselves, bombed objectives near Nantes last night.

The Air Ministry issued this communiqué tonight:

Aircraft of the Bomber Command, together with powerful formations of fighters, carried out widespread offensive operations today. Attacks have been made on objectives in Norway, Northwest Germany and occupied France, as well as on enemy shipping off the Dutch coast.

In the early afternoon Blenheim aircraft escorted by fighters attacked two enemy convoys off the Dutch coast. In one convoy a supply ship of about 5,000 tons was set on fire and a large tanker was hit several times. One of the protecting Flak [anti-aircraft] ships was also hit. In a second convoy a ship of about 7,000 tons was hit. Four ships were seen to be on fire and the back of another to be broken.

The railway junction at Hazebrouck, the shipyards near Rouen and the docks at Cherbourg were bombed by other escorted forces of Blenheims, while Hampdens with a fighter escort attacked the railway center at Abbeville.

Fortress aircraft attacked objectives at Emden and Blenheims bombed a fish-oil factory at Floro, on the coast of Norway.

In the course of these operations our fighters shot down fifteen enemy fighters. Seven of our fighters and three Blenheims are missing.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 20 (AP)—The British Middle East Command issued the following communiqué today:

Libya—At Tobruk yesterday was quiet due to a continuation of the heavy dust storm which started the previous day. During a brief lull our artillery effectively engaged a strong party of enemy infantry observed at some distance outside our perimeter defenses. The enemy did not attempt any bombing raids.

In the frontier area our patrols were again active.

A communiqué issued by the Royal Air Force:

Shipping and harbors at Tripoli and Bengazi were raided by bomber aircraft of the Royal Air Force during the night of Sept. 18-19.

At Tripoli bombs were seen to fall either on or near a liner and other shipping in the harbor, as well as on the Spanish and Karamanli moles. At dawn a further attack was made by another force of bombers. Three hits were obtained on a liner and a large merchantman was twice struck with bombs.

At Bengazi, which was raided for two nights in succession, direct hits were scored on the central and outer moles.

Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm raided a landing ground at Gambut and the harbor at Bardia, but the extent of damage done could not be observed. Dumps in the Bardia and Gambut areas, as well as motor transport and enemy camps at Lucch, were successfully attacked by aircraft of the South African Air Force during daylight.

Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm attacked a convoy of two merchant vessels, two tankers and five escort ships in the Central Mediterranean the night of Sept. 18-19. A smoke screen prevented a clear view of the results of the attack, but one merchant vessel was hit and brought to a standstill.

From all these operations all our aircraft returned safely.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Italian High Command communiqué said today:

In North Africa enemy elements that attempted to approach our positions with armored cars were repulsed.

British aircraft dropped bombs on Tripoli and attacked Bengazi, causing great damage, particularly to Arab dwelling houses. Ground defenses at Bengazi shot down one enemy aircraft.

Two Italian motor ships transporting troops and sailing in a convoy were torpedoed and sunk off the coast of Tripoli. Nearly all soldiers on board and the crews were saved by escorting ships and by other vessels that rushed to the rescue.

In East Africa there were daring operations by Italian troops. Troops of the Wolchefit garrison attacked and conquered an important position after strong resistance on the part of the enemy. The enemy was routed and suffered heavy losses. Arms, ammunition and large quantities of supplies were captured.

At Chelga a column of Italian national and colonial troops achieved gerat success in an offensive action in which strong enemy forces were beaten. After a hard fight enemy troops were compelled to retreat in disorder, leaving more than 300 killed on the battlefield.

In the Eastern Mediterranean our aircraft attacked and heavily damaged a small enemy merchant ship.

THE UKRAINIAN BREAK-THROUGH WHICH THE GERMANS APPEAR TO HAVE ACCOMPLISHED AT THE CLOSE OF THREE MONTHS OF WARFARE MAY OR MAY NOT BE THE RED ARMY'S SEDAN; IT WILL TAKE BUT A LITTLE TIME TO SHOW WHETHER THE RUSSIANS' SPECIAL GENIUS FOR RESISTANCE CAN STOP AND SMOTHER THE GERMAN COLUMNS NOW REACHING FOR THE DONETS AND DON BASINS, OR WHETHER THE DEFENDING ARMIES WILL SCATTER LIKE AUTUMN LEAVES BEFORE THE WIND, AS DID THE ARMIES OF FRANCE.

TO GET THIS GREAT MILITARY MOVEMENT ROUGHLY IN AMERICAN GEOGRAPHIC PERSPECTIVE, ONE CAN TURN THE MAP OF THE UNITED STATES COUNTER-CLOCKWISE UNTIL THE PACIFIC OCEAN RESTS ON THE BOTTOM,

THE ATLANTIC ON TOP. THE ACTIVE FRONT RUNS FROM DETROIT TO THE WESTERN NEBRASKA BORDER.

THUS THE CANADIAN BORDER BECOMES ROUGHLY THE REICH FRONTIER; DETROIT BECOMES LENINGRAD; ST.LOUIS IS MOSCOW.

NOW ONE FINDS THAT OMAHA (KIEV) HAS BEEN STORMED AND ENTERED BY THE INVADER AFTER A TWO MONTHS' SIEGE; MOREOVER, AND MORE IMPORTANT, THE ENEMY HAS BROKEN THROUGH ON BOTH SIDES OF OMAHA, FORCING THE PLATTE AND MISSOURI RIVERS AND IS ADVANCING ON A 75-MILE FRONT DEEP INTO KANSAS, ITS PANZER COLUMNS GROPING AT WICHITA (KHARKOV).

FROM HERE THE INVADING ARMIES MAY BRANCH; ONE PLUNGING ON INTO THE RICH STATES OF OKLAHOMA AND TEXAS, THE OTHER TURNING TO OUTFLANK ST.LOUIS (MOSCOW). ALL THIS WHILE INDUSTRIAL DETROIT, (LENINGRAD) IS BESIEGED BY LAND AND LAKE, UNDER CONSTANT FIRE OF THE INVADERS' CANNON.

SEP 21 1941

FURTHERMORE, FOUR DEFENDING ARMIES ARE SAID TO BE TRAPPED AND FACING ANNIHILATION SOMEWHERE BETWEEN OMAHA AND THE VICINITY OF TOPEKA, KAS.

THAT IS ABOUT AS FAR AS THIS CRUDE COMPARISON CAN BE CARRIED. ON THE ACTUAL MAP OF RUSSIA, THE MAIN THREAT IS TO THE VITAL INDUSTRIES OF THE DONETS AND DON BASINS, TO THE CAUCASUS, EVEN TO THE SUPPLY ROUTE FROM PERSIA, OVER WHICH THE WESTERNLANDS HOPE TO SEND THE MATERIEL WHICH RUSSIA NEEDS TO REPLACE THE SINEWS SHE HAS LOST.

IT IS NOT FAIR, HOWEVER, TO ASSUME AT THIS TIME THAT THE GERMANS WILL BE ABLE TO CONTINUE THE SWEEP EASTWARD. IF THE PRESENT ACTION FOLLOWS THE PATTERN OF THE PAST 90 DAYS AND THE RUSSIANS CONTINUE THE SAME SUPERB RESISTANCE, THERE ARE TODAY MANY FEROCIOUS BATTLES RAGING FAR BEHIND THE GERMANS' FURTHERMOST POINTS OF PENETRATION. INDEED, THE RUSSIANS AVER THE STRUGGLE FOR KIEV ITSELF GOES ON; THAT THE GERMANS HAVE LOST TEN DIVISIONS THERE.

ONE CANNOT EVEN ACCEPT AS A FACT THE GERMAN CONTENTION THAT THE FOUR RED ARMIES SURROUNDED EAST OF KIEV ARE IMMOBILIZED; THEY MAY STILL HAVE THE PUNCH FOR A RAGING COUNTER-ATTACK THAT WOULD MENACE, PERHAPS SPLINTER, THE GERMAN SALIENT.

SEP 21 1941

WINTER, TOO, IS VERY NEAR: FOR GERMANS, YET ANOTHER WINTER IN WHICH THEIR SOLDIERS WILL DIE FAR AWAY FROM THE HOMES TO WHICH THEY ARE BOUND BY ALL THE TIES OF GERMANIC TRADITION. IT IS VERY SIGNIFICANT THAT THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND ISSUED ITS FIRST CASUALTY FIGURES ONLY WHEN IT HAD A CASCADE OF SUCCESS REPORTS TO COVER THEM UP. IT ALSO IS NOTEWORTHY THAT THE HIGH COMMAND ITSELF ACKNOWLEDGED, INFERENTIALLY, THAT TIDINGS OF FAR GREATER CASUALTIES HAD BECOME CURRENT IN THE FATHERLAND. ACTUALLY, WHETHER THEY WERE BELIEVED OR NOT, THE FIGURES OF SOME 400,000 DEAD, WOUNDED AND MISSING GERMAN SOLDIERS MUST HAVE SHOCKED MANY ~~THE~~ GERMAN HOUSEHOLD.

BY FORD BAXTER

(ADVANCE)-HAMILTON, BERMUDA-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)-AMERICANS, WHO ONCE CAME HERE AS LAZING TOURISTS, HAVE COME THIS TIME IN DEADLY EARNEST--TO BUILD MILITARY AND NAVAL BASES.

THEY HAVE PUT NEW BUSTLE IN THE ONCE-QUIET LIFE OF THIS ISLAND RESORT--AND POSED TOUGH PROBLEMS FOR THE PEOPLE OF THESE ISLANDS.

THE MOTORS OF AUTOMOBILES AND TRUCKS ARE HEARD ON STREETS WHOSE QUIET SELDOM WAS BROKEN BEFORE EXCEPT BY THE CLOP-CLOP OF A PASSING CARRIAGE HORSE.

HOTELS WHERE TOURISTS PLAYED HAVE BECOME OFFICES AND CLUBROOMS FOR WORKERS, SOLDIERS, SAILORS AND OFFICERS.

AND BERMUDA NATIVES ARE FACED WITH A SKYROCKETING COST OF LIVING AND A SHORTAGE OF HOUSES.

A YEAR HAS ELAPSED SINCE PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL ANNOUNCED THE LEASING OF DEFENSE BASES TO THE UNITED STATES. THE UNPRECEDENTED ACTION FELL WITH SHATTERING EFFECT UPON MANY BRITISH COLONIES WHICH FEARED A POSSIBLE LOSS OF SOVEREIGNTY RIGHTS.

SEP 22 1941

THE INHERENT DESIRE OF THE BERMUDIANS TO REMAIN BRITISH HAS BROUGHT ABOUT SOME FRICTION IN THE LAST 12 MONTHS, BUT RELATIONS BETWEEN THE AMERICANS AND THE COLONIALS ARE GENERALLY AMICABLE TODAY.

TWO MAIN PROJECTS ARE WELL UNDER WAY.

AT LONGBIRD ISLAND A HUGE ARMY AIR FIELD IS BEING BUILT. NATIVES OF THE COLONY SHOOK THEIR HEADS PESSIMISTICALLY WHEN IT WAS LEARNED THE AMERICANS WOULD FILL IN PATCHES OF WATER AROUND LONGBIRD. THEY SAID THE SEA BOTTOM WAS LIKE IRON AND NO DREDGE COULD BREAK IT UP. BUT ACRES OF SAND, CORAL, SHELLS AND CLAY HAVE BEEN PUMPED AROUND AND OVER LONGBIRD. AS FAR AS THE EYE CAN SEE, A VAST BARE FIELD FOR THIS EAST-END BASE HAS QUICKLY TAKEN SHAPE.

SEP 22 1941

AT THE WEST END OF THE ISLANDS THE NAVAL OPERATING BASE IS BEING CONSTRUCTED.

SOME OF AMERICA'S BEST LABORERS ARE ON THE JOB. BOULDER DAM EXPERTS HAVE BEEN SENT HERE. THESE MEN COMPLAIN: "THINGS GET WORSE AND WORSE--

FIRST WE WERE CALLED DAM WORKERS, NOW WE'RE KNOWN AS BASE WORKERS!"

CAPTAIN P.J.SEARLES, U.S.NAVAL ENGINEER-IN-CHARGE, AND MAJOR DONALD WHITE, U.S.ARMY ENGINEER-IN-CHARGE, HAVE HAD TO KEEP ONE JUMP AHEAD OF THE ACCOMMODATION DEMANDS. SEPARATE CREWS ARE BUILDING BARRACKS TO HOUSE THE WORKERS, BUT EACH SHIP BRINGS WEEKLY ABOUT 300 ADDITIONS.

MAJOR WHITE HAD A GOOD IDEA: WITH BERMUDA'S AVAILABLE HOUSING ACCOMMODATION TAXED TO THE UTMOST, THE HUDSON RIVER BOAT S.S.BERKSHIRE WHICH USED TO BE ON THE NEW YORK-ALBANY RUN, WAS BROUGHT HERE AND ANCHORED OFF ST.GEORGE'S. SIX HUNDRED MEN ARE NOW LIVING ABOARD THE "HOTEL" SHIP.

SEP 22 1941

IT IS DIFFICULT TO RENT A HOME IN BERMUDA TODAY. WHEN THE TOURISTS PACKED UP AND LEFT THERE WERE LARGE NUMBERS OF COTTAGES TO BE HAD FOR A SONG. LANDLORDS WOULD TAKE ANYTHING. BUT A COTTAGE WHICH RENTED AT $30 A MONTH IN SEPTEMBER, 1940, IS LEASED THESE DAYS AT AS HIGH AS $200 A MONTH.

IT STARTED WITH THE ARRIVAL OF EVACUEES FROM ENGLAND. THEY WERE LOOKED UPON AS A GODSEND. MANY LARGE HOUSES FORMERLY LEASED BY WEALTHY AMERICAN FAMILIES WERE STANDING EMPTY, AND THEIR OWNERS WERE GLAD TO LEASE THEM TO THE NEW ENGLISH ARRIVALS AT CONSIDERABLY LESS THAN THEY WERE WORTH.

THEN CAME THE AMERICANS, MILITARY AND NAVAL OFFICERS, CONSTRUCTION ENGINEERS, OFFICIALS OF ONE KIND AND ANOTHER, ALL WANTING HOUSES FOR THEMSELVES AND THEIR FAMILIES. SOON ALL THE HOUSES WHICH HAD BEEN EMPTY WERE OCCUPIED. BUT IT DIDN'T STOP THERE.

LANDLORDS WITH HOUSES OCCUPIED BY BERMUDIANS AT THE LOWER RENTAL USUALLY GIVEN FOR LONG-TERM LEASES SAW FELLOW HOUSE-OWNERS REAPING FABULOUS PRICES. AND SO BEGAN A WHOLESALE EJECTION OF TENANTS WHICH HAS CAUSED THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY TO APPOINT A SPECIAL COMMITTEE CHARGED WITH THE INVESTIGATION OF HOUSING AND RENTALS.

BERMUDIANS COMPLAINED WHEN LANDLORDS ASKED THEM TO LEAVE SO THAT THEIR HOUSES COULD BE RENTED AT HIGHER PRICES.

IT WAS NOT POSSIBLE FOR THEM TO BUILD NEW HOMES BECAUSE RESTRICTIONS CONSERVED LABOR AND MATERIAL TO BUILD THE BASES OR TO REHABILITATE DISPOSSESSED PEOPLE WHOSE LAND HAS BEEN TAKEN FOR THE BASES.

SEP 22 1941

AT THAT, ENGLISHMEN AND AMERICANS HAVE TAKEN MOST OF THE LARGE ACCOMMODATION QUARTERS. THE LARGE ELBOW BEACH HOTEL RESORT NOW SERVES THE NAVY ENGINEERS FOR OFFICES AND DIGS. MAJOR WHITE AND HIS STAFF TOOK OVER THE ST.GEORGE HOTEL. BEFORE THAT, THE IMPERIAL CENSORSHIP HAD OCCUPIED THE PRINCESS AND BERMUDIANA HOTELS. RECENTLY CASTLE HARBOUR HOTEL WAS RENTED BY THE U.S.ARMY. THIS STILL LEAVES THE BELMONT MANOR HOTEL, THE INVERURIE HOTEL, THE LANGTON HOTEL, THE IMPERIAL HOTEL AND THE NEW WINDSOR HOTEL TO ACCOMMODATE THOSE TOURISTS WHO STILL VISIT BERMUDA.

TO MAKE ROOM FOR THE AMERICAN BASES, MANY FAMILIES HAD TO BE MOVED FROM THEIR HOMES. HUNDREDS OF FAMILIES WHICH HAD LIVED FOR GENERATIONS WITHIN SOUND OF THE SURF ON ST.DAVID'S ISLAND HAD TO BE TRANSPLANTED INLAND.

CHIEF DIFFICULTY WAS SETTING A FAIR PRICE FOR HOMES WHERE FEW PARCELS OF LAND HAVE BEEN SOLD IN THE LAST DECADE.

"MARKET VALUE?" ONE ISLANDER ASKED THE ARBITRATORS APPOINTED TO SET

30.24 — 11961

30.24 — 11961

COMPENSATION. "WHY, I AM NOT CONCERNED WITH THAT. MY GREAT GRAND-FATHER LIVED ON THIS LAND. I NEVER WOULD HAVE SOLD IT. I COULD NOT FIND ITS EQUAL IN BERMUDA." YET HE WILL HAVE TO MOVE.

THE ISLANDERS ARGUE THAT MARKET VALUE SHOULD BE BASED ON WHAT THEY HAVE TO PAY FOR NEW LAND. KNOWING THE ISLANDERS MUST BUY, BERMUDIANS ELSEWHERE HAVE INCREASED THE PER-ACRE PRICE OF THEIR LAND.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAS GIVEN BERMUDA A $500,000 CHECK TO PAY INITIAL COMPENSATION COSTS. ULTIMATELY, THE BRITISH EXPECT TO SECURE REIMBURSEMENT FROM THE UNITED STATES. BERMUDA ALSO EXPECTS TO COLLECT FOR LEGAL EXPENSES INVOLVED.

SEP 22 1941

THE AMERICANS ARE PROVIDING THREE OF THEIR OWN HOSPITALS IN BERMUDA ALONG WITH SEVERAL SMALL INFIRMARIES.

THE BERMUDA BIOLOGICAL STATION, KNOWN IN THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD AS A CENTER FOR OCEANOGRAPHIC WORK, WAS LEASED AS A HOSPITAL FOR THE CONSTRUCTION WORKERS AT LONGBIRD. IT REVERTED TO AN OLD USE, AS IT ONCE WAS USED AS A SANATORIUM.

AT KING'S POINT, ANOTHER HOSPITAL IS BEING PREPARED FOR THE LABORERS AT THE WEST END.

BY FAR THE GREATEST MEDICAL CENTER WILL BE ON 16 ACRES OF LAND LEASED BY THE U.S.NAVY DEPARTMENT. THERE THE NAVY'S CRACK MOBILE HOSPITAL UNIT IS MAKING AVAILABLE 500 BEDS. THIS UNIT'S PERSONNEL OF 272 (INCLUDING 19 DOCTORS, AND ORDERLIES, TECHNICIANS, COOKS, MALE NURSES AND OTHERS) ESTABLISHED IN LESS THAN A WEEK A COLONY OF TENTS, AND NOW WOODEN BUILDINGS (ALL THE PARTS ARE ASSEMBLED LIKE A JIG-SAW PUZZLE) ARE BEING PUT TOGETHER. LATER A STEEL BUILDING WILL BE ERECTED.

THE UNIT IS SO COMPOSED THAT EACH MAN, DOCTOR AND ENLISTED MAN ALIKE, SHARES IN THE WORK TO PREPARE FOR OPERATIONS. NO OUTSIDE LABOR IS USED. THE MAN WHO WIELDS A HAMMER MAY BE A SURGEON, AND ANOTHER MAN CARRYING MATERIAL MAY BE AN EXPERT TECHNICIAN.

THE AMERICAN BASES AUTHORITIES WERE QUICK TO PROVIDE RECREATIONAL FACILITIES FOR THEIR MEN. THE HAMILTON HOTEL, A FORMER MECCA FOR TOURISTS, WAS TURNED INTO THE UNITED SERVICES CLUB. ONLY LIGHT BEERS ARE SOLD. DANCES ARE HELD WEEKLY.

SEP 22 1941

RIDDELL'S BAY GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB (100 ACRES) WAS RENTED BY THE U.S.NAVY FOR OUTDOOR RECREATION. IT WILL OFFER BADMINTON, VOLLEYBALL, AND TENNIS, AMONG OTHER SPORTS. THE OFFICERS WILL HAVE THE USE OF NINE OF THE EIGHTEEN HOLES OF THE FORMER GOLF COURSE.

BERMUDA MERCHANTS AT FIRST OBJECTED TO AMERICAN AUTHORITIES BRINGING IN SUPPLIES DUTY-FREE, BUT THE AMERICAN WORKERS HAVE BROUGHT THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS INTO CIRCULATION BY FREQUENTING THE SHOPS IN HAMILTON.

THE BASE AUTHORITIES BUY TONS AND TONS OF FISH EACH WEEK FROM THE ISLAND'S SMALL FISHING INDUSTRY. THE FISHERMEN NEVER HAD SUCH BUSINESS BEFORE. BUT THERE ARE FEWER FISHERMEN BECAUSE MANY OF THEM HAVE TURNED INTO BOAT PILOTS USING THEIR MOTORBOATS FOR WORK AT THE BASES WHICH PAYS MORE MONEY.

THE EMPLOYMENT PROBLEM IS NOT EASILY SOLVED. ABOUT A YEAR AGO BERMUDA HAD A RELIEF PROJECT WHICH TOOK CARE OF SOME 350 MEN PUT OUT OF WORK BY LOSS OF THE TOURIST TRADE. TODAY THE LABOR DEMAND IS FAR AHEAD OF THE SUPPLY.

TWELVE MONTHS AGO A LABORER IN THE RELIEF CORPS RECEIVED ABOUT $6.50 A WEEK. HE GETS ABOUT FOUR OR FIVE TIMES THAT TODAY IF HE IS AN UNSKILLED WORKER, AND ABOUT SIX OR SEVEN TIMES LAST YEAR'S PRICE IF HE IS A CARPENTER, MASON OR ELECTRICIAN.

BERMUDIANS AWOKE ONE DAY TO REALIZE ALL THEIR HELP WERE LEAVING TO WORK AT THE BASES FOR BETTER WAGES.

THERE HAS NEVER BEEN A GENERAL USE OF MOTOR VEHICLES IN BERMUDA SO WHEN PERMISSION WAS GIVEN THE AMERICANS TO IMPORT AUTOMOBILES, MOTOR TRUCKS, AND MOTOR CYCLES, IT WAS THE UNDERSTANDING THAT THE VEHICLES WOULD BE USED FOR CONSTRUCTION PURPOSES.

SEP 22 1941

ASSEMBLYMEN LATER CLAIMED THAT THE FAMILIES OF THE AMERICANS WERE USING THE CARS ON THE SIDE. THEY CONTENDED THE COLONY'S SPEED LIMIT OF 15 MILES AN HOUR WAS BEING VIOLATED. THEY SAID THE ROADS WERE BEING DAMAGED. FINALLY THE BERMUDA POLICE FORCE ASKED FOR STATION WAGONS AND MOTORCYCLES, BUT WAS REFUSED. SOME MEMBERS URGED THAT EVERYBODY BE GIVEN THE ADVANTAGES OF MOTOR TRAVEL AS THEY ALREADY HAD THE DISADVANTAGES.

"HORSE AND BUGGY DAYS ARE GONE," IS A FREQUENTLY HEARD CRY IN THE BERMUDA ASSEMBLY. HOWEVER, MUCH THOUGHT IS GIVEN TO THE FUTURE AND THE RETURN OF THE TOURISTS WHO APPRECIATED THE ISLAND'S MOTORLESS ROADS.

AT A RECENT AUCITION OF CONTRABAND GOODS ONE ITEM PUT UP FOR SALE WAS AUTO PARTS. BERMUDIANS THOUGHT THAT WAS IRONIC.

UNDATED LEAD 107TH WEEK OF THE WAR

(ADVANCE) WITH THE CLAIMED CAPTURE OF KIEV, CAPITAL OF THE RICH UKRAINE, THE GERMANS COUNTED AS WON TODAY (SUNDAY) A MAJOR OBJECTIVE OF THEIR 13-WEEK-OLD WAR WITH THE SOVIET.

HITLER'S HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED ON FRIDAY IN THE 107TH WEEK OF THE GENERAL CONFLICT THAT THE GERMAN BATTLE FLAG HAD BEEN RAISED OVER THE MEDIEVAL CITADEL OF THE ANCIENT CITY, THIRD LARGEST IN RUSSIA, BUT COMPLETE REDUCTION OF THE CITY APPEARED STILL IN DOUBT.

BUT NAZI ACCOUNTS. A FIERCE HOUSE-TO-HOUSE MOP-UP HAD BEEN COMPLETED, BUT THE RUSSIANS REPORTED THAT A "SAVAGE LIFE AND DEATH STRUGGLE" TO MAKE THE CITY AS COSTLY A CONQUEST AS POSSIBLE STILL RAGED.

THUS ACCOUNTS OF BOTH SIDES PLACED THE GERMANS DEFINITELY AND STRONGLY IN THE CITY AND ACTUAL OCCUPATION SEEMED ONLY A MATTER OF DAYS.

THE GERMANS ALSO REPORTED THEY HAD ENCIRCLED FOUR RUSSIAN ARMIES IN THE AREA, THUS CRUSHING VIRTUALLY ALL FORMIDABLE RESISTANCE LEFT IN THE UKRAINE. EARLIER IN THE WEEK, THE GERMAN DRIVE IN THE SOUTH WAS SAID TO HAVE CUT OFF THE CRIMEAN PENINSULA, BUT ODESSA, GREAT PORT ON THE BLACK SEA STILL STOOD BEHIND THE ADVANCED GERMAN SPEARHEAD.

LENINGRAD ALSO REMAINED UNTAKEN IN THE FACE OF A FIERCE DEFENSE AGAINST FURIOUS GERMAN ASSAULTS.

THE MOST IMPORTANT OBJECTIVE OF THE NAZIS, MOSCOW ITSELF, APPEARED TO BE SAFE FROM ANY IMMEDIATE THREAT, FOR THE ONLY VICTORIES FORMALLY CLAIMED BY THE RUSSIANS DURING THE WEEK WERE ON THE CENTRAL FRONT, WHERE A COUNTERATTACK WAS DECLARED TO MENACE GERMAN HELD SMOLENSK ON THE NAPOLEANIC ROUTE TO MOSCOW.

Russian Counter-Attack Drives Germans From Strongly Fortified Line

Budenny Reported Escaping Kiev Trap

Leningrad Holding Firm Under Heavy Bombing; Nazi Losses Called Huge

By Henry C. Cassidy
By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Sept. 22 (Monday).—Soviet forces were reported today to have recaptured thirty-two villages and to have driven the Germans from a strongly fortified line in a central-front counter-attack, while inflicting enormous losses on the Nazis blasting at the defenders of Leningrad.

Today's early morning communique admitted the abandonment of Kiev, bitterly defended capital of the Ukraine and Russia's third largest city, which, with its population of 846,000, was the first major prize to fall to the Germans in three months of fighting.

In abandoning the city, Marshal Semyon Budenny's Ukrainian armies apparently fell back to new positions to reorganize for a defense against what appeared to be a German thrust eastward against Kharkov, the greatest city of the rich Donetz area.

Call Nazi Losses Heavy

Although little news was available from the Kiev area, dispatches from the Leningrad and central front offset somewhat the loss of the Ukraine city. As an example of the tremendous losses suffered by the Germans along the entire Arctic to the Baltic front, the Soviet communique quoted German prisoners as saying the 30th Germany Infantry Division and an anti-aircraft division operating in the Leningrad area had lost nearly 50 per cent of their men.

Supporting the German ground troops battering Soviet bunkers before Leningrad were German dive-bombers, which were said to be striking "with such ferocity it seems the earth itself will split." The fury of the Luftwaffe assaults was emphasized by the Soviet communique, which told of the destruction of sixty German planes in Saturday's fighting alone, with a Russian loss of twenty-four craft.

The story of German losses was the same, the Russians said, at Kiev, Odessa and the central front, where the Germans were said to have been smashed by Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's counter-attacking troops. The dispatches to the official army newspaper, "Red Star," failed, however, to indicate whether the attack was part of the counter-offensive in the Smolensk area or was farther south in an effort to relieve pressure on Red troops about Kiev.

Report Nazi Division Routed

In a stubborn and sanguinary battle, the account said, the Red Army inflicted a "serious" defeat on the 34th German Infantry Division and routed two battalions sent to reinforce it. Soviet artillery, planes and tanks were credited with perfectly co-ordinated action in the battle. One tank unit was said to have driven far into the German rear ranks and destroyed a battalion and a half of Germans.

The reports said that despite mass air and ground assaults the Germans have failed to gain an inch of ground at Leningrad, and declared that in some sectors of that front the Russians had taken the initiative. At the southern end of that front the Russians were said to be standing fast under Rumanian bayonet charges against the defenses of Odessa.

SEP 22 1941

"Pravda" reported the recapture of two villages near Leningrad including one "strategically important railway zone," while "Red Star" said a Soviet thrust drove the Germans from an unnamed city south of Leningrad. Reinforced German units were said to have attempted to recapture it, only to be beaten off with heavy losses.

The army newspaper estimated that the Germans had lost 40 per cent of the man power of all divisions hurled against Leningrad. Southwest of the city a German tank battalion was said to have been routed from one of the most vital defense positions.

30.24— 1965

"A number of days have passed without a German advance toward Leningrad," said a "Pravda" correspondent at the front lines. "Powerful artillery fire is chasing the Germans into hastily dug trenches. Daring counter-attacks are wrecking Fascist plans for a breakthrough. Scores of German planes bomb our positions with such ferocity it seems the earth itself will split at any moment. But the Red soldiers stand firm. We will not leave our line."

In recent fighting at Odessa Rumanian troops "not only failed to advance but were even repulsed here and there," "Red Star" said. It declared that the Rumanians invariably followed up machine-gun and mortar fire with bayonet charges, which the Red Army men withstood. A Red Army announcement said more than 500 German and Rumanian soldiers were left dead on the battlefield after two attacks at Odessa.

In the Gulf of Finland, the Soviet Information Bureau reported, the Finnish coastal defense warship Ilmarinen, 3,900 tons, struck mines during an attack by Russian ships and sank.

Today's early morning communique, devoting one sentence to the retreat from Kiev, known as the "mother of Russian cities," said only: "After many days of fierce fighting our troops evacuated Kiev."

The Germans had announced Kiev's capture last Friday through a "perfect example of blitzkrieg," embodying all the weapons in the Nazi arsenal, but as late as yesterday the Russians said a life and death struggle still was being waged there over a battlefield carpeted with Nazi dead.

Crimea Reported Cut Off As Nazis Push To Azov Sea

SEP 22 1941

By Alvin Steinkopf

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 21—Smashing at both finaks of the 2,000-mile Russian battlefront, the Germans declared today they had captured 150,000 Red troops and driven to the Sea of Azov in the south and wrested control of the Soviet-defended Baltic islands of Oesel and Muhu in the north.

The drive to the shores of Azov apparently cut off the entire Crimean peninsula—possibly setting the stage for a new Dunkerque.

As the Germans cleared the sea lanes toward Leningrad, a special war bulletin claimed complete control of Oesel and Muhu—the Island of the Moon—had been won by army, navy and air forces despite dogged Soviet resistance.

Arensburg Captured?

Arensburg, capital of the former Estonian Island of Oesel which the Russians fortified, was said to be in German hands. Only scattered Soviet forces still held out at the western end of the island, the Germans reported.

[A German broadcast heard in London said trapped defense forces at Leningrad were trying repeatedly to "break through the iron ring" around the big port, but that they were beaten back by heavy fire.]

With Nazi forces in control of Oesel and Muhu, Germans said they now have captured the last Russian base in the recently Sovietized Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. (The Russians, however, still hold a base on the Hango Peninsula, across the Gulf of Finland, which they obtained from the Finns in the 1940 peace treaty.)

Navy Free To Operate

It was asserted here that the German navy would be able to operate along the Estonian coast and in Riga Bay without fear of attack from Soviet guns or naval units stationed on the two flat, stony islands. Heretofore the Russian position at the mouth of Riga Bay had enabled them to control movements in that sector.

The seizure of Muhu by a surprise attack from the mainland starting a week ago today opened the way for the German assault upon the larger near-by island of Oesel.

A dispatch by Herman Brüning, German war reporter, pictured the Germans scooting across the three-to-five-mile stretch of water in speed boats under cover of an early morning fog.

200 Guns Open Barrage

More than 200 guns laid down the opening barrage, Brüning said, while tiny storm boats, each loaded with six fully equipped infantrymen, headed for Muhu.

At the same time bombers sped overhead to soften Soviet resistance with heavy explosives.

As the first landing party neared the shore the reporter said the Russians sought to frustrate the Germans "with direct artillery fire, with machine-guns and anti-aircraft and with anti-tank guns."

Three Russian bombers dived to the attack and were driven off by Nazi fighters, he recounted.

Many Boats Lost

"Many a boat was shot through like a sieve, many a motor failed and many a brave helmsman died," he said "Nevertheless in the hail of defense fire the landing maneuver was accomplished.

"The first couple hundred yards of ground were won as a bridgehead through hard and costly fighting.

"Storm boats meantime started the return trip in order to transport the next company. They returned with wounded and some dead."

By nightfall, Brüning asserted, the Germans had a solid foothold on Muhu and the Russians were beginning to fall back.

SEP 23 1941

Nazis Rolling East

Communiques from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters indicated the Nazi war machine was rolling steadily eastward along the whole southern flank and forecast confidently a crushing Russian defeat between the Dnieper and the Donets rivers where figrting still raged.

East of Kiev, where the roll of captured brought the number of Russian prisoners reported in German hands close to the 2,000,000 mark, tanks were leading the eastward sweep while follow-up forces closed tighter around encircled Red forces, the Germans declared.

With characteristic reserve the high command kept secret the point at which its advance troops reached the Azov shore, but it was clear they had pushed across just north of the peninsula from Nikolaev and Kherson.

Stukas Batter Crimea

Crimea itself was being battered by dive bombers, perhaps indicating it would be next on the German mop-up schedule.

One question immediately asked here, but which remained unanswered, was whether great numbers of Russian forces had withdrawn into the Crimea. If they did, the stage seemed set for another German effort to drive their foes into the sea as they did at Dunkerque, in southern Greece and lately at Tallinn, Estonia.

Germans Report First Air Raid On Kronstadt

Berlin, Sept. 21 (AP)—German bombers raided "with success" today the fortress and port of Kronstadt, Russian island naval base in the Gulf of Finland near Leningrad, DNB reported tonight. It was the first announced air attack upon the island.

A number of planes carried out the attack in waves, the news agency said, with artillery positions, troops and planes on the ground heavily pounded.

Nazis Reported Training Flyers To Land On Skis

Rome, Sept. 21 (AP)—The Germans are training thousands of flyers to land their planes on skis in preparation for a winter campaign in Russia, Foreign Minister Count Ciano's newspaper Il Telegrafo of Leghorn said today.

Il Telegrafo said the Germans had been sending snow plows to Russia for some time to keep airfields clean and that many planes were being prepared for flying in temperatures as low as 22 degrees below zero.

The most serious disadvantage for he Axis armies in the winter campaign would be shortage of shelter in destroyed cities, it was said.

Il Popola Di Roma said meanwhile that the Germans intended to press on into the Caucasus for its oil. The newspaper said the German advance after the fall of Kiev would take them to Rostov, the gateway to the Caucasus on the double-tracked railroad to the oil port of Baku.

302 Tanks Reported Blasted

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (AP).—Three hundred and two Russian tanks were reported today to have been destroyed by a German panzer division when, assailing the defenses of Leningrad, it was forced to fight off a number of Russian counter-attacks. The report was published by D. N. B., official news agency.

HARD FIGHTING DESCRIBED

Rumanians Pour Shells on City, but Encounter Fierce Defense, Writer Asserts

SEP 22 1941

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (AP)—Russian transports bearing reinforcements and supplies are slipping into besieged Odessa night after night, a German war reporter, Karl Sedlatzek, reported today in a dispatch describing hard fighting for the Soviet Black Sea port.

Hundreds of Rumanian batteries around Odessa pour shells into the city day and night, and the rumbling of their fire can be heard for miles, he wrote.

"During every attack by Rumanian troops—and how very many attacks already have been made—the attackers see the same picture of destruction wrought by the Rumanian artillery fire," the reporter went on. "When Rumanian battalions advance in open ranks according to the French manner they run into mad fire from innumerable machine guns so that often only a strip of land torn by artillery can be reached."

The Russians by their tactics, he said, are sacrificing great numbers of men. Each fallen Red Army man is replaced with a new soldier, he related, so that the Rumanians "actually must snatch each inch of ground from the Soviet around Odessa in weeks-long fighting."

The reporter said the Russian defenses were built in a broad band around the city, and that only since the beginning of September had the Rumanian guns been able to fire on military positions in the city itself.

Showdown With Turkey Expected Soon In Berlin

Nazi Decision Reported Near On Whether To Force Ankara To Choose Sides

SEP 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Sofia, Sept. 21—The 4,000-ton Bulgarian steamer Rodina, traveling empty toward Istanbul, sank Thursday twenty-five miles off Bourgas.

She was the second Bulgarian ship lost in a week, the first having hit a mine in an area where Bulgarian officials said Soviet Russian mines had been found.

The cause of the Rodina's sinking was not given. The Hungarian radio said an explosion occurred aboard the Rodina.

[By the Associated Press]

Ankara, Sept. 20 (Delayed)—The question of whether Turkey will be permitted to pursue her present neutral course or whether an attempt will be made to force her definitely to chose sides was declared today by well-informed circles to be under discussion in Berlin.

A decision is likely to become evident in a few days.

Both Franz von Papen, Reich's Ambassador to Ankara, and Hans Rhode, German military attache here, now are in Berlin for what informants describe as a conference to determine whether Germany's right flank in southeastern Europe is adequately protected by the present forces in Bulgaria or whether Turkey will be asked to give more definite guarantees.

Guarantees Problematical

What guarantees Germany could ask or expect are highly problematical. But it is evident that Turkey's position with relation to the spreading war is becoming increasingly difficult with every mile that the Germans approach nearer the Caucasus.

Informed circles here said there were two German viewpoints regarding Turkey.

Von Papen, on one side, was described as insisting that Turkey never would participate in or permit aggressive action against Europe across her territory, and for that reason Germany's southern flank was secure.

Conflicting Viewpoint

A conflicting viewpoint, it was said, particularly in army circles, was that no chances should be taken to the south and the German flank must be guarded. Those holding this opinion were said to favor not only strong guarding of the flank by Bulgarian forces, but insistence that Turkey permit German forces to establish themselves along the Turkish coast of the Black Sea.

Diplomatic sources expected that the decision on whether von Papen would return to Turkey would indicate which of these schools of thought was uppermost in Berlin.

Turks May Not Be Pressed

One diplomat said if von Papen returns it will mean that Turkey will not be pressed for military guarantees beyond the non-aggression assurance contained in a pact Turkey and Germany signed three months ago.

Observers here regarded it as obvious that if the German army reaches the Caucasus and swings southward toward Iran, Turkey would be caught in the middle.

Some of these sources regarded it unlikely that Germany would undertake such an operation leaving at the flank of her forces 2,000,000 uncommitted Turkish soldiers.

London, Sept. 21—Qualified London observers, studying Bulgaria's declaration yesterday of a state of emergency, termed it flatly tonight a forerunner of a new German diplomatic offensive against Turkey, with attack on the Dardanelles to follow shortly if persuasion fails.

Control over the whole Turkish-held gateway from the Mediterranean into the Black Sea—the Dardanelles, Sea of Marmara and Bosporus—was seen as necessary to Adolf Hitler's plan of dominating the Black Sea area, these sources said.

Accompanying or subsequent steps, they said, would necessarily be conquest of Odessa and Sevastopol and destruction of Russia's Black Sea fleet.

Hitler's Major Goal

Behind these immediate objectives, it was said, is Hitler's major goal—the rich Caucasian oil fields.

Some quarters said the Germans intended to capitalize on the general antipathy of the Bulgars toward the Turks.

The Germans and King Boris of Bulgaria, it was explained, already have found that a large proportion of the Bulgarians are pro-Russian, and as a result it has been necessary, according to reports here, to herd thousands of them into concentration camps to prevent open anti-Nazi outbreaks.

Warnings To Turkey

Meanwhile there were thinly veiled, unofficial warnings to Turkey that Britain and her allies (Turkey herself is a non-belligerent ally) would be able to give little aid if the Germans and Bulgars struck suddenly unless the Turks opened their frontiers to admit helping armies now.

The Sunday Observer's diplomatic correspondent wrote:

"It is known and is even obvious that the Bulgar-German plan stops short at the Straits. There is no likelihood of an attempted land drive at the Caucasus through the difficult country of Anatolia (Turkey in Asia Minor).

"The German plan is for an attack by sea from Crimean, Bulgarian and Turkish bases.

Help Seen As Necessary

"Concentration of Allied forces on the Syria, Iraqi and Iranian frontiers of Turkey is therefore of little importance unless the Turkish Government in time invites Allied help so that those forces can be transported to the Thracian (European) frontier, where the issue obviously will be decided."

Britain has been neglecting no opportunity to tell the Turks that their turn is coming some day in Germany's one-by-one system of conquests.

But so far there has been nothing to indicate that the warnings have done much more than offset the uneasiness the Turks demonstrated recently when a London editorial suggested that Russia might become a dominant postwar influence in eastern Europe.

British diplomats still are explaining that the idea did not emanate from official quarters.

But there is some dissent from the general belief that Bulgarian moves betoken impending invasion of Turkey.

One observer declared Hitler might easily be feeding such reports in order to spread disquiet in the Middle East and cause Britain to concentrate forces near Turkey, thus forestalling the threat of a British offensive against Axis-held Libya in North Africa this fall.

King Ends Visit to Army

SOFIA, Bulgaria (Via Berlin), Sept. 21 (AP)—King Boris returned to Sofia today, after several days spent in inspecting various Bulgarian Army groups and reviewing their Fall exercises.

The new army class, largest in Bulgaria's history, includes men out of the newest provinces of Thrace, Macedonia and Dobruja.

Tanks And More Tanks, Maisky Asks

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, Sept. 22—Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to Great Britain, appealed today through the Supply Ministry to British workers for "more and more tanks" at the opening of a week in which the entire British tank output goes to Russia.

"We need tanks and more tanks—and yet more tanks," the Ambassador said in a prepared statement. "We produced many tanks ourselves but our losses in tanks on a 2,000-mile front are great. We require your urgent help in order to reinforce our own efforts.

"Your tanks will not be wasted. They will go out to battle at once. We know how to use them against our common enemy. The best testimony is the great fight which the Soviet forces and the whole Soviet people have put up during the last three months against the Panzer barbarians of Hitlerite Germany.

"The sooner you send us tanks and the greater their number the earlier the Nazi hordes will be defeated."

AIR BATTLES RAGE AS R. A. F. RAIDS FRANCE

Luftwaffe Puts Up Stiffest Fight In Weeks Against British

24 Enemy Planes Bagged, London Says — Nazis Attack Southampton

By Ernest Agnew

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, Sept. 22—The Germans, massing new air strength in the west to meet the R. A. F.'s growing armada, put up the stiffest opposition encountered in weeks during mass British raids upon northern France yesterday.

Stung into action by the ever-growing R. A. F. assaults, the Luftwaffe also hurled dive bombers against the southeast coast last night and sent other raiders roaring on the Thames estuary.

The Air Ministry, telling of the increasing Nazi opposition, said numerous dogfights broke out during the R. A. F.'s Sunday attacks and that twenty-four German craft were destroyed to thirteen British fighters lost.

Not A Bomber Lost

It made a point of the fact that not a single British bomber was lost in the day's attacks, which rivaled anything yet turned loose by daylight against the Nazi-held coast.

The R. A. F. bombers started fires at a power station at Gosnay, near Bethune, and ranged as far inland as Lille, the big French industrial center, where rail facilities were bombed.

Last night's German raids followed Saturday night German attacks upon south and eastern England.

Bomb Hits Vicarage

In one southeast coast town a vicarage was hit by an explosive from a dive bomber. The vicar and his wife, just returned from church, emerged unhurt from the wreckage.

An official statement said the R. A. F. destroyed fifty-seven German planes last week—fifty-four over the Continent and three over Britain—and lost forty-six planes, fourteen bombers and the rest fighters.

[A British radio report heard by CBS said British anti-aircraft guns and patrols had destroyed more than 1,000 German planes from January 1 to September 1 with a loss of 300 British planes.]

Germans Report Heavy Raid On Southampton

Berlin, Sept. 21 (AP)—The German air force, which had given Britain a respite during recent days of the terrific attack on the Soviets, turned fiercely on her again last night with attacks against Southampton and airports and harbor facilities of southern and eastern England.

A communique from Hitler's field headquarters said strong forces of battle planes dropped their heaviest bombs on the Southampton harbor facilities and supply system. Hits were reported scored on warehouses, docks and military objectives and many fires were started.

Other formations, attacking the other island areas, were said by the communique to have sunk one 4,000-ton freighter and damaged another.

Nazis Claim 20 Planes

German pursuit planes were reported to have brought down twenty British Spitfires in a forty-minute air battle today over the English Channel. DNB said only one German plane was missing after the fight.

A large unit of R. A. F. bombers yesterday sought to attack a German convoy off the Dutch coast, DNB said, and German naval artillery shot down three of the attackers. The news agency did not say what happened to the convoy.

The R. A. F. also attacked a wide area of northern and southwestern Germany. Some of the planes came as far as Berlin, routing inhabitants out of their beds here. The communique said their bombs caused "insignificant damage," and reported three British bombers shot down by night chasers and anti-aircraft guns.

German battleplanes in North Africa were reported officially to have destroyed a British tent encampment at Tobruk.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, proud of his Luftwaffe for its Russian activity, congratulated Lieutenant Colonel Schalk's Horst Wessel squadron upon the reported destruction of its thousandth plane on the east front.

R. A. F. Raids Cut Axis Gas Supplies In Libya

With the R. A. F in Egypt, Sept. 20 (Delayed) (AP)—R. A. F. attacks on Axis gasoline supplies in Libya are believed by British airmen to explain the forced landings of a number of Italian-manned Stukas on the Libyan frontier in recent days.

One squadron of Junkers-87 dive bombers dropped like flies over a wide area of the desert. Their Italian crews admitted they had taken off for a raid over Sidi Barrani, Egypt, with their tanks only half filled.

Sixteen of the captured Italians shrugged their shoulders.

"No benzina, no flying," they said.

NAZIS REVEAL SCENE OF MASS U-BOAT DRIVE

'Attack Called Answer To Roosevelt In "Deeds Instead Of Words"

Torpedo Boat Attack On Convoy Beaten Off, British Report

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 21—The Germans disclosed for the first time today that mass submarine operations credited last week with sinking of twenty-eight merchantmen were in "Icelandic waters."

A DNB recapitulation of German submarine successes was the first news in Berlin that the German raids were in the vicinity of Iceland, which is within the belligerent zone proclaimed by the German Government. (The American navy has orders to shoot at German raiders on sight in American defensive waters.)

Answer To Roosevelt

The German spokesman said when news of the attack was first announced that it was "Germany's answer of deeds instead of words" to President Roosevelt's order to attack Axis warcraft in American defense waters.

The recapitulation covered sinkings announced during the week of September 13 to 20 and gave losses in the period as 250,300 tons. An announcement September 13 said twenty-eight ships and three warships were sunk in the raid on the convoy.

U-boats were credited with six additional ships in the North Atlantic and speedboats reportedly destroyed four ships off the British coast. The airforce was credited with accounting for 34,300 tons of shipping during the period.

Two E-Boats Damaged

London, Sept. 21 (AP)—Two of Germany's fast little torpedo craft—which the British call "E" (for "enemy") boats—were severely damaged last night, the Admiralty reported, and others beaten off after they attacked North Sea convoys.

The communique follows:

"Unsuccessful attacks on North Sea convoys were made last night by enemy E-boats, two of which were severely damaged when they were engaged and driven off by naval escorts. Low visibility prevented their certain destruction.

"There were no casualties or damage in any of our ships."

Internees In Britain Attack Their Guards

Outbreak Occurs When Three Who Tried To Escape Are Sent To Prison

London, Sept. 21 (AP)—Six hundred alleged Fascist and Nazi sympathizers interned at Peel, on the Isle of Man, attacked their guards last night after authorities refused to return three of their number captured in an attempt to escape by boat.

The British Press Association reported that when it was learned that the three had been sent to a prison instead, the guards were pelted with stones and bottles.

The guards were said to have withheld fire because no attempt was made to break out of the camp's barbed-wire barriers.

GERMANS HINT WORSE STEPS AGAINST PARIS

Say Machine Guns And Troops Will Check Any Rebellion Moves

Shooting Of 35 So Far Will Be "Mere Drop In Bucket," They Assert

SEP 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 21—Five Netherlands citizens have been executed by firing squads for aiding British flyers who made emergency landings in Holland, the Amsterdam Deutsche Zeitung reported today.

By Taylor Henry

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 21—German machine guns, troops and armored cars will move in against any organized attempt to foment revolution in occupied France, authorized sources from Paris said tonight.

They declared the reprisal shootings of hostages and other executions, which up to now have claimed thirty-five lives, would be a "mere drop in the bucket to what may happen if sabotage and terrorism continues."

Marshal Petain had just begged Frenchmen to quit attacks on Germans to save all conquered France from reprisals.

May Cause New Trouble

In a broadcast condemning the assaults on German army men, the marshal declared:

"These attacks are criminal. They may lead to new troubles.

"They must be blamed on foreign agents because it is not in French tradition to attack soldiers in the dark while they are doing their duty.

"Your Government formally disapproves them."

The authoritative sources from Paris said that despite demands of the Eastern front there were still enough German soldiers to enforce peace in occupied France "even if the French don't want to keep it themselves."

Three Groups In Occupied Zone

The source said this was the situation as seen by officials at Paris:

"There are three groups on the occupied zone—the French, the Germans and the Communists. A small group of Communists is leading Frenchmen to murder, shoot in the back and kill like dogs simple German soldiers who officially are only on duty. In no matter what country, in no matter what kind of situation, the same principle stands: Don't let the other fellow get the best of you."

The sources asserted the official view was that there would be no order in Paris without German troops, that Frenchmen would be fighting in the streets because French political groups cannot get along together.

Fear Immediate Revolt

If German troops left Paris, the sources claimed, an immediate revolt might be expected, with Frenchmen fighting against Frenchmen and "blood running in the gutters."

France's Chief of State declared his Government was seeking out the guilty "by all means at its disposal" and urged particularly that the residents of the German-occupied zone help save French unity by preserving order.

That, he asserted, was their great responsibility to their fatherland.

Innocents May Suffer

If such attacks continued, the old marshal said, German reprisals, "despite my efforts, may hit innocents."

The announcement that the marshal would speak was made only a few hours before the broadcast. Within an hour after he spoke, his words were being rebroadcast from records, indicating the importance with which the speech was regarded by the French Government.

The speech followed the execution Saturday at Paris of twelve more French hostages in retaliation for the killing of one German.

Nazis Reported Seeking Bulgars To Police France

Ankara, Sept. 21 (AP)—A report circulated here today that Germany had asked Bulgaria to supply 200,000 soldiers to take over the policing of France to free German troops for the Russian campaign.

There was talk weeks ago that Italians might be called upon to police France, but even Germans here scouted the idea. Appearance of Italian troops of occupation in France would bring on sure rebellion, they said.

Heavy losses on the Russian front were causing the German search for fresh reserves, in the opinion of those spreading the report.

ROOSEVELT'S ENVOY GIVES PONTIFF VILLA

Vatican Secretary Of State's Office Works Long On Message

Great Care Taken In Preparing Reply To Chief Executive

SEP 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vatican City, Sept. 21—Pope Pius XII, bidding farewell to President Roosevelt's personal envoy, Myron C. Taylor, in a fifty-minute audience today, gave the American a letter of reply to a message he had brought from the President on his twelve-day flying visit here, it was reported by a usually reliable source.

At the same time the gift to the Pope of Taylor's Florentine villa, Schifanoia, was announced. It was understood the Pope, at Taylor's expressed wish, assigned the villa to the Rosary College of River Forest, Ill., conducted by the Dominican Sisters, whose mother house is at Sinsinawa, Wis., to be used as a convent.

Cause Of Delay

The source said the Vatican Secretary of State's office worked until one o'clock this morning completing the English text of the letter to Roosevelt, which the Pontiff first had drafted in Italian. Care taken in preparing the reply to the President, it was said, explained the postponement of Taylor's farewell audience from Friday to this morning.

Vatican sources insisted there was "nothing sensational" in either Roosevelt's message or the Pope's reply. They were believed to consist mainly of expressions of friendship, respect and desire for close collaboration in attaining one another's aims and the end of the war.

Transfer In Washington

The actual transfer of the villa was made in Washington, May 23, before Italian embassy officials. Vatican sources indicated the villa would likely be used as a kind of post-graduate branch of the Rosary College after the war.

Taylor and the Pontiff talked for fifty minutes alone and then the envoy introduced his wife to the Pope.

The Taylors plan to leave tomorrow for Lisbon where they will take a clipper for New York.

ITALY TO LIMIT CLOTHES SALES ON OCTOBER 1

Apparel, Including Shoes, Will Be Rationed For First Time In War

Ban Also Raised Against Removal Of Jewelry From Country

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 21—The Government today forbade travelers to take valuable jewelry out of Italy without special permission and announced that rationing of shoes and clothing would begin October 1 for the first time since the war began.

The jewelry announcement indicated authorization would be given for the taking out of only that amount of jewelry considered in keeping with the financial status of the individual traveler and those objects shown to have been brought into Italy by him before the regulation became effective.

A previous decree had prohibited the sale and purchase of precious metals, stones and jewelry.

Various foodstuffs have been rationed in Italy, but the issuance of cards for obtaining shoes and clothing was news.

The new regulations followed shortly after Premier Mussolini's annual meeting with his provincial prefects at which the Rome radio said he concentrated his atteotion on the problem of subsidies to families of men under arms, conditions among the working classes, the food situation and various provincial questions.

He also allocated immediate funds for the financing of public works of "urgent" social interests, the radio said.

Today's war communique reported an Italian bombing of air bases at Malta, a British air raid on Tripoli and sporadic artillery and air activity in the Mediterranean and Libya.

One British plane was shot down in the Bardia zone of Libya and Italian pilots machine-gunned British motor vehicles southeast of Salum, Egypt, the communique said. Naval anti-aircraft guns were also officially reported to have shot down a British bomber in the Mediterranean.

MOSLEMS USHER IN HOLY MONTH FETE

Ceremonies Mark Rising Of Ninth Moon Of Religious Year

Hearts In Egypt, However, Are Heavy As Air Raids Take Their Toll

By Edward Kennedy

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Sept. 21—The slender, silvery crescent of the Moslem year's ninth moon appeared over Egypt this evening, signaling the start of the holy month of Ramadan.

Ceremonies welcoming the new moon were performed with heavy hearts, for the thought uppermost in Egyptian minds was how many air raids might be carried out in its light and how many might die as a result.

In accordance with age-old custom, two Moslems of "good character and known veracity" testified to the high court that they had seen the new moon and Ramadan was proclaimed open. Because of the blackout, mosques were not illuminated, however, as in normal times.

28-Day Celebration

For the next twenty-eight days the Moslem population will eat and drink nothing during the day, but will feast after sundown at ceremonial meals called iftars.

Since the Italians continued raids through the Holy Month last year, little hope was held that German and Italian bombers—which have been increasingly active recently—will spare Egypt this Ramadan.

Though Egypt is not at war, Axis air bombs have killed almost 1,000 civilians during the last fifteen months—two thirds of them in Alexandria and most of the others in the Suez Canal area. During August, air raids killed more persons in Egypt than in England, according to official figures.

300 Die In One Raid

In Alexandria's worst air raid, 300 persons were killed in a congested workers' district.

Earlier in the war, all raids were by the Italians, but in the last four months the Germans have been taking a leading part.

The Government is compensating the families of victims with money taken from sequestered German and Italian funds and the Social Service Ministry has been finding husbands for young girls left homeless by the raids.

Japanese Planning Drills Near Thailand

Tokyo, Monday, Sept. 22 (AP)—Japanese troops in southern French Indo-China will hold large-scale maneuvers September 29-30 on the plains of Cambodia, which adjoin the Thailand frontier, the Domei news agency reported today in a Saigon dispatch.

These maneuvers are to be followed by war games late in October, with all Japanese forces in Indo-China participating.

Another Domei dispatch, from Bangkok, said the Thai premier appealed to the people for neutrality in actions as well as in Government policy because the threat of war draws closer to the country.

Thai Premier Declares War May Flare Up Soon

Songgram Asks People To Observe Strict Neutrality In Broadcast To Nation

Bangkok, Sept. 20 (Delayed) (AP)—War involving Thailand may flare up at any moment out of a situation becoming increasingly tense, Field Marshal Luang Binul Songgram, Thai Premier, declared tonight in a broadcast over the Bangkok radio.

He appealed for strict neutrality by his people and declared:

"That Thai must not take sides. If you do and risk war, responsibilities will rest on you then. I and the Government cannot possibly guarantee the country's safety. So far as possible, and so long as nothing happens, I appeal to you to be strictly neutral, body and soul."

Japan To Ban Making 150 Metal Articles

New List Of Iron And Steel Items Ranges From Razor Blades To Temple Bells

Tokyo, Monday, Sept. 22 (AP)—Domei said today the Ministry of Commerce and Industry would promulgate a decree tomorrow prohibiting manufacture of an additional 150 articles of iron and steel.

This move augments manufacturing bans established in the summer of 1938 to conserve the metal.

The new list brings the number of articles banned to about 350, ranging from safety razor blades to ball bearings, bath tubs, spittoons and temple bells.

New Canadian Airfield To Be Shared With U. S. In Northwest Defense

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (AP)—Construction of fighter-plane ferry stations in the wildernesses of the Canadian northwest for the joint use of the United States and Canada against any Pacific coast attack was disclosed today by Air Vice-Marshal C. O. Johnson, deputy chief of the Canadian air staff.

Johnson said in an address prepared for broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation that work was being rushed on building and equipping the airdromes and was now well along.

"By reason of close cooperation with the United States for defense of this hemisphere against attack, steps are in progress for joint action in the event of an attack on Alaska or the Pacific coast," he said.

"A chain of what we call staging airdromes are now under construction in the northwest, so th fighter squadrons from both the United States and from Canadian bases may be moved to northern British Columbia or to Alaska from the center of the continent without delay."

Uruguay to Begin Work On Naval Air Base Soon

Field Commanding River Plata Entrance Available to U. S.

MONTEVIDEO, Sept. 21 (AP).—Uruguay, which has promised the United States the use of her seaports and other facilities in the event of war, will begin construction soon of a huge naval air base, near the Atlantic coast, informed sources reported today. The site, it was said, will include Laguna Negra, a lake some 150 miles northeast of Montevideo, and the strip of land that separates it from the Atlantic.

The cost of the base reportedly would be paid from the $17,500,000 recently obtained for national defense from the United States, half as a gift and half as a loan.

President Alfredo Baldomir, who is staying at the Fortress of Santa Teresa, which would be included in the base, was reported passing his vacation inspecting the site.

Planes based there, it was pointed out, would command the entrance to the River Plata (about 300 miles to the southwest) trade route and possible invasion road to Uruguay, Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay and Bolivia.

The base, these sources said, will be built in accord with resolutions adopted at the Havana Conference in 1940 calling for mutual defense of the Americas from foreign attack. It will be under Uruguayan sovereignty, but will be available to the United States under the Uruguay government's pledge.

Anti-Nazi Judge Knifed

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 21 (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Isidro Rivas, a leader in the investigation of Nazi activities in Chile, was attacked in his home today by an intruder armed with a knife.

The assailant escaped after inflicting a slight facial injury. The press expressed the belief that the attack was Nazi-inspired.

A group of students marched through the streets of Santiago today asking for the release of the Chileans arrested by order of the German Government.

When the students reached the German and Spanish Embassies they shouted insults and threw stones. Some windows of the German Bank were smashed.

Police arrested three marchers.

ROOSEVELT TO SEEK LEASE-LEND VIEWS

President Will Confer With National Leaders At Capital Today

Will Check On Chances Of Getting Prompt Action On $5,985,000,000 Request

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, Sept. 21 — President Roosevelt departed by special train tonight for Washington, where he will check with Congressional leaders tomorrow on the prospects of swift passage of a $5,985,000,000 appropriation for lease-lend help for nations battling the Axis powers.

Invited to the White House for a conference were:

Vice-President Wallace, Speaker Rayburn, House Majority Leader McCormack (Mass.), Chairman Cannon (Dem., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, Representative Woodrum (Dem., Va.), who has been directing a subcommittee which will handle the lease-lend fund, and Chairman Connally (Dem., Texas) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Barkley To Be Absent

White House officials said some of these men might not be able to attend, that some would be asked also from the Senate Appropriations Committee, and that Senate Majority Leader Barkley would not be present because he was absent from Washington.

The Chief Executive has spent at his home here one of the most quiet week ends he has enjoyed in months. While he had the usual routine work to handle, including the signing of a $3,500,000,000 tax bill, he was able, for the most part, to do just what he pleased.

Works With Old Books

He took care of some matters incident to the settlement of the estate of his mother, who died a fortnight ago, worked in his library with some old books, and took several long motor rides around the countryside.

Crown Princess Martha of Norway, who spent the summer on Cape Cod, was a guest at the Roosevelt home over the week end and was to return to the Capital on the President's special train. She has a winter home just outside Washington.

Bridges Sees U. S. Navy Attacked if Russia Falls

Says Hitler Is Waiting Only for a Victory in the East

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21 (AP).—Senator Styles Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire, believes Germany is only awaiting a successful conclusion of its campaign in the east to make war on the United States' north Atlantic patrol.

"To date Germany hasn't given us any official forecast of its attitude on the President's 'shoot in sight' declaration," Mr. Bridges told interviewers.

"Maybe they'll steer clear of conflict until after a victory over Russia, if they can get one. But then, watch out."

Senator Bridges, a ranking member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, is in California on what he described as one of his "periodic finding out what the people think" trips.

The Senator predicted repeal of the neutrality act.

"The act was set up on the false premise that one can legislate peace," he said. "Therefore, the administering of the law was nothing but a farce. In time of crisis, this government should not be handicapped by laws of its own making in dealing with a man like Hitler."

Pepper Sees Suez Drive If Nazis Win Ukraine

Says French and Spaniards Would Aid Pincers Move

OTTUMWA, Iowa, Sept. 21 (AP) Senator Claude Pepper, Democrat, of Florida, today predicted that if the Germans are successful in the Ukraine their winter campaign will be a giant pincer movement, aided by "Franco's Spaniards and Weygand's troops," toward the Suez Canal.

Should a Suez campaign succeed, he asserted, it would "sever the artery of the British Empire," and put the Germans in a position to project further pincer movements to "master the Continents of India and Asia."

Possessing a land area "twice as large as the rest of the world, with seven-eighths of the world's people, two-thirds of its markets and three-fourths of its raw materials," Fuehrer Adolf Hitler would then be in a position to "encompass us in his boa constrictor coils," Senator Pepper said.

The Senator addressed an audience of 5,000 at a community picnic sponsored by the Milwaukee Railroad's service club.

La Follette Wants Knox And Stimson Impeached

Former Wisconsin Governor Tells America First Rally That Would Keep U. S. From War

Denver, Sept. 21 (AP)—Philip La Follette proposes the impeachment of Secretaries Knox and Stimson, saying that would be the simplest means of keeping the United States out of the war.

The former Wisconsin Governor, speaking at an America First Committee rally last night, declared that impeachment charges against the two should be that they are seeking to violate the constitutional guarantee that the nation cannot be taken into armed conflict except by a vote of Congress.

"If this nation," he said, "is taken into war by some smart alecky program of aid short of war, by trickery, I give warning that those like me, who plead for tolerance, will be as straws in the wind. If by trickery and tortuous means, the constitutional provision that Congress must decide whether this nation fights is set aside now, then there can come a time when the constitutional guarantees of free speech and religious liberty can be set aside."

Nye Charges War Aims Seek Stalin's Good Will

Senator Notes Roosevelt-Churchill Declaration Does Not Include Religious Freedom

Cleveland, Sept. 21 (AP)—Noting that the Roosevelt-Churchill war aims declaration made no specific declaration for freedom of religion, Senator Gerald P. Nye declared today the conferees "were after the good will of Joe Stalin."

Addressing an America First Committee rally, Nye said the President later sent a message to Congress saying that, of course, freedom of religion was understood to be included. The North Dakota isolationist added that it was well known that Stalin hated religion, and continued:

"President Roosevelt and Churchill were after the good will of Joe Stalin."

Row Over Movie Probe Moves To Showdown

Clark Signs Expense Vouchers For Submission To Audit Committee

Washington, Sept. 21 (AP)—Controversy within the Senate over the investigation of the movies approached a step nearer a showdown today when Chairman Clark (Dem., Idaho) signed vouchers for $552.04 in expenditures by the Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee inquiring into alleged war propaganda.

Clark said the vouchers would be submitted to the Senate Audit and Control Committee, headed by Senator Lucas (Dem., Ill.). Lucas announced yesterday that he would not approve any expenditures until he was informed how long the inquiry was going to be carried on and how much would be spent.

Lucas also said he might propose that the Senate limit to $250 the amount a committee may spend on hearings not expressly authorized by the Senate. If this were done, the movie investigation would have to be suspended unless the Senate authorized its continuance.

TRUST ACTION ON CHEMICAL PROFITS ASKED

100 To 400% Price Hikes Assailed—Twoscore Concerns Blamed

Attempt To Corner Market In Priority Items Is Charged

SEP 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 21—The Justice Department, it was learned today, has been asked to take action under the anti-trust laws against "priority profiteers" who have raised prices of some chemicals from 100 to 400 per cent.

Officials of the Price Administration said the offending concerns, numbering more than two score, were mainly brokers, many in business less than a year.

They are charging exorbitant prices, officials said, for commonly used chemicals essential to the manufacture of drugs, paints, textiles, dyes and plastics. A large part of their business is believed to be with small users who fear more drastic priority restrictions and shortages and who feel compelled to buy at any price asked.

Hundreds Of Complaints

Officials said they had received hundreds of complaints of excessive prices charged by such brokers and were receiving protests now at the rate of about twenty a day.

The Justice Department was asked to act under the Sherman anti-trust law, officials said, because many brokers were buying chemicals and storing them in warehouses. They contended this amounted to an attempt to "corner" a market and was a monopolistic practice under the Sherman Act.

Spokesmen from the CIO Textile Workers Union said "bootlegging" of chemicals at high prices had appeared in the textile industry.

Protest To Henderson

George Baldanzi, executive vice-president of the union, headed a delegation of employers and employes in the cotton and rayon bleaching and dyeing industries who complained to Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, last week of practices which they said were threatening the jobs of 75,000 workers. They protested against weavers holding cloth for higher prices and against dealers profiteering in chemicals needed for dyeing.

Baldanzi said that a number of small dyers had attempted to purchase small quantities of essential chemicals from their usual suppliers, only to be told that none was available. Later, he said, they received telephone calls from unknown persons offering to sell the needed materials at prices nearly double the prevailing quotations.

Attention To Metals

Although the chemical situation is receiving first attention from the Price Administration, consideration is being given also to some metals. Henderson received one complaint that a concern was selling zinc to firms holding priority ratings at 7½ cents a pound and offering it to other users at 16 cents a pound.

The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board is expected to act Tuesday on a proposal by Donald M. Nelson, priorities director, that direct action be taken to force compliance with priorities regulations.

Officials said Nelson contemplated shutting off supplies entirely from two, and possibly three, large concerns in the metals industries for continued violation of priority orders.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (AP)—A special communiqué from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters said:

In the course of the encirclement battle east of Kiev the army of Field Marshal General von Reichenau and tank armies of Colonel Generals von Kleist and Guderian destroyed large forces of the surrounded enemy and already have brought in 150,000 prisoners, as well as 151 tanks, 602 cannon and unestimated other war matériel.

Destruction of the remaining forces of the encircled enemy is in full swing. Additional large numbers of prisoners and quantities of booty are expectable.

The regular German communiqué said:

The Sea of Azov has been reached on the south wing of the German attack front.

The preliminary for this achievement was the heroic enterprise of an infantry division which, in the face of the most difficult conditions, forced a crossing of the broad lower reaches of the Dnieper at Berislav, 37½ miles northeast of Kherson, and held a bridgehead despite all counterattacks.

Destruction of the encircled enemy in the region east and southeast of Kiev proceeds. German units, which forced their way into Kiev from the west, crossed the Dnieper toward the east and joined forces that had attacked from the north across the Desna.

Desperate attempts of the enemy to break out failed. The number of prisoners and the amount of booty increase hourly.

Units of the navy forced their way deep into the Gulf of Finland, strengthened mine fields and protected operations against the Baltic Islands.

The air force northwest of Crimea sank a patrol boat and gunboat, as well as three merchantmen totaling 10,000 tons, and scored a bomb hit on a Soviet torpedo boat.

In the battle against Britain, strong forces of battleplanes last night attacked the harbor facilities and supply system of Southampton with bombs of the heaviest caliber. Bomb hits on warehouses, docks and military objectives of the city caused considerable destruction. A number of large fires were observed.

Other battleplanes attacked numerous airports, as well as harbor facilities of Southern and Eastern England, and northeast of The Wash sank a freighter of 4,000 tons. Another large merchantman was damaged.

In the course of ineffective attempts to attack the Channel region yesterday the British Air Force lost thirty-nine planes. Thirty-five of these were shot down by pursuit planes and four by marine artillery. Two of our own planes are missing.

German battleplanes in North Africa destroyed a British tent encampment at Tobruk.

The enemy last night flew into North and Southwest Germany and individual planes reached the capital of the Reich. Bombs caused insignificant damage to residential quarters. Night chasers and anti-aircraft guns shot down three British bombers.

Another special German High Command communiqué said:

Exemplary cooperation of formations of the army, air force and navy have scored new and important successes. Arensburg, the capital of Oesel, has been captured by determined action. The islands of Moon and Oesel are thus securely in our hands. Only dispersed parts of the garrison of Oesel are to be found in the western part of the island. Their destruction is imminent.

Russian

MOSCOW, Sept. 21 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué today:

Fighting continued during the night along the entire front. There was particularly fierce fighting at Kiev.

MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 22 (AP)—The following was issued today by the Soviet Information Bureau:

During Sept. 21 our troops fought the enemy along the whole front.

After many days of fierce fighting our troops evacuated Kiev.

During Sept. 19 we destroyed sixty German planes and lost twenty-four.

The Finnish coastal defense ship Ilmarinen struck mines and sank during an attack in the Gulf of Finland.

British

LONDON, Sept. 21 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued the following communiqué today:

Last night in bad weather objectives at Frankfort, Berlin and other places in Northwest Germany were attacked by aircraft of the Bomber Command. Many fires were started in Frankfort and Berlin.

Other aircraft attacked docks at Ostend with good results. Four of our aircraft are missing.

The Air Ministry issued the following communiqué tonight:

Aircraft of the Bomber Command and strong forces of fighters took part in two successful operations over Northern France this afternoon.

Blenheims attacked the power station at Gosnay, near Bethune, where bombs hit the target and fires were left burning while Hampdens bombed railway objectives at Lille.

Fighters which escorted the bombers in both raids had many combats with enemy fighters which attempted to prevent the attacks. Twenty-four enemy aircraft are known to have been destroyed. Thirteen of our fighters were lost but the pilots of two of them have been rescued from the sea. No bombers were lost.

An Admiralty communiqué follows:

Unsuccessful attacks on North Sea convoys were made last night by enemy E-boats, two of which were severely damaged when they were engaged and driven off by naval escorts. Low visibility prevented their certain destruction.

There were no casualties or damage in any of our ships.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued the following today:

Enemy activity last night was was on a small scale. Bombs dropped at points in Southern and Eastern England. These caused some damage and a small number of casualties. One enemy aircraft was destroyed.

CAIRO, Sept. 21 (AP)—The British Middle East Headquarters said in a communiqué today:

Libya—At Tobruk several enemy parties moving outside the perimeter of defenses were effectively engaged by machine-gun and mortar fire, and apart from this yesterday was a comparatively quiet day.

In the frontier area there was nothing of importance to report.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 21 (AP)—The Italian High Command today issued this communiqué:

The air force bombed important air bases at Malta during the night of Sept. 19.

On the land fronts in North Africa artillery activity was reported. In the Bardia zone the anti-aircraft defense made an enemy plane fall in flames. British motor vehicles were effectively machine-gunned by our planes southeast of Solum.

The enemy carried out another raid on the city of Tripoli.

In East Africa there was activity by advanced elements.

In the Mediterranean an English bomber was shot down by units of the Royal Navy.

BULLETIN

LONDON, SEPT. 21-(AP)-THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND TODAY CLAIMED THE GERMANS HAVE REACHED THE SEA OF AZOV, AN ARM OF THE BLACK SEA, REUTERS NEWS AGENCY SAID. IT QUOTED A BERLIN RADIO BROADCAST.

THE SEA OF AZOV IS 75 TO 100 MILES BEYOND THE DNIEPER AND WASHES THE EASTERN SHORES OF THE CRIMEA. THE GERMAN CLAIM, THEREFORE, WOULD INDICATE THE PENINSULA HAS BEEN ISOLATED FROM THE REST OF RUSSIA.

THE COMMUNIQUE, AS TRANSCRIBED HERE, SAID:

"ON THE SOUTHERN FLANK OF THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE FRONT THE SEA OF AZOV WAS REACHED.

SEP 22 1941

"THE WAY WAS CLEARED FOR THIS BY THE HEROIC ACTION OF AN INFANTRY DIVISION WHICH FORDED THE WIDE LOWER REACHES OF THE DNIEPER NEAR BERISLAV, 60 KILOMETERS (37 1/2 MILES) NORTHEAS OF KHERSON, UNDER THE MOST DIFFICULT CONDITIONS AND HELD THEIR POSITIONS IN THE FACE OF ALL COUNTER-ATTACKS.

"ANNIHILATION OF THE ENEMY ENCIRCLED IN THE AREA EAST AND SOUTHEAST OF KIEV IS MAKING PROGRESS.

"GERMAN UNITS WHICH PENETRATED KIEV FROM THE WEST PUSHED ON OVER THE DNIEPER EASTWARD AND LINKED UP WITH FORCES WHICH ATTACKED OVER THE DESNA FROM THE NORTH. VIOLENT ENEMY ATTEMPTS TO BREAK THROUGH HAVE FAILED. THE NUMBER OF PRISONERS AND BOOTY ARE GROWING STEADILY."

BULGARIAN

BY THOMAS F.HAWKINS

SEP 22 1941

BERN, SWITZERLAND, SEPT.21-(AP)-AXIS-ALIGNED BULGARIA CLAMPED DOWN MEASURES AMOUNTING TO MARTIAL LAW TODAY IN A MOVE WHICH INTENSIFIED SPECULATION OVER POSSIBLE NEW MILITARY ACTION INVOLVING TURKEY OR THE SOVIET UNION OR BOTH.

ALTHOUGH BULGARIA HAS STRONGLY DENIED RUSSIAN CHARGES OF INTENDED AGGRESSION, IT WAS BELIEVED IN SOME QUARTERS HERE THE STEPS BY THE SOFIA GOVERNMENT MAY HAVE BEEN TAKEN IN THE BELIEF THAT CONFLICT WITH RUSSIA WAS NEAR.

THIS VIEW WAS STRENGTHENED IN VIEW OF LAST WEEK'S SOVIET CHARGES AND THE BULGARIAN DENIALS AND THE SOFIA REPORT THAT RUSSIAN PARACHUTISTS HAD BEEN SEIZED IN THE BALKAN STATE.

THE BULGARIAN JUSTICE MINISTRY SAID THE NEWLY-ENFORCED DECREES WERE NECESSARY BECAUSE OF "RECENT FACTS AND HAPPENINGS."

SEP 22 1941

THESE INCLUDED INCIDENTS OF SABOTAGE AND WHAT SOFIA CALLED COMMUNIST PLOTTINGS.

THE SITUATION BEYOND THIS WAS UNCLEAR, BUT THE FOLLOWING POSSIBILITIES WERE SUGGESTED:

1. THAT BULGARIA MAY BE BROUGHT INTO THE WAR AGAINST RUSSIA AT GERMANY'S SIDE.

2. BULGARIA MIGHT PLAY A PART IN EFFORTS TO WIN FROM TURKEY FURTHER INDICATION OF A STAND TOWARD GERMANY, JUST AS BULGARIA ACTED AS A LEVER TO IMMOBILIZE TURKEY BEFORE THE AXIS BALKAN CAMPAIGN.

THE SECOND POSSIBILITY COULD BE A PRELUDE TO A THIRD--THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A STATIC DEFENSE LINE ON THE SOVIET FRONT AND TRANSFER OF THE OFFENSIVE, PERHAPS TOWARD BRITISH AND RUSSIAN-OCCUPIED IRAN.

30.24 — 11971

30.24 — 11971

PROPAGANDA ON ALL SIDES FOR WEEKS HAS INDICATED THE POSSIBILITIES OF ACTION IN THE NEAR EAST.

BERLIN AND SOFIA PERSISTENTLY HAVE DENIED TROOP CONCENTRATIONS ON THE TURKISH FRONTIER. THE SOFIA PRESS REPLIED TO BRITISH INTIMATIONS TO THIS EFFECT WITH CHARGES THAT BRITISH AND RUSSIAN TROOPS IN IRAN HAVE WORKED TOWARD THE TURKISH FRONTIER.

ONE SOFIA NEWSPAPER, DISCOUNTING THE LIKELIHOOD OF ANY TURKISH ACTION "UNTIL AUTUMN," SAID ON SEPT.6 "THE OUTCOME OF EVENTS WILL BE DETERMINED BY THE RUSSIAN FRONT."

OF THE FACTS, THERE ARE THESE:

SEP 22 1941

THE SOFIA NEWSPAPER MIR REPORTED IN MID-AUGUST THE EXECUTION OF NINE MEN FROM DISTRICTS NEAR THE TURKISH FRONTIER ON CHARGES OF ESPIONAGE IN FAVOR OF A FOREIGN POWER.

KING BORIS OF BULGARIA RECEIVED GERMAN GRAND ADMIRAL ERICH RAEDER ON SEPT.3 AND PERHAPS ALSO SAW FIELD MARSHAL GENERAL WALTHER VON BRAUCHITSCH, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE GERMAN ARMY. THE KING HIMSELF RETURNED TO SOFIA TODAY FROM BULGARIAN ARMY MANEUVERS.

BULGARIA HAS BEEN FEVERISHLY BUILDING ROADS, PARTICULARLY THOSE CONNECTING THRACE AND MACEDONIA, USING 25,000 WORKERS.

IT WAS SUGGESTED TODAY BY THE GENEVA NEWSPAPER LA SUISSE THAT ADMIRAL RAEDER MAY HAVE DISCUSSED WITH BORIS THE ARRIVAL OF ITALIAN WARSHIPS IN BULGARIA, FOR WHICH SOFIA WOULD ASK TURKEY TO PERMIT PASSAGE THROUGH THE DARDANELLES TO THE BLACK SEA.

ONE MORE INCIDENT ADDING TO THE BALKAN TENSION WAS THE REPORT TONIGHT THAT THE BULGARIAN MERCHANT SHIP RODINA WAS SUNK BY AN EXPLOSION WHILE ENROUTE TO ISTANBUL FROM A BULGAR HARBOR.

BULGARIA'S NEW DECREE DECLARING A STATE OF EMERGENCY PUT INTO EFFECT A LAW FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE STATE PASSED BY THE SOFIA PARLIAMENT EARLIER IN THE MONTH.

THE CABINET WAS EMPOWERED TO DO SO "WHEN A SPECIAL EMERGENCY EXISTS." IT PROVIDES SPECIAL COURTS BUT TECHNICALLY LACKS MILITARY CLAUSES. THE MOBILIZED BULGARIAN ARMY, HOWEVER, WILL COOPERATE IN ENFORCEMENT AS IN TIME OF WAR, THE EFFECT BEING MARTIAL LAW.

UNDER THE DECREE, THE MINIMUM PENALTY FOR UNLAWFUL PROPAGANDA IN PRINT RANGES FROM 10 YEARS IN PRISON TO DEATH.

LISTENING TO ANTI-AXIS RADIOS MEANS FIVE YEARS IMPRISONMENT, PERMITTING OTHERS TO LISTEN, 10 YEARS. ANYONE ENGAGING IN SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITY DAMAGING RELATIONS WITH THE AXIS OR ANY BULGARIAN SPEAKING AGAINST THE STATE AND FAVORING AN ENEMY COUNTRY OVER A FOREIGN RADIO ARE LIABLE TO DEATH.

SEP 22 1941

BY KIRKE L.SIMPSON

THE COLOSSAL BATTLE IN RUSSIA ENTERS ANOTHER WEEK UNDER BLEAK OMENS FOR THE SOVIETS AND THEIR BRITISH ALLIES. UNDOUBTEDLY, HITLER'S HOPES OF SMASHING RUSSIAN RESISTANCE UTTERLY BEFORE WINTER COMES AND THEN TURNING HIS FULL MIGHT AGAINST BRITAIN, HAVE TOUCHED A NEW HIGH.

THE VAST NAZI OFFENSIVE HAS AT LEAST PENETRATED KIEV AND IS GRAVELY THREATENING TO OVERRUN NOT ONLY WHAT LITTLE IS LEFT OF THE UKRAINE BUT FAN OUT AROUND THE SEA OF AZOV TOWARD RUSSIA'S VITAL BAKU OIL FIELDS.

CENSORSHIP VEILS DETAILS OF WHAT IS HAPPENING IN THE UKRAINE, BUT IT APPEARS THAT KHARKOV, GREAT INDUSTRIAL NERVE CENTER FAR SOUTH-EAST OF KIEV, ALSO MAY SOON FALL, OR PERHAPS HAS ALREADY FALLEN. AND IT IS BUT A GOOD STEP FOR GERMANY'S SEVEN-LEAGUE MILITARY BOOTS FROM KHARKOV DOWN THE DONETS RIVER TO ROSTOV AND THE PIPE LINES THAT TAP THE BAKU FIELDS TO FEED THE SOVIET WAR MACHINES.

OF EVEN GREATER MOMENT THAN THE STRICTLY MILITARY CONSEQUENCES OF THE GERMAN VICTORIES IS THE EFFECT ON RUSSIAN MORALE GENERALLY, BOTH ARMY AND CIVILIAN. LONDON EXPERTS ESTIMATE THAT RUSSIA HAS BOTH THE MANPOWER AND OTHER ESSENTIAL RESOURCES STILL TO FIGHT ON, EVEN IF DRIVEN BEHIND THE DONETS-DON LINE IN THE SOUTH. THEY STRESS, HOWEVER, THAT ONLY BY A FLOOD OF BRITISH AND AMERICAN ARMS AND WAR MACHINES CAN RED ARMY EQUIPMENT LOSSES BE MADE GOOD.

THE BRITISH AND AMERICANS SEEMED YESTERDAY TO HAVE DECIDED ON THAT. W.AVERELL HARRIMAN, HEAD OF THE AMERICAN DELEGATION TO THE THREE-POWER CONFERENCE ON RUSSIAN AID, TOLD REPORTERS AT LONDON THAT "HUNDREDS OF AMERICAN PLANES AND TANKS" WOULD GO TO RUSSIA AND THAT THE FLOW WOULD INCREASE CONSTANTLY.

THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION THAT THE PRIME ESSENTIAL IS THE CONTINUED WILL OF THE RED ARMY AND THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE TO FIGHT IT OUT WITH GERMANY TO THE BITTER END. WITHOUT THAT, THE BATTLE IS ALREADY LOST AND BRITAIN AND HER AMERICAN SUPPORTER MUST GIRD THEMSELVES FOR A BATTLE OF REDOUBLED FURY IN THE ATLANTIC BEGINNING THIS WINTER AND CLIMAXING NEXT SPRING AND SUMMER.

THE FIRST ESSENTIAL FOR THE CONFERENCE OF THE AMERICAN, BRITISH AND RUSSIANS MUST BE ASSESSMENT OF THE EFFECT OF CUMULATIVE RED ARMY DISASTERS ON RUSSIAN MORALE.

IT IS OBVIOUS THAT IF IT IS EBBING AND MOSCOW'S POWER TO RALLY ITS VAST PEOPLE FOR WAR-TO-THE-DEATH RESISTANCE IS WANING, COMMITMENTS TO RUSH BRITISH-AMERICAN PLANES, TANKS, GUNS OR OTHER WEAPONS TO BOLSTER FALTERING RUSSIAN LINES WOULD BE DANGEROUS. BUT RUSSIANS IN LONDON YESTERDAY INSISTED THAT THE LOSS OF KIEV OR EVEN MOSCOW AND LENINGRAD WOULD NOT MEAN DEFEAT. "WE WOULD NOT EVEN THINK ABOUT DEFEAT OR COLLAPSE UNTIL FORCED INTO THE EASTERN DEPTHS OF SIBERIA," THEY SAID.

HITLER IS LEADING HIS ACE IN HIS TREMENDOUS DRIVE TO CRUSH RUSSIA, DESTROY HER ARMIES AND THE WILL OF HER PEOPLE TO CONTINUE THE BLOODY FIGHT, BEFORE WINTER CHECKS HIS VICTORY STRIDE.

DARK AS THE PORTENTS APPEAR FOR RUSSIA, WINTER HERETOFORE HAS BEEN A NEVER-FAILING AND UNBEATEN ALLY TO DEFEAT INVASION FROM THE WEST. OVER MUCH OF THE HUNDREDS OF MILES COMPRISING THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE FRONT, WINTER IS NOT FAR AWAY. HITLER IS RACING ICE AND SNOW IN HIS EFFORT TO REACH AND TAKE CRITICAL AND POSSIBLY DECISIVE OBJECTIVES LIKE ROSTOV AND ITS PIPE LINE.

AS NEVER BEFORE SINCE NAPOLEON'S DAY, RUSSIA MUST COUNT SUPREMELY ON HER WINTER ALLY NOW. THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN AN EARLY AND A LATE WINTER, OR BETWEEN A SEVERE AND A RELATIVELY MILD WINTER, COULD BE THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN VICTORY AND COMPLETE DEFEAT FOR HER. A WINTER AS TERRIBLE AS NAPOLEON FACED STILL COULD DESTROY HITLER AS NAPOLEON WAS DESTROYED.

SEP 22 1941

BY JOHN M.HIGHTOWER

FURTHER REVERSES FOR RUSSIAN ARMIES IN THE BLACK SEA AREA ARE STRONGLY INDICATED AND WITH THEM MAY COME A NEW SHIFT IN THIS COUNTRY'S PREDOMINANT POPULAR ATTITUDE TOWARD THE WAR.

THE CHANGE COULD BE SO DRASTIC AS TO BRING DEMANDS FOR VIGOROUS NEW STEPS AGAINST THE NAZI, PROBABLY STARTING WITH THE SCARAPPING OF THE NEUTRALITY :5.

HOW DRASTIC IT ACTUALLY IS, HOWEVER, WILL DEPEND ON THE EXTENT OF NEW RUSSIAN SETBACKS, AND THOSE COULD COVER A WIDE RANGE OF POSSIBILITIES. AT ONE EXTREME THEY MIGHT MEAN COMPLETE LOSS OF EFFECTIVE RESISTANCE TO THE GERMAN DRIVE TOWARD THE CAUCASUS. AT THE OTHER THEY MIGHT CONSIST ONLY OF A SERIES OF RETREATS BACK TO A NEW DEFENSE LINE ON THE DON RIVER.

BRITISH SOURCES HAVE BEEN WARNING FOR SEVERAL DAYS THAT THE RUSSIANS WERE HARD PRESSED. GERMANS CLAIMS OF GREAT GAINS IN THE UKRAINE, OF

30.24—11975

DESTRUCTION OF STRONG FORCES EAST OF KIEV, OF REACHING THE SEA OF AZOV AND CUTTING OFF THE CRIMEA BEAR OUT THE LONDON FOREBODINGS.

SUCH THINGS SHOULD NOT BE TAKEN TO MEAN IMMINENT GERMAN DEFEAT OF RUSSIA, BUT THEY DO MEAN THAT THE TIDE OF BATTLE IS RUNNING HEAVILY IN THE NAZI'S FAVOR AGAIN.

SEP 22 1941

STRATEGICALLY, THEY MEAN ALSO THAT GERMAN TROOPS AT LAST ARE COMING WITHIN STRIKING DISTANCE OF THE BAKU OIL FIELDS IN THE CAUCASUS. TO STRIKE EFFECTIVELY THEY FIRST MUST CONSOLIDATE CONTROL OVER THE BLACK SEA -- NORMALLY A RUSSIAN-TURKISH LAKE.

THIS SUGGESTS MORE TROUBLE FOR THE TURKS. THEY MAY HAVE LESS SUCCESS THIS TIME THAN HERETOFORE IN KEEPING BELLIGERENT ACTIVITIES FROM THEIR LANDS AND WATERS. ALREADY, IN THE LIGHT OF REPORTS THAT BULGARIA IS THROWING IN HER LOT WITH THE NAZI, IT APPEARS THAT ADOLF HITLER IS BEGINNING TO TURN THE SCREWS ON THE GOVERNMENT OF TURKEY.

ALL THIS ADDS UP TO THE FACT THAT THE WAR HAS ENTERED A NEW PHASE OF INTENSIVE ACTIVITY, POSSIBLY ITS FINAL RUSSIAN PHASE BEFORE WINTER SETS IN.

BY C.A.FARNSWORTH

(ADVANCE)--NEW YORK, SEPT. 2--(THE SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE)--THE DARDANELLES STRAITS, WHICH LEANDER THOUGHT NOTHING OF SWIMMING EACH NIGHT THAT HERO, VIRGIN PRIESTESS OF APHRODITE, LIGHTED HER BEACON ON THE OPPOSITE SHORE, HAVE BECOME THE FOCUS OF SHARPENING NATIONAL HATREDS IN A WORLD LARGELY AT WAR.

IN PLACE OF A LOVER'S TORCH, THE MODERN BEACON FIGURATIVELY IS CONTROL OF ONE OF THE MOST STRATEGIC STRIPS OF WATER IN THE WORLD --- STRAITS WHICH, WITH THE SEA OF MARMARA AND THE BOSPORUS, PUT A WATER BOUNDAR BETWEEN EUROPE AND ASIA MINOR AND LINK THE MEDITERRANEAN AND BLACK SEAS.

THIS STRIP OF WATER, ONE TO FOUR MILES BROAD AND ABOUT 40 MILES LONG, LIES AT AN HISTORIC CROSS-ROADS OF EMPIRE BUILDERS.

AFTER 500 YEARS, TURKEY STILL HOLDS OFFICIAL CONTROL, NOW BY CONSENT OF OTHER WORLD POWERS AND UNDER RULES LAID DOWN BY THEM. BUT TURKEY'S FUTURE IN THE WAR, OR HER WILL AND ABILITY TO DEFEND HER GUARDIANSHIP, IS THE QUESTION. SHE IS AT ONCE A NON-BELLIGERENT ALLY OF BRITAIN AND A DIPLOMATIC FRIEND OF BOTH

GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

TURKEY IS IN THE MIDDLE.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE BALKANS, ASIA MINOR AND AFRICA, IMPOSSIBLE TO FORECAST, MAY PIVOT ON THE DARDANELLES. BUT ONE NEED NOT WAIT FOR A GERMAN THRUST THROUGH TURKEY TOWARD SUEZ AND ALEXANDRIA, NOR FOR A BRITISH MOVE FOR RIGHT-OF-WAY INTO TURKEY, TO SEE THE STRAITS IN THEIR STRATEGIC LIGHT. THE DARDANELLES HAVE BEEN BROUGHT INTO THE NEWS ALREADY.

SEP 22 1941

BULGARIA, TECHNICALLY A NON-BELLIGERENT IN THE EUROPEAN WAR ALTHOUGH UNDER GERMAN CONTROL, HAS FOUND IT NECESSARY TO DENY THAT SHE PURCHASED ITALIAN WARSHIPS AND THEN ASKED PASSAGE INTO THE BLACK SEA. THE TURKS AS LATE AS SEPT. 17 AGREED THAT BULGARIA HAD MADE NO SUCH REQUEST.

IN RUSSIAN EYES, THE BLACK SEA IS A SOVIET LAKE. RUSSIA'S HISTORY AS A WORLD POWER HAS BEEN MARKED BY THE FIXATION THAT HER FUTURE DEPENDS ON SOUTHWARD--THAT IS, BLACK SEA-- NAVAL EXPANSION. THERE HAVE BEEN TIMES WHEN RUSSIANS LOOKED AVIDLY ON ISTANBUL ITSELF AND SOLE CONTROL OF THE DARDANELLES THAT PASS THE METROPOLIS.

IN CZARIST RUSSIA AND PERHAPS UNDER THE SOVIETS, ISTANBUL (CONSTANTINOPLE) WAS LOOKED ON AS THE FOUNTAINHEAD OF THE ORTHODOX CATHOLIC FAITH. THE DREAM OF PATRIOTS AND PRIESTS WAS TO RECOVER THE ANCIENT CATHEDRAL OF ST. SOPHIA FROM THE TURKS WHO HAD MADE IT INTO A MOSQUE.

PETER THE GREAT, WITH MORE IN MIND THAN RELIGIOUS IDEALISM, FOUGHT A 17TH CENTURY WAR WITH THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE IN A DRIVE TOWARD THE WARM WATERS OF THE MEDITERRANEAN. BUT THE ATTACK FAILED.

NOW RUSSIA'S NAVAL POWER IN THE BLACK SEA IS CHALLENGED, IF NOT BY BULGARIAN "PURCHASE" OF AXIS WARSHIPS, THEN BY THE MASSING OF LIGHT NAVAL CRAFT IN BULGARIAN PORTS --- SHIPS CAPABLE OF SUPPORTING A THRUST EITHER BEHIND THE DNIEPER FRONT OF THE RED ARMY, OR INTO CRIMEA OR ACROSS THE BLACK SEA INTO THE CAUCASUS.

TURKEY'S CHOICE OF SIDES IN THE QUESTION OF WHICH BELLIGERENT, IF ANY, SHALL BE GRANTED PASSAGE OF THE DARDANELLES MAY GO FAR TOWARD INFLUENCING THE COURSE OF THE WAR IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE AND ASIA MINOR.

SEP 22 1941

WARSHIPS OF ANY BELLIGERENT ALLY ARE FORBIDDEN PASSAGE OF THE DARDANELLES GATEWAY UNDER THE REGULATIONS IMPOSED IN THE MONTREUX CONVENTION OF 1936 IN WHICH INTERESTED POWERS PERMITTED TURKEY, A WORLD WAR LOSER, TO REFORTIFY THE STRAITS.

THE BRITISH USED TO REGARD TURKISH CONTROL OF THE DARDANELLES AS A BULWARK AGAINST RUSSIAN EXPANSION.

NOW RUSSIA IS A BRITISH ALLY AGAINST HITLER AND THE MONTREUX CONVENTION MAY WORK AGAINST BRITISH INTERESTS SINCE THEY ARE, IN GENERAL, IDENTIFIED WITH RUSSIA'S FORTUNES.

RUSSIA, HARD-PRESSED TO KEEP THE CRIMEAN PENINSULA AND THE OIL-RICH CAUCASUS, SOMEDAY MAY NEED BRITISH NAVAL ASSISTANCE WHICH SHE COULD NOT GET UNLESS THE MONTREUX CONVENTION WERE ABROGATED OR BRITISH

30.24 — 11977
30.24 — 11977

WARSHIPS BLASTED THEIR WAY THROUGH TURKEY'S ELABORATE GAUNTLET OF SHORE GUNS AND MINEFIELDS. THE DARDANELLES CONCEIVABLY COULD BE FORCED, BUT AT A TERRIFIC PRICE.

IN 1807 WHEN SHORE GUNS AND, FOR THAT MATTER, NAVAL ARTILLERY WERE FAR FROM THEIR PRESENT POWER AND ACCURACY, A BRITISH ADMIRAL, SIR J.T.DUCKWORTH, FORCED AN ENTRANCE, BUT SIMILAR WORLD WAR ATTEMPTS FAILED COMPLETELY. RUSSIA, THEN AS NOW A BRITISH ALLY, NEVER RECEIVED HELP THROUGH THAT CHANNEL.

IN DECEMBER OF 1914, HOWEVER, A BRITISH SUBMARINE STOLE INTO THE DARDANELLES UNDER THE MINEFIELD AND TORPEDOED THE OLD TURKISH BATTLESHIP MESSUDIYA IN THE SEA OF MARMARA. A MONTH LATER A FRENCH SUBMARINE TRIED A SIMILAR EXPLOIT, BUT STRUCK BOTTOM, SURFACED IN A DISABLED CONDITION AND WAS POUNDED TO PIECES BY THE SHORE GUNS.

SEP 22 1941

THE BRITISH-FRENCH ATTEMPTS TO FORCE THE STRAITS IN 1915 ENTAILED USE OF THREE SUCCESSIVE SQUADRONS, 14 BATTLESHIPS IN ALL, BUT ALL WERE FORCED TO WITHDRAW WITHOUT HAVING COMPLETELY SUBDUED THE LAND BATTERIES. THE FAILURE BY SEA BROUGHT ON THE ATTEMPT BY LAND---THE GALLIPOLI CAMPAIGN---BUT IT TOO WAS A WASHOUT.

NOWADAYS THE ASSAULT PROBABLY WOULD BE BY BOTH SEA AND AIR, IF NOT ACCOMPANIED ALSO BY TROOP LANDINGS.

THERE HAVE BEEN REPORTS THAT TURKEY'S FORCES BACKING UP THE DARDANELLES DEFENSES NUMBER HALF A MILLION. BOTH BRITAIN AND RUSSIA HAVE ASSURED THE TURKS THEY HAVE NO DESIGNS ON THE DARDANELLES, AND SO ALSO HAS GERMANY.

THE REST OF THESE AVOWALS WILL COME, AS HAS BEEN DEMONSTRATED OVER AND OVER IN THE WAR SO FAR, WHEN WAR STRATEGY DEMANDS ABROGATION OF THE COMMITMENTS OF THE DIPLOMATS.

SEP 22 1941

TURKEY THEN WILL BE CONFRONTED WITH THE GREATEST DILEMMA IN HER MODERN HISTORY. HER CHOICE WILL BE DICTATED BY SELF-INTEREST, OR WHAT THOSE IN CONTROL CONSTRUE IT TO BE.

IF THE DISPUTE COMES TO THE WORST, GERMANY AND ITALY ARE PREPARED TO BACK UP THEIR CASE WITH OPERATIONS FROM BULGARIA, GREECE AND THE OCCUPIED GREEK ISLANDS IN THE AEGEAN ARM OF THE MEDITERRANEAN, OFF THE ENTRANCE TO THE DARDANELLES.

BRITAIN COULD EASILY MIX IN THE FIGHT WITH WARSHIPS AND ON LAND BY AN ADVANCE FROM IRAQ AND SYRIA INTO TURKEY, OR, WITH THE RUSSIANS, FROM OCCUPIED IRAN. THE RUSSIANS ALSO COULD MOVE INTO TURKEY FROM THE CAUCASUS.

THE MAJOR PHASE OF ANY GERMAN THRUST AT THE DARDANELLES WOULD BE AN ATTACK THROUGH BULGARIAN AND/OR GREEK TERRITORY AGAINST TURKEY. IT IS DOUBTFUL THAT THE TURKS, UNLESS HEAVILY ASSISTED BY THE BRITISH, COULD LONG HOLD THE LAND APPROACH TO THE DARDANELLES---A DISTANCE AT THE NEAREST POINT TO THE GREEK FRONTIER OF ABOUT 50 MILES.

GERMANY EVENTUALLY MAY BE TEMPTED TO TRY A CROSSING OF THE STRAITS INTO ASIA MINOR BY THE TURN OF EVENTS IN AFRICA. THE SUMMER-STALEMATED OPERATIONS OF THE AXIS FORCES IN LIBYA HAVE COME TO LIFE AGAIN AND THE BRITISH EXPECT THE SITUATION THERE TO BE "BOILING" BY OCTOBER.

ALREADY THE ITALIAN-GERMAN FORCES HAVE THRUST 35 MILES INTO THE WESTERN DESERT OF EGYPT ON A "RECONNAISSANCE IN FORCE," ONLY TO RETREAT UNDER STRONG BRITISH COUNTERATTACK. THE MECHANIZED AXIS ARMY STANDS AS A CONSTANT THREAT TO ALEXANDRIA AND THE SUEZ CANAL FROM THE WEST.

IF THE AXIS SHOULD DEVELOP A GREAT OFFENSIVE INTO EGYPT, OCCUPYING GREAT NUMBERS OF THE BRITISH IMPERIAL FORCES, ADOLF HITLER MIGHT BE TEMPTED TO STRIKE THROUGH TURKEY TOWARD THE SAME GOAL FROM THE NORTH. BUT THE BRITISH SAY THEIR POSITION IN THE MIDDLE EAST IS THE STRONGEST IT HAS EVER BEEN, WITH A HALF-MILLION MEN REPORTED UNDER ARMS AND ITALIAN EAST AFRICA ALL BUT CLEANED UP.

SEP 22 1941

IF THE GERMANS TRY TO FORCE A CROSSING OF THE DARDANELLES THEY WILL BE RETRACING THE CONQUERING STEPS OF THE PERSIAN WARLORD XERXES WHO USED ONE OF THE EARLIEST PONTOON BRIDGES FOR A CROSSING FROM ASIA MINOR INTO EUROPE IN 480 B.C. ALEXANDER THE GREAT DUPLICATED XERXES' FEAT LATER 334 B.C. TO INVADE ASIA MINOR, PARTS OF INDIA AND AFRICA.

THESE CROSSINGS WERE IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF ABYDOS, ON THE ASIATIC SHORE, AND SESTOS, ON THE EUROPEAN. IT WAS IN A TOWER AT SESTOS--SO THE STORY GOES ---THAT HERO LIGHTED HER BEACON FLARE TO GUIDE LEANDER ACROSS THE HELLESPONT---AS THE DARDANELLES WAS CALLED IN THOSE DAYS.

ONE STORMY NIGHT THE TORCH FLICKERED OUT AND LEANDER, UNGUIDED, PERISHED IN THE STRONG CURRENT. HERO, SEEING THE BODY OF HER LOVER, THEN DROWNED HERSELF.

THESE WATERS HAVE BEEN THE GRAVE OF FIGHTING MEN, TOO. THEY MAY BE AGAIN.

U.S.-Owned Freighter Sunk Off Iceland, First Since Navy Got Shoot-at-Sight Order; Fate of Pink Star's Crew of 34 Unknown

SEP 23 1941

Freighter 'Pink Star,' Former Danish Vessel, Flew Flag Of Panama

Fate Of Crew Of 34 Unknown As The State Department Announces Latest Loss Since "Shoot First" Order

Incident Marks Fifth Disaster

SEP 23 1941

Washington, Sept. 22 (AP)—The sinking of an American-owned freighter in waters off Iceland, where United States warships are patrolling with orders to "shoot first," was reported today by the State Department.

The latest loss was the steamship Pink Star, a former Danish merchantman taken over by the Maritime Commission in July and placed under Panamanian registry.

It was the first such sinking since President Roosevelt promulgated his shoot-on-sight policy applying to Axis war vessels.

The Pink Star sailed from New York Sept. 3 with a general cargo en route to a United Kingdom port by way of Iceland and was sunk Sept. 19 only 45 miles from where the steamship Sessa was torpedoed Aug. 17.

The Sessa, which also flew the flag of Panama, was carrying supplies to Iceland.

The official announcement on the Pink Star did not disclose the manner of the sinking or the fate of the crew of 34. There were no Americans aboard, the crew consisting of eight Canadians, eight Dutchmen, six Britons, three Belgians, three Chinese, and one Pole, one Frenchman, one Portuguese, one Irishman, one Dane and one Ecuadorian.

The Pink Star was named the Lundby when she plied the Pacific before the war. She was 357 feet long, of 6,850 tons dead weight and was built in 1926.

TAKEN OVER BY AMERICA

(The Neutrality Act forbids American citizens and American flag vessels from sailing into combat zones. Transfer of the American-owned Pink Star to Panamanian registry and signing of an alien crew permitted the vessel to be used in carrying supplies to Britain.)

The official text to the State Department announcement follows:

"The State Department has been informed by the Navy Department that the United States government owned S.S. Pink Star was sunk on Sept. 19 at latitude 16 degrees, 36 minutes north, longitude 35 degrees, 07 minutes west. She sailed from New York Sept. 3 with a general cargo. The reported position at which the Pink Star sunk is approximately 45 miles northwest of the position of the Sessa sinking.

"The nationalities of the crew of 34 are as follows:

"One Danish, six British, eight Canadian, three Belgian, eight Dutch, one Polish, one French, one Portuguese, one Irish ,three Chinese, one Ecuadorian.

"The Pink Star (ex Danish ship Lundby) was requisitioned by the United States Maritime Commission on July 12, 1941 and placed under Panamanian registry. She was chartered by the Maritime Commission to the United States lines. The vessel was built in 1926 and was of 6,850 tons dead weight."

She is at least the fifth American-owned merchant ship to be sunk since the war began. The others known to be sunk are:

The City of Rayville, which went down in November, 1940, off Australia after striking a mine. One life was lost.

The Robin Moor, torpedoed May 21 in the South Atlantic. Crew and passengers spent several days in life boats, but all were picked up by British and Brazilian vessels.

The Sessa, torpedoed Aug. 17, 300 miles southwest of Iceland. Twenty-four, one an American, of crew of 27 lost. Owned by the United States Maritime Commission, the Sessa was of Panamanian Registry.

SEP 23 1941

The Steel Seafarer, sunk by aeroplane bomb Sept. 5 in the Red Sea. Crew of 36 saved.

Montana Fate Uncertain

In addition to these vessels, the State Department announced Sept. 12 that a "non-American" plane had reported observing the S.S. Montana to have been torpedoed midway between Greenland and Iceland on Sept. 11. The Montana, American-owned and under Panamanian Resgistry, was loaded with lumber for Iceland. Because of her cargo, there was some speculation that she might not have sunk. No further official reports on her have been made public.

The State Department made public tonight an affidavit from a survivor of the sunken S.S. Sessa who expressed doubt that an attacking submarine determined the vessel's nationality before firing on her.

First Mate Bjerregard who made his sworn statement at Reykjavik, Iceland, was one of three survivors of the Sessa's crew of 27. He declared it was about dusk when his ship was torpedoed and added: "I do not believe the submarine could have made out the ship's markings."

President Roosevelt, in his address announcing he had ordered the Navy to shoot first at Axis raiders, denounced a Berlin statement that the submarine which fired at the U.S.S. Greer had not known the destroyer's identity.

To fire at a ship of unknown identity, he declared, "indicates a policy of indiscriminate violence against any vessel sailing the seas—belligerent or non-belligerent. This was piracy—legally and morally."

Shortly after the news of the Pink Star sinking, the State Department received from the American Consul in Reykjavik, Iceland, a summarized sworn statement by First Mate Bjerregard of the Sessa, telling how that ship was torpedoed Aug. 17.

Bjerregard's statement as released by the State Department follows:

Report On Sessa

"On Aug. 17, 1941, Sunday, at about 10 p. m. ship's time (midnight, Greenwich Mean Time), when the Sessa was at 61 degrees 26 minutes north latitude 30 degrees 50 minutes west longitude, I was in the chief engineer's cabin with the second engineer and steward when the ship was struck by a torpedo. We tried to reach deck to starboard, but found water already coming in fast through engine room; reaching deck to port. On my way toward my lifeboat I was about to open my office door to get papers out of desk when the vessel sank and I found myself swimming. While on way to the office I had heard a shot strike the bunker house and as I opened the door I heard another hit the bridge.

"I was drawn under the water but reaching the surface found a telephone pole. A seaman Ljunggren drifted close to another log. We kept together looking for a better support, perceived a capsized lifeboat and swam to it.

"The second engineer was picked up here; also a Canadian seaman. Some hours later a raft on which were three Portguguese seamen came near. I swam to this with a line and was transferred. The engineer sank from exhaustion and was not seen again.

"On the tenth day died a Portuguese coal passer, and on the thirteenth day another Portuguese and Canadian. On this day we saw an aeroplane which I believe flew less than 100 meters from us and which I believe must have seen us. This was about noon. It was a monoplane, not big. I distinguished no insignia and could not say if it were a land plane or a seaplane. This plane, which was flying North, disappeared without a sign of recognition.

"Water ran out about 40 hours before we were saved. Food held out to that time.

"On the 19th day about noon the U.S.S. Lansdale picked us up and brought us to Reykjavik.

"With regard to the sinking, at the time of the occurrence it was fairly dark—deep twilight but not faint darkness. Weather was clear and smooth. I think that the outline of the ship could have been seen at 500 yards. The vessel was running with dimmed navigation lights and was otherwise blacked out. I think these lights might have been seen at two miles. I do not believe the submarine could have made out the ship's markings. I did not see the sub nor perceive the flash of gunfire.

"I do not believe there can have been any other survivors of the attack. When day broke Aug. 18 there was nothing to be seen."

The 4,150-ton Pink Star, formerly the Danish freighter Lundby, was seized by the United States at New York on March 30 when all Italian, German and Danish ships were taken under protective custody.

Maritime commission representatives boarded the ship July 12 and took possession under the ship requisition act. On August 7, the commission announced she had been repaired and was ready for operation by the United States Lines. The maritime register reported August 20 her name had been changed to Pink Star and that she was under Panamanian registry.

'Sorry, Nothing Known' in Berlin

BERLIN, Sept. 23 (Tuesday) (AP).—Informed of the State Department's announcement in Washington of the sinking of the American-owned merchant ship Pink Star near Iceland, a German spokesman asserted early today: "Sorry, nothing is known here."

Hull Views Present Law As Perilous

Says President Sees Danger in Neutrality Act; Price-Wage Bill Due; Aid Fund Discussed

Washington, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—While President Roosevelt conferred with advisors on ways of accelerating American assistance to nations fighting the Axis, Secretary of State Hull indicated today that he thought the time had come to lift restrictions of the Neutrality Act.

Already modified by the repeal, in 1939, of its rigid embargo on sales of arms to belligerents, the act still forbids the arming of merchant ships, prohibits them from sailing into combat zones, and requires belligerents to take title to implements of war obtained in the United States before such implements are shipped.

Hull declined to venture any prediction as to whether Congress soon would repeal or modify the act. But at the same time he commented at his press conference that both he and President Roosevelt had criticized the Neutrality Act from the start as a measure more likely to get this country into war than to keep it out.

Asked for comment on a reported Peruvian proposal to establish a zone of separation between that country and Ecuador, Hull said the United States was interested in seeing differences in South America composed, and that commissioners of the United States, Chile and Argentina were working for a settlement.

SEP 23 1941

He also said Chile had not consulted with the United States in the matter of Chilean citizens being held in Germany.

Talk Over Aid Bill.

President Roosevelt, soon after returning from a week-end visit to Hyde Park, N. Y., held a conference at the White House with Vice-President Wallace, Speaker Rayburn, House Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts, Chairman Car-non, Democrat, Missouri, of the House Appropriations Committee; Representative Woodrum, Democrat, Virginia, also a member of the House Appropriations Committee; Chairman Connally, Democrat, Texas, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, ranking Democrat on the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Their talk dealt principally, the conferees said, with the new $5,985,000,000 lend-lease appropriation, and proposed price control legislation.

Wage Ceiling Proposed.

Representative Gore, Democrat, Tennessee, said today he planned to introduce legislation freezing commodity prices, wages, salaries and commissions as of October 1, and agricultural products at parity.

Gore said during a session of the House Banking Committee that his bill would be offered as a substitute for the price control legislation now being considered by the House group.

Wallace and Connally said the consensus was that there would be little difficulty in obtaining Congressional approval for the new lend-lease fund.

"We agreed it would slide right through," Connally declared.

McCormack said Mr. Roosevelt was advised that the lend-lease measure would reach the House in about two weeks. It could be sent the the floor earlier, he said, but it had been decided to include certain additional appropriation items for defense and a week of hearings of these is expected.

SEP 23 1941

Month of Hearings.

As for the price-fixing legislation, Rayburn said that everyone at the meeting had agreed it ought to be passed as quickly as possible.

However, some members of the House Banking Committee, now considering the price control bill, expressed belief that hearings would last for another month.

Agitation in Congress for changes in the Neutrality Act has included suggestions for lifting only the prohibition against arming merchant ships. Others have contended that Americans ships should be permitted to carry lend-lease supplies to nations fighting the Axis, and still others that the whole act should be repealed.

Thus far there has been no clear indications of how far the Administration wished to go. Hull, although making clear his disapproval of the measure as it now stands, did not specify whether he advocated outright repeal or further modification of the act. He emphasized however, that any modification of the Neutrality Act, which is a domestic act, would not disturb international law on the subject of neutrality. 5

REDS' WESTERN PORTS CLOSED, BERLIN CLAIMS

Harbors Sealed Against U. S. And British Supplies, Nazis Say

SEP 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Tuesday, Sept. 23—The newspaper Hamburger Fremdenblatt yesterday listed seventy-five air-raid deaths in Hamburg but did not give the date of the casualties.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 22—The Germans reported the entrapment of major Russian fleet units about Leningrad and heavy damage to Soviet squadrons in the Black Sea today and claimed to have virtually sealed all the Soviet Union's European ports against effective aid from Britain and the United States.

In the grand campaign to destroy the Russian armies and Russian war industries, Nazi sources claimed the annihilation of about thirty Red divisions perhaps numbering as many as 450,000 men in the encircled area east of the fallen Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

Kharkov Menaced

Official news was lacking of the progress of the major offensive in the south toward the Donets valley, but that German columns were striking nearer Kharkov, the principal city of that great productive region, was strongly indicated by a rush of discussion in Berlin on its value as one of the surviving reservoirs of Russian industry.

German dive-bombers in strong numbers were reported striking far out ahead of the advancing Nazi armies, destroying railroad lines and other communications and attacking Russian troop trains.

Other battle planes operated behind, loosing explosives on the struggling encircled Russians.

Red Shortages Cited

The theme of Soviet shortage in war equipment ran strongly through German accounts of the progress of the war. Much more important than the progressive capture of thousands of Red prisoners, it was stated, was that vast quantities of Russian supplies were being seized and destroyed.

Replacements, Germans declared, could come only from Britain or the United States—and it was asserted that they could not come fast enough or heavily enough.

"It's a long way from Nottingham, England, to Kharkov," exulted the newspaper Allegemeine Zeitung.

Naval Action Stressed

Sharply emphasized was the heaviest offensive action against the Soviet navy to be reported since the struggle began in the East.

Russian warships trying to flee from the island naval base of Kronstadt, near Leningrad—a base declared long since to have been silenced—were said by authorized sources to have been shelled and forced to turn back by German batteries on the Baltic coast. A cruiser and a destroyer, it was declared, were hit and forced to turn about.

The high command reported that German bombers hit heavily the Soviet battleship Oktiabrskaya-Revolutia (October Revolution), the heavy cruiser Kirov and another cruiser and damaged three destroyers, a minesweeper and a gunboat.

Odessa Fight Pressed

In the Black Sea, where every German effort was being made to strangle Odessa, it was declared that a Russian cruiser, two destroyers, an anti-aircraft ship and nine merchant ships aggregating 25,000 tons were sunk. In addition, D. N. B., official news agency, reported late tonight that German airmen set afire a Russian cruiser, destroyed three transports and damaged three smaller vessels south of Odessa during the day.

[A special communique broadcast from Berlin and heard at New York by the National Broadcasting Company said a Russian destroyer, a smaller war vessel and a 4,000-ton merchantman were captured in the Dnieper River estuary.] 3

Far removed from all this, but intimately connected in German strategy, was a series of submarine attacks on British commerce in the Atlantic, which were said to have sunk thirteen ships, including four tankers, representing a total tonnage of 82,500.

In the last ten days, military spokesman said, 309,000 tons of British and Allied shipping had been sunk by U-boats and speedboats.

Occupation of the fortified Russian islands intended to protect Leningrad from the west was virtually completed, Germans said. The seizure of three of them—the islands of Oesel, Muhu and Vormsi—had been announced earlier

[Finnish reports stated that Dagoe, the fourth of these islands, was under Nazi attack.]

In the area tc the east of Kiev, German reports said the four encircled armies of Marshal Semeon Budyenny were being cut up into smaller pieces and destroyed. Authorized Authorized spokesmen estimated that spokesmen estimated that at least 200,000 prisoners had been taken.

A German division in the central sector of the Russian front reported tonight the capture of twenty tanks, forty cannon and 500 trucks after "throwing the Soviets out of positions." 5 ing the Finnish gulf perilous for the Red Baltic fleet.

Shore Guns Shell Ships.

Authorized sources said German batteries on the Baltic coast shelled a Russian cruiser and a destroyer at Kronstadt, forcing both quickly to cease fire and turn from their course.

The Luftwaffe, said the bulletin from Adolf Hitler's headquarters, scored two bomb hits on the 23,016-ton Russian battleship Oktiabrskaya-Revolutia (October Revolution), two on the 8,800-ton cruiser Kirov, four on another cruiser and also inflicted bomb damage on three destroyers, a mine-sweeper and a gunboat, all off Kronstadt.

In air raids on Russian vessels in the Black Sea, the High Command said, German planes sank a cruiser, two destroyers, an anti-aircraft ship and nine merchant ships aggregating 25,000 tons.

[A special communique added that a Russian destroyer, a smaller war vessel and a 4,000-ton merchantman were captured in the Dnieper river estuary, NBC said it heard on a Berlin broadcast. Capture of 900 Russian motor vehicles also was claimed, it said.]

In the area east of Kiev where, the High Command said, four trapped Russian armies are being cut up into small, isolated units and destroyed, Soviet attempts to break out of the tightening steel ring in the Ukraine were reported repulsed. In one sector alone, informed sources said, the Russians lost twenty tanks, including six fifty-two-ton land cruisers and two others of forty-four tons.

German sources said about thirty Red Army divisions had been destroyed in the Kiev pocket east of Dnieper and Desna Rivers. (Russian divisions normally contain about 15,000 men.)

The High Command announcement of a mounting total of Russian prisoners followed a series of sweeping military successes, announced yesterday by the High Command, which appeared to have placed the Russian Black Sea naval base of Sebastopol in grave danger and also cleared vital sea lanes leading to Leningrad.

Another special communique issued over the week end reported that the islands of Oesel and Muhu off Estonia had been captured by German assault troops after bitter fighting, and today's communique said the mopping up of the Red garrison at Aresnburg, capital of Oesel, was under way.

This success means, the Germans said, that warships and supply vessels feeding Nazi troops in the Leningrad area will be able to operate along the Estonian coast and in the Gulf of Riga without interference from Soviet coastal batteries. 3

Observers said that if the Crimea were effectively isolated, Red army forces holding out in besieged Odessa may have to capitulate for lack of supplies. They pointed out that Sebastopol, a city of some 63,000 population situated at the tip of the Crimea, apparently is the base from which Russian ships have been supplying Odessa by sea. How many troops the Russians have on the Crimean peninsula was a matter of speculation.

Stiff Fighting on Islands.

Capture of Oesel and Muhu—the Island of the Moon—was accomplished only after the stiffest kind of fighting, the Germans said.

Muhu, they said, was the first to fall as the result of a surprise attack launched a week ago from the mainland three miles away. German correspondents told how Nazi troops, in speedy assault boats, effected the first landing under a barrage laid down by 200 cannon.

"Many a boat was shot through like a sieve," one correspondent declared, describing the hail of fire which met the landing parties.

With Muhu subdued, the Germans used that island as a jumping-off place for an attack on the bigger island of Oesel. A communique said that scattered remnants of the Russian garrison remained in the western part of Oesel but declared their destruction was imminent. German naval forces penetrated deep into the Gulf of Finland to cover the assault.

There was little information concerning land operations around Leningrad during the week end.

DNB reported that Nazi bombers had heavily attacked the fortress and naval base of Kronstadt, some twenty miles west of the beleaguered city, for the first time.

The news agency also said that Germans entering the Ukrainian capital of Kiev last week had found "unimaginable devastation." Red army troops were said to have carted off vast quantities of supplies, destroyed water and electric plants and blown up rail lines.

(A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm today quoted Finnish reports as saying that the Germans now are attacking Dagoe, the fourth of the Riga Bay islands, now that they claim conquest of Oesel Muhu and Vormsi islands in their battle with the Russians.)

Germans Claim Guns on Shore Defeat Red Ships at Leningrad

Berlin Says Vessels Were Trying to Escape From Besieged City—Action Follows Fall of Baltic Island.

SEP 23 1941

Berlin, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Russian warships have been beaten back by German shore guns in an attempt to flee the Baltic waters off Leningrad, authorized German sources declared today.

Although this action was not mentioned by the High Command, the communique reported heavy air blows on Russian sea forces in the Baltic and Black Seas—including damage to a battleship and seven other warships apparently still standing by the besieged defenders of Leningrad.

The reported flight of Russian naval units was a sequel to German claims of having captured Oesel, fortified Russian island guarding the entrance to the Gulf of Finland, and to have silenced big guns of the Kronstadt Island naval base near Leningrad, mak-

REDS PLEDGED TO FIGHT OR DIE FOR TWO CITIES

Six German Battalions Declared Wiped Out In One Sector

British-U. S. Mission Arrives In Russia To Speed Supplies

30.24— 11981

30.24— 11981

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 22—Blackout restrictions for Moscow were relaxed, effective tonight, to permit the capital's squares and principal thoroughfares to be lighted except during air raids.

There was no explanation of the new order.

Heretofore the city has been without light nightly.

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Tuesday, Sept. 23—Pledged to fight to the death, Red troops and hastily recruited civilians were reported today holding firm outside Leningrad and Odessa as British and United States delegations arrived in Russia to speed arms and supplies in the fight against Germany.

The early morning Soviet Information Bureau communique made no mention of the Kiev area where German troops had broken through Russian defenses to capture the Ukrainian capital, nor of Leningrad or Odessa.

But it said nearly six German battalions had been wiped out on the western front at undesignated sectors, that heavy losses were inflicted on Rumanian forces in the south, and that fighting continued all along the western front.

Nazi Setback Reported

Dispatches from those beleaguered cities, however, told of a thus far unyielding Red defense, while correspondents visiting the central sector reported the Russians had thrown the Germans back to within seven and a half miles of Smolensk.

The Red air force was pictured as supreme over the central sector and the morning communique said one hundred Nazi planes were destroyed Saturday, compared to Red losses of twenty-one.

Leningrad's defenders were exhorted to "win or die" in the violent struggle raging about that second largest Russian city.

"Win Or Die"

"Win or die—there is no other choice," workers of the great Putilov armament plant appealed in an open letter to the Soviet forces fighting almost to the edge of the city.

"Win or die: this is the law of the Soviet fighter; this is the slogan for the entire Soviet nation! Let us give our holy oath we will not lay down our arms until we bury all the Fascist beasts."

With Kiev captured, only Leningrad and Odessa of Russia's greatest cities remained under Nazi siege. From the Black Sea port, too, heavy Nazi assaults were said to have failed to budge Odessa's defenders.

Moscow Strengthened

A new edict further strengthened Moscow for resistance, its city council forbidding the return of evacuees who left after the war began and issuing orders that those who do be denied food-ration cards.

[Although this might indicate preparations to withstand siege, Reuters circulated a dispatch today under a Yelnya date line, saying that Russian forces counter-attacking from that town, about fifty miles southeast of Smolensk in the central sector, still were forcing the Germans back.]

On the Southern fron., official dispatches said, naval planes of the Soviet Black Sea fleet are collaborating with land forces. These reports credited naval flyers with eliminating three German infantry companies and destroying nine tanks, thirty trucks, four anti-aircraft guns and several grounded planes in the past two days.

Rumanians Killed

Russian troops have destroyed almost all of six German battalions and killed 400 Nazi troops in two actions at undesignated sectors on the Western Front, the Soviet Union announced today.

A Rumanian infantry brigade also lost 600 men on the Southern Front, the communique said.

"During Sept. 22 our troops fought the enemy along the entire front," it was added. "One hundred German planes were destroyed on Sept. 20. We lost 21 aircraft."

There was no mention of specific action in the Leningrad, Kiev or Odessa regions.

Workers in the great Putilov armament plant, in an open letter to the city's fighting forces, appealed:

"Win or die—there is no other choice. Win or die: This is the law for the Soviet fighter; this is the slogan for the entire Soviet nation! Let us give our holy oath we will not lay down our arms until we bury all the Fascist beasts."

With Kiev fallen as the war entered its fourth month, Moscow tightened its own precautions behind its barrier of fighting men.

The Capital City Council prohibited the return of all who left the city since the war began. Those who do come back will not be given permits by militia nor issued food cards.

Naval Planes Raid Tanks

Bombers from the Soviet Black Sea fleet are supporting Russian forces ashore on the southern flank, official dispatches said.

In two days, they said, naval flyers have destroyed nine tanks, thirty trucks, four anti-aircraft guns; several grounded planes and have wiped out three infantry companies.

An early morning communique tersely acknowledged that Kiev, Russia's third city and administrative center of the Ukraine, was yielded to the Germans "after many days of fierce fighting."

Surrender "In Plan"

It was the first major capture for the Germans since they invaded Russia and a serious blow to the Soviet, but the city of 846,000 population was given up in accord with the Russian plan of keeping the Red army on a fighting basis, even at the expense of territory, Russians said.

Leningrad Defenders Urged To 'Win Or Die'

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 22—The fiercest fighting on the whole Russian battlefront flamed toward a climax today around Leningrad, where armament workers called upon the great port city's defenders to "win or die."

As in besieged Odessa to the south, Leningrad's defense ring of Red troops and militia called from the shops and factories were reported holding their attackers to a standstill close to the city limits.

Appeal To Defenders

Stubborn rear-guard fighting was believed to have saved a large part of the city's defenders, who were reported falling back to the east to prepare defense to a German thrust at the industrial Donets basin.

The withdrawal became imperative after the Germans crossed the Dnieper to the north, swept down the river's eastern bank and fought their way into the ring of fire about Kiev.

32 Towns Reported Retaken

Bolstering the Kiev set-back in some measure was a report that the Red army on the counter-offensive in the central sector had recaptured thirty-two villages and driven the Germans from a strong fortified line.

The midday communique reported that stubborn fighting continued along the entire front during the night.

The fighting at Leningrad became even more furious as the Germans increased their pressure. Newspaper reports said Nazi dive-bombers were hitting Leningrad with "such ferocity it seems the earth itself will split."

Heavy Loss Claimed

The army newspaper Red Star estimated the Germans had lost forty per cent. of the men in all divisions hurled against Leningrad.

Two divisions, the Thirtieth Infantry and an anti-aircraft unit, have lost nearly fifty per cent. of their men, a Sunday communique said.

A Pravda correspondent at the Leningrad front wrote that the Germans had made no advance toward Leningrad in a number of days and that powerful artillery fire of the Soviets "is chasing the Germans into hastily dug trenches.

The defenders of Odessa are standing up against bayonet charges by the Rumanian soldiers, Red Star reported.

A Pravda correspondent at the Leningrad front wrote that the Germans had made no advance toward Leningrad in a number of days and that powerful artillery fire of the Soviets "is chasing the Germans into hastily-dug trenches.

The defenders of Odessa are standing up against bayonet charges by Rumanian soldiers, Red Star reported.

The newspaper said the Rumanians invariably followed machine-gun and mortar fire against the city with bayonet charges "which the Red Army men withstood."

An indication of the ferocity of the aerial fighting was seen in the Soviet report that the Red Star force destroyed 60 German planes and lost 24 Friday. The Russians further said that the Germans had lost 8,500 planes in the three months of the war.

At sea, the communique said, the Finnish coastal warship Ilmarinen, 3,900 tons, struck mines during an action in the Gulf of Finland and sank.

Finns Report Gains.

Helsinki, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—The Finns declared officially tonight that Russian troops had been forced to withdraw from islands in the northern part of Lake Ladoga and reported Valamo and smaller islands again in Finnish hands.

Some damage was done by the Russians to a monastery on one of the islands, but a large church was undamaged, the announcement said.

Hear of New Attack.

London, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm today quoted Finnish reports as saying that the Germans now are attacking Dagoe, the fourth of the Riga Bay islands now that they claim conquest of Oesel, Muhu and Vohmsi islands in their battle with the Russians.

The body of the political commissar of this army also was found, and German reports said he had committed suicide.

AP Man Tells of Six Days at Front Where Reds Have Repelled Germans

BY HENRY C. CASSIDY.

With The Red Army At The Front, Sept. 22.—(AP)—In the primitive forests, fields and swamps of middle western Russia the Red Army has thrown the Germans back on their heels, advanced six to 30 miles and stabilized the entire central sector of this front.

For six days I visited the front line zones around Smolensk on the first trip by foreign correspondents to the Russian front.

The war there appeared to have settled down to the World War type of trench warfare amid seas of mud and devastated towns.

Red Army forces still held the initiative and were advancing at some points. The only signs of activity in these sectors from the German lines were small air sorties, sporadic artillery fire and a single local infantry counter-attack.

The central sector had been the scene of the first German rush toward Moscow and the ensuing formidable Russian counter-attack.

A lull descended at some points, while the Russians attacked at others.

In this kind of fight the Soviet commanders are confident that Red Army artillery can prove a dominant and decisive weapon. I heard the earth-shaking rumble of its barrages, saw pocked-marked fields where its blasts drove the Germans back.

The Red air force appeared to have the superiority over the western zone.

I saw Russian bombers return without a loss from a raid on Smolensk airport. Only one was scarred by German anti-aircraft shells.

Under German bombings I heard Russian fighters roar into action and drive away the raiders. I saw one of these German planes and its crew brought down as the price of the attack.

In the gigantic struggle by land and air the Russian line, now straightened by a series of pincers movements against German salients, ran within 7½ miles of Smolensk at advanced points.

The road to Moscow appeared barred by an immense force of tough, seasoned fighting men well-equipped and well-supplied.

Driving to the front, I went down the Moscow-Smolensk-Minsk highway where truck columns controlled by military police rolled endlessly to and from the front.

Windows Shattered.

German planes swept down on Vyasma in a daylight raid the following morning. Nine planes scattered bombs in mid-town, killing and wounding many civilians. The windows of my room were shattered.

The Germans withdrew quickly from this hit-and-run sortie when Russian fighters and ground batteries went into action.

Driving out of the city I saw the wreckage of a German Junkers-88 bomber. It was one of the first raiders and made a forced landing after its two motors were crippled by Soviet fighters.

Through pine and birch forests I went to a dirt road, now converted by rains into a mass of mud, in the direction of Yartsevo where armies of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko attacked on a 60-mile front for 10 days beginning September 1.

This assault rolled back forces commanded by German Field Marshal General Fedor von Bock, inflicting heavy losses on 10 of his divisions. It also nipped off the German salient northeast of Smolensk while the Red Army also recaptured Yelnya and threw back eight German divisions southeast of the city.

The front in the wild country northeast of Smolensk now is relatively quiet.

At one divisional headquarters near Yartsevo, which is in Soviet hands, Russian guns pumped shells into the German lines three to four miles away.

Survivors in Church.

Nearby in the direction of Dukhovschina I visited a division headquarters. Running the gauntlet across a field within sight of the German lines I went to a battery which sent shells screaming into the Nazi positions and drew no reply.

At night no-man's-land is illuminated by wierd white light from star shells sent up by the Germans as a precaution against attack.

A sector southeast of Smolensk, on high and more settled ground, showed more action.

Yelnya, which the Germans abandoned after a Russian counter-attack virtually encircled the city, was a mass of ruins. A church was one of the few buildings unscarred. The Germans locked the few hundred remaining residents in the church before applying the torch to the town and beating a retreat.

Only piles of bricks and charred wood remained of the village of Ushakovo, six miles north of Yelnya, where the Russians started their counter-attack by charging German trenches and capturing a hill dominating the region.

The devastation resembled that left in France in the World War.

Russian advance forces which pushed the Germans 10 miles from Yelnya back toward Smolensk were reported later to have hurled the Nazis another six to eight miles farther westward.

Except for the actual battlegrounds, the peasants remained at their collective farms in the front-line zones, threshing grain, stacking flax and cutting hay.

Yelnya Is Recaptured As Germans Retreat

By a Special Correspondent of Reuters

YELNYA, 50 Miles Southeast of Smolensk, Russia, Sept. 22 — I am writing this dispatch at Yelnya, chief town in a great salient recaptured by Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's army southeast of Smolensk after smashing eight German divisions in one of the war's fiercest battles.

It is a week since I left Moscow on the first visit by foreign journalists to the Russian-German front.

SEP 23 1941

Reconquer Territory

Since then our party has traveled up and down the Smolensk sector over incredible roads. I have talked with soldiers who fought throughout the month-long battle that ended not only in Nazi failure to break through to Moscow but in reconquest of a large slice of territory by the Russians.

Officers of famous Russian divisions entertained me in an open air mess barely a mile from the front line with an artillery duel in full blast.

One night I visited a front line battery. Another was spent sleeping on stretchers in a front line hospital.

Standing on a Soivet airdrome I watched husky pilots of the Red air force landing from a raid on a German air field behind Smolensk.

At Vyazma, 170 miles west of Moscow, we ourselves were bombed.

Villages Flattened Out

In this recaptured piece of Russian soil we saw our fill of war's horrors—villages flattened out completely by shell fire, graves of thousands of German and Russian soldiers.

People who had lost everything but still returned to their burned-out homes when the Russian army fought back told me their stories.

I have seen, too, women milking their cows and children playing happily only a few miles from the front with the air of the lovely autumn countryside filled with the noise of guns.

Anger and hatred I have seen—but no despondency.

Many miles to the east of Smolensk the country was devastated by the Germans before they were driven out by a brilliant Soviet pincer drive that resulted in thousands of Nazis being killed or captured.

The remainder was forced to withdraw rapidly through an ever-narrowing bottleneck, abandoning strong positions and masses of equipment.

Germans Retreating

The Germans are now 11 miles west of Yelnya, and still retreating.

Smolensk is still in German hands, but the Russians are closing in.

Very little is left of Yelnya itself. An old stone church is relatively intact, but the rest of this little town of 5000 inhabitants is just a mass of rubble and ashes with chimney stacks sticking out here and there.

Amid this scene of desolation army lorries are the only traffic.

When, on the night of Sept. 4, the Nazis decided to evacuate the town, they ordered the few remaining inhabitants—mostly old people and children—to assemble inside the church, which they locked.

Then they systematically set fire to every house. It was a blazing inferno that advancing Russian troops entered shortly afterward.

I drove today along the road by which the Germans retreated before they evacuated Yelnya. Our party started out in the morning from Dorogobuzh, which was never in German hands but was almost completely destroyed by air raids in July.

Reds In Ukraine Said To Face 'Ugly Situation'

SEP 23 1941

London, Sept. 22 (AP)—Marshal Semeon Budenny's southern Russian armies are facing "an uglier situation" than at any time of the Russo-German war. His major problem is that of extricating sufficient forces in the Kiev area to re-establish defense lines covering Kharkov and Rostov, informed London sources said tonight.

Kharkov is the most important city of the rich Donets industrial area and lies some 250 miles east of fallen Kiev, while Rostov is a vital port at the mouth of the River Don on the Sea of Azov.

The tactics of Marshal Semeon Timoskenko on the central Russian front was described by authoritative quarters here as "confusing." They added that they likewise apparently were "mystifying" to the Nazi high command.

It was agreed in London that the Russians are fighting under "grievous disadvantages" with no indication of an immediate improvement of their position. The authoritative informants said the country's industrial losses soon might be so great that it would be impossible for the Red army to carry on much more than an "irritant" war.

Reds' Loss of Kiev Emphasizes Need of Aid, British Say

English Tank Makers Start Week of Production for Soviet Requirements

SEP 23 1941

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 22 — The German victory at Kiev was seen in British circles today as strongly underlining need for swift British and United States action to rush the greatest help to Soviet Russia in the shortest time.

Newspaper commentators declared no help was too great for the Russians, and British tank-makers lent emphasis to that feeling by starting full force on a week during which the entire British tank output will go to Russia.

Some workers, due for vacations, decided to stay on the job.

Maisky Appeals for Tanks.

A plea for "tanks and more tanks —and yet more tanks" was sounded last night by Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to Britain.

Appealing to the British workers through the Supply Ministry, he said:

"We produced many tanks ourselves, but our losses in tanks on a 2,000-mile front are great * * * your tanks will not be wasted. * * * The sooner you send us tanks and the greater their number the earlier the Nazi hordes will be defeated."

Maisky with his wife and members of a Russian military mission to Britain, visited a Midlands factory today and saw numbers of completed and incompleted tanks, all bearing "V" (for victory) signs and greetings such as "Moscow here I come."

Mrs. Maisky named the first tank off the assembly line today the "Stalin." Maisky expressed gratitude for "these excellent machines."

Supply Plan Agreed To.

The British mission headed by Lord Beaverbrook and the United States group headed by W. Averell Harriman will be at work in Moscow within a few days, informed sources said. Lord Beaverbrook already is in the Russian capital and Mr. Harriman wound up his London conferences Saturday preparatory to going to Moscow.

The British cabinet was reported to have agreed to a comprehensive plan aimed at helping solve the job of supplying Russia.

The Daily Telegraph declared the plan went "far beyond making good the enormous Russian wastage of tanks and fighter planes. It includes various means for strengthening Russia's war industry and provision of consumer goods of which vast reserves of Russian man power have been deprived by the needs of war production in the U. S. S. R."

As the newspapers stressed the need for speed, the Daily Express declared bluntly that "we don't send this aid in any sloppy mood of aiding the victim of aggression. We do it for the sake of our own earth, to save it from being scorched."

British Invasion Talk Drops

Meanwhile, talk of the British opening a front in the west to draw off some of the Germans attacking the Russians in the east died away. Chuter Ede, parliamentary undersecretary to the Board of Education, declared in a speech yesterday that "only when the time is ripe will Prime Minister Churchill take offensive action in the west" and added "he will not do it merely because people call for it."

The Germans, having taken Kiev, probably are aiming their next major thrust at Rostov, at the mouth of the River Don, authoritative sources said.

Rostov, on the Sea of Azov, is important to Russia not only as a port for water-borne reinforcement of Crimea, but also as a gateway to the Caucasus and its oil fields.

The exact situation of counter-attacking Red Army forces in the Smolensk sector was not known here, but these sources said transfers of Russian troops to strengthen resistance against Nazi drives on the flanks probably had weakened Russia's striking power in the center.

Maisky Visits Tank Factories, Where 'God Save the King' and 'Internationale' Are Sung

MOSCOW, Sept. 22 (AP) — The British and United Sates delegations to the Moscow conference on aid to Russia against Germany have arrived by air "in territory of the U.S.S.R.," an official announcement said tonight.

Delegations Arrive In Moscow by Plane

London, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—The arrival by plane of the United States and British delegations to a three power conference with the Soviet government was announced tonight by the Moscow radio.

Lord Beaverbrook, head of the British group, had gone to the Russian capital in advance but W. Averell Harriman, leader of the American delegation, presumably went with the others.

They made the flight as British workers in blacked-out Midlands tank factories raced for record production during this week when every tank manufactured in Britain will be shipped at once to the Russian front to bolster the Red Army's grim stand.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Supply declared there was every indication the factories would set records in tanks and parts for what the British called "Russian Week."

Red Radio Reports Trip by Plane; Empire Troops May Fight in Caucasus

LONDON, Sept. 22 (AP).—The Moscow radio reported tonight that the British and American delegations for the three-power conference with the Soviet government have arrived in Moscow by plane.

There had been no announcement here that the American delegation, headed by W. Averell Harriman, had left London, but officials said that "for reasons of security," none was to be expected until the Americans had reached their destination safely.

Bulgarian Reports Of Red Parachutists Are Called False

MOSCOW, Sept. 22 (AP)—The Soviet government charged today that Bulgarian reports of Russian parachutists landing in the Balkan country were "invented from beginning to end with provocational aims."

A statement issued through Tass news agency said the Kremlin considered statements made in a Bulgarian protest "so obviously fabricated and their slanderous character so manifest that they require no denial."

The Soviet statement disclosed that the Sofia government alleged parachute landings were made first on the night of July 13-14 and again on Sept. 13-14.

The Bulgars charged furthermore that several men carrying weapons landed from a Soviet submarine on the Black Sea coast on Aug. 11 and 28. The Soviet government said there was no more truth in this than the accounts of the parachutists.

Sofia Reports Executions of Red Legislators

Other Communists Sent to Camps in Bulgaria as Hostages in Martial Law

BERNE, Sept. 22 (AP).—The execution of an unstated number of Communist members of the Bulgarian Parliament and the sending of 120 Communists to German concentration camps as hostages for sabotage were reported tonight in Sofia dispatches.

Legislators of the former peasant party also were reported interned, as speculation turned on whether the state of martial law proclaimed in Bulgaria over the week end meant that the country was preparing to enter the war against Russia.

[The British Broadcasting Corporation reported yeserday that King Boris III of Bulgaria was on his way to meet Adolf Hitler and Der Fuehrer's chief aides in what the B. B. C. called a "prelude to declaring war on Russia." Authoritative Berlin quarters issued a virtual denial of such a meeting.]

Sofia dispatches were not clear on the date of the execution of the Communists, but apparently they preceded the week-end martial-law declaration. The dispatches also failed to state the reason for the executions and internments, but it was recalled that it was secret members of the illegal Communist and Agrarian parties who introduced a resolution against adherence to the Axis in Parliament last March.

["The Statesman's Year Book of 1941" said a general election on Jan. 30, 1941, resulted in the election of 140 supporters of the government to the single Bulgarian legislative house and an opposition of twenty, including nine Communists.]

The martial law decrees were understood to have cleared the way for speedy disposition of the cases of thirty-five Bulgarians, held since August on charges of conspiring with the British against the Bulgarian and German armies during the Yugoslav War.

Some close observers felt recent German victories might be the deciding factor in bringing Bulgaria into war or at least into joining in diplomatic pressure upon Turkey to side with the Axis.

Besides the executions, internments and deportations, Sofia dispatches told of other strong measures taken by the Bulgarian government. Farmers have been given until Oct. 10 to turn over their grain surpluses for the army and civilians, with a promise it would not be sent to Germany. Labor service has been expanded to include all foreigners of Jewish origin, foreigners with Nansen passports (given to persons of indefinite nationality) and those considered deserters from foreign military forces, these reports said.

The Sofia radio quoted the newspaper Mir as saying Russia had attempted to create disorders in Bulgaria.

(The German news agency DNB said in a dispatch from Sofia that British and Russian propaganda had tried repeatedly to link up Bulgaria with belligerent action against Russia in an effort to place the blame for aggression on Bulgaria.)

Bulgarian Deputies Executed.

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Advices from Sofia said tonight that an unstated number of communist deputies in the Bulgarian Parliament had been executed and legislators of the former Peasant party interned.

When the reported executions occurred was not stated but, apparently, they preceded the invocation of martial law last week end.

[According to the 1941 statesman's year book, nine of the 160 members of Bulgaria's single-chamber Legislature were communists.]

These reports coincided with warlike preparations in Bulgaria which were interpreted by some neutral observers as part of a German plan to put pressure on Turkey which would win concessions to aid the Nazi cause in the Near East.

Such a plan would be the logical sequel to the swift German drive into the Ukraine, which has made it imperative that the Nazis take steps to protect their right flank against the possibility of attack from any quarter, these sources said.

Dispatches from Ankara indicated that the German eastward push, as well as developments in Bulgaria, were causing keen anxiety among the Turks, and well-informed sources there were quoted as expressing belief that Turkey faced an imminent showdown.

No Other reasons given.

Belief that Germany might be using Bulgaria as a lever against Turkey was intensified by the fact that advices from Sofia failed to give specific reasons for the adoption of measures which virtually put the country under martial law during the week end.

Some persons suggested the measures might have been taken in anticipation of trouble with Russia, but the Bulgarian Government has denied strongly having any aggressive intentions against the Soviet.

Well-informed persons in Ankara said German leaders apparently were divided in their viewpoints regarding Turkey. One group, it was said, held that Turkey never would participate in or permit any aggressive action against Europe across her territory, and for that reason the German flank was secure.

Against Taking Chances.

Another group, however, was said to feel that no chances should be taken and that the German armies could not continue their drive toward the rich oil fields of the Caucasus leaving 2,000,000 Turkish soldiers uncommitted on their flank. Those holding this opinion were reported in favor of pressing demands that Turkey permit German forces to establish themselves along Turkey's Black Sea coast.

Some Balkan observers saw the possibility that Germany, if successful in winning such a concession from Turkey, might establish a static front in Russia and transfer her offensive to the south against Iran, now occupied by British and Russian forces.

Balkan Tension Grows.

Tension in the Balkans caused by the uncertain situation was increased overnight by a report that the 4,000-ton Bulgarian merchant ship Rodina was sunk by an unexpected explosion in the Black Sea while en route to Istanbul.

A German trade mission, meanwhile, arrived in Sofia to open talks with a Bulgarian committee. King Boris returned to the Bulgarian capital at the same time after inspecting fall maneuvers of Bulgarian troops, which include the largest class called to the colors in the country's history.

Bulgaria Put in State Of Alert, Nazis Report

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (AP).—Bulgaria, according to information received by the Wilhelmstrasse, has been "brought into a state of higher watchfulness," but authorized sources would not go so far as to assert that a technical state of siege has been declared.

Bulgaria's increased alertness, it was pointed out, need surprise nobody, considering the activities of Soviet Russia, which is reported to have landed parachute agents and made sabotage attempts.

Authorized sources asserted that a whole barrage of misleading and untruthful news was being spread regarding Bulgaria by Germany's enemies with the purpose of creating uneasiness in Turkey.

Berlin authorities expressed the opinion today that it is out of the question that King Boris is en route to meet Hitler." (This constituted substantially a denial of Ankara-B. B. C. reports reports that the Bulgarian monarch was en route to see the Reichsfuehrer as "a prelude to declaring war on Russia.")

Boris and Hitler May Meet

British Report King Is on Way to Berlin—Red Bulgar Deputies Executed.

NEW YORK-SEPT-22 (INS)

King Boris of Bulgaria is en route to a meeting with Adolf Hitler, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported today, adding that this visit was reported to be a prelude to declaring war on Russia. The National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System transcribed the broadcast.

The BBC credited the report to informants at Ankara, where Bulgaria's stand is seen by some observers as a threat to Turkey.

However, authoritative sources in Berlin expressed the opinion that such a meeting was out of the question.

The text of the first BBC broadcast, as taken down by the CBS follows:

"Reports from Ankara say that King Boris of Bulgaria is on his way to meet Hitler.

"He is said to be accompanied by his army chiefs and it is added that among those at the conference will be Von Ribbentrop, Gen. von Brauchitsch, Admiral Raeder and Von Papen, the ambassador to Turkey.

Russian Break Expected.

"The conference is said to have been called in anticipation of an imminent rupture of Russo-Bulgarian diplomatic relations.

"These Ankara reports are not confirmed in London."

A later BBC broadcast added that the visit was regarded as a step toward a Bulgarian declaration of war.

The conferees, as listed in the BBC report, would represent both the land and sea commands of the German armed forces. Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch is commander-in-chief of the army and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder is chief of the naval command. Joachim von Ribbentrop is the German Foreign Minister.

Growing dissatisfaction in Bulgaria with the pro-Axis policy of the Government was reported today by BBC, as heard in New York by the CBS. The British radio quoted reports of student demonstrations against the Bulgarian Government, and said the Government had threatened to close all schools.

Turks Defy Axis Attempt To Pass Dardanelle Zone

SEP 23 1941

Newspaper Indicates Bulgarian Pleas Will Be Rejected

Bern, Switzerland, Sept. 22 (AP)—The Ankara radio broadcast a statement by the highly-placed Turkish newspaper Aksham today that "under no pretext will any fleet pass through the (Darndanelle) Straits."

This broadcast, coming as it did from the government-controlled Turkish station, indicated the Turks would turn down any request by Bulgaria to transfer former Italian warships to the Black Sea for use against Soviet Russia.

Aksham said it did not know whether such a request had come from Sofia and added that if it did the answer would be a simple "no."

"How could anyone believe a mere change of flags would alter the situation," the newspaper asked. "If that were so, the Republic of Georgia could purchase the entire British fleet."

Furthermore, Aksham said Axis-aligned Bulgaria is considered a belligerent anyway. Under the Montreux convention belligerents can not move warships through the Darndanelles.

Sofia, Bulgaria (via Berlin), Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Franz von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey, stopped here overnight on his trip back to Ankara.

German Flight From Iran To Afghanistan Reported

Ankara, Sept. 21 (A.P., Delayed)—A large number of German nationals whom the British and Russians have been trying to segregate were reported tonight to have fled Iran into Afghanistan.

Turkish quarters which received this report forecast that Britain and Russia would try to clean them out of Afghanistan on the ground that with the German army plunging toward the Caucasus, Afghanistan had become a weak point in Middle East defenses.

The German advance across the lower Dnieper river in the Ukraine increased the prospect that supplies for the Germans might soon be routed across the Black Sea from the Bulgarian ports of Varna and Burgas, where small and middle-sized supply ships are said to have been massed.

Russia and Bulgaria have exchanged critical notes over the future use of Varna and Burgas—a diplomatic play regarded in Ankara as simply window dressing for final acts.

IRAN'S EX-SHAH SEEKS EDEN'S AID IN FLIGHT

Wants to Reach South America —Afghanistan Watched

ISFAHAN, Iran, Sept. 22 (AP)—The abdicated Shah Riza Pahlevi of Iran left unannounced Saturday for Kirman Shah, Iran, hoping to make his way from there to South America through the assistance of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

The Shah came here a week ago after he was forced to quit his throne by British and Russian occupation forces tired of his dilatory tactics in removing German nationals from the country.

The new Iranian Cabinet, in which seven Ministers of the abdicated Shah were replaced, was accepted yesterday by Parliament. The Cabinet pledged itself to find all the crown jewels and restore all properties taken from the people.

LONDON, Sept. 22 (AP)—The fortune that the former Shah of Iran, now abdicated, deposited in Great Britain was authoritatively stated today to be "frozen." The size of the fortune was not known. He may have other assets put away in other parts of the world, including the United States, where authoritative sources said he had large investments.

Italy's 'Suicide' Boats Sink 3 Gibraltar Ships

SEP 23 1941

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 22.—A force of Italy's secret, little assault boats slipped into the innermost part of Gibraltar harbor Saturday night, sidestepping or crossing a formidable web of defenses, and at the very base of the gun-studded rock sank three British supply ships and damaged a fourth so that it was probably lost, the Italian high command reported today.

For Italians it was another story of suicidal daring by the steel-nerved young men specially trained to handle these secret weapons—believed to be little more than man-carrying torpedoes. The brief communique did not say what fate befell the attackers.

"Assault units of the Italian marine entered the bay and inner port of Gibraltar harbor, sank one tanker of 10,000 tons, another of 600 tons and one steamer of 6000 tons, loaded with munitions, and seriously hit a steamer of 12,000 tons loaded with war material," the announcement said.

"This steamer hit against rocks where it was stranded and therefore can be considered lost."

Believed One-man Boats

Typical of the secrecy surrounding the assult boats is the fact that the Italians usually refer to them only as "Mezzi"—weapons.

Neither their scource of propulsion nor any other detail of construction is public knowledge but the boats must be quiet and especially fitted to weave through minefields and over the booms and nets which have made the British regard Gibraltar harbor as secure against any hostile torpedo craft.

Each of the "Mezzi" is supposed to be manned by only one man—the Italians say an "indispensable minimum"—and is believed to carry a torpedo in the nose. These men, specially chosen, know about their only hope, if they get close enough to their targets to fire accurately, is capture.

But it is possible for the little craft, if not caught by defensive fire or capsized in the swift maneuvering necessary after the torpedo discharge, to make an elusive getaway if a safe return route can be picked out.

Piecemetal descriptions of the "Mezzi" would suggest nothing more to Americans than the highly maneuverable streamlined shells used for outboard motor racing. But they may be of even shallower draft and faster, with an operating range of only a few miles.

Third Test of Ships

According to authoritative sources, Italy's motoscafi anti-sommergibili (antisubmarine motorboats)—MAS for short—act as motherships for the "Mezzi," launching them at points where the heavier motors of the mother craft are still out of earshot of the defenders and waiting to pick up as many of the "Mezzi" as make the round trip.

The night attack on Gibraltar was the third test for Italy's secret weapon. As in the two previous trials—at Suda Bay in the Axis assault on Crete, and at Malta—the "Mezzi" presumably were taken last night almost to the harbor's immediate defenses, before darting under the very noses of unaware sentinels.

(London authorities, still to give their account of the raid, met the Italian claim today with "absolutely no comment." In the Malta attack the British claimed that not a single one of those riding the small boats escaped to tell the story.)

communique said today:

"For the third time our sea braves have violated an enemy base. These epic undertakings are Suda (March 26) and Gibraltar (Sept. 20).

"Of the undertaking at Suda the British Admiralty never made a sign until after occuping Crete we found the hulks of the (British) cruiser York and of two large steamers at the bottom of Suda roadstead. They admitted, although in nebulous form, only the loss of the York.

"As to the raid carried out within the well protected port of Malta, no news has yet been made public by the enemy. We know only that our crews on MAS (small motor torpedo boats) sent to support the braves who penetrated Malta counted exactly eight formidable explosions. The British Admiralty then hastened to deny our success, saying the attempt was frustrated by defensive fire.

"This latest undertaking (at Gibraltar), which surpasses the two preceding ones because of the difficulties inherent in the distance from the bases in which it was carried out, could not be kept secret, because the explosions and the disappearance of four steamers from the roadstead and port of Gibraltar took place under the eyes of the Spaniards.

"Today we have the pride of being able to estimate immediately the results accomplished by men who are to be counted among the most courageous Italy has nurtured, because after long and patient preparation they go coolly against the enemy and against death.

"But audaces fortuna (fortune favors the bold) and sometimes for their good fortune and that of the country they succeed also in conquering death."

Rome Says Torpedo Boats Sank Three Ships and Hit a Fourth.

DEFIED ROCK'S GIANT GUNS

British Are Silent Concerning Naval Clash, but Claim Two Axis Vessels.

Rome, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Tiny, secret assault craft of the Italian Navy, slipping under the muzzles of Gibraltar's great guns last night, sank three supply ships and damaged a fourth so badly it probably was lost, the Italian High Command reported today.

Authoritative sources indicated that these small craft, each virtually nothing but a human projectile, were manned by men who knew there would be little chanee of returning.

Such boats previously had been used by the Italians to raid harbors on the islands of Crete and Malta.

The special communique gave no word of the fate of the attacking crews.

SEP 23 1941

One Freighter Stranded.

It said the vessels sunk were a 6,000-ton merchant ship loaded with war materials and two tankers—one of 10,000 tons and the other of 600. A fourth vessel, a 12,000-ton merchantman loaded with war supplies, it added, "was carried against the rocks where it was stranded and therefore may be considered lost."

The tiny assault boats, each with a torpedo in its nose, are manned by only one or two men who know that death is the likely price they must pay to get close enough to their targets to fire with telling aim. About the best they dare hope for is to be captured.

According to authoritative sources, small naval vessels carry the tiny projectile-like craft to within a few miles of their targets, then set them loose to strike.

They are believed to have such quiet propulsion they can slip deep into harbors before being detected and such shallow draft they can cross over submerged barriers.

Ships Lost at Malta.

Those that made the stab into Malta's harbor just before dawn July 26 never came back. The men simply were listed as missing, but eight explosions were heard and, the Italians said, presumably eight ships were hit.

[The Italians must have developed a special technic or taken the British completely by surprise, for the Gibraltar harbor, inclosed by moles, nets and mine fields and protected by guns high on the rock, long has been regarded as secure against torpedo-boat attacks. Apart from a torpedo attack on Gibraltar shipping last year, it was the first naval assault since French and Spanish vessels shelled the Mediterranean gateway fortress in the winter of 1782-83. The rock, however, has been under sporadic and apparently ineffective air attacks.]

No Comment In London

The foray was recounted in this communique: "Assault units of the Italian marine entered the bay and inner port of Gibraltar port, sank one tanker of 10,000 tons, another of 600 tons and one steamer of 6,000 tons loaded with munitions, and seriously hit a steamer of 12,000 tons loaded with war material.

"This steamer hit against rocks, where it was stranded, and therefore can be considered lost."

(In authoritative London quarters the Italian claim was met with "absolutely no comment."

(The Italians must have developed a special technique or taken the British completely by surprise, for the Gibraltar harbor, inclosed by moles, nets and mine fields and protected by guns, long has been regarded as secure against torpedo-boat attacks.

In their regular communique the Italians reported Axis aerial attacks on British troops at Tobruk and in the Giarabub oasis in Libya and acknowleged that British air raiders had again bombed Bengasi.

In East Africa, said the communique, Italian artillery effectively bombarded British positions in the Uolchefit area of Ethiopia.

London, Sept. 22—Smashing British submarine and air-bomber attacks on Axis shipping in the central Mediterranean were declared officially tonight to have destroyed two big liners in a strongly guarded convoy, blown up a smaller ship and resulted in the damaging or sinking of three more vessels.

The blows were delivered against the main route for reinforcements and supplies for the Italian-German armies in Libya.

Two big liners, sunk by submarines Thursday, were caught in mid-sea in a three-ship convoy as they moved swiftly along under the protecting guns of a heavy guard, an Admiralty communique said.

Similar To Vulcania

The communique said one of the ships was similar to the Vulcania, of 24,469 tons, and the other two were about the same tonnage. They were assumed to be carrying reinforcements to Libya.

The third steamer in the convoy was damaged in the attack, the Admiralty said.

The Admiralty issued no statement on the number of troops aboard the three vessels nor the number of lives lost.

The third ship sunk was a schooner accounted for by the R. A. F. The bomber which got it was itself destroyed by the violence of its own attack. The schooner blew up with an explosion that felled the plane above it.

Freighter Left Burning

An Axis freighter was reported by the Middle East command to have been left burning and sinking near the Kerkenna Isles off the coast of Tunisia Saturday.

The same source said R. A. F. flyers also set fire to another schooner and left it sinking, and "successfully attacked" an Axis destroyer off Tripoli.

In a raid Saturday night R. A. F. planes scored hits on the central and other moles at the important Cirenaican desert port of Bengasi, pilots said.

2 Liners With Axis Aid For Libya Sunk

SEP 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 22—British submarines, attacking a Mediterranean convoy carrying Axis reinforcements to Libya, were reported by the Admiralty today to have sunk two Italian liners and damaged a third—possibly all of the 24,469-ton Vulcania class.

The attack was said to have been made in mid sea last Thursday as the submarine smashed at the convoy described by the British as fast and heavily guarded.

Reinforcements Aboard Liners

The communique made no estimate of the number of reinforcements aboard the three liners, which composed the entire convoy, and gave no estimate of the number of lives lost.

British bombers of the Middle East command also were credited with successful attacks on Axis shipping in the sea the Italians call their own.

One schooner was said to have blown up from a direct bomb hit with such a terrific explosion that the attacking plane was destroyed.

Schooner Left Sinking

A second schooner was bombed, set afire and left sinking and an Axis destroyer was attacked successfully off Tripoli, the British Middle East headquarters declared.

In addition, a heavily-laden merchant ship was said to have been set afire and left sinking in a bomb attack last Saturday.

That night, the British said, Bengasi was raided by the R. A. F., which reported heavy explosive hits on the harbor works.

Ship Hit, Blasts Ruins R. A. F. Plane

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 22 (AP)—The R. A. F. today reported successful attacks by British planes against Axis shipping off Tripoli in which one ship blew up with such terriffic force that the attacking R. A. F. plane was destroyed.

British Attack With 600 Planes

SEP 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 22—More than 600 bombers and fighting planes were used against Germany and German-occupied countries by the Royal Air Force in a 36-hour week-end offensive, and ninety-five per cent. of them returned safely, authorized sources said today.

The attacking forces were reported to have blasted vital targets along the continental coast from France to Norway and to have ranged as far east as Berlin.

Another Big Raid On

The total British loss during the day-and-night assaults was put at twenty fighters and seven bombers, four of which were reported shot down over Berlin.

Large flights of British planes, flying east wave after wave, swept across the English Channel against northern France again this afternoon. Pedestrians in the streets of Folkestone cheered as the planes roared over.

Power Station Fired

Bad weather over the Continent forced the R. A. F. to mark time last night.

A few German planes raided east and southeast coast points in England, but the Government said little damage was done and only a small number of slight casualties was reported.

British bombers and a strong force of fighters carried out two operations over northern France yesterday, the Air Ministry said, setting fire to a power station at Cosnay, near Bethune, and bombing railway objectives at Lille. The Ministry said not one bomber was lost and only thirteen fighters, compared with twenty-four German aircraft destroyed.

(The Germans said thirty British Spitfires were shot down in Channel dogfights, while the Nazis lost only one plane.

(A Berlin broadcast heard in New York by NBC early today said sixty-five British planes were shot down over the Channel "in the last twenty-four hours," compared with only three German losses.

(The Germans, hitting back at the British over the week end, reported that Southampton took a heavy pounding Saturday night. A communique said hits were made on warehouses, docks and military objectives.)

One flight lieutenant, Paddy Finuance, of Dublin, shot down five Messerschmitts over the week end, it was reported. Now credited with twenty planes, his ambition is to get his twenty first before he is 21 years old in two weeks.

16 More Ships Sunk Or Hit, Say Nazis

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 22—German submarines and long-range bombers have sunk or damaged sixteen merchant ships and tankers in attacks on two convoys and separate ships in the Atlantic, it was reported authoritatively today.

A special communique from the headquarters of Adolf Hitler said U-boats had sunk thirteen ships out of the convoys and damaged another ship by a torpedo hit. It did not specify when the attacks occurred.

Big Tanker Sunk

Authorized sources announced the 6,200-ton British tanker Sitala was sunk by bombers yesterday 1,000 miles west of the French coast, and another ship of about 1,500 tons was reported bombed and severely damaged off the Danish-owned Faeroes Islands, north of Scotland.

A German military spokesman said that 309,000 tons of British shipping or shipping in British service had been sent to the bottom by German submarines and speedboats in the last ten days.

Sinkings Near Iceland

"Despite Britain's safety measures, the sinkings are increasing," he declared.

The Germans said yesterday that mass submarine operations which were credited on September 13 with destroying thirty-one vessels in a single British convoy took place in "Icelandic waters."

The special communique today said three escorting ships left one convoy to its fate.

The communique follows:

"U-boats attacked two enemy convoys and a singly sailing merchant ship in the Atlantic. After hard fighting thirteen heavily laden ships, including four tankers of a total tonnage of 82,500 tons, were sunk, and another ship damaged by a torpedo hit. Three escorting vessels evaded the attack leaving the convoy to its fate."

Dive-Bomber Capture

By G. H. P. Anderson
British Journalist

With the R. A. F. in Egypt's Western Desert, Sept. 21 (Delayed)—Rushing forward with fixed bayonets to surround a German dive-bomber which landed on their airdrome early today, members of the R. A. F. ground staff were astonished to see one of their own officers clamber out of the cockpit.

With a German dictionary to aid his study of the controls, a Tasmanian wing commander flew the captured Junkers from a Libyan frontier area.

He made three forced landings en route.

Once an oil gauge burst in his face. He then set off on foot with half a can of water and a can of meat.

Finding another damaged Junkers, he salvaged the oil gauge and returned to fit it to his machine.

On the final lap of his flight a naval officer on leave from Tobruk brought him ten gallons of ordinary automobile gasoline and the two flew together to this base.

351 Enemy Planes Destroyed By Them, Tabulation Shows

London Sept. 22 (AP)—Since the collapse of France and the first arrival of Polish airmen to fly with the British fighter command, the Poles have destroyed 351 hostile planes, probably destroyed 94 and damaged 43, it was said authoritatively today.

Polish crews in 1,033 bombers were said to have taken part in 288 raids over hostile territory, and Polish airmen accounted for nineteen per cent. of the planes claimed downed by the R. A. F. in June, fourteen per cent. in July and forty-four per cent. in August, according to the tabulation.

CAPTAIN SLAIN IN PARIS, NAZIS VOW REVENGE

Threat In Name Of German Army Made Over Bier Of Latest Victim

French Fear Retaliation May Go Far Beyond Execution Of Hostages

SEP 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Sept. 22—The slaying of a German captain—latest victim in a series of outbreaks in Paris—intensified fears tonight that the German army might step far beyond the retaliatory execution of hostages to avenge and stamp out the repeated attacks.

The Paris press revealed today that the officer, Captain Scheben, was shot last Tuesday. Over his bier, at services yesterday in fashionable Madeleine Church in the heart of the old French capital, a vow was delivered in the name of the German army to "employ every means that these attacks . . . shall not go unpunished."

[Authoritative sources at Bern reported that some elements in Vichy feared all France might be occupied by the Germans if shootings and sabotage continued in the present occupied zone.]

Petain In New Plea

Marshal Petain, who appealed by radio yesterday for all Frenchmen to help him avert new dangers to France by preventing the attacks which he attributed to foreign agents, followed up with a new appeal today in Savoy, French territory desired by Italy.

He urged Frenchmen to "close ranks" around him to save French unity. France, he declared, has taken a licking "which has exceeded the due punishments for our errors."

Vichy Represented

Through Fernand de Brinon, French envoy in Paris, the Vichy Government was represented at the funeral of the latest German victim of the Paris shootings.

It was learned here tonight that Jean Cathelas, former French Deputy and member of the Communist party central committee, was one of four Communists sentenced to capital punishment last Saturday after trials aimed at smashing Communist activities.

Twenty-six other men and nine women were given sentences ranging from life imprisonment to a year in jail. Six men and six women were acquitted.

German Captain Slain in Paris

SEP 23 1941

Vow to Avenge Attacks on Nazi Army Made at Funeral Stressed as Official.

Vichy, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—A vow in the name of the German Army delivered at the bier of a captain killed by terrorists in Paris to "employ every means that these attacks, which cause indignation in all honorable men, shall not go unpunished," was disclosed today in the Paris press.

The fact that the slain officer, a Capt. Scheben, was given an official funeral yesterday at the Madeleine Church in the center of the occupied capital, indicated that the Germans attached considerable importance to the attack.

Death Belatedly Disclosed.

The press account of the funeral, disclosing that the captain was shot last Tuesday, was the first disclosure that a commissioned officer had been killed in disorders about that time.

It had been known that a non-commissioned officer was fatally shot Monday night and it was previously assumed that it was for the death of the non-commissioned man that the Germans shot twelve hostages in Paris last Saturday.

The shooting of the captain was the latest in a series of attacks against occupying forces.

Otto Abetz and Fernand de Brinon, German and French envoys at Paris, respectively, were represented at the services.

A blunt threat to use German guns and troops swiftly and forcefully against any organized attempt at revolution hung ominously over occupied France today. This fateful word came from authorized Paris sources just after Chief of State Marshal Petain broadcast an appeal to Frenchmen to stop making attacks on Germans in order to save all conquered France from Nazi reprisals.

Already thirty-five persons have died in reprisals before Nazi firing squads. The Paris sources said this would "be a mere drop in the bucket" compared to what may be in store unless the outbreaks of sabotage and terrorism cease.

Garrisons Not Reduced.

There still are enough German soldiers to keep the peace in occupied France, these informants said, "even if the French do not want to keep it themselves." By way of emphasis, they added that the occupation forces had not been reduced despite the demands of the Russian-German war.

"In the occupied zone there are three groups," said one source from Paris. "One is French, the second is German and the third is communist. A small group of communists is leading Frenchmen to murder, shoot in the back and kill like dogs simple German soldiers who officially are only on duty."

Should German troops leave Paris, these sources said, an immediate revolt might be expected, with Frenchman against Frenchman and "blood running in the gutters."

In his plea, Marshal Petain told his people the attacks on German Army men "are criminal—they may lead to new troubles."

"They must be blamed on foreign agents," he went on, "because it is not in French tradition to attack soldiers in the dark while they are doing their duty. Your Government formally disapproves."

He said his regime was binding every effort to find the guilty and urged particularly that residents of the occupied area help save French unity by keeping the peace.

The importance attached to his words here was emphasied by rebroadcasts from records within an hour after he spoke.

Occupation Fear Reported

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Sept. 22—Authoritative sources declared here today that some elements in Vichy fear that all France may be occupied if shootings and sabotage attributed to Communist elements continue in the German-occupied zone.

Marshal Petain's appeal yesterday against saboteurs in the occupied area, these sources said, was important primarily as an appeal for French unity against the danger of grave new difficulties with the German army.

View Of Petain's Purpose

Petain, it was believed, hoped to put himself forward as a symbol of unity in order to keep France in her present status until the war is decided.

"The appeal of Petain showed the gravity of the situation created by terrorists in Paris," observed the newspaper Tribune de Lausanne. "Petain was seeking a way of life compatible with the occupation authorities . . . to safeguard the unity of the nation."

Travelers returning from Vichy report a sharp change in opinion in both the occupied and unoccupied regions of France and attribute it chiefly to a belief that the war trend may change and hostilities be prolonged by the Russian campaign and the United States' position.

NAZIS TO BANISH JEWS FAILING TO WEAR STAR

Prison Camp to Be Punishment Even for Children's Laxity

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (AP)—Thirty-five provisions on the required wearing of the Star of David by Jews have been communicated to the Jewish Central Council to clear up uncertainties as to when and how the star, first required last Friday, must be displayed.

The Jews were informed it must be worn where it may be seen every moment a Jew is outside his own home. It is not sufficient to have a star affixed to a coat or topcoat. If a Jew steps into his yard in his shirtsleeves, he must have a star on his shirt.

If a Gentile rings his doorbell, the Jew must wear the star when he opens the door. Jews who hide the star by covering it with a briefcase or shopping bag in the streets may be sent to concentration camps.

[Usually reliable sources said a sentence to a concentration camp was the standard punishment for violation of these regulations, The United Press reported. Parents and guardians were said to be liable to punishment for violations by children.]

Jews are barred from railway waiting rooms or station restaurants unless they have written permission to leave the city and have purchased tickets. Jews without written permission may not use taxicabs, hospital cars or first-aid trucks.

Vichy, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Pierre Boisson, French Governor of Dakar, told the press today that the West African naval base had been re-enforced for "the big role" France's colonies may be summoned to play in the near future.

CHURCHILLS FETE FIVE BOY FUGITIVES

Entertain Lads Who Fled France By Crossing Channel In Canoes

Escaped To Avoid Being Forced To Work For Nazis, Refugees Say

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 22—Five French youths who escaped from France last week by crossing the English Channel in two canoes drank champagne today with Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill at No. 10 Downing street.

Churchill raised his glass to them with the toast, "Vive la France."

The boys, all just under 20, landed at Eastbourne from their thirty-hour battle against an unfavorable tide. They will go to Gen. Charles de Gaulle's training college preparatory to entering the Free French forces.

Fled To Avoid Nazis

While his companions stood around the expedition's navigator told the Prime Minister how they had fled to avoid being requisitioned to work for the Germans.

"Once before," he said, "they (the Germans) made schoolboys carry sand for the sheer pleasure of annoying us and not for any practical purpose.

"So we repaired two Canadian canoes and waited for favorable weather. When our chance came we stole food coupons from a shop and gave them back in exchange for twenty pounds of bread."

Stored Supplies

They also stored thirty pints of water in gasoline cans and bottles and got seventy-five army biscuits for the voyage.

They shoved off at midnight, three in one canoe, two in the other, each craft provided with a compass.

"We could not tell our parents beforehand that we were going," the spokesman said. "We just left notes to say we had gone to England."

When the sea got rough they kept in touch with each other by tying their canoes together, he related. They paddled most of the way, using sails at night.

"We saw E-boats (small German war craft) and a German plane," the leader told the Churchills, "but they didn't spot us."

None of the boys had ever sailed more than two miles from the coast before, they said.

GREEK MONARCH REACHES LONDON

George and Entourage Came From South Africa.

London, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—King George II of Greece arrived in London from South Africa today and was greeted at Euston Station by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England, Prime Minister Churchill, Foreign Secretary Eden and other Cabinet Ministers. The Duke and Duchess of Kent were in the reception party.

The Greek monarch arrived earlier at a northern port.

Driven by the Germans first from Athens and then from his last foothold for resistance on the island of Crete, the King had been in Capetown for several weeks.

He arrived with Crown Prince Paul and other members of the Greek Government five months to a day from the time he left his country.

The party of forty persons included Princess Alexandra and her mother, Princess Astasia, the King's sister-in-law; Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos, Kriakos Varvaressos, Minister of Finance and National Economy; Aristides Dimitratos, Minister of Labor; Acting Gov. Mantzainos of the Bank of Greece and naval and military attaches.

Premier Tsouderos declared that the Greeks intend to carry on the struggle at the side of the British.

London, Sept. 22 (AP)—An unsuccessful attempt to escape from the Isle of Man camp, where some 600 alleged Nazi and Fascist sympathizers are interned, landed three men in jail today facing charges of stealing a boat.

The decision of authorities to hold the men on civil charges instead of returning them to the Isle of Man resulted in a demonstration at the camp during which the internes pelted their guards with rocks.

Osbert Peake, Under Secretary for Home Affairs, who visited the camp last evening, was greeted with cries of "he's a Jew" and "we're British behind bars" when he attempted to address the prisoners, the press association said.

Stones also were thrown at Peake, but none hit him, the association reported.

TAYLOR LEAVES ROME FOR U. S.

Envoy to Vatican Has Letter From Pope to President.

Vatican City, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican, left Rome today en route to the United States.

He had a farewell audience with Pope Pius XII yesterday at which, informed sources said, the pontiff gav ehim a letter to be delivered to the President.

The letter was in answer to a message which Mr. Taylor brought from the President, these sources declared, and they expressed belief the exchange consisted mainly of expressions of friendship and respect and of desire for collaboration in attaining one another's aims and the end of the war.

Mr. Taylor, accompanied by his wife, took a morning plane for Lisbon. During his twelve-day stay here he had had three long audiences with the Pope—the last about fifty minutes—and several conferences with Vatican diplomats.

It was announced that the Taylors had given the Pope the villa in Florence where they had lived off and on for fifteen years, and that the pontiff had assigned it at their request to the Rosary College of River Forest, Ill., for an art school.

The Taylors will retain a small adjacent villa for their own use.

Gen. Hunter Resigns; Another Likely; Internal Disputes Hinted

LONDON, Sept. 22 (AP).—Major-General Sir Alan Hunter has given up his post as Director of Prisoners of War, it was announced today, and the resignation of Lieutenant General Sir Oswald C. Borrett, Inspector of Prisoners, was forecast.

"The Daily Mail" said a member of the Prisoners of War Department asserted there had been some internal trouble in the department which "was not a matter to be ventilated" at the moment. A War Office spokesman merely said there had been certain changes in the department but declined to give the reason.

British Journalists Ask Four Reforms

Access To Churchill, Uniform Censorship, End Of BBC Early News Broadcast Requested

London, Sept. 22 (AP)—The British Government today was asked by the Institute of Journalists to make a four-point reform in the handling of news.

SEP 23 1941

The points were:

That the Ministry of Information be vested with the authority to make decisions free from the "paralyzing control" of the armed services.

Uniform censorship.

Access to see Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Elimination of the "early news" broadcast of the BBC. President W. R. Willis asserted that the Government discriminated between the BBC—a competing organization under Governmental control—and the newspapers in issuing official news.

ARMS PLANT BLASTS

One Killed in Accident in England.

London, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—One person was killed and three others were slightly injured today in an accidental explosion at a Royal Ordnance factory in northwest England.

The Ministry of Supply said material damage was slight and production will not be affected.

The Press Association also reported another explosion which caused a large fire in a factory in Middlesex, but the large staff there escaped without injury.

The blast in the northwest was said to have shaken many buildings in the area and sent debris flying for considerable distances.

Rebuke

London, Sept. 22 (AP)—Cat, monthly publication of the Cats Protective League, chided Prime Minister Churchill today for fondling a cat during the Atlantic meeting with President Roosevelt.

Referring to pictures of the Prime Minister patting the cat on the head, Cat said cats abhor head patting and added:

"He should have conformed to the etiquette demanded by the occasion, offering his hand and then awaiting a sign of approval before taking liberties."

Believe Militarists in Control.

Honolulu, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Japan is on the fence in the Anglo-Russian-Axis struggle and which way she finally turns depends on development on the Soviet-German front, in the opinion of well informed persons arriving from Shanghai.

Requesting anonymity because they wish eventually to return to the Orient, these persons declared that militarists still are firmly in the saddle in Tokio despite Emperor Hirohito's assuming control of the army. Army leaders are unwilling to surrender control of the nation's policy despite the danger of war with Russia and Great Britain, they said.

Living conditions in Tokio were described as the worst in decades and rapidly becoming unbearable for Americans. Sometimes fresh vegetables cannot be obtained for days at a time because, due to price fixing, growers can get the same prices in nearby villages as in Tokio despite the greater cost of transportation to Tokio.

Spy Scare Terrible.

The spy scare in Japan was proclaimed as terrible. Secret police watch the movements of all Americans and all who succeed in leaving the country count themselves very lucky.

Japan does not consider she has backed down in permitting American oil tankers to pass through Japanese waters to Vladivostok, they said. She has merely allowed it as a temporary expedient.

The average Japanese believes in the traditional invincibility of the Emperor and in Japan's ultimate victory regardless of what foe or combination of foes she faces.

The informants arrived here yesterday aboard the liner President Cleveland. There had been no advance notice of the ship's arrival and visitors were not permitted aboard the vessel.

Japs Rush Troops To Manchukuo, Siberia Threat

German Victories in Russia May Bring Tokio Thrust

SHANGHAI, Tuesday, Sept. 23 (AP)—Japan is rushing masses of additional troops to Manchukuo as a result of mounting confidence in Tokio over German victories against the Red Army, foreign military observers reported today.

The Japanese troop movements started the past week just as Germany was making considerable headway, leading some quarters to believe the time may be ripening for a Japanese thrust against Siberia.

Reports of new border clashes between the Japanese and Russians persisted here, but a Japanese Army spokesman said he hadn't heard about them. However, he added ominously:

"Regarding the future, I can not make predictions."

It is known that the Japanese regard the Hailar and Manchuli districts as potential trouble spots, the latter especially, because large forces are concentrated within pistol shot of each other on botth sides of the border.

The movement of the additional troops into Manchukuo was regarded here as indicating a change in Japanese policy since only a month ago Japanese military authorities announced reinforcement of that territory had been completed.

Move Against Siberia?

SEP [illegible] 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Sept. 22—At least a million Japanese troops have been sent to Manchoukuo and Korea in recent weeks, unusually reliable sources here said today.

Since late June events within Japan have pointed unmistakably toward a move against Siberia in event Germany should be successful in her struggle with Russia, these sources said.

Persons familiar with internal affairs in Japan said they considered it highly significant that virtually all horses in Japan have been shipped to Manchoukuo. They interpreted this as indicating that the army meant to be ready for operations in good weather or bad.

No Scarcity Of Equipment

There is no scarcity of mechanized equipment in Japan, informants here said. The Japanese have concentrated their full energies in building up their machinery of war in the past two or three years.

Most of the nation's mechanized forces now are in Manchoukuo, where the terrain is favorable for machine warfare.

The Japanese, Manila sources explained, are convinced that the Russians must be driven from Vladivostok before they can hope to successfully continue their push southward—into Thailand, Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies. They feel, these observers believe, that any move southward now would precipitate a military clash with Great Britain and that the Russians would spring to the assistance of their allies with aerial attacks not only against Japan's fleet but her homeland itself.

SEP [illegible] 1941

TOKYO, Sept. 22 (AP)—Japan, under economic pressure by the United States and Britain, tightened her belt another notch today with drastic reductions of steel and iron goods production and looked anew to diplomatic discussions in Washington to produce a possible key to accord.

Developments on the German-Russian warfront also were being studied closely for signs of further weakening of Soviet resistance, which some Japanese said might speed the day of world peace.

The Ministry of Trade and Industries listed 150 iron and steel articles to be added tomorrow to those already dropped from manufacture to conserve supplies. Safety razor blades, bracelets, ball bearings, bath tubs, cuspidors and temple bells were on the oddly assorted list.

Newspapers decided to consolidate their circulation systems to conserve material, labor and transport facilities.

The Japanese press reported more than eighty meat dealers had been arrested on Health Department charges of selling dog meat as beef or pork to sausage markets. The newspapers named some of the best of the foreign style hotels and dining rooms in Tokyo and Yokohama among restaurants that had purchased the meat unknowingly.

The Japan Chronicle of Kobe, English language publication under Foreign Office control, said there was reason to hope that "even at this late hour a satisfactory agreement may be reached" between Japan and the United States.

It added that both parties to discussions of an agreement should recognize that America, Britain and Japan were rivals in the Pacific.

If Britain and the United States were determined on hegemony in the western Pacific, then this rivalry would mean relentless antagonism, the newspaper said, and added:

"But it so happens that both the United States and Britain have for some time declared they do not desire hegemony but seek only to protect Far Eastern interests."

Thailand "Menaced"

Domei News Agency quoted the Tokyo newspaper Yomiuri as reporting, however, that British plans for strengthening the encirclement of Japan seemed unchanged. The newspaper was quoted as saying that the British line of defense linking Malaya, Burma and Hongkong was nearing completion and that newly established air bases, "packed with United States-made planes," increased the threat to Thailand.

Domei quoted Dr. Tomio Nakano, professor at Waseda University and newspaper political commentator, as saying in an article in Yomiuri that the fate of the Soviet-German war already is decided. This also means the war between Britain and Germany will be brought to an end soon."

British and United States aid to Russia was described in the article as "like transferring blood to a dying elephant."

(Observers in Shanghai predicted German successes against Russia might prompt Japan to modify her recent efforts for rapprochement with the United States.

(French sources at Shanghai reported, however, that Kaname Wakasugi, aboard ship on the Pacific en route to his post as Japanese Minister to Washington, was bringing a second message from Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye to President Roosevelt. The message reportedly contained counter proposals to what was said to have been a reply by the President to Konoye's first communication.

(These sources said Roosevelt suggested a status quo agreement under which neither Japan nor the United States would resort to war, Japan would avoid any threatening move against Singapore or the Philippines and the United States would take no further economic measures against Japan.)

Japanese Paper Reports Hope for U.S. Agreement

Says Negotiations May Succeed 'Even at This Late Hour'

TOKIO, Sept. 22 (AP).—"The Japan Chronicle," of Kobe, an English-language publication under Foreign Office control, said today there was reason to hope that "even at this late hour a satisfactory agreement may be reached" between Japan and the United States as a result of conversations in Washington.

If Britain and America are determined on hegemony in the Western Pacific then this rivalry would mean relentless antagonism, the Chronicle said.

"But it so happens," it added, "that both the United States and Britain have for some time declared they do not desire hegemony but only seek to protect Far Eastern interests."

Second Konoye Message.

Shanghai, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—A second personal message was reported en route today from Premier Prince Konoye of Japan to President Roosevelt.

[At Washington Secretary Hull today said he had no information on a second letter from Premier Prince Konoye.

It was said in French circles here that the message contained counter-proposals by the Premier to proposals made by President Roosevelt in answer to Konoye's first personal message delivered August 28. These French informants said that the Konoye message was intrusted to Kaname Wakasugi, Japanese Minister at Washington, who left Japan September 15 to return to his post.

Japanese in Tokio said they had no confirmation of the report of the second letter, but semi-official Japanese in Shanghai gave it credence.

Manila Blacked Out In Defense Practice

Other Cities In Philippines Dark For Hour In Drill Army Calls Completely Successful

Manila, Tuesday, Sept. 23 (AP)—The entire island of Luzon, as well as cities elsewhere in the archipelago were blacked out for an hour last night in the most comprehensive civilian defense drill held in the Philippines.

The blackout was pronounced by army authorities as completely successful.

Manila was completely darkened and wardens even succeeded in preventing smoking on the streets.

U. S. PLANTS TO GET MINERALS OF INDIA

Manganese and Mica Are Needed for Defense Uses.

Bombay, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Henry F. Grady, President Roosevelt's special economic representative in the Far East, said today that he had completed negotiations for Indian manganese and mica for the United States defense program.

Mr. Grady, former Assistant Secretary of State, said in an interview that he would visit Colombo, Ceylon, next in an effort to obtain quantities of graphite, and then would go to Burma to study the possibility of better use of the Burma Road to China.

From Burma he expects to go to Chungking for talks with the Chinese Finance Minister and to obtain larger quantities of vegetable oils for the United States.

He said that his job is to intensify economic defense along the anti-Axis front in southeast Asia formed by the United States, Britain, China and the Netherlands Indies.

The United States, Mr. Grady said, proposes to give financial help to certain Eastern countries in the form of purchase contracts and, in the case of China and the Philippines, advances against such contracts.

ARMY LIEUTENANT SLAIN IN HONOLULU

New Yorker Shot To Death During Argument With Customs Guard

Witnesses Differ As To Whether He Was Hit From Front Or Back

SEP 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, Sept. 22—An argument with a customs agent over inspection of a package ended in death today for Second Lieut. Martin R. Connelly, 26, Army Air Corps officer of Syracuse, N. Y., who had just arrived from Manila on the steamship President Cleveland en route to San Francisco.

Connelly was leaving the pier with an army nurse, Miss Naomi Berman, when he was challenged by John Yeung, customs guard, who wanted to examine a package the officer was carrying. Police said Connelly replied the package, containing photographs, already had been examined. An argument resulted in the shooting.

Probes Are Launched

Yeung's superior, Ward Hiberly, collector of customs, said the guard had acted in line of duty. Investigations were started by army, customs and police authorities and no charges were filed against Yeung pending their outcome.

Detective Leon Straus quoted Yeung as saying his pistol was discharged accidentally as he removed it from its holster "to scare" the young officer. Yeung asserted he was falling back at the time under three blows struck by Connelly.

A harbor policeman said Connelly struck one blow, and several other witnesses said no blow was struck. Straus said police found no marks to indicate any assault.

Witnesses Differ

An autopsy was held today, but physicians said they still were unable to determine whether the bullet entered Connelly's back or breast. Witnesses were at variance as to whether Connelly was shot from the front or back.

Army friends said that because of great shock Connelly had in an air crash in the islands someone always was near him during the entire voyage. They described him as a sick man suffering from double vision.

U. S. ARMY OFFICER SHOT AT HONOLULU

Lieutenant From Syracuse in Customs Dispute.

SEP 23 1941

Honolulu, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Lieut. Martin R. Connelly, 26 years old, Army Air Corps officer at Syracuse, N. Y., was shot and killed during an argument with a Customs guard today at the pier where the steamship President Cleveland was docked.

The police said that Lieut. Connelly was leaving the ship, just in from Manila, with Miss Naomi Berman, an army nurse, when the guard asked to see a package he was carrying. Lieut. Connelly replied that the package already had been inspected, detectives said, and an argument ensued.

The package proved to be photographs and Lieut. Connelly was searched. The police said witnesses heard Connelly say "Go ahead and shoot," whereupon a shot was fired and the officer fell.

John Young, the Customs guard, was held without charge pending investigations by the police, the army and Customs authorities.

The President Cleveland sailed soon after the shooting, but not before the police had removed three material witnesses. They were. Miss Berman and Lieut. Walter Lippold and Lieut. William T. Kinsella of the United States Army.

Ward Hiberly, Collector of Customs, said in a preliminary statement that the guard had acted in line of duty. Customs agents were ordered about six weeks ago to carry pistols.

Argentina to Start Action Against German Envoy

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 22.—A decision to start legal proceedings against Edmund von Thermann, German Ambassador to Argentina, and two members of his Embassy staff was announced today by Raul Damonte Taborda, president of the congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities.

Although diplomats usually enjoy immunity from prosecution in the countries to which they are accredited, the Argentine Constitution places them under the Supreme Court's jurisdiction in exceptional cases. Close observers thought legal action would be confined to declaring Von Thermann persona non grata in Argentina, thus requiring his removal.

Damonte Taborda, whose committee resembles the American Dies committee told journalists the action against Von Thermann and two Embassy councillors, Erich Otto Meynen and Prince Stephan Schaumburg-Lippe, would be based on their recent utterances.

Damonte Taborda added that he considered the campaign which the Reich's press was waging against Argentina "an aggression against our sovereignty." He said he saw in Von Thermann's words an intention to continue interfering in Argentine affairs.

Uruguay Reported Planning Base for U. S. Planes' Use

By the Associated Press.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 22.—Early construction of a base for landplanes and seaplanes which would have full command of the vital Rio de la Plata mouth and be available for United States use in event of war is reported planned by Uruguay.

The base, informed sources said, would include a strip of land facing the Atlantic, which would be used by landplanes, and Laguna Negra, for seaplanes and flying boats.

Part of the cost, these sources said, would be met from the $17,500,000 obtained recently from the United States for national defense, half of which was an outright gift and the remainder a loan.

President Alfredo Baldomir at present is at Fortress Santa Teresa, which would be included in the base area. From here he is reported making inspection trips over the site.

Canada Building Airports For Joint Use With U. S.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—A chain of modern airdromes is taking shape in the wilderness of the Canadian Northwest for the joint use of United States and Canadian planes in event of a Pacific Coast attack.

Air Vice Marshal C. O. Johnson, deputy chief of the Canadian Air Staff, said in a broadcast address last night that the work of building and equipping the airdromes was "well in hand."

"By reason of close co-operation with the United States for the defense of this hemisphere against attack," he said, "steps are in progress for joint action in the event of an attack on Alaska or the Pacific Coast.

"A chain of what we call staging airdromes are now under construction in the Northwest so that fighter squadrons both from the United States and from Canadian bases may be moved to Northern British Columbia or to Alaska from the center of the continent without delay."

The Texts of the Day's Communiques on the War

SEP 23 1941

German

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (AP)—The German High Command communiqué from "the Fuehrer's Headquarters" said today:

In the region east of Kiev, German forces are continuing the destruction of enemy troops, which are dispersed into several groups and concentrated into very small areas.

Figures of prisoners and booty announced yesterday by special announcement already have been considerably increased. In addition, heavy and bloody casualties have been inflicted on the enemy in his desperate attempt to break out.

As was also reported by special announcement, Arensburg, capital of Oesel, was taken in a decisive attack. Clearing up of remains of the enemy garrison, still in process, is imminent.

Yesterday there were a number of successful attacks by the Luftwaffe on Soviet shipping.

In the Black Sea, a cruiser, two destroyers, an anti-aircraft ship and nine merchant ships aggregating 25,000 tons were sunk.

In the waters of Kronstadt the battleship Oktiabrskaya Revolutia [October Revolution] and the heavy cruiser Kirov each received two direct hits and another cruiser four hits. In addition, three destroyers, a minesweeper and gunboat were damaged by direct hits.

As has been announced by a special communiqué, submarines in the Atlantic attacked two enemy convoys and one merchant ship traveling alone. In a hard fight they sank thirteen heavily laden ships, including four tankers, totaling 82,500 tons. Another ship was damaged by a torpedo hit. [The special communiqué said also that "three escorting vessels evaded the attack, leaving the convoy to its fate."]

German aircraft sank a tanker of 6,000 tons about 1,600 kilometers [994 miles] west of La Rochelle [Western France] by daylight yesterday and attacked important war plants on the British southeast coast with good effect last night.

In the Channel area, German fighters in repelling British attacks by daylight yesterday shot down twenty-nine British airplanes in violent air combats, losing only one of their own. Anti-aircraft guns and patrol boats shot down two additional British planes.

In North Africa the airdrome of Fuka was bombed with good effect.

There were no enemy activities over Reich territory either by day or by night.

Enemy propaganda has attempted to arouse confusion by connecting losses of planes with the number of dead, wounded and missing members of the German air force as reported in the German High Command communiqué of Sept. 19.

The German air force, it must be established, does not consist of flier units only but also of air intelligence and anti-aircraft units.

A part of the latter is also engaged in ground fighting to take part in the fighting against enemy tanks and in attacks at enemy pillboxes in the foremost infantry line. Their losses are included in the total figure of the Luftwaffe's losses.

Russian

MOSCOW, Sept. 22 (AP)—The morning communiqué of the Soviet Bureau of Information said today:

During the night of Sept. 21 our troops fought the enemy along the entire front.

In two days groups of the Black Sea fleet bombers destroyed nine enemy tanks, thirty lorries, four anti-aircraft guns, several aircraft at their airdromes and annihilated three infantry companies.

On Sept. 20, on one western sector of the front, our fliers destroyed fifteen German tanks, ninety lorries, eleven anti-aircraft guns and brought down one enemy aircraft. In a southwestern sector of the front Colonel Yukhanoff's air unit, in difficult weather conditions, dealt a blow at a German tank column. Despite poor visibility, powerful explosions and conflagrations back of the enemy lines were seen at a distance of many kilometers.

Since the beginning of the war airmen of a unit commanded by Hero of the Soviet Union Boris Safonoff have brought down in air combats 132 Fascist aircraft and destroyed twenty-five at their airdromes. Safonoff himself brought down fourteen planes; Kovalenko seven; Semenko, Polovikoff and Sorokin, five each; Cokrovsky, Maximovich and Razdobudko, four each; Tumanoff, Takovenko and Rodin, three each. In engagements with Safonoff's unit the Germans lost over 300 pilots, navigators and rear gunners. Since the outbreak of the war Safonoff's unit lost twenty-nine planes in air battles and on the ground.

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau early today issued the following communiqué:

On Sept. 22 our troops fought the enemy along the entire front. One hundred German planes were destroyed on Sept. 20, including twenty-eight brought down in air combats and twenty-seven destroyed on airdromes. We lost twenty-one aircraft.

In the course of stubborn fighting in one sector in a western direction of the front, which lasted five days, our troops annihilated nearly two battalions of the 123d German Infantry Division, two battalions of the 451st Infantry Regiment and the 251st German Infantry Division, and nearly two battalions of the 102d German Infantry Division.

We captured seven guns, thirteen mine-throwers, eight machine guns, twenty-four submachine guns and automatics, many rifles, more than 1,800 shells and several score bicycles.

In one of the sectors of the western front our troops killed 400 German men and officers, destroyed eight tanks, four armored cars, twenty-five trucks, nine motor cycles and five machine guns. Two enemy aircraft were brought down in air combats.

A battalion of a unit commanded by Colonel Safronoff operating in the southern front in two days' fighting inflicted heavy losses on the Fourth Rumanian Mountain Infantry Brigade. The Rumanians lost 600 men and officers killed. The trophies include forty-two machine guns, 275 automatics and a large quantity of ammunition.

LONDON, Sept. 22 (AP)—An Admiralty communiqué today said:

On Thursday, Sept. 18, submarines of the Mediterranean Fleet on patrol in the Central Mediterranean successfully attacked a fast and heavily escorted Italian convoy carrying reinforcements to Libya.

The convoy consisted of three liners. Two have been destroyed. It is probable that the third was damaged. One of the liners in this convoy was similar to the Vulcania, of 24,469 tons. The other two were approximately the same tonnage.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 22 (AP)—A Royal Air Force Middle East communiqué today said:

A series of successful attacks were made on enemy shipping in the region of Tripoli recently. In one of these, carried out by bombers of the R. A. F., one large schooner received several direct hits and the crew immediately abandoned the ship, which was left a mass of flames.

Another schooner, after being hit, blew up with such terrific force that one of our aircraft making the attack was destroyed by the blast.

On Sept. 20, one heavily laden merchant ship off Kerkenna [islands off Tunisia] was heavily bombed, set on fire and left sinking. An enemy destroyer just off Tripoli was successfully attacked.

Bengazi was raided on the night of Sept. 20-21 by heavy bombers of the R. A. F., several hits being scored on the central and other moles.

From these operations two of our aircraft are missing.

The Middle East communiqué issued by British General Headquarters today said:

Libya—Both at Tobruk and in the frontier area our patrols have been active.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 22 (AP)—A special Italian High Command communiqué today said:

Assault units of the Italian marine entered the bay and inner port of Gibraltar, sank one tanker of 10,000 tons, another of 600 tons and one steamer of 6,000 tons, loaded with munitions, and seriously hit a steamer of 12,000 tons loaded with war material. This steamer hit against rocks, where it was stranded and therefore can be considered lost.

The regular communiqué follows:

In North Africa there was no outstanding activity on the land fronts.

Axis planes bombed important objectives at the fortress of Tobruk and motor vehicles in the Jarabub zone. At Bengazi during a new enemy raid anti-aircraft defenses shot down one plane.

In East Africa, in the Uolchefit zone, there was effective firing of our artillery against enemy concentrations of motor vehicles.

Hungarian

ROME, Sept. 22 (Reuter)—The Hungarian General Staff tonight issued a communiqué saying:

Soviet forces that escaped encirclement east of the Dnieper are being pursued toward the east. Their rear guards are attempting to counter-attack, but liaison between the different units seems to have been broken and resistance is weakening.

This suggests that the Soviet command has renounced its efforts to continue fighting between the Dnieper and the Donets and is concentrating on organizing its retreating forces behind the latter river. Field works and fortifications still in being have been abandoned.

KnoxSaysNavy Air Program Is 'On Schedule'

By the Associated Press

East Hartford, Conn., Sept. 22.—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, here for an address to 12,000 aircraft workers, disclosed in an interview today that the Navy's air program was on schedule and that, "Thanks to Pratt & Whitney and one or two other organizations, is getting plenty of engines."

Planes are being delivered "in very significant numbers each month and they are the best in the world in each category," Knox told newsmen.

In an address at the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Co., holders of large orders for Army and Navy airplane motors, Knox said that the national defense motto should be "Step on the Gas," adding that "if we are to keep our sacrifice at its low limit, it will be because of men like you."

"Freedom fights for survival. This is the last great stronghold."

He declared that America was the "only nation in the world with the resources capacity and moral courage to withstand aggression, but we must 'step on the gas' if we are going to make that good."

"We must let no time be wasted if we are going to keep this evil thing from our shores," the Secretary said in an address marking the first presentation of the new United Aircraft Efficiency Trophy named in his honor and to be awarded monthly to the Pratt & Whitney aircraft department with the best gain in production from its previous six-month average.

"I am told the company started in a tobacco warehouse," Secretary Knox said. "You have certainly been smoking along on your way since then."

BRITISH SHIPS IN U. S.

Twelve Additional Names Released by Navy.

Washington, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—The Navy Department announced today that twelve British war vessels, including three battleships, had been in United States ports, in addition to twelve whose visits to American ports were disclosed last week. All the vessels, the announcement added, had departed.

The ships and their ports of call were the battleship Resolution, Philadelphia; the battleship Malaya, Brooklyn, and the battleship Rodney, Boston; the auxiliary Canton, Brooklyn; the auxiliary Southern Prince, Baltimore; the auxiliary Montclare, Boston; the auxiliary Bulolo, Baltimore; the auxiliary Alaunia, Boston, the corvettes Tulip and Clarkia, Charleston; the destroyer Richmond, Boston, and the armed merchant cruiser Aurania, Newport News.

50 British Tankmen At Fort Knox For Study

Washington, Sept. 22 (AP)—The War Department announced today that fifty members of Britain's Royal Armored Corps had arrived at Fort Knox, Kentucky, armored force center, to study operation of American tanks.

Eight are captains, the department said, and the remainder are non-commissioned officers. The group will return to England as instructors in American tank operations upon completion of their work at Fort Knox.

More than 500 American tanks have been delivered to Britain's forces, chiefly those in the Near East, and the work of the instructors apparently will be to teach members of Britain's growing armored corps how to run the American vehicles.

Senators See Nazis' Future Depending on Decision in Russia

Continued War or Peace Within Six Months Said Now to Be in Balance

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Two Senators in close touch with the international situation said today that the outcome of the present all-out drive for a decision in Russia would decide whether the Nazis would have to sue for peace within six months or whether they would be in a position to wage a long war.

Both legislators are high ranking members of the Foreign Relations committee, but neither one would authorize the publication of his name in connection with the forecast.

Turning Point at Hand

One said he had been advised that State department authorities believe the present German thrusts would mark the turning point of the war.

The other said his information was that the Germans were striving to cut the Red army to pieces before winter sets in. If they failed, he added, they probably would have to abandon the Russian campaign and attempt to arrange a peace with the Soviet and Great Britain.

This senator declared that Germany was staking everything on her current drive and "is throwing away men like paper dolls" in order to achieve her objectives along the 1,800-mile fighting front.

From Senator Pepper (D-Fla), another member of the Foreign Relations committee, came a statement that the outcome of Russia's battle against Germany probably would determine whether this country would become an all-out participant in the war.

SEP 23 1941

"Russia's fight now is our fight," Pepper said in an interview. "For every stand she makes, for every tank she blasts, for every plane she shoots down, we should be grateful. And we should render her all possible assistance."

Administration opponents, however, evidenced some concern about the question of Russian aid—particularly if the aid was to be financed by any of the funds provided for in the pending $5,958,000,000 Lease-Lend appropriation which President Roosevelt requested from Congress last week.

Senator Clark (D-Idaho), one of the foreign policy critics, announced yesterday that he and like-minded legislators, would endeavor to write into the appropriation a prohibition against using any of the money to help Russia.

Senator George (D-Ga), however, said that this prohibition would be a fatal mistake and Senator Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky) forecast the defeat of such an amendment, which he termed unwise.

SAYS GERMANY IS FACING LONG WAR WITH REDS

Commerce Department Notes "Deep-Rooted Antipathy" of Russians to Nazis

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (AP)—The Commerce Department expressed the opinion today that "a war of attrition of indefinite duration probably awaits Germany in its eastern campaign, even should the Reich's armed forces occupy all of the Ukraine, or all of European Russia."

Gives Its Reasons

In a statement the department said this opinion was based on the "deep-rooted antipathy of the Russians to foreign overlordship in general, and to Nazi methods of conquest in particular."

Destruction of crops and industrial facilities probably would prevent Germany from obtaining foodstuffs, oil, minerals or other useful products in substantial quantity for a year or two after conquering the territory, it added.

Farmers in the Ukraine particularly are unlikely to co-operate with the Germans, the department said, adding that traditional resistance to foreign control is so strong that it took the present Soviet government 10 years to get "any degree of co-operation from the Ukrainians."

Senator Nye Accuses Willkie Of Dragging In Jewish Issue

SEP 23 1941

Isolationist, Charging Red Herring Tactics, Terms It "Meanest, Ratlike Thing" In American Politics

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 22—Senator Gerald P. Nye (Rep., N. D.) tonight accused Wendell L. Willkie and interventionists of dragging into this war controversy that cheap, wholly un-American issue called anti-Semitism.

Speaking before an American First Committee rally in Brooklyn, guarded by 423 policemen, the isolationist Senator said "this attempt to paint the cause of non-intervention as an anti-Semitic cause has been about the meanest, smallest, ratlike thing that I have ever experienced in my contact with American politics."

"No one has contributed to the dragging of this red herring into this controversy so largely as has one Wendell Willkie—the 'me too' man of the 1940 Presidential campaign—the man who helped arrange things so that there could be no chance in that Presidential campaign for the American people to voice themselves clearly and openly in this issue of intervention.

"Mr. Willkie has done his utmost to smear the cause of non-intervention with this anti-Semitic stick.

"Racial prejudice has brought to Europe consequences we cannot escape seeing. If we are going to adopt racial prejudice in our American thinking and planning we only contribute to the bringing of that experience, which has befallen others, to our own country.

"The interventionists are doing the gravest kind of injustice to their country and especially to those of the Jewish faith when they persist in dragging this red herring into the controversy, first, with a view to blinding people to the real issues and challenges confronting us today, and second, with a view to dividing and breaking up the non-intervention front."

Nye said he knew by reason of close and intimate contact that "there is not a shred of anti-Semitic spirit in the mind and heart of Charles A. Lindbergh or of Senator Burton K Wheeler."

"As for myself," Nye added, "no one can better testify to a record contrary to anti-Semitism better than the Jewish constituents in my own State. The record is mighty clear and plain.

"I don't know what time will do to those who will resort to this sort of prejudice. I hope that awakening and discovery can be immediate.

Denies Such Attitude

"In the meanwhile, let no non-interventionist, let no America firster-er be misled or deceived by the Wendell Willkies into believing that they are associated with anything so completely un-American as is anti-Semitism."

An overflow crowd estimated by police at 3,200 attended the rally, held in the Academy of Music.

The meeting was orderly and police reported no incidents outside the building.

Former Magistrate Joseph Goldstein, who said earlier in the day that he would arrest Senator Nye if he indorsed anti-Semitic sentiments, sat in the audience flanked by detectives and took no part in the proceedings.

Threatened Action

Goldstein, who had declared he would act under summary-arrest right, said such remarks by the Senator would be "inciting to riot."

The meeting adopted a resolution condemning the President's "shoot on sight" orders to warships and protesting against convoys and aid to Russia.

Another speaker, the Rev. James M. Gillis, editor of The Catholic World, said, "Defense now means offense."

"What purports to be protection of our own shores means the propping up of a world-wide empire threatened with collapse," he declared. "And you shall presently see that the President's promise of 'No second A. E. F.' means 'Once again an A. E. F.'

Recalls Roman Error

"We must not have over again the degrading spectacle of the Roman Senate that handed over all its powers to Cæsar, or the slavish Reichstag which committed suicide in the interests of der Führer. It is not too late to act in defense of America. It is never too late until we are over the edge of the abyss. But we are perilously close to the edge.

"Let no man say that we who are for America first are less loyal or less patriotic than those who follow a President who goes ahead on a course that leads to war without consultation with Congress and without consideration of the people."

Lindbergh Broadcast Off Owing To Indiana Speech

Chicago, Sept. 22 (AP)—National headquarters of the America First Committee announced today that Charles A. Lindbergh had canceled a broadcast scheduled for Saturday over the Columbia Broadcasting System from Washington in favor of a speech before a committee-sponsored rally in Fort Wayne, Ind., October 3.

"Colonel Lindbergh doesn't want to make two speeches so close together," a spokesman said. "We applied for radio time from Washington when three sites were under consideration for the address. Later it was decided that the speech would be given in Fort Wayne."

He said no arrangements had yet been made for a broadcast of the Fort Wayne speech.

Washington, Sept. 22 (AP)—Representative Fish (Rep., N. Y.) said tonight he would propose to Congress next week a resolution calling for an immediate declaration of war against Germany and predicted the House would defeat it "more than 2 to 1."

"But I think it's time for the Congress to act and there can be no unity in this country until such a vote is taken," he declared.

"The American people are opposed to an undeclared war. Congress has the responsibility and the issue should be settled. The House will vote down the resolution by more than 2 to 1."

When Hoffman concluded his speech with a statement that he was for only one flag—the Stars and Stripes—the galleries applauded.

Knudsen Urges 'Sacrifices in Our Daily Life'

Declares U. S. Must Keep Sea Open, 'Even if We Have to Do It With a Club'

SEP 23 1941

CHICAGO, Sept. 22 (UP).—Since much of the United States' critical defense material is imported, William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, said today, "We have a definite stake in keeping the sea open, even if we have to do it with a club."

He appealed to the Chicago Union League Club for all-out support of the defense program, warning that "this defense job is getting to be of such magnitude that we must be prepared to accept sacrifices in our daily life."

"We cannot have as good a time and be involved in a war, regardless of how far away the war may be at this particular time," Mr. Knudsen said.

He cited eight-hour crossings of the Atlantic as evidence that the United States cannot depend upon distance for safety.

"When we add to the fact that a substantial amount of our critical materials are imported and dependent upon shipping," he said, "we cannot consider ourselves isolationists in that particular respect anyway."

He expressed hope that the new Supply Priorities and Allocations Board may be able to allocate available material between defense and civilian needs "so as not to upset entirely the economy."

The demand for a dozen vital defense raw materials showed increases from 1939 to 1941 ranging from 33 per cent in rubber to 250 per cent in brass, he said, while requirements in 1942 would show increased demands over 1939 levels ranging from 45 per cent in rubber to 314 per cent in aluminum and 393 per cent in brass, without taking into consideration "drastic" increases still possible.

Speaking on the subject, "All Out for Defense," Mr. Knudsen relates that in his sixteen months on defense work he has seen it grow "from practically an infant to adolescent size — gangling, shambling, with too many hands and feet, but with great potentialities for the near future."

"On tanks," he said, "we have created seven sources and feel that we can cope with any demands that may come through expanded requirements. On guns we have provided for the small guns with proper facilities for all demands. This also applies to ammunition. On the larger guns the quantities are proportionately smaller and require heavier equipment, but we are on our way. On ships the initial work is done. We have provided for 165 ways for merchant ships and the launching program calls for 131 ocean-going ships to be completed in 1941 and 561 to be completed in 1942. On Navy ships, which were started earlier, we are in somewhat better shape, although it should be remembered that Navy ships have infinitely more man-hours in each unit, due to the higher technical standard of propulsion and armament. While this gives, after a fashion, the high spots of the program, you must remember that there are thousands of items involved and practically every scarce material which constantly has a tendency to increase the critical list of these materials."

U. S. TO COUNT ALL TRUCKS AND BUSES

Inventory to Be Made for Use in Emergency.

Washington, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—A defense inventory of all the nation's trucks and buses, for possible emergency use, will start on Thursday.

John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator, announced today that the canvass would be conducted by State motor vehicle registration agencies which are to send out 6,000,000 questionnaire-cards.

"The specific purpose of the inventory," Mr. Carmody said, "is to set up detailed central and regional records of all trucks, freight trailers, and buses. These facts would be possible use in emergencies in organizing highway transportation for more effective service in the assembly of defense-industry materials, delivery of military and civilian supplies, relief of dock and terminal congestion, and movement of passenger traffic."

Made at the request of the War Department and the National Defense Advisory Commission, the canvass will be under the general direction of the highway traffic advisory committee to the War Department.

The public Roads Administration and the Work Projects Administration will co-operate, the WPA giving clerical assistance in mailing cards and analyzing returns.

COLLEGE STUDENTS GET DEFERMENT

To Be Granted Delay Where Induction Would Cause Hardship

SEP 23 1941

Those Preparing For Certain Professions Are To Benefit Most

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 22—Selective service headquarters today authorized local boards to defer the induction of college students into the army when immediate induction would cause "undue hardship" because of interference with their work.

At the same time, officials reminded local boards that students preparing for occupations or professions, such as the practice of medicine or engineering, could be deferred from induction for such periods as might be necessary to permit them to complete their work and enter into their chosen professions.

Shortage Must Exist

The primary consideration in this case, however, is that there must be a shortage in the occupation for which the deferred student is preparing.

Under the new procedure, a student who had completed half a quarter of his college year, for instance, when he was called up for military service could obtain postponement from his local draft board until the end of the quarter. This same provision applies to any other fraction of a college term.

Student Given Option

However, selective service headquarters said that if a student knew in advance that he was scheduled to be inducted shortly after the school period opened then he could not expect a postponement.

It was suggested that he could either enter the army immediately by volunteering or else remain out of school until time for induction.

In any case, selective service headquarters declared, a man about to enter college should determine beforehand the time at which his induction might be expected and arrange his plans accordingly.

Defense Contractors Told by La Guardia They Must Do More

SEP 23 1941

Fate of U. S. in Hands Of Factory Owners, Odlum Says at Clinic

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Mayor La Guardia, speaking as national director of civilian defense, asserted today that American defense production is not sufficient to defeat a Nazi plan of world conquest.

Addressing the O. P. M.'s first National Defense Clinic, Mayor La Guardia told 102 holders of prime Government contracts and 1,200 subcontractors that fulfillment of the original defense program will not be enough.

"If we can not do better than that it will be disastrous," he said. "You all know that the President has asked for additional lease-lend appropriations and it is absolutely essential that the program be speeded."

The Mayor asked Army and Navy procurement officers present to relax the restrictions which he said had marked buying by the armed services.

"I appeal to the Army and Navy, who are very rigid in their habits, that htey must adjust themselves to new requirements," the Mayor said. "They must adjust their contract-leting so that they can utilize all of the Nation's facilities."

No Shop Too Small.

Mr. La Guardia said that no shop was too small to be useful in the defense efforts and predicted that sooner or later large assembly plants would be constructed to put together the product of the labors of innumerable small plants.

Earlier Floyd B. Odlum, director of the O. P. M. Contract Distribution Division, told the clinic that "to no small degree you American businessmen hold the fate of this Nation and freedom in your hands."

"It's important that the big companies which have already taken orders find the way to spread the work to the fullest extent through subcontracting," he said. "It's important to keep our democratic economic structure intact, and therefore it is highly important for big business itself."

The clinic was closed to the public, but 3,500 admission cards were sent to potential subcontractors. Representatives of more than 100 large firms were on hand to confer with spokesmen for hundreds of small machine shops and manufacturers.

Machines Being Wasted.

Also present were officials from the priorities division, the O. P. M., the labor supply branch and Army and Navy Procurement Division.

"We must harness all our productive resources," Mr. Odlum told the meeting. "Many millions of hours of usable machines are being wasted daily while at the same time orders are in the hands of the machine tool industry that will take 18 months to fill. We shouldn't wait for their completion.

"We will need them as fast as they can be turned out, but we should use what we have on hand, too. Even the less efficient has its place. An idle tool and an idle man to operate it represent wasted defense opportunity.

Pass on Simpler Work.

"Large plants equipped to do the more difficult work should pass on to the smaller plants the simpler work which they, in turn are equipped to do," Mr. Odlum said. "Thus the bottlenecks will be removed and all will be kept busy."

W. O. Crabtree, district manager of the division of contract distribution, told the clinic that its purpose was to speed defense production and bring more firms into the defense picture by three methods: (1) By encouraging subcontracting, (2) by giving qualified small manufacturers data and suggestions about direct prime contracts, and (3) by making available the fullest information about defense production to large or small businessmen.

PLEA FOR ARMY PAY RENEWED BY DOWNEY

Says High Officials Favor His Proposals for Increase

SEP 23 1941

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (AP)—Senator Downey of California said today that he had been told that "high Administration and Army officials look with favor on proposals to increase the pay in the armed services."

Mr. Downey sought unsuccessfully to increase the pay of selectees and Regular Army men by $30 a month during recent consideration of the draft extension legislation. He said today he was certain that highly placed officials "recognize the necessity of increased pay."

With a $30-a-month increase in present pay, Mr. Downey declared, the minimum Army salary would be $70 after one year of service. Figuring the value of food and rooming facilities at between $40 and $50, he added, a soldier then would have a minimum income of $110 to $120. That, he said, was comparable to bottom-bracket pay in defense industries.

Mr. Downey told reporters he felt sure the Administration was planning to reduce the size of the Army so that only 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 men would be kept in service long enough to be "properly trained."

Testifying in Brooklyn Federal Court, where 16 men are on trial charged with espionage and conspiracy, Vollmecke said the invitation was extended through a defendant, Heinrich Eilers, naturalized former library steward aboard the United States liner Manhattan.

He said that Eilers came to his Washington home, 713 Allison Street Northwest, in March of last year, showed him newspaper clippings of plane deliveries to Britain and said that an old friend from Braunschweig, Germany, y Wilhelm Loehr, now an officer in the Luftwaffe test-piloting section, would be interested in similar information.

Referred to Washington

"I told Eilers that if Mr. Loehr is interested in material of this nature, he should address his request to official channels in Washington," Vollmecke said.

Vollmecke came to the United States in January, 1927, became a citizen in 1933 and joined the CAA in 1934.

He identified Loehr as a furniture dealer with whom he had corresponded frequently until Christmas, 1938. After that, he said, oehr's communications twice came to him through Eilers.

Vollmecke quoted Eilers as having said, "If you have any information (about plane deliveries) to send him Loehr) which you want to go through the censorship, I'll be glad to take such information along."

The Government contended that in the conspiracy, to which 17 defendants already have pleaded guilty on one or both counts in the indictment, information frequently was sent by the ring's couriers, who were employed on ships in transatlantic trade.

Survey Mailed by Heine

William G. Sebold, a counter-espionage agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, testified that the Hamburg gestapo had asked for lengthy technical accounts of American aircraft written for the German Volkswagenwerke by Edmund Carl Heine, a former Ford plant manager.

Heine's counsel conceded that Heine had "composed and mailed" a voluminous survey of production and deliveries by virtually every American aircraft manufacturer. They were mailed, Counsel said, to Lily Stein, a defendant who pleaded guilty.

Meanwhile, in Manhattan, Kurt Frederick Ludwig, accused by the Government as the master spy of an international German spy ring, pleaded not guilty to a charge of conspiracy to obtain and transmit to Germany defense information vital to this country.

Hans Pagel and Frederick E. Schlosser, both of Brooklyn, indicted in the same case, withdrew their pleas of guilty and elected to stand trial, which was set for October 6. Scheduled for trial with the three is Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer, 25, a New York secretary.

U. S. Acts to Gain Title To Seized Italian Ship

Forfeiture Proceedings Begun on Sabotaged Liner Here

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (AP).—The Treasury began today forfeiture proceedings to make American property out of the Italian steamship Brennero, tied up at Hoboken, N. J. The Brennero, a 4,949-ton tanker, was taken into custody by the Coast Guard on March 30 along with twenty-nine other vessels of Axis or or Axis-dominated countries because of sabotage. Today, the Treasury ordered the Customs Bureau to take charge of the ship pending forfeiture proceedings in the Federal Court in New Jersey.

Similar action has been started in the case of nearly twenty of the other Axis ships taken into custody on March 30. Action on the Brennero case, the Treasury said, was delayed because of extra legal problems arising out of the fact that the vessel was owned by the Italian government instead of a private concern as was the case of the other Axis ships.

The forfeiture proceedings were based on allegation that the crew sabotaged the Brennero with hammers and an acetylene torch before the Coast Guard boarded her, and started fires later. Most of the crew including an Italian navy officer have been convicted of sabotage.

Gas-Surplus Shifting Okayed

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 22—Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes authorized motor fuel suppliers today to shift surpluses of gasoline from one State or locality to another in order to assure even distribution within the Atlantic coast area.

The action was taken, Ickes said, to meet seasonal and unusual conditions. The shifting is not to alter the previously ordered over-all reduction of ten per cent. under July in sales to Atlantic coast retail outlets, Ickes said.

Ickes also authorized suppliers to correct inequitable quotas of gasoline for fiilling stations and resellers brought about by subnormal deliveries for July.

FRENCH UPRISING EXPECTED

Writer Back in U. S. after 19 Years Expects General Revolt

Jersey City, Sept. 22—(AP)—A general uprising in France within three or four months was predicted today by Arthur Lesser, 29, who has lived in France for the past 19 years, and who served in the French propaganda service under two governments.

SEP 23 1941

Lesser arrived today on the American Export liner Excalibur, which brought 102 passengers, including 56 American citizens from Lisbon.

He declared that the lack of food and the approach of winter would hasten an uprising among the French people. He estimated that the Germans hold at least 60,000 hostages jammed into prisons made to accommodate only about one-tenth of that number.

Another passenger was Frederic Prokosch, 35, a writer who had spent the past two years in Lisbon. He said the people of Europe feel that opinion in the United States is divided on the war and that there is much indecision and apprehension in this country.

President Names Oct. 11 Pulaski Memorial Day

Calls General Valiant Representative Of Magnificently Independent People

Washington, Sept. 22 (AP)—President Roosevelt today proclaimed October 11 Gen. Casimir Pulaski Memorial Day, honoring the Polish count who gave his life for American independence. The President noted that once again "our precious liberties are gravely menaced by the spread of conquest and tyranny abroad."

In this grave crisis, with these liberties menaced, Mr. Roosevelt said, "we may gratefully recall the efforts and sacrifices of those who helped establish this as a free nation."

He recalled that on October 11, 1779, at the siege of Savannah, General Pulaski died a "valiant representative of a people that has for centuries displayed magnificent independence of spirit."

Preparations Are Made For Gas Protection

Designs For Masks For American Civilians Now Have Been Completed

SEP 23 1941

New York, Sept. 22 (AP)—Mayor LaGuardia, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, said today that designs and specifications had been completed for enough gas masks to equip between 50 and 60 million American citizens.

He told the Young Men's Board of Trade that this effort and corollary studies and inventories had been completed although no appropriation or order for the masks had been made.

The Mayor said the studies indicated that about 60 millions of the civilian population might conceivably come within range of gas attacks from the air.

The War Interpreted

By Dewitt MacKenzie

Russian position is increasingly grave, but not one to cause the Muscovites to despair.

So long as morale—not only military but civilian—holds good and loyal, the Bolshevists ought to be able with the aid of the winter weather to establish themselves ultimately on a line of defense which they can maintain. This would mean a continuation next spring of the war which Hitler is straining every nerve to liquidate now.

But further heavy withdrawals of Red troops must be expected. This is especially true in the crucial battle of the Ukraine, where the Nazis continue to batter their way forward.

The outcome of this bloody engagement will influence the whole course of the war. Hitler's objective is the Caucasus: storehouse of the oil which he needs—gateway to the Middle East—and Russia's lifeline to the Persian gulf and supplies from the outside world, including America.

The Nazi chief is sacrificing lives and materials on a colossal scale in his effort to reach this goal. If he can make the grade, he will be in a much better position to carry on a long war. If he fails, he will face a critical situation in the spring.

SEP 22

TERRIFIC FIGHTING

The Bolshevists under Marshal Budyenny, the old Cossack cavalry man, have been defending this territory inch by inch. The fighting is terrific and in many instances has reverted to hand-to-hand conflict with bayonets, such as reported from Odessa.

If all that was necessary to halt this rush was courage and willingness to die, it would have been stopped, but the indications are that the Reds are suffering from a great shortage of supplies and equipment. In particular do they need tanks and war planes, without which they cannot stand up against the Nazi avalanche.

The Nazis claim to have reached the Sea of Azov and cut the Crimea off entirely from the mainland. This peninsula, on which lies the naval base of Sebastopol, is the main seat of Russian naval power in the Black sea. Were it incapacitated it would be a grave threat to Soviet control of this vital inland water.

I have indicated previously the German strategy in this drive, but it is worth emphasizing in view of its great importance. If you will look at your maps you will see that Hitler is trying to move his armies eastward through the sector north of the Sea of Azov, so that he can turn southward into the Caucasus.

Meanwhile, the Nazis have collected naval vessels in Bulgarian ports with the idea of driving across the Black sea and making a landing in the Caucasus so as to cooperate with the German forces of the north. At the same time it is said that Berlin is putting heavy pressure on Turkey to grant the Axis passage of Italian warships and supply vessels through the Dardanelles to participate in this great operation.

PRESSURE ON TURKEY

The indications are that Turkey will have to decide in the immediate future whether she is going to cast her lot with Germany or with England. Probably the course of the fast moving Ukraine battle will have much to do with her decision.

Bulgaria is going through all the gestures suggestive of active participation in the war, with an attack on Turkey. King Boris is reported to be enroute to consult Hitler. The Turks have a hard choice to make.

The Bolshevists presumably have prepared positions to which they can fall back gradually in the Donets basin, and still farther back along the Don river which lies across the entrance to the Caucasus. Predictions as to whether they can stand the Nazis off are futile, since we don't know the extent of the admittedly grave shortage of equipment.

If the Russians cannot stem the rush to the Caucasus, they still may be able to form a line along the Volga and thus continue the war next spring.

Roosevelt to Ask Congress to Arm Ships, Says Strike-Bound Craft Must Be Moved; 23 Pink Star Survivors Safe in Iceland

Neutrality Act Change Given Study

SEP 24 1941

President Says Problem Is to Decide How Much Administration Will Ask in Way of Repeal

Certain To Arouse Row In Congress

Former Danish Vessels, U. S.-Owned, Already Carry Guns, Including Pink Star

Washington, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt said today that the country was probably heading toward the arming of its merchant ships to protect them from the attacks of Axis warships.

At the same time, he disclosed that some American-owned ships, former Danish vessels which have been transferred to Panamanian registry, have already been equipped with guns.

Among the latter was the Pink Star, which the President said was sunk by a submarine last Friday night, at a position 275 miles northeast of Cape Farewell, the southermost tip of Greenland.

Pink Star Carried Guns.

The Pink Star could be armed because, although American-owned, she flew the flag of Panama. The Neutrality Act forbids the arming of American vessels. The President, who made the announcements at a press conference, was asked whether it was intended that that law should be amended piecemeal or repealed in its entirety.

That subject, Mr. Roosevelt replied, was under study at the moment and a determination would be made some time next week as to how much repeal the Administration would request.

Faces Congress Fight.

Whatever the extent of the Administration's ultimate proposal, it was certain to arouse a bitter row in Congress, although Administration leaders were confident that they could obtain congressional approval.

Mr. Roosevelt started today's press conference off abruptly without waiting for a question, by announcing the details of the sinking of the Pink Star.

A submarine sank her at 11:25 p. m., Greenwich Mean Time, (5:25 p. m., Eastern Standard Time) last Friday, he said. Her position at the time was 61:36 north and 35:07 west.

The Pink Star, he continued, was part of a convoy escorted by Canadian warships, and was bound for Iceland with a general cargo. (Previous reports had her headed for the United Kingdom.) Asked how Washington had received word of the incident, the President declined to say.

The press conference dicussion swung at once to the question of arming ships and a reporter asked whether measures of self-defense for the vessels should not be taken. That, the President replied, was a pending question.

He then cautioned the public against letting details of the war at sea becloud the general objective of American defense and lend-lease efforts.

The world, he said, was faced with one of the most outrageous movements in all its history, with a certain people attempting to dominate the whole world. We, on the other hand, he added, were trying to defend the Western Hemisphere against the movement, by helping the foes of the dictators and by preventing the latter from obtaining footholds from which they might attack us.

30.24— 11999

30.24— 11999

That, he said, was why the United States has troops in Iceland, and why this country was endeavoring to keep the sea lanes clear.

The discussion veered back to the question of arming the ships, with a reporter asking whether it was easier to defend the ships if they themselves were armed.

Easier To Defend.

Mr. Roosevelt said he believed it was and that we were probably heading toward arming our own merchant ships and the vessels of other American countries as well. Before the neutrality act was passed, he said, it would have been perfectly proper under international law to take such a step.

The questions and answers whether the neutrality law would be amended piecemeal or repealed entirely followed and Mr. Roosevelt said the problem was how much the Administration could ask in the way of repeal.

A correspondent brought up a recent statement by Secretary of the Navy Knox that there were not enough guns available for arming the vessels. The President said that as applied to the whole merchant marine that was undoubtedly true and went on to indicate plainly that sufficient weapons were available for equipping such ships as are sent into the danger zone.

And when a correspondent inquired whether guns for the vessels had been ordered he answered that the United States was building every type of gun that would be useful.

He did not know, he said, how many ships Panama had armed, but volunteered the information that the United States could lend-lease guns to Panama and other American nations for the purpose of arming the merchant marine.

23 SURVIVORS ARE LANDED

Pink Star Victims at Reykjavik With 11 Still Not Reported

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP)—Twenty-three survivors from the American freighter Pink Star, which was sunk between Greenland and Iceland last Friday, have arrived at Reykjavik, Iceland, in good condition, the State Department announced tonight.

The bare report that the survivors had reached the Iceland capital was received by the State Department from the American Consul there.

The report gave no further details of the sinking and did not name the survivors. There were thirty-four members in the crew, none of whom was American.

13 in Crew of Pink Star, Sunk off Iceland, Listed

Wives or Relatives of Four Reported in New York

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Maritime Commission made public today a partial list of the crew of the freighter Pink Star, which was sunk Sept. 19 near Iceland. The list including eight Canadians, three Britons, an Irishman and an Ecuadorian, follows:

John Mackenzie, master, Canadian, fifty-five years old; wife, Amy, Spry Harbor, Halifax.

Andrew McKay, first assistant engineer, Canadian, thirty-nine; wife, Montreal.

Charles Parkinson, assistant engineer, British; forty-one; wife, Blanche, Irvington, N. J.

Edward Seymore, chief steward, British, forty-one; wife, Marian, 245 Ninety-first Street, Brooklyn.

James Cassidy, second officer, Canadian, twenty-nine; mother, Jessie, New Castle, New Brunswick.

H. G. Kelland, carpenter, Canadian, thirty-seven; wife, Rose, West Montreal.

Harold Hawks, boatswain, Canadian, thirty; mother, Jean, 3966 Joseph Street, Verdun, Quebec.

Paul Robinson, able seaman, Canadian, nineteen; mother, Rosanna, Montreal.

John Murphy, radio operator, Irish, forty-three; wife, Mary, 2356 Grand Concourse, the Bronx.

Raul Varas, messman, Ecuadorian, thirty-six; brother, Galo Varas, 2 East 116th Street, New York City.

Norman West, messman, British, forty-three; sister, Katherine Botsford, 375 Park Avenue (care of Oppenheim), New York City.

Harold Carmichael, able seaman, Canadian, thirty; mother, Ethel, St. John, N. B.

John Archer, second assistant engineer, Canadian, forty-three; wife, Katherine, Rosemount, Montreal.

U. S. Navy Prepares Guns For Merchant Ship Use

Plans Veiled Pending Repeal of Neutrality Act

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—Taught by World War experience, the Navy was understood tonight to have taken long steps already toward the arming of merchant vessels carrying supplies on England's Atlantic lifeline.

The Navy has "on the shelf" some of the light guns necessary for the protection of merchantmen, has been producing in quantity five-inch dual-purpose weapons suitable for use against aircraft and surface raiders, and has Navy gun crews available to establish the familiar "armed guard" of World War days on cargo carriers.

The Navy's Bureau of Ordnance, however, gave no hint of the extent of its preparations for arming merchant ships should that become possible through repeal of the neutrality act.

A 1941 appropriation of $74,000,000 for guns, ammunition and powder carried a $10,000,000 fund earmarked for gun foundations on merchant ships and apparatus for protection against mines. Navy steps to carry out the intent of the appropriations measure have been veiled.

Testimony at that time revealed that the Navy has a substantial but inadequate supply of three-inch and other light guns in storage which would be available for merchant ships if needed. A number of four-inch weapons, salvaged from the scores of destroyers scrapped after the World War, were understood also to be on hand.

These light guns would provide protection against surface assaults, but presumably cargo ships equipped with them would require, in addition, anti-aircraft machine guns to meet the modern menace of attack by air.

SEP 24 1941

The five-inch guns, capable of high-angle fire, could be effective against hostile surface craft and could presumably reduce the effectiveness of bombing planes. None of these deck guns is considered particularly effective against a U-boat unless the submarine surfaces.

No indication was given of the quantity of double-purpose five-inch guns available.

A shortage of guns for cargo ships was mentioned by Navy Secretary Knox last week in saying there were scarcities in "all kinds" of weapons. This did not bar the possibility that there might be sufficient guns for arming merchantmen on the Atlantic Ocean only.

Knox was specific in stating that the navy has sufficient men to place gun crews on merchant craft. "The armed guard" which accompanied every armed freighter in the World War usually numbered ten to twelve navy men.

Warns of War.

Washington, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Senator Norris, Independent, o Nebraska, asserted today tha repeal of the neutrality ac would mean war and he voice his doubts that Congress would approve a declaration of war at the present time.

Senator Norris, although not commenting specifically on the latest sinking, made it clear that he indorsed the policy the administration has pursued regarding freedom of the seas. The United States, he remarked, could not recognize any German attempt "to map off the oceans and tell us where we can and can not go."

For All Possible Aid.

The veteran Nebraskan, only surviving member who cast a Senate vote against this country's entrance into the last war, consistently has supported the administration in foreign affairs. He emphasized to reporters today that he thought all possible aid should be given to Great Britain and Russia. And he said, too, that a request for repeal of the neutrality law would be a logical outgrowth of the administration's international policies.

Nevertheless, he contended that "changing the neutrality act to send our ships to belligerent ports would mean war. And if we decided to arm merchant ships that might give Hitler a right to sink them under international law. Of course, there is a question of whether he would not try to sink them without notice anway. It is possible, too, that he might back down, but I don't see how he could after going as far as he has."

Senator Norris said he was giving careful study to the whole question of neutrality repeal or revision and added that President Roosevelt also should study the question thoroughly before asking that the law be modified or discarded entirely.

Doubts Hitler Wants War.

He asserted, furthermore, that he did not believe the administration should seek now to precipitate a war against Germany. "If war is to come," he said, "let it come from Hitler. I don't believe he wants war with us, because, if he did, we have given him plenty of provocation already."

In contrast with Senator Norris's views on the neutrality act, Senator Adams, Democrat, of Colorado, was all for repeal of those sections of the law which restrict American shipping. Repeal would end the bans against operating American merchantmen in combat zones, against the travel of Americans on ships of belligerent registry, and against the arming of American vessels.

Senator Adams told reporters that, when the neutrality act passed, "I was humiliated to vote for a bill which prevented our ships from carrying on legal commerce. We should tell every one that he can sail his ship where he pleases, that he can travel on any ship he pleases so long as he takes the hazards of war."

Adams, however, was sharply critical of President Roosevelt's new lease-lend fund request.

Despite all the Congressional discussion on the subject in recent weeks, however, well-informed Senators reported today that the Administration would make no immediate effort to change the act.

Adams Wants Aid Fund Cut

Congressional leaders agreed at yesterday's conference that Mr. Roosevelt's new request would meet little Congressional opposition. But Adams, who will handle the measure in the Senate, had this to say:

"The appropriation should be cut down. Originally, when the President asked for $7,000,000,000, the Appropriations Committees were advised that they were appropriating all at once instead of making piecemeal appropriations.

"Now there is a request for $6,000,000,000, and that, plus the original appropriation, will exactly equal our estimated Federal revenue next year. In other words, we are giving away every cent we take in.

"As a matter of common decency we should give aid to Great Britain, but we should stop to see how it is going to affect our own financial situation."

Two-Week Hearings Expected

While President Roosevelt asked "speedy enactment" of the new appropriation, Chairman Clarence Cannon (Dem., Mo.) expressed the belief that the House committee's consideration of the measure would require about two weeks.

Philip Young, assistant executive officer of the Office of Defense Reports—the coordinating agency in charge of the lend-lease program—and Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard were the first witnesses scheduled.

More than 50,000 persons watched the $70,000,000 battleship slide down the ways of the Fore River Yard of the Bethlehem Steel Company. Many of them heard Knox shout through a loud speaker system that the huge battleship—to be equipped with 16-inch guns—and five similar ships already built or building would carry the "heaviest guns afloat."

Only a comparatively few nearest the launching site, however, were able to watch naval history made. As the Massachusetts slid down the ways a huge crane started to lay the keel of a new cruiser, the U.S.S. Flint. The flaring bow of the battleship had not yet reached the water when the first steel sections of the new keel were placed in the spot she had just vacated.

Free Army, End Neutrality Act, Knox Urges At Launching

Demands Lifting Of Restrictions On Defense As New Battleship Is Floated

SEP 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Quincy, Mass., Sept. 23—Use of the United States Army "where it is needed and when it is needed," together with immediate repeal of the Neutrality Act, was urged today by Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, in a fighting speech delivered immediately after the launching of the 35,000-ton battleship Massachusetts.

Speaking extemporaneously, Knox asserted that "we must have done with that type of thinking that argues that our army must be circumscribed in its action in defending America."

The Selective Service Act restricts the movement of draftees to United States territory.

Army Essence Of Defense

The Navy Secretary did not elaborate on his reference to the army except to say that it was the "very essence of national defense" to use the army where needed and that it was "foolish thinking" to regard "our safety as directly concerned only when an enemy puts a foot on our soil."

Secretary Knox referred pessimistically to the chances of Russians in their battle against Germany in leading up to his demand for repeal of the Neutrality Act.

Soviet Position Difficult

"We would fail to be realistic," he said, "if we did not recognize that this morning the prospect of a victory for the side which is fighting against totalitarian dictatorship is in a grievous, difficult position.

"We would fail to be realistic if we did not recognize that those men who are dying over there by the hundreds of thousands . . . are by their fighting making it less likely that we shall have to meet that foe on our own soil. . . .

"And so the time is past for us to play with laws like the neutrality law that cripples us in our efforts to help those who are fighting Hitler.

"We should waste no time repealing that law. It is no longer an asset and it is a liability."

London Paper Predicts Clash

LONDON, Sept. 23 (AP)—The London Daily Mail, in a Washington story asserting that "unidentified Axis raiders operating off Iceland have sunk another United States owned ship," said today that "the first naval battle between United States and German ships may take place at any moment."

The despatch on the Pink Star sinking, signed by Walter Farr, continued:

"As I cable, large numbers of warships of the Navy which the Germans have thus defied are searching the Atlantic around Iceland, hunting down the raider responsible."

Mr. Farr wrote that "the opinion was expressed in diplomatic circles that President Roosevelt will now take further drastic steps to insure protection of Icelandic waters.

"These steps are expected to include spreading out of the zone covered by the American Navy so that it covers a vast area of waters immediately adjacent to the British Isles, where it is known that German raiders are now concentrating.

"Such a step would be accepted by the great majority of Americans as necessary in order to insure better protection of Iceland waters."

GERMANS NOTE VESSEL WAS PANAMANIAN

Assail Sailing Of U. S. Ships Under Another Flag As "Evasion"

Insist Vessel Was Sent To Bottom In Nazi "Operations Area"

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 23—German submarines or surface craft have not specifically reported sinking the Pink Star, authorized German sources said today, but they added that whatever happened to the American-owned, Panamanian-registered freighter was "in accordance with the laws of war."

In stating they had no word on the Pink Star itself, these sources said, however, that the German navy had reported sinking a large number of ships from a convoy.

"The vessel was Panamanian, not United States," they said, "and we haven't heard yet that Panama is part of the United States.

Sunk In "Operations Area"

"The vessel was sunk in waters clearly defined as a German operations area."

SEP 24 1941

[The American State Department said the 6,850-ton Pink Star was sunk last Friday off Iceland.]

At a later press conference an authorized spokesman commented that "letting American ships sail under the Panamanian flag is a favorite way of evading the neutrality law."

These German sources charged that Secretary Hull, in advocating at his press conference yestreday a change in the American neutrality law, was "driving America still another step nearer to war."

Roosevelt Blamed

President Roosevelt and "United States imperialism" toward South America were blamed by the German press for recent anti-Nazi demonstrations in Buenos Aires, Santiago and other South American cities.

DNB said:

"It is noteworthy in connection with the Roosevelt tactics that at virtualy the same time an incited throng demonstrated before the legation building in the Argentine capital, demonstrators marched to the German legation in Santiago, threw stones at the Reich's flag hoisted for a Chilean national holiday and broke some window panes. Also at other places German and Italian flags were torn down and windows broken."

[The demonstration in Buenos Aires occurred Friday, that in Santiago Sunday.]

Governments "Implicated"

The authoritative commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland said Germans considered the Argentine and Chilean Governments themselves "implicated" in the anti-German demonstrations.

"There can be no doubt in Berlin," said Dienst, which frequently reflects the Foreign Office attitude, "that the governments, which do not order a halt to the campaign directed against the Germans, cannot be vindicated of a certain measure of blame for the incidents in Buenos Aires and Santiago."

Dienst blamed American "imperialism" principally, adding that "one has the impression that the dependence on Washington influences frequently has gone to such an extent that even the protection due official representatives of the Reich appears to become questionable."

Berlin, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Authorized German sources expressed the opinion today that whatever had happened to the American-owned steamship Pink Star "it was done in accordance with the laws of war."

They said, however, that no German submarines or other ovreseas craft had specifically reported the sinking of the Panama-registered vessel, but added that messages had been received concerning sinkings out of a big convoy.

"The vessel was Panamanian, not United States," an authorized source declared, "and we have not heard yet that Panama is part of the United States. The vessel was sunk in waters clearly defined as a German operations area."

These sources declared that Secretary of State Cordell Hull drove America another step nearer war with his statement yesterday that the United States neutrality act should be changed.

(Mr. Hull told reporters at a press conference that he and President Roosevelt had said at the time the neutrality law was enacted that it would be as likely to get the United States into war as to keep it out.)

Berlin, Sept. 23—DNB blamed President Roosevelt today for recent anti-Nazi demonstrations in Buenos Aires, Santiago and other South American cities.

Flags Torn Down

The authoritative commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland, blamed the incidents primarily on "United States imperialism toward the south."

Army Men Reported In Conspiracy

High Officials Confer on Implied Threat of Uprising in Parana and Cordoba

Officers, Soldiers At Posts Arrested

Commandant is Said Among Those Held; Preventive Measures Taken in Northwest

Buenos Aires, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Argentine troops occupied the nation's two most important military airdromes today and were reported moving fast into all the air bases in the country to forestall any surprise move by Nazi conspirators.

A radical member of Congress declared dramatically on the floor of the Chamber of Deputies that Acting President Ramon S. Castillo himself "joined in the totalitarian plotting."

Ramon Damonte Taborda, chairman of the Argentine "Dies committee" investigating subversive activities, said some army officers were involved and a number arrested.

All Air Bases Affected.

Taborda made the sweeping announcement of the military measures involving all the country's air bases after the occupation of two military airdromes, at heavily German-populated Cordoba and Parana, had been confirmed.

Argentina's highest military officials held an urgent meeting here.

Seized Airfields Named.

Taborda said the airfields being taken over by the military included El Palomar; El Plumerillo in Mendoza, Coronel Pringles in Villa Mercedes, San Luis Province.

The military airplane factory at Cordoba also was under guard.

Lieutenant Colonel Edmundo Sustaita, Air Corps officer at Cordoba, and a lieutenant named Krauss at the Parana base were among those reported arrested.

Upon emerging from the conference Colonel Francisco Suarez, chief secretary of the War Office, was asked whether there was any truth in rumors of subversive activities in the interior and he replied:

"I am not authorized to speak, therefore I can not confirm or deny any report."

Earlier Acting President Ramon S. Castillo had taken cognizance of persistent reports of unrest in a certain part of Argentina by declaring there was no truth in them.

Troops At Tucuman.

Besides the military activities in Cordoba and Parana, headquarters of the Fifth Corps Area at Salta confirmed reports prevalent here since Sunday that troops were being quartered in Tucuman, in northwestern Argentina.

Cordoba is the capital of a province of the same name in central Argentina and Parana is the capital of Entre Rios Province, in the east central part of the country north of Buenos Aires.

Word spread through lobbies in the Chamber of Deputies today that unrest in the three heavily German-populated provinces called for swift military action.

Officers, Men Arrested.

This chamber version was denied by Castillo, who at the same time said the government had taken preventive measures and that he was "certain that the country as a whole is calm."

Parana dispatches said that Colonel Juan Carlos Bassi, commander of the Third Army Division, marched into the airdrome there at 3 a. m. today at the head of the Third Signal Corps Battalion and arrested every officer and man found there.

A Captain Menendez, identified as the airdrome commandant, was reported among those arrested.

No reason was given either in official or press versions for the arrests. Private Parana advices, however, said the plot was linked to political leaders opposed to the congressional inquiry into anti-Argentine activities.

SEP 24 1941

As the Chamber of Deputies ended its session late tonight Emir Mercader, a radical deputy, shouted on the floor.

"Young officers caught conspiring in the interior of the country have been arrested."

Another radical, Eduardo Tessaire charged that Castillo himself "joined in the totalitarian plotting."

Parana Airdrome Occupied.

Parana dispatches said the Third Signal Corps Battalion occupied the army airdrome there. That city is the headquarters of the Third Army Corps area.

The 13th Infantry Battalion took up positions at the airdrome at Cordoba, rail and airline hub for central Argentina. A battalion in the Argentine army includes five companies, totaling 900 men.

Persistent rumors have spread since last Friday to the effect that there was unrest in a certain part of Argentina and only tonight acting President Castillo branded them as without foundation.

Area of Nazi Plotting

(Censorship apparently prevented disclosure of the exact part of Argentina where the unrest was rumored, but the military activity indicated it was in Parana and Cordoba, where a wholesale roundup of suspects in an alleged Nazi plot to overthrow the Government was made on Aug. 9.

(There since has been the action of the Argentine Chamber of Deputies in censuring German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann and a demand that leaders of allegedly subversive Nazi organizations be ejected from the country.)

The rumors began spreading simultaneously with last Friday night's demonstration in which two bombs were thrown in front of the fashionable embassy residence of German Ambassador Von Thermann.

Embassy Stoned

Stones were flung at the embassy building and extra police had to come on the run to put down this hostile demonstration.

Friday night's rumors were based on word that the 7000 members of the Buenos Aires city police force had been "confined to barracks" and that special precautions had been taken about the posts and telegraphs building which directs communications with the interior.

Rear Admiral Mario Fincati, Navy minister and acting minister of war in the temporary absence of General Juan Tonazzi from the country; Colonel Francisco Suarez, chief secretary of the War Office; and General Angel Zuloaga, chief of the Army Air Force, were among the conferees at tonight's urgent meeting.

Follows Berlin Attack.

Tonight's Argentine military activity followed a Berlin press attack on Argentina. Informed quarters said Castillo would ask his ministers to consider this and the congressional censure of Von Thurmann at a cabinet meeting tomorrow or Thursday.

These informants said the chief executive was believed to be awaiting word from the Argentine ambassador in Berlin as to whether the Nazi press attacks were officially sanctioned.

The Argentine Chamber of Deputies voted with but one dissenting voice on September 15 for the expulsion of ringleaders of Nazi undercover organizations, among whom its "Dies committee" named Von Thermann.

The German envoy was not mentioned by name in the expulsion demand but the resolution did censure him for abusing diplomatic privileges.

Von Thurmann has announced that he would not leave voluntarily.

At the time of last Friday's episode before the German embassy, Captain Fritz Wiedemann, former consul-general at San Francisco who was expelled with other axis consular employees from the United States, was a guest of Von Thurmann.

Wiedemann, who had been kept under surveillance by the Argentine congressional committee investigating subversive activities, left the next day by boat for a new consular post in the Far East.

The committee had wanted to question Wiedemann but was barred because he was traveling through the country on a transit visa under diplomatic status.

AT LEAST 4 KILLED IN MEXICO CITY RIOT

SEP 24 1941

Many Wounded As Munitions Workers Try To See Avila Camacho

Laborers Were Demanding Removal Of Nation's War Plants Director

By JOHN LLOYD

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, Sept. 23—At least four persons, including Guillermo Rojas, a union secretary general, were killed and sixteen wounded today when Mexican troops fired upon munition workers converging on the suburban home of President Avila Camacho to air their grievances.

Unofficial reports said the casualties were fourteen dead with dozens wounded.

The President immediately ordered an investigation of the clash and tonight it still was not clear whether the workers also fired on the troops. Some soldiers were said to have been wounded.

Demanded Ouster

Varying reports said that from 200 to 1,600 laborers marched up the Avenue Del Castillo in fashionable Chapultepec Heights to demand that the President remove Gen. Luis Bobadilla Camberos, war plants director.

Col. Maximano Ochoa was in charge of the troops and Guillermo Rojas was reported killed in an attempt to disarm him.

Warned away by the guards, officials said, the "group of workers" insisted on entering the President's home and the guards then fired on them.

Accuse General

In an open letter to the President this morning the workers asserted that Gen. Bobadilla Camberos was farming out war orders to incompetents and placing his relatives and close friends in key factory positions.

The workers also accused the general of uniting with ousted union officials, who, they charged, had made a veiled attack on the President and his international policies, which include close cooperation with the United States.

The workers asked the President's intervention to end what they described as a chaotic situation in the war industries, and alleged that their ousted union officials and Bobadilla had been making them out falsely to be Communists.

Government Statement

The Interior Department tonight issued this bulletin:

"A group of workers of the War Materials Syndicate appeared in tumultuous manner this afternoon at the private home of the President of the Republic. A detachment if Federal troops cautioned them to be orderly. But due to the attitude of the manifestants a bloody incident occurred.

"The nation's chief executive profoundly regrets such happenings and more especially in this instance since he has long standing affection for the particular workers involved, which dates back to when he was secretary of national defense. —DOSH—of Mexico is no stranger to violence.

An ex-army general, he is a veteran of Mexico's two major revolutions and of numerous rebellions.

His elevation to the presidency last December 1 to succeed left-wing Lazaro Cardenas, climaxed a career much the same as that of most other Mexican presidents, a career that embraced much fighting.

He had just turned 17 when he had his first taste of serious political action in 1914, joining one of the armies of the revolution that took the field when General Victoriano Huerta assassinated President Francisco Madero and seized the presidency.

He fought on the side of the forces supporting the successful but bloody revolution of Venustiano Carranza, who overthrew Huerta and gave Mexico her present constitution.

For a man of so much action Avila Camacho is surprisingly quiet, solid, sober and conservative. But at 43 he still is the warrior, a husky fellow with bull-like shoulders.

Even his critics conceded that he was well-equipped for the job when he took over the presidency last year and inherited such complex problems as the controversy over the oil expropriations and the economic straits of his country.

There also was the task of consolidating the social advances of Cardenas's administration.

These he has dealt with carefully and, despite considerable difficulties, has made some headway.

Reds Attack to Ease Pressure

MOSCOW, Sept. 24 (Wednesday) (AP).—The Russians, gravely concerned by the growing German threat to the vital Donets Basin industrial area, counter-attacked against Nazi forces over hundreds of miles of the front today in a determined effort to relieve pressure on Red armies in the south.

From the Arctic to the Baltic, Red forces were on the offensive, with accounts of successes coming in, particularly around Leningrad, where a continuing drive was declared to have resulted in 50,000 Germans dead, wounded and captured.

The early morning communique announced that in the west, above Smolensk, two regiments of a German division were defeated and their remnants thrown back across the Dvina River.

German planes caused slight bomb damage in a three-hour raid on Moscow last night, the first night in which blackout regulations were relaxed. A squadron attempted to reach the capital soon after nightfall, when the squares and main streets were illuminated for the first time since the war began. The city immediately was plunged into darkness.

A communique issued after the alert was lifted at midnight said the squadron was dispersed by anti-aircraft fire and night fighter planes and that only two planes reached the city, dropping several small explosives and a few incendiaries.

In the Murmansk area of the Far Northern front, front-line dispatches said the 3d German Mountain Infantry Division was in disordered retreat. This was believed to have eased somewhat the developing Nazi threat to Russia's big Arctic port.

But it was a dark picture in the south, where Marshal Semyon Budenny was making a heroic effort to extricate the bulk of his army from the area behind fallen Kiev in order to defend the vital city of Kharkov, the Black Sea port of Rostov and the Donetz Basin. Kharkov is the center of the Donetz industrial region, and Rostov is on the Sea of Azov, at the mouth of the River Don.

The Soviet press spokesman, S. A. Lozovsky, Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs, frankly admitted that the loss of these cities plus the Donetz Basin not only would gravely impair Russian industrial capacity but would be the prelude to an attack on the Caucasian oil fields and the Iranian link between the Soviet Union and the British Empire.

The reported toll of 50,000 casualties inflicted upon the Germans in the Leningrad area represented the most heartening news for Moscow. This figure was reported to the army organ "Red Star," by Lieutenant General N. Vatutin from south of Lake Ilmen, 150 miles below Leningrad.

In the same dispatch he reported the Red units in that sector not only checked the Germans, but successfully counter-attacked in various places. He denied flatly a German claim that three Soviet armies were routed in the area.

Germans Routed

The General said the Russians routed the 56th German Army Corps and the Eighth Tank Division south of Ilmen, then caused 10,000 casualties in throwing back an assault on Staraya Russia. Another German thrust cost 15,000 dead and wounded, Vatutin said, and then the Nazis tried to encircle the Red armies in the region. Instead, he reported, the Germans found themselves surrounded and only small groups were able to break out.

The fighting is still going on day and night.

Leningrad's own defenders were described as meeting continuous attacks at the approaches of the city with ever-stiffening resistance. One dispatch said a bayonet charge drove the Germans back seven miles; another described a Nazi attack supported by more than 100 planes, in which the bombing was so bad that the missiles exploded amid the German troops.

Beleaguered Odessa, at the extreme southern end of the front, radioed news of the repulse of assaults by units of nine German and Rumanian divisions.

Odessa Fights Back

Three separate actions were reported in the center: The defeat of two regiments of the 102nd German Infantry Division; a battle in which 1,300 German officers and men were killed or wounded; another last Saturday and Sunday in which 250 Germans were destroyed.

[Advices reaching London said successful Red counter-attacks have extended as deep as Glukhov, 160 miles northeast of Kiev and 230 miles from Smolensk, where the main counter-offensive has been centered. German dispatches also mentioned Russian counter-attacks 180 miles southeast of Kiev, in the vicinity of Poltava.]

Finns Hard Hit

The Russian reports were equally optimistic about the situation on the Finnish front. The Finns were declared wrenched from strongly fortified positions near Lake Siaicho, with four battalions cut to pieces and others forced to retreat.

[Heavy snows fell in wide areas, said a Moscow broadcast heard in Los Angeles by NBC.

[In London, Soviet Ambassador Maisky told an American audience that the Germans lost one-third of their army, or 3,000,000 men, but acknowledged the loss by the Russians of important industrial installations.]

The noon communique recounted successful actions by the Red Air Force. In one, Russian planes destroyed a battalion of German infantry, a motorized infantry company, 63 ammunition trucks and a railway train.

Russians Say That Artillery and Bayonet Charge Defeated Two German Regiments.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 23.—In violent fighting around Lake Ilmen, south of Leningrad, Russian troops have brought the German onset to a standstill and driven forward in successful counter-attacks, Red Star, organ of the Red Army, declared today.

An article by Lt. Gen. Vatutin said the drive had cost the Germans up to 50,000 killed, wounded and captured and denied German reports that three Soviet armies had been routed in the sector 150 miles south of Russia's beseiged second city.

(Reuters, in a dispatch to London, quoting the Soviet news agency, reported today the Germans had been driven back seven miles after a Russian bayonet charge on one sector of the Leningrad front.)

Warfront dispatches declared that fierce Russian counterattacks and bayonet charges hurled back two German regiments on the central front and drove Finnish troops from strong fortifications in the lake country to the north.

Fighting raged unceasingly around Leningrad and Odessa.

Red Star said two regiments of the 102d German infantry division were defeated in the central front counterattacks, aimed at the recapture of a district designated only as "N."

The Germans retreated when the Russians followed up intense artillery fire with bayonet charges, Red Star reported. It said the fight was continuing.

Finns Reported Dislodged.

To the north, Red Star reported, Soviet counterattacks dislodged Finnish troops from strongly fortified positions near Lake Siaicho. Four Finnish battalions were reported destroyed and others forced to retreat.

A midday communique continued the Russian account of German losses of men and material in widespread operations along the central front where the Red Army and air force was said to be striking hard.

In one unspecified sector the Germans lost more than 300 killed and 1,000 wounded and in another sector more than 250 others were killed, the war bulletin reported.

Bombing and machine-gunning Russian planes were credited with wiping out numerous other German infantry and motorized units.

Attacks Repulsed.

A dispatch to Pravda from Odessa reported that the big Russian "Tobruk" was successfully resisting repeated attacks by numerically superior forces.

The dispatch said defenders of the port repulsed with heavy losses intensive assaults from the southern and western approaches where nine German and Rumanian divisions were massed.

The Soviet Information Bureau, mentioning neither fallen Kiev nor Odessa and Leningrad, announced that nearly six German infantry battalions—totaling perhaps 3,500 men—had been wiped out on the central front.

Five days of battle in that zone, the scene of persistent Red Army counterattacks, were declared to have led to the annihilation of forces from the 102d, 123d and 251st German infantry divisions and the 451st infantry regiment.

Without specifying whether it referred to these engagements or another, an early-morning communique went on:

"In one of the sectors of the western front our troops killed 400 German men and officers, destroyed 8 tanks, 4 armored cars, 25 trucks, 9 motorcycles and 5 machine guns."

Rumanian invaders likewise were declared to have suffered heavy casualties. One Soviet battalion killed 600 of the 4th Rumanian Mountain Infantry Brigade in two days of fighting on the southern front, the communique said.

(Informed London sources said, however, that Marshal Semeon Budyenny's southern Soviet armies were facing "an uglier situation" than ever before in the war, with the problem of withdrawing sufficient forces from the Kiev area to re-establish defenses before Kharkov and Rostov.)

Restrictions Relaxed.

With German air raids against Moscow widely spaced recently, blackout restrictions in the Soviet capital were relaxed. The city squares and principal streets are to be lighted nightly except during raid alarms.

The three-power Moscow war needs conference—intended to speed the flow of British and American planes, tanks, guns, oil and other supplies to Russia—neared reality with an announcement last night that British and United States missions had landed by plane "in territory of the U. S. S. R."

(W. Averell Harriman, head of the United States delegation, said Saturday in London that British and American missions had agreed on the fundamentals of material aid to Russia. Lord Beaverbrook, chief of the British mission, already was in Moscow.)

NAZIS REPORT COLLAPSE OF 3 RED ASSAULTS

SEP 24 1941

Admit Strength Of Attacks, But Declare Them All Broken

Crushing Of 50 Divisions East Of Kiev Claimed By Germans

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 23—Russian counter-offensives in every one of the three major sectors—the most widespread yet mentioned in Nazi dispatches—were reported today. All, however, were declared broken in a series of German victories highlighted by announcement of the smashing of fifty Red divisions trapped east of Kiev.

Of this vast force—numbering about 750,000 men—380,000 were said to have been taken prisoner in a continuing restriction of the German trap. Authoritative commentaries thus brought to a grand total of 2,000,000 their estimate of the number of Soviet war prisoners—a figure equalling the number of Russian captives taken in four years of the World War.

Enlisted Men Praised

Russian enlisted men were credited with fighting doggedly over every inch of ground in a series of counter-attacks about Poltava in the lower Ukraine, Leningrad on the northwest front and about Smolensk at the center, but all their supreme efforts were described here as failures.

Far to the east of Smolensk, it was added, Soviet advances collapsed with enormous losses—two thirds and more of the strength of Russian units.

"The Bolsheviks," said DNB, "literally stormed over the corpses left by German fire."

Before Leningrad and Poltava, German informants asserted, it was a similar story, with the Russians losing tanks heavily in vain efforts to stem the Nazi advances, which in the south were continuing toward the Donets basin city of Kharkov.

Great Battle Fought

It was the battle east of Kiev, where four Red armies are encircled, that was stressed. Authorized persons described it as one of the greatest—and perhaps the greatest—engagement of its kind in all history.

Russian loot already taken, the high command said, included more than 570 tanks and 2,100 guns and "these figures are constantly increasing."

The commander in chief of the Fifth Russian army was declared to be among the prisoners.

Accusations of dishonor were officially leveled against Soviet leadership, the high command declaring that "at many points officers and commissars left troops in cowardly flight" in a vain effort to find safety for themselves.

Situation Described

The situation east of Kiev tonight was thus presented by authorized informants:

The vast encirclement begun ten days ago had now resolved itself into a series of smaller encirclements, each of which the Germans were mopping up. To make this breakup into smaller units possible the German strategy was first directed toward erecting "a wall of firearms" on the east side of the encircled area, both to prevent the Russians from breaking out and to prevent relief from entering.

Despite the bitterest of Russian resistance—in which civilians joined—this "wall" was completed. The Russians next tried to interfere with bringing up German supplies, but their attacks were not effectual.

Strategy Described

Meanwhile, army corps after army corps of German infantry kept reaching appointed stations in a churning process by which it was claimed that the Russians were chased by the tens of thousands into murderous Nazi fire.

After three days—so went the German version—the Russians were jammed into such a relatively small area that they had but little freedom of movement and the Germans had merely to feel out the weaker spots and then concentrate the attack.

While the story of the Kiev operation thus was being widely told, new successes against the Soviet fleet were being reported.

Red Cruiser Fired

In the Black Sea off Odessa, dive bombers set fire to a Russian cruiser, damaged a torpedo boat and a patrol boat and destroyed nine freighters aggregating 15,000 tons, the high command stated. DNB said in elaboration that three Russian transports, aggregating 6,000 tons, were sunk.

At the Leningrad naval base of Kronstadt this was given as the new German score in a heavy and continued aerial offensive: a Soviet cruiser and destroyer sunk; another cruiser and two destroyers hit and damaged; a tanker set afire.

50 Enemy Divisions Crushed East of Kiev, Berlin Says

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—Simultaneous Russian counteroffensives in the north, central and southern sectors were reported in German war dispatches tonight for the first time, although all three were declared to have been repulsed, with 380,000 prisoners already taken in the encirclement area carved out by the Germans east of Kiev.

These captures, announced by the high command in a special communique, overshadowed the Soviet counterthrusts as far as Germany was concerned.

In the continuing battle, 50 Soviet divisions (about 750,000 men) have been smashed, the Germans announced.

No details of any of the Russian attacks were given, except their locations—the Leningrad sector in the north, east of Smolensk in the center and around Poltava in the south, 180 miles southeast of Kiev.

D.N.B., official news agency, said "Russian advances far east of Smolensk collapsed under German fire."

Heavy Losses Claimed.

The news agency declared "many Soviet units lost two-thirds or more of their strength in attempts to dash against the German lines. The Bolsheviks literally stormed over the corpses of the slain into German fire. They were thrown back everywhere."

D.N.B. also reported Red Air Force plane losses in the last 24 hours totaled 73 and said German bombers sank a 4,000-ton Russian transport and two of 1,000 tons each off Odessa yesterday.

The high command, issuing a special communique to report the victory around Kiev, said approximately 380,000 prisoners already had been taken, and that a huge booty, including more than 570 tanks and 2,100 guns, had been captured or destroyed.

"After forces concentrated in the area east of Kiev made unsuccessful attempts to break out," said the communique, "increasing signs of disintegration became noticeable among the enemy."

After recounting the prisoners taken and telling of the Russian loss in materiel, the high command remarked that "these figures are constantly increasing."

"Fifty Soviet divisions," said the announcement, "may be regarded as completely destroyed."

"One of Greatest Battles."

An authorized German spokesman described the battle east of Kiev—now 10 days old—as "one of the greatest battles of history." Final figures on the number of prisoners taken were expected here to top those of all previous operations.

The great battle of Tannenberg in the World War netted the Germans 100,000 Russian prisoners, the spokesman recalled, while in the Smolensk battle of the present war Germans claimed 310,000 prisoners. The encirclement battle between Smolensk and Minsk bagged 400,000 Russians, according to German figures.

The authoritative correspondence service Dienst aus Deutschland said that "the number of prisoners in the eastern campaign now exceeds two millions."

"During the entire World War," Dienst said, "altogether two million Russians were captured. Hence the result of three months of eastern operations in this respect, too, already exceeds the results of four years of eastern operations during the World War."

In the Eastern Ukraine, approximately 200 miles beyond Kiev, German forces were reported in Berlin to be smashing their way northeastward from Poltava toward the important rail center of Kharkov. Russian counterattacks in this region were said to have been repulsed, while the Reich air force bombarded strategic rail lines around Kharkov. The Germans announced the capture of Poltava last week.

Berlin sources said that Finns, Norwegians, Danes, Spaniards and Italians took part with Germans in the Russian encirclement east of Kiev.

Commander Reported Taken.

Among the prisoners taken, according to the German announcement, was the commander in chief of the 5th Russian Army.

"At many points," the communique said in describing the reported disintegration of the Russian forces, "officers and commissars of the Soviets left their troops in cowardly flight to gain safety individually."

"But," it added, "they could not escape their fate."

The high command paid tribute to the armies of Col. Gen. Von Weichs and Infantry Gen. Von Stuelpnagel, as participating in "the fortunate course of the battle."

In addition to these victories on land, the high command reported "big successes" by the German Air Force against Russian naval forces and transports.

Sinkings Reported.

In the waters about Kronstadt, big Soviet naval base which guards the Gulf of Finland approach to Leningrad, German bombers sank a Russian cruiser and a destroyer, the high command said, and hits were scored on another cruiser, two more destroyers and a tanker which burned.

At the other end of the front, in the Black Sea south of Odessa, Stukas set afire a cruiser, "seriously damaged" a torpedo boat and a patrol boat and destroyed nine freighters of a total of 15,000 tons.

The Reich air force also smashed at Leningrad itself, attacking military objectives in the city with "effective" results, according to the communique, while rail lines of the Russians were bombed around Bryansk, southwest of Moscow, Kharkov in the Ukraine and in the Crimea.

Russian defenders of Leningrad attempted to check advancing German forces with counterattacks yesterday, the news agency D.N.B. stated, but were beaten back in fighting in which they lost seven 52-ton tanks.

New Success Envisioned.

"Strategic perspectives" for vast new successes are opening before the German armies as a result of smashing blows dealt Russia's armed forces and vital industries during three months of war, Nazi commentators declared.

Asserting that the fate of four Soviet armies claimed encircled east of Kiev already had been sealed and that the Dnieper River no longer could be regarded as a factor in the eastern campaign, these sources predicted freely that great achievements soon might be expected.

Heavy emphasis was laid by the Germans on crippling blows inflicted on Russia's heavy industries by the capture of Kiev and the penetration into the Donets Basin.

Red Battleship Sinking Nazis Say

BERLIN, Sept. 23 (AP)—German planes bombed a Soviet battleship today and left it in a sinking condition in the Gulf of Finland, the new agency DNB reported late tonight.

Heavy explosions shook the ship after today's attack, DNB said. It did not identify the battleship.

It did say, however, that the old Russian battleship Oktiabrskaya-Revolutia, 23,256 tons, lying in a port—presumably Kronstadt—was hit again today on the stern by two bombs, after having been damaged yesterday. A destroyer was said to have been set afire in the same port.

Says Foe Lost 1,950 Planes

The German air force, he estimated, has lost 1,950 planes in the central area since the start of the battle of Smolensk.

In a single sector, he went on, the Germans have been pushed back from six to thirty miles in the direction of Yartsevo.

Sipping tea as he spoke, Sokolovsky cited these examples of Soviet successes:

On one front the Germans lost 22,500 in dead and wounded from September 1 to September 10; on another sector they suffered 20,000 casualties in the first seven days of September.

German materiel losses in the first ten days of the month were 148 tanks destroyed, 17 captured, 103 cannons destroyed, 86 captured, 41 mortars destroyed, 53 captured.

"This, he said, "is evidence of how quickly the enemy is being exhausted."

Over hundreds of miles of the front, the general related, the Germans now are digging in and "what lies ahead of them is trench warfare and the winter mud of Russian roads."

But, he said, "what we depend on for resources is not only the U. S. S. R., but also the British and American peoples. . . . Every extra plane, shell, tank and gun will be more than welcome, and the sooner they are here the sooner victory will be achieved."

Slaughter On Central Front Terrific, Red General Says

Sector Has Become A Verdun Ten Or A Hundred Times Multiplied, Officer Tells Newsmen

SEP 24 1941

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Correspondent

With the Red Army on the Central Front, Sept. 23—The German-Russian slaughter on this front has become a Verdun ten or a hundred times multiplied, Maj. Gen. Vassily Sokolovsky told correspondents at the front today.

In this continuous grinding of men and materiel, he continued, the proportion of losses over the last two months has been two to one in favor of the Russians in men, and five to one in favor of the Russians in materiel. This, he said, was due to superiority of Red army planes, tanks and artillery in this sector.

Hails Red Progress

Sokolovsky, a husky, dark, clean-shaven officed of the modern Soviet school, talked quietly and confidently of the progress of the Red army's counter-attacks in the center.

German Losses Worse Than Verdun, Red Says

SEP 24 1941

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

With the Red Army at the Central Front, Sept. 23—Major Gen. Vassily Sokolovsky declared today the Nazi drive had bogged down into mud and trench warfare ten to a hundred times as destructive as the World War Verdun.

Sokolovsky told foreign correspondents at the front that German losses in the tremendous fight in the central sector had been twice as heavy as the Russians' in men and five times as heavy in material, planes and artillery.

"Hurled Back Six Miles"

Russian armies, he said, had shoved the Germans back six to thirty miles in the direction of Yartsevo, northeast of Smolensk, on a sixty-mile front.

"Blitzkrieg has failed," he asserted, "in the sense that there now has developed something like a continuous grinding of men and material closely resembling Verdun but ten or a hundred times greater because the means of destruction in the hands of the Russians are so much greater."

He said the Germans were digging in along hundreds of miles of front and added:

"What lies ahead of them is trench warfare, mud, Russian roads and winter."

Eighteen German divisions are estimated to have lost fifty to seventy per cent. of their men and equipment in Soviet counter-attacks around Yelnya, Yartsevo and on the flanks above and below Smolensk.

In man power, this means the loss of perhaps 135,000 to 189,000 men.

Some Areas Stabilized

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's forces have stabilized some parts of the central sector and are continuing grinding attacks at other points.

During a week's stay at the front, part of it behind thundering artillery guns, I followed the progress of the campaign on the first visit by foreign correspondents to the battle zone.

In the Yartsevo sector I saw fields torn by tank treads and pitted by shell craters, and littered ruins of thatched cottages and blasted villages through which the Russians drove the Germans back.

A Division Reports

A Soviet division operating in that sector showed this record:

JULY 19-20—Advanced three miles on a two-and-one-half-mile front, inflicting 1,500 casualties on the Germans.

JULY 24-AUG. 1—Advanced two miles on a four-and-one-half-mile front from Markovofrol, killing 1,500.

LATER—Advanced eight miles on five-mile front from Zourazhie, killed 3,000.

This particular division specialized in night attacks.

In a series of three assaults, a colonel said, the Germans were driven back nine miles, leaving quantities of equipment and many prisoners.

"Some Germans went mad under our artillery fire, so prisoners told us," the colonel related. "The Germans are frightened by our patrols and night action. They do a lot of shooting just to make noise, fire tens of thousands of rockets and turn the night into day to see where they are.

Given Free Lighting

"We are glad to have this light free of charge."

From his forest headquarters I heard his big guns pounding away at the Germans, saw Nazi star shells bathing no-man's-land with their eerie white glow.

In the Yelnya sector abandoned trenches around the village of Ushakovo marked the advance point whence the Germans were driven back more than twenty miles and whence they were still retreating when I left the front. The Nazis put the torch to Yelnya before they withdrew and left the city a mass of ruins, the Russians said.

Germans Dug in Deeply.

The former German front line consisted of a continuous system of trenches hastily dug about ten feet deep. Machine-gun nests arranged in the shape of a Swastika formed the outposts. A mile and a quarter back the Germans had excavated an observation and command post from the side of a hill, and put in a tank as a pill box.

Russian trenches led from the forest to T-shaped points within fifty yards of the German lines and served as a springboard for the bayonet assault which started the rout of the Nazis, the Russians said. Unopened boxes of ammunition, German helmets, uniforms, mass graves and unspiked barbed wire marked the line of the Nazi retreat.

Weather and terrain appeared to favor the Russians. Rain whipped up by a cold wind fell intermittently.

Most of the battleground is a trackless expanse of forests and fields with lowlands oozing mud and water. The few sideroads are churned to a sticky mass of clay. The Russians, accustomed to and equipped for their own climate, and knowing every inch of their home ground, appeared comfortable and said they were confident they would keep the Germans back.

British Land Expedition To Fight Alongside Reds In Caucasus Discussed

Wavell And Auchinleck Confer In Egypt On Soviet War Problems

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 23—The British Broadcasting Corporation, as heard by CBS, said tonight it was reported that the British Government had formally requested Afghanistan to expel "German troublemakers."

The same sort of demand preceded the recent occupation of Iran.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 23—Certain London quarters speculated tonight on the possibility that a British land expedition might fight alongside the Russians to defend the oil riches of the Caucasus.

Officials were silent.

The Germans still are more than 500 miles from the Caucasus, which supplies nine tenths of the U. S. S. R.'s ordinary oil needs from a crude production of some 30,000,000 tons a year.

SEP 24 1941

Would Menace Batum

However, a continued powerful assault by the German armies of the Ukraine would put them in a position to menace the Black Sea port of Batum, where they would obtain both oil and a gateway to India.

Speculation concerning an Anglo-Soviet front was heightened as the result of neutral reports that such action was contemplated and by the remark in a British Broadcasting Corporation address over the week end to the effect that "if the Germans reach the Caucasus they will once more come up against the British."

Iran Supply Route

At present Iran appears to be the best avenue for British and American supplies to reach Russia, via a combined road and rail route. Roads in the north of Iran, however, are likely to be snowbound in the winter.

Dispatches from Cairo today disclosed that Gen. Sir Archibald P Wavell, British commander of India and Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, general officer commanding in the Middle East, conferred recently in Egypt on problems connected with the Russian conflict.

Leningrad Situation Is Not Unfavorable, London Declares

Successful Russian Counterattacks Around Glukhov Reported

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Successful Russian counterattacks around Glukhov, 140 miles southeast of Gomel, were reported here today, with authoritative British military sources inclining toward a more optimistic view of the Soviet situation in many areas of German penetration.

The Gulkhov counterblows were described here as separate from Marshal Timoshenko's attacks in the Smolensk sector, which is 230 miles northwest.

British military men also described the situation in the northern sectors and around Leningrad as not unfavorable.

While warning against overconfidence in Russian strength, these quarters cited reports of heavy German losses, especially among officers, and the onset of wet, cold autumn weather, which they said would handicap battle movements, particularly in forested areas.

On the Karelian Isthmus, it was said, the Russians appear to be successfully holding the Finns on approximately the line of the pre-1940 frontier.

A spokesman said that it "is very difficult to estimate the situation" of the Smolensk sector, but that it was wrong to assume the Germans were not in a position to resume the offensive.

From the Odessa region, London heard that Axis attacks were repulsed with severe Rumanian losses

Germans Have Lost 3,000,000 in War, Russian Claims

Soviet Envoy in London Calls Berlin Reports 'Utterly Ridiculous'

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Three million Germans—one-third of the Nazi army—have been killed, wounded or are missing after three months of war with Russia, Soviet Ambassador Ivan M. Maisky declared today in an address before the American Chamber of Commerce.

The German high command's announcement last week concerning German losses was "utterly ridiculous," he asserted, calling his own estimate a moderate one. He added that the Germans had lost 8,500 planes in the Russian campaign.

(The German high command last Friday announced these as Germany's army and air force losses in the first two months of the Russian war: 85,896 dead, 296,670 wounded, 20,299 missing, 725 planes lost.)

Mr. Maisky conceded that Russia, like Germany, has suffered heavy losses and that the enemy has occupied important industrial districts and the Russians had to evacuate a number of factories and plants, and some time must elapse before they can start again on new sites."

Warning against "dangerous" complacency, which he said arose from glib talk of amateur strategists about "Gens. Winter and Mud," he said the facts proved that the Nazi war machine still was strong.

"Russia is facing a tense and difficult situation," Mr. Maisky said, and there is no use in people "shutting their eyes to the realities of the situation."

While he voiced no doubt that the original German plans had been upset and that Hitler's "lightning war" had "failed miserably," he declared:

"War on the eastern front will not be at a standstill either in autumn or winter, and the Soviet people do not base their views on such doubtful calculations. * * *

"The fate of humanity for many generations to come is being decided around Leningrad and in the Ukraine."

He urged that "freedom-loving countries" give aid to help make up Russia's losses.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—A Moscow radio broadcast picked up here by N. B. C.'s Western listening post said heavy snows were falling today on wide areas of the Russian-German battlefront.

The Russian radio as heard in London made no mention of snows, nor did news dispatches direct from Moscow. Authoritative sources in London said they had no reports of snow on the battlefield.

Budyenny Relieved Of His Command, Says Italian Rumor

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Sept. 23.—Red Army units forced from the Dnieper River defense zone were declared by Stefani's correspondent on the Russian front today to be retreating in disorder, without artillery, toward a new line on the east bank of the Don River.

Prisoners, however, were quoted as saying the Soviet command was sending reserve units southward from the Moscow region as well as from the Don and Volga zones to bolster the new stand against the southern invasion.

The news agency quoted prisoners as saying Marshal Semeon Budyenny had been relieved of command on Russia's southern front and replaced temporarily by Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, who commanded the central front stand.

SEP 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 23—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden conferred with the Turkish Ambassador today. Presumably he discussed British-Turkish relations in the light of continued reports of German pressure for military and trade concessions from Turkey.

It was believed probable the two also discussed Turkey's position in view of indications seen in London that Bulgaria would soon become an outright belligerent on the Axis side.

Winant Seeing Maisky

Many quarters in Britain were showing increased alarm over the effects the German advance in the Ukraine might have on Turkey's determination to withstand Nazis demands.

The serious situation on the southern front was expected to be discussed at conferences Eden scheduled for today with the Russian and United States Ambassadors, Ivan M. Maisky and John G. Winant.

Additional Nazi Troop Concentrations in Ports Reported

By the Associated Press.

ANKARA, Turkey, Sept. 23.—Belief that Bulgaria soon might be drawn into the German-Russian war increased here today as advices from Sofia told of new emergency measures there and of fresh German troop concentrations in Bulgarian ports—perhaps for a Black Sea thrust against Soviet oil fields in the Caucasus.

Sofia was reported under a partial curfew last night, and the port cities of Varna and Burgas on the Black Sea were said to have been blacked out completely.

(A dispatch from Sofia via Berlin said Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, had stopped in Sofia overnight en route to Ankara, but it was not known whether he planned to talk with King Boris or other Bulgarian leaders.

(German news dispatches from Sofia quoted Premier Premier Bogdan Philoff as saying the Bulgarian government was facing an important problem in its efforts to stamp out Communism and that the nation "must do everything to eliminate the evil which has menaced Bulgaria more than once.")

Bulgarian newspapers were said to be minimizing the importance of the recent declaration of a state of emergency throughout the country, but there still were rumblings of displeasure with Russia over alleged Soviet attempts to create disorders in Bulgaria.

(Sofia charges that Russian parachutists and men from a submarine had been landed in Bulgaria were denied in Moscow.)

Both the Bulgarian press and German-controlled newspapers in other Balkan countries were reported to have sharply attacked George H. Earle, United States Minister to Bulgaria, accusing him of meddling in Bulgaria's relations with the Reich.

(Bern, Switzerland, heard the Ankara radio quoting the highly-placed Turkish newspaper Aksham as saying Turkey would turn down any request from Sofia for permission to move warships purchased by Bulgaria from Italy into the Black Sea.

("How could any one believe a mere change of flags would alter the situation?" the paper asked. "If that were so, the Republic of Georgia (in Soviet Russia) could purchase the entire British fleet.")

An informant telephoning from Sofia declared the general populace of Bulgaria was opposed bitterly to siding against Russia, and said pressure for Bulgaria's entry into the war had resulted in disturbances.

SERBIANS DEFY ULTIMATUM, KILL 104 CROATS

Outlaws Spurn Order To Leave Hideouts Or Be Bombed Out

50 Executed In Zagreb As Tension Rises; 3 More Frenchmen Shot

[By the Associated Press]

Zagreb, Croatia, Sept. 23—Ninety-eight Croat soldiers and six officers have been killed by Serbian outlaws who defied an ultimatum by the German-controlled government of Serbia to come out of their mountain hideouts willingly or be bombed out, it was learned tonight.

News of these disorders in dismembered Yugoslavia came after disclosure of the execution of fifty persons in Croatia as so-called instigators of a strange "long-distance-call bombing" of the Zagreb telephone exchange.

In Serbia, tension was mounting hourly as a result of the continuing disorders.

Premier Issues Ultimatum

The ultimatum to the outlaws, known as Cetnici, was issued by Field Marshal Milan Nedic, the Serbian Premier, who told them refusal to surrender might mean civil war.

Instead of complying, more Serbs were reported streaming to the mountains to join the Cetnici.

German occupying forces, according to informants here, sent another ultimatum to the recalcitrant Serbs, indicating their intention to take a hand in quelling the uprisings.

Small Army Permitted

It was recalled here that the new Serbian regime has been permitted to build a small army of undisclosed strength.

Some well-posted quarters here believed that Marshal Nedic, in cooperation with the Germans, now would order his troops to move against the Cetnici.

The bands are causing the authorities trouble through resistance and nightly forays from mountain fastnesses.

SEP 24 1941

In Croatia, meanwhile, the Government's announcement of the execution of the fifty persons accused of the telephone exchange bombing was followed by the reported killing of four Croatian Ustachis by Italians near Mostar.

Shot Emerging From Forest

The Ustachis, members of the Croatian official party, were shot as they emerged from a forest near Mostar, which is under Italian rule, accounts received here said.

The fifty executed persons, described by the Ministry of the Interior as Jews and Communists, were court-martialed and their death sentences carried out last Friday.

Nothing was said about the actual perpetrators of the bombing, which was accomplished by two telephone calls put through to secret numbers of the exchange. Completion of the calls in some mysterious manner set off four bombs in the exchange, wounding a dozen German soldiers and seven Croats.

Ante Pavelich, Chief of Croatia, has ordered confiscation of all property of the Serb School Foundation, the Serb High School and the Serb Seminary for Priests in Croatia, and also two privately owned summer resorts at Krapina and Stubica, near Zagreb. All excursions in the neighborhood of Zagreb were forbidden.

In Croatia it was announced that two members of the official Ustachi assault squads of Pavelich had been court-martialed and shot for "despotically murdering and robbing Serbs."

Accused of Bombings by Phone Trick—Unrest Is Reported in Italy.

Rome, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Fifty persons, described as Jews and communists were executed in Zagreb, the capital of Croatia, last Friday for bomb explosions in the Zagreb telephone exchange five days previously, Stefani reported today.

The Italian news agency said in a Zagreb dispatch that the executions were announced by the Croatian Ministry of the Interior.

Two members of the Ustachi assault squads of Ante Pavelic, chief of Croatia, have been condemned to death on charges of having killed members of the Orthodox Church in robberies, Stefani said. One was described as a Moslem, the other a Catholic.

How Trick Was Worked.

The Berlin radio, heard here today, said that more than twelve German soldiers had been wounded in the bombings at Zagreb, directed against a telephone exchange.

A dispatch from Zagreb by way of Berlin on September 15 reported that untraced telephone calls put through to two secret numbers in the Zagreb central telephone exchange set off four bombs on the day before, wounding the Germans and seven Croats as well. Investigators said that the calls were put through from outside the building, in some way releasing the bomb mechanism.

Meanwhile Charles Collingwood, CBS correspondent in London, reported unrest in Italy.

"News is still reaching London from Italy," he said. "The reports which come to London indicate that Italy is in the throes of some sort of internal crisis.

"Mussolini seems to be preparing to shake up the Fascist party. Articles in leading Italian papers are strongly critical of the Fascist administration.

"The British view is that these articles don't appear spontaneously. They are believed to be preparing the way for dismissal of some of the Fascist party leaders.

"British information is that there is considerable discontent, mostly among the Italian people and in the Italian Army.

"This is not to say that there is much likelihood that the Italians will break away from German domination; the Gestapo and the Italian State police are still in control, but the discontent is certainly there."

50 Reported Executed In Zagreb Bomb Attack

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Fifty Jews and Communists have been executed in Zagreb, charged with being the "intellectual originators" of a bomb attack in the Croatian capital, the German radio reported from Berlin today.

The prisoners were sentenced to death by a court martial in Zagreb, September 19, the radio reported, quoting an announcement by the Ministry of Interior Affairs of Croatia. The bomb attack was said to have been against the Zagreb telephone exchange in which more than 12 German soldiers were wounded.

Investigators said that calls were put through from outside the building, in some way releasing the bomb mechanism.

Nazis Continue To Hold 25 Belgians As Hostage

Berlin, Sept. 23 (AP)—The newspaper Brüsseler Zeitung reported today that twenty-five hostages arrested at Tournai, Belgium, would be "retained unless the assassins (of two German policemen) were found within ten days."

SEP 24 1941

The Brussels newspaper based its report on an order by Gen. Baron Alexander von Falkenhausen, military commander for Belgium, which added, "in the future at least five hostages are to be summarily executed in further attacks on German police defense forces. All political prisoners in Belgium will in the future be considered hostages."

Four In Paris Given Death

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 23—DNB said today in a dispatch from Paris that a special court dealing with Communist and anarchist cases yesterday pronounced four death sentences and sentenced twelve persons to penitentiary terms ranging from five years to life.

Four women were among the persons sentenced, it said, but it was not specified whether any of them were among those drawing the death penalty.

3 More Frenchmen Shot By Nazis In Lille Area

Vichy, Sept. 23 (AP)—German execution squads shot three Frenchmen today in the Lille district, near the Belgian border, thus disclosing acts of sabotage in still another sector of occupied France.

The three were described by the Germans as "Communist terrorists" and were accused of bombings and incendiarism.

In Paris, scene of thirty-five recent executions of hostages and others, six persons were convicted by a special anti-Communist court of spreading party propaganda. These latter were sentenced to prison terms running as high as twelve years.

16 More Arrested

Police searching through the so-called "Red belt" in the Paris suburbs announced the arrest of sixteen persons, the seizure of a printing press, paper tracts, revolvers and three 75-caliber artillery shells. Those arrested were sent to jail for trial.

In Paris and vicinity, the Germans during the day ordered strict air-raid precautions. Whether this resulted from any real information of prospective British bombing operations was not stated.

Three Executed in Lille.

Vichy, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Germans in Lille announced that they shot three communist terrorists today for bombings and incendiarism in the prohibited northern frontier zone.

A notice issued by the German commander said that the communists were from the small town of Harnes, in the Pas de Calais Department, and were shot today after having been condemned by a German military court for repeated bombings and arson.

[Serious disturbances took place in the Department of Pas-de-Calais, according to a British broadcast recorded here by the Columbia Broadcasting System. BBC said that the peasants are enraged by the frequent seizing of their property by the Germans and in many villages are holding back their grain and actively resisting the Nazis. Meanwhile the Vichy radio said that the Paris police had discovered a clandestine press and arrested the printer, Maurice Buger, and there accomplices.]

The execution notice gave the first word of the acts of arson and bombings. It was taken as an indication of widespread acts of terrorism, only some of which now are coming to public attention. Acts of sabotage on railways in the region previously had been reported.

De Gaulle Sees Revolt

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 23—The people of France are "in a state of latent revolt" against the Germans, and "every day blood flows in Paris," Gen. Charles de Gaulle declared today in announcing organization of a new national council for his Free French movement.

Whatever differences once existed among the French people, the one aim of the vast majority now is "the liberation of France," he said, so the council is being formed as a temporary administration, ready to hand over the reins when a French republic is restored.

The council, to be named tomorrow, will have eight or nine members, headed by De Gaulle and with headquarters here.

AMBIGUITY IS LAID TO PETAIN'S PARTY

Paris, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The pro-German newspaper Les Nouveaux Temps, declared today that Marshal Petain's new official party based on the French Veterans Legion was "suffering from ambiguity" and was not sufficiently representative of the active forces in France's national revolution.

These forces are demanding the creation of a new party organization, without which France's new constitution will prove too dictatorial, the paper declared.

VICHY BORROWS MORE TO PAY NAZIS

Vichy, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The Petain Government borrowed another 12,000,000,000 francs (nominally $276,000,000) from the Banque de France today to pay for the upkeep of the German Army of Occupation, boosting the total obtained by non-interest-bearing loans for this purpose to 130,000,000,000 francs ($2,990,000,000).

Whether the Germans had any actual tip that the R. A. F. would extend its operations to Paris was not disclosed.

Britain Terms Gibraltar Raid 'Exaggerated'

Admits One Hulk Was Sunk but Denies Italians Sent 4 Supply Ships to Bottom

LONDON, Sept. 23 (AP).—A British authority declared today, "A hulk was sunk but the rest of the enemy's claim is exaggerated," concerning a torpedo-craft attack on shipping at Gibraltar on Saturday—a raid in which, Italians said, four supply-laden British ships were sent to the bottom.

Italians said the Fascist raiders torpedoed two vessels in the inner harbor of the British Mediterranean stronghold and the others at anchor in the bay. They expressed belief that the craft were en route to Egypt with oil and other supplies for Great Britain's Army of the Nile.

Rome Expects Repetition.

Rome, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Italian observers said today that tiny torpedo-craft, reported yesterday to have raided Gribraltor harbor, had proved that its sea defenses were not invulnerable.

Il Messagero declared it was impossible that Gibraltor could increase its defenses sufficiently to prevent a repetition of such raids by Italy's new "suicide fleet" of Mas-boats. No other navy, they said, has a fleet of these secretly developed assault craft, which have been used only thrice since the start of the war—once at Suda Bey, Crete, once at Malta and once at Gibraltar.

Observers assumed that the boats are driven by noiseless electric motors. Il Popolo di Roma said the craft were designed by Italian engineers and built in Italian yards.

Malta Is Bombed Again.

The Italian High Command said today that Italian aircraft again had bombed the air fields of Miccaba and Halfar on Malta last night.

Italian aircraft also made repeated attacks on British merchant shipping in the eastern Mediterranean, damaging two small vessels which presumably sank later, the daily war bulletin said.

The Italians acknowledged that British aircraft had raided Bengasi, Libya, and the Greek island of Leros in the Ægean. One of the raiders was shot down over Leros, the communique declared.

Big Axis Supply Ship Hit: London

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 23—A British coastal command plane was declared by the Air Ministry today to have hit "a large enemy supply ship" while on patrol yesterday off Norway.

A small number of R. A. F. bombers attacked the docks of Boulogne, France, without loss to themselves last night, the Ministry said, despite unfavorable weather.

It announced the rescue of the crew of a British bomber reported missing from operations last Saturday.

Attack By Bombers Halts Ship Under Convoy in Mediterranean, Is Claim

Cairo, Sept. 23 (AP)—British bombers scored nine heavy hits on a large Axis liner under convoy in the central Mediterranean Sunday, and the ship halted, the British Middle East command said today.

The following night, planes of the fleet air arm attacked another convoy in the same area, machine-gunning a merchant ship.

The British said that in an attack yesterday on Italian naval installations at Portolago Bay on the Ægean Island of Leros bomb hits straddled a floating dock and supply ship.

Auchinleck and Wavell Confer on Defense

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 23.—It was officially disclosed today that Gens. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck and Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British commanders of the Middle East and India, recently conferred on defense problems in view of the latest Russian developments.

Sir Archibald now has returned to India.

SEP 24 1941

Sir Claude went aboard an American freighter discharging a lease-lend cargo at an Egyptian port during a week-end visit to the Suez Canal zone, it was disclosed today.

He shook hands and chatted with the master and some of the crew and watched the unloading of equipment for his armies. Later he inspected assembly workshops and docks and visited Indian regiments.

British Tabulate Nazi 'Lies'

Say 61 of 110 Air Raid Bulletins Had "Wholly False Statements"

LONDON, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Ministry of Home Security charged tonight that sixty-one out of 110 recent German bulletins about air raids on Britain contained "wholly false statements."

In numerous instances where the Nazi command or the D. N. B. news agency told of hits on military objectives and harbor installations, the Ministry said, in fact the bombs fell harmlessly far from their targets in open fields or out at sea.

Nazis Report Rescue Of U. S. Eagle Flyer From Channel Boat

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—Germans rescued Pilot Officer William D. Geiger of the R. A. F.'s American Eagle squadron from a rubber boat in the English Channel Saturday, D.N.B., news agency, reported today.

D.N.B. said Geiger, a Californian, who was shot down after a raid on German-occupied territory, was taken to Boulogne. He inquired about Pilot Officer William Henry Nichols of San Carlos, Calif., who has been in a German prison camp since being shot down in an earlier British attack.

Eagle Squadron records in London list Geiger's home as New York. The Air Ministry announced on September 9 that Nichols and two other Eagles were missing after a sweep over France.

Civilians In Egypt Spot Sea Mines For British

By Larry Allen [By the Associated Press]

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 23—Fifty civilian volunteers, including two Americans, are helping naval crews to keep dusk-to-dawn vigils nightly to protect the British Mediterranean fleet from air-borne Axis mines.

They work from a half dozen or more small boats in the Alexandria harbor under direction of Commander Ralph Duckworth. They spot the positions at which German and Italian planes drop mines, then mark each position with a sinker and float.

Navy officers take over each morning and explode the mines with gunfire.

Two Philadelphians Aid

Lieut. Gen. Alan Gordon Cunningham, British commander in chief here, gave the job of organizing the civilian patrols to meticulous, affable Col. Edward Peel, a cotton exporter, who was decorated during the World War.

Among the volunteers were Judge Jasper Brinton, 62, a member of the Alexandria mixed courts, and his son, John Brinton, 27, both of Philadelphia. When John Brinton does not show up for the nightly patrol, the sharp-eyed judge does.

Woman Handles The Orders

The navy supplies helmets, fuel and other essentials. The spotters provide their own food and clothing, most of them appearing in blue overalls or oilstained shirts and trousers.

Mrs. Valerie Goodchild Kensington, gray-haired, blue-eyed secretary of the British Boat Club, is secretary of the mine-spotter patrol. Each evening at dusk she goes to the harbor and issues sailing orders. Often she also boards a boat and spends the night watching for mines.

"It is very thrilling," she said, but she added: "After all, a rowboat is a much smaller target than my home in Alexandria."

OLD IRISH STEAMER LOST

City of Waterford in Collision—Norse Freighter Sunk

DUBLIN, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Irish steamer City of Waterford, 1,071 tons, was lost in a collision at sea about Sept. 19, it was disclosed today. The crew was saved. The location and circumstances were not made public.

The City of Waterford, an iron vessel, was one of the best known Irish ships. She had navigated Irish and English waters for sixty-two years and was formerly called the Fair Head.

The loss in the North Atlantic of a ship carrying American supplies to England, the 4,414-ton Norwegian motorship Segundo, was disclosed yesterday in marine circles.

British Propaganda On War At Sea Hit

SEP 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 23—Major William D. Whitney, assistant to the coordinator of American aid to Britain, criticized British propaganda today as having failed to impress the American public with the seriousness of the Battle of the Atlantic.

"It's better to run the risk of informing the enemy than run the risk of not telling your partner," he declared in a luncheon address before the English-Speaking Union.

Pictures Cited

Britain should have "flooded" the United States with pictures and descriptions of the activities of the Royal Navy and Merchant Marine, he said.

Major Whitney, New York attorney, joined the Scots Guard early in the war and was released for his present assignment.

Whitney declared that during the critical months of the battle of the Atlantic, American correspondents walked the corridors of Whitehall "in supplication and despair" because of their fruitless efforts to tell the story to the United States.

Used "Nazi Product"

Avid for war pictures, American papers were constrained to use "the Nazi product," he said, with the result that Americans absorbed the picture that the German army and air force were irresistible.

"Here in the Departments of Government is an unrivaled store of knowledge of the world situation," he declared. "To just the extent to which it is made available to the American people may Britain expect their support."

Anniversary Exercises At Tokyo Canceled

Celebration Of Adherence To Axis Limited To Rally Away From Downtown Area

Tokyo, Wednesday, Sept. 24 (AP)—A rally scheduled for September 27 by Seigo Nakano's extreme nationalist followers in celebration of the first anniversary of Japan's adherence to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis has been ordered canceled, Koh Ishii, press spokesman, said today.

Ishii added that anniversary celebrations would be limited to a rally sponsored by the Tokyo municipal authorities and the Imperial Rule Assistance Association in a hall in Tokyo's Kanda ward.

The hall is away from the downtown section and therefore is unlikely to attract the attention of foreigners.

Japan Watches Conference

TOKIO, Sept. 23 (AP).—The possibility that German advances may close the Iran (Persia) supply route to Russia and make Vladivostok the principal port of entry for outside aid has caused the British-American-Russian conferences in Moscow to assume added importance in Japanese eyes, the newspaper "Kokumin" declared today.

The paper predicted that as a result of the conferences Great Britain and the United States soon would be stepping up the shipment of war materials to Russia to prolong the Soviet-German conflict as long as possible.

Meanwhile, "Nichi Nichi" reported in a dispatch from Bangkok that 30,000 British soldiers with mechanized equipment had been concentrated along Thailand's (Siam's) Malayan frontier. Presence of the troops increased pressure on the Thai government, which sooner or later must side with the Axis or its opponents, "Nichi Nichi" said.

Domei, Japanese news agency, reported from Bangkok that the British had based 400 to 500 warplanes in Malaya and 100 more in Burma, and said air defense precautions were being stepped up in Singapore, Penang and Rangoon. The agency estimated that British troops in Malaya totaled 65,000 to 85,000.

Manchukuo Press Now Asserts Victory of Nazis Is in Sight

By the Associated Press.

PEIPING, Sept. 23.—Despite the lateness of the season, which foreign military men say should make a Japanese invasion of Siberia unlikely, advices from Manchukuo indicate the Japanese are continuing preparations there for possible hostilities.

These advices mention fresh Japanese troop movements from Harbin and Hsinking toward the Russian frontier, especially west of Vladivostok. Air-raid precautions also were reported being stepped up in principal cities of Manchukuo.

(Shanghai sources said a ban on foreign travel in Manchukuo was being enforced strictly, and that even Germans were unable to enter or leave. The Hungarian Minister was reported unable to go to Hsinking to present his credentials.)

Unconfirmed reports from Kalgan said the Japanese recently had reinforced their guards at the Outer Mongolian border on the road to Urga after the appearance there of Soviet forces.

The Japanese-controlled, Chinese-language press in both North China and Manchukuo appeared to have completely reversed its attitude toward the German-Russian War, papers now asserting that a Nazi victory is in sight.

Observers here said Japanese protests over the alleged appearance of drifting Russian mines in the Sea of Japan could provide a pretext for Japanese naval action if one were desired. The protests apparently have been unanswered.

In this connection the recent departure for Vladivostok of the wives and children of a number of Soviet diplomats in Tokio was regarded as an ominous sign.

Ontario Premier Says King's Regime Fails To Handle Bottlenecks And Strikes

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Mitchell Hepburn, Ontario Premier, declared tonight that "the salvation of Europe's subjugated and persecuted people lies in the factory production of America."

Speaking over the Columbia Broadcasting System a few hours after his arrival by plane for a two-day social visit, Premier Hepburn asserted that "Hitler can be smashed only if we create another machine as powerful, or even more powerful, than the one which carried him victoriously across Europe."

Earlier, in an interview, he criticized the Canadian Government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King for what he described as "the lack of progress in the war effort," saying that the Government had failed to handle "bottlenecks and strikes."

MOSCOW, Sept. 23 (AP)—Today's Soviet Information Bureau communiqué follows:

During the night of Sept. 22-23 our troops fought the enemy along the whole front.

The Germans lost in battle with one of our units in the western direction over 300 men and officers killed and about 1,000 wounded. We captured six German tanks, eight guns, twenty-four machine guns, two mortars an other arms.

Aircraft cooperating with our infantry destroyed about two enemy companies and twenty-five trucks carrying ammunition.

On another sector in the western direction of the front one of our units during Sept. 20 and 21 destroyed more than 250 German soldiers and officers, two tanks, eight trucks, two planes and an ammunition dump.

We captured nine tanks, five armored cars, eight guns, twenty-one machine guns, twelve automatic rifles, six large-caliber machine guns, six mortars, twenty-five cases of mines and several thousand rounds of ammunition.

On Sept. 20 and 21 a Black Sea Fleet air squadron brought down nine enemy planes and destroyed ten guns and thirty-four trucks.

A group of our planes operating in the western direction of the front attacked a concentration of enemy troops, destroying more than thirty trucks loaded with infantry and thirty fuel tank cars.

Another group of our planes destroyed about a battalion of German infantry, a motorized infantry company, sixty-five ammunition trucks and one railway train by bomba and machine-gun fire.

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Sept. 24 (AP)—The Soviet information bureau issued this communiqué early today:

During Sept. 23 fighting continued along the whole front.

Fifty-three enemy planes were destroyed on Sept. 21. We lost sixteen planes.

As a result of four days' stubborn fighting, units of Commander Maslennikoff operating in a western direction of the front inflicted a defeat upon the 233d and 235th Regiments of the 102d German Infantry Division, throwing their remnants behind the western Dvina River. The enemy left on the field of action more than 2,500 bodies of killed men and officers.

The fire of our artillery destroyed two artillery and ten minethrower batteries. We captured trophies.

In one sector of the front in a northwestern direction our attack planes destroyed forty-three German tanks. In another sector they destroyed eight tanks, seven anti-aircraft guns, thirty-five trucks and tank trucks with fuel.

In fighting a White Finnish unit one of our detachments killed 150 men and officers and captured seven machine-guns, 1,000 hand grenades, 12,000 cartridges and important staff documents.

BERLIN, Sept. 23 (AP)—The following special communiqué was issued today from German headquarters:

After forces concentrated in the area east of Kiev made unsuccessful attempts to break out, increasing signs of disintegration became noticeable among the enemy.

At many points officers and commissars of the Russians left their troops in cowardly flight to gain safety individually. But they could not escape their fate.

The number of prisoners in this battle meanwhile increased to approximately 380,000. More than 570 tanks and 2,100 guns have thus far been taken as loot or destroyed. These figures are constantly increasing.

Fifty Soviet divisions may be regarded as completely destroyed. The commander in chief of the Fifth Russian Army is among the prisoners taken.

Besides the armies already mentioned, the armies of Col. Gen. Baron von Weichs and General of Infantry von Stuelpnagel prominently participated in the fortunate course of the battle.

German field headquarters issued the following regular communiqué today:

SEP 24 1941

In the fight against Soviet naval forces and transports the air force yesterday scored big successes. Stukas set a cruiser afire south of Odessa; seriously damaged a torpedo boat and a patrol boat, and destroyed nine freighters totaling 15,000 tons.

In Kronstadt waters the air force sank one cruiser and one destroyer. Bomb hits were scored on another cruiser and two destroyers. A tanker was set afire. Further effective air raids were directed against military objectives at Leningrad and against rail connections of the enemy around Bryansk and Kharkov as well as in Crimea.

In the fight against British supply shipping, the air force last night sank an 8,000-ton merchantman off the mouth of the Humber.

Warding off an enemy attack on a convoy, mine sweepers brought down four British planes.

There were no combat operations of the enemy over Reich territory day or night.

LONDON, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued this communiqué today:

Yesterday a Beaufort aircraft of the Coastal Command, on patrol off the coast of Norway, attacked and hit a large enemy supply ship.

Last night weather was unfavorable for operation, but a small number of aircraft of the Bomber Command, without loss to themselves, bombed the docks at Boulogne.

The crew of one of our bombers reported from operations last Saturday night has been rescued.

A joint communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries early today said:

Shortly after dark a single enemy aircraft dropped bombs in East Anglia. No casualties were caused and there was only slight damage. Apart from this, there is nothing to report.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 23 (AP)—British Middle East headquarters issued this communiqué today:

Libya—As a result of their vigorous patrolling activities, our forces at Tobruk are steadily enlarging the area outside our perimeter of defenses which the enemy is forced nightly to evacuate.

In the frontier area aggressive action by our patrols is continuing.

Italian

ROME, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued this communiqué:

The airfields of Maccaba and Halfar on Malta were again bombed last night by our air force.

British aircraft raided Bengazi and the Island of Leros in the Aegean Sea. Bombs were dropped indiscriminately. One enemy twin-engined machine was shot down by land defenses of Leros.

In the Eastern Mediterranean our air force repeatedly attacked enemy merchant shipping. Two small vessels were hit and probably sunk.

Stettinius Reported Opposing Curb On Lease Help To Russia

Declares Future Is Too Uncertain For Prohibition. Wickard Asks Billion For Food For Britain

SEP 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 23—Opposition to any restriction that would prohibit lend-lease assistance to Russia was reported to have been expressed before a House subcommittee today by Edward R. Stettinius, lend-lease administrator.

Before the same group, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard also testified that a minimum of $1,000,000,000 would be needed to keep England supplied with food over the next five months.

Both spoke in behalf of the new $5,985,000,000 appropriation recently requested by President Roosevelt for the lend-lease program.

Stettinius, however, was said to have conditioned his statement on Russian aid with an explanation that it was not the policy of the Government to give the Soviet Government materials bought with lend-lease funds.

Russia has been paying for her purchases, but recently was given advance credits on certain Russian exports to this country in order to buy war materials.

Nevertheless, Stettinius was emphatic in opposing any amendment to the bill which would prevent help to the Soviets. The future is so uncertain, he was reported to have said, that any restrictive provisions would be highly undesirable.

Wickard testified that Great Britain was "dependent upon North America for huge quantities of food stuffs. . . ." Unless the British are to lose to Hitler, he said, "the deficit has to be made up from this country and Canada." Moreover, he said, British food might be greater "in the months just ahead than in those of the past."

"Very Lowest Estimate"

He testified that up to the start of this month about $433,000,000 had been allocated to the Agriculture Department under the original $7,000,000,000 lease-lend appropriation. He said that a request for $1,000,000,000 of the new appropriation "is the very lowest estimate of funds needed for the commodities the department has promised to supply to Britain."

Of the billion, he continued, about one third would be used to purchase pork products, including lard; another third for dairy products and eggs, and the balance for tobacco, cotton and a number of vitamin-rich fruit and vegetable products.

Must Be Sent By February

Wickard said that the requested $1,000,000,000 includes only the amount which must actually be paid out by February 28, 1942.

The Secretary said the program for supplying food for England had proceeded "much more rapidly than we thought we could." The first British request for farm products arrived in March, he added, and by mid-April ships loaded with these supplies were sailing for England.

"The rate of shipment has been increasing steadily ever since," the Secretary said. "By the end of August, we had sent about 420,000 long tons of farm products and had reached a rate of about 200,000 tons a month. Some of the items sent in largest quantity include evaporated milk, cheese, canned tomatoes, starch, lard, dried beans, dried fruit, corn and pork."

President Takes Firm Stand In AFL Strike Tying Up 26 Vessels

Reiterates Views When Asked On Likelihood Of More Requisitioning

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept 23—A ten-day-old strike of AFL seamen was certified to the Defense Mediation Board today, and shortly thereafter President Roosevelt told a press conference that ships could not remain tied up because of labor troubles.

Those ships have got to move, the President said, in referring to twenty-six strike-bound vessels anchored in various ports. The vessels are needed to transport defense materials to American industries and lease-lend goods to enemies of the Axis.

The President reiterated that the ships could not remain tied up when asked about the possibility that the Maritime Commission might take over the bulk of the merchant marine.

The Mediation Board immediately telegraphed union leaders asking that the men return to work pending negotiations, and called a hearing in the case for next Monday in Washington.

Plea To Unions

The Mediation Board telegram was signed by William H. Davis, chairman. It also was sent to representatives of the ship owners, and said, in part:

"The ships now tied up as a result of this dispute are vitally and immediately needed for the transportation of defense materials.

"With complete confidence in the loyalty and patriotism of the striking members and officials of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific and the Seafarers' International Union, the National Defense Mediation Board calls upon them to return to and operate the ships pending the board's consideration of this dispute."

More Join Strike

The twenty-six figure was reached today when crews of three more vessels joined the ten-day strike which started when union demands for higher war bonuses were rejected. The vessels are the Waterman Steamship Company's Lafayette, docked at Staten Island, N. Y.; the Alcoa Puritan, which arrived in Los Angeles during the day, and the Alcoa Pilgrim, which docked today at Mobile.

The Maritime Commission had offered to meet representatives of the shipping industry and the seamen's unions in Washington Thursday to discuss the war bonus dispute.

An acceptance was received today from the American Merchant Marine Institute, an organization of ship owners, but the unions stuck to previously expressed determination not to confer with the owners if such a meeting were arranged by the Maritime Commission.

Therefore, the commission canceled plans to hold such a conference.

Three Vessels Taken Over

The commission last week requisitioned three strike-bound freighters of the Alcoa Line over union objections.

The unions are asking $60 a month bonuses for trips to the West Indies and increases in present bonuses for voyages into war zones. The latter bonuses now vary with different zones and the length of time spent in them, and the size of the increases sought has not been made public.

Henderson Discloses Plan For Voluntary Move To Fight Inflation

Tells House Committee Such Agreements Are 'Highly Likely'

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 23—Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, aimed another blow at efforts to include wage regulation in the Administration's price control bill when he disclosed today that the Government was working toward voluntary agreements to prevent wage increases and thereby help forestall inflation.

Such agreements, he told the House Banking Committee are "not only feasible but highly likely."

Terms It Next Step

Although he did not go into details, Henderson said Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the Office of Production Management, had been working toward that goal for some time.

"It's the next step," Henderson added, in response to questions by Representative Boggs (Dem., La.).

Disclosure of the voluntary wage agreement plan came at a time when strong sentiment was being manifest in the committee for all-embracing legislation which would "freeze" every element of the nation's price structure—wages, commodity prices, profits and rents.

Members from farm States have been particularly outspoken in their demands that wages be regulated as well as prices. Twelve of the committee's twenty-five members come from States which have large farming populations.

Points To Britain

In indorsing the voluntary plan for curbing wage increases, Henderson said that despite the war powers possessed by the British Government, leaders in that country placed "much more reliance on voluntary understandings than on the law."

He asserted this country had been heading toward such a solution of the wage problem toward the close of the World War and expressed belief that it could be worked out in the current emergency by dealing with price and wage matters on a regional basis.

On Forced Pay Raises

Henderson emphasized that wages should be kept in restraint, but said that at the opening of a great national effort, such as the current armament program, "you cannot get the cooperation necessary by fixing wages."

In answer to questions by Representative Patman (Dem., Texas), Henderson said that if wage increases were forced on an industry for which he had fixed a price ceiling, he would raise that ceiling to compensate.

Van Wagoner Sees 'Chaos' in Priorities Rule

Michigan Governor Urges Aid for Areas Unable to Share in Defense Work

DETROIT, Sept. 23 (AP).—Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner, of Michigan, declared today that the nation faces economic chaos "within three months" unless civilian labor and materials priorities are granted immediately to areas unable to participate in the national defense effort.

Appearing as a witness before a special House committee investigating national defense migration, the Governor asserted product-quotas and defense priorities over essential materials threaten to wipe out the small business man and industrialist.

He said Michigan, as well as other states, was confronted with economic and welfare problems "far worse than the depth of the last depression" because small community industries are being starved by defense priorities and their resources are not being utilized.

"I know that national defense deserves the right-of-way," Governor Van Wagoner continued. "I know that the larger plants are better equipped to speed defense production and that sub-contracting of defense work is not possible or practical in every instance.

"But I know also that unless civilian labor priorities and civilian materials priorities are granted quickly to those areas which cannot participate in national defense business, Michigan and the nation will see economic chaos within three months."

Turning to the curtailment of automotive production, which the Governor contends will throw thousands out of work because they cannot be absorbed into defense production, Governor Van Wagoner urged adoption of a thirty-two-hour week which he said would prevent any unemployment in Detroit before December and reduce it materially after that time.

To prevent labor dislocation, Governor Van Wagoner urged allocation of additional defense contracts, especially to small communities, and acceleration of defense jobs, measures to protect the economic security of workers temporarily displaced, and a check on the flow of migrating workers into industrial centers until all employables are absorbed.

John D. O'Connell, director of the Michigan Department of Social Welfare, testified that the 50 per cent cut in automotive production would leave between 150,000 and 173,000 workers idle.

PREDICTS SERIOUS FREIGHT CAR LACK

SEP 24 1941

Magdoff Says 370,000 New Units Will Be Needed.

Washington, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—A defense research official expressed the opinion today that an imminent serious shortage of transportation facilities may become one of the most serious bottlenecks in the arms program.

Harry Magdoff, acting chief of the civilian supply section of the OPM Research and Statistics Bureau, predicted that only 1,516,000 active, serviceable freight cars will be available this fall to handle an estimated peak load requiring 1,646,000 cars.

Moreover, to meet peak requirements in the fall of 1942, an unprecedented car building program of a minimum 370,000 freight cars will be required, he said in a report.

"This program exceeds the most optimistic estimates of existing car building capacity in the United States," Mr. Magdoff asserted. "During the past twenty years the highest car construction was 175,748 in 1923. Sixteen million net tons of steel ingots will be needed to build 370,000 freight cars."

Mr. Magdoff said that his estimates did not take into account shipping restrictions, large scale army maneuvers and other factors which might further complicate the situation.

He predicted that 46,200,000 carloads in 1942 would be required to handle freight for the defense program and increased industrial activity. In 1940 only 36,354,000 carloads were needed for such purposes.

BANKS' LOAN FUNDS CUT $1,200,000,000

Reserve Board Orders Members Of System To Lay Aside Portion Of Deposits

Joint Action With Treasury Taken To Prevent Credit Inflation

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 23—The Federal Reserve Board today ordered banks to set aside a larger proportion of deposits in reserve accounts as a step to prevent credit inflation.

The increase amounted to about one seventh and took about $1,200,000,000 of idle bank cash out of accounts where it could be loaned or invested.

The board took the action after consulting the Treasury. The two agencies issued a statement saying it was part of the general anti-inflation program of the Administration, which includes a price-control bill now pending in Congress.

$5,200,000,000 Idle Funds

Technically today's action meant that in New York, for instance, banks must keep 26 per cent. of their deposits in reserve instead of 22¾ per cent. The action, however, applied only to the approximately 6,600 banks which belong to the Federal Reserve System.

The board said that these banks had about $5,200,000,000 of idle money which they could loan out or invest. When today's order becomes effective on November 1 this amount will be cut to about $4,000,000,000.

"The action," the board said, "will leave the banks as a whole with ample funds to meet all bank credit needs of the defense program and all legitimate requirements of their customers."

Set At Maximum Limit

Today's order set reserves at the maximum limits permitted by present law. This limit was in effect from May 1, 1937, to April 15, 1938, when it was reduced to present levels in an effort to overcome the business recession which occurred at that time. The new limits, however, represent a doubling of the reserve requirements in effect prior to 1936.

The requirements vary.

In the case of time or savings deposits in all cities where member banks are located the reserve was increased from five to six per cent. of deposits.

Requirement Raised

On demand or checking deposits, the reserve requirement was raised as follows:

New York and Chicago—From 22¾ to 26 per cent.

Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond, Atlanta, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Dallas and San Francisco—From 17½ to 20 per cent.

Other Cities—From 12 to 14 per cent.

The board said a recent survey showed that nearly all the banks had enough cash on hand to meet the new requirements. Although the new percentages will be in effect November 1, no penalties will be assessed against banks for failing to meet the new requirements until after December 1.

Mostly Theoretical

Experts said that the importance of the action was mostly theoretical.

The action meant that in Boston, for instance, a member bank of the Federal Reserve System when receiving a $100 checking account deposit must, starting November 1, put aside $20 as a reserve. The other $80 can be lent out, invested or used by the bank in any way it wishes.

Assuming the money is lent out the money could be used to buy things. The more money is available to buy goods, the more the prices of those goods are likely to rise. Thus, the more the banks hold in reserve, the less can be spent in ways that might cause prices to rise.

The joint statement of the Treasury and Federal Reserve Board follows:

"The Treasury and the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System will continue to watch the economic situation and to cooperate with other agencies of the Government in their efforts through priorities, allocation, price regulation, and otherwise to fight inflation. Recommendation of the question of what additional powers, if any, over banking reserves the board should have during the present emergency and what form these powers should take will be made whenever the Treasury and the board, after further consultation, determine that such action is necessary to combat inflationary developments."

SOLDIER ARRESTED AS SPY FOR NAZIS

Medical Corpsman, Taken At Governor's Island Held Under $25,000 Bail

SEP 24 1941

F. B. I. Agent Testifies 1 Of 16 On Trial Boasted Of Knowing U. S. "Secret"

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 23—Rene Froehlich, 30, a private in the United States Medical Corps at Fort Jay, Governor's Island, was held today on a Federal espionage charge accusing him of being a member of an international Nazi spy ring.

Froehlich was held in $25,000 bail on the same charge which resulted in the arrest several weeks ago of Kurt Frederick Ludwig, described in the indictment as master spy in the alleged ring's American activities.

Ludwig and three others, including two young Brooklyn workers and a young New York woman secretary were ordered yesterday to go to trial October 6 on the indictment, which specifically charged them with obtaining vital American defense secrets for transmission to the German Government through agents in Spain and Portugal.

Ordered To Bellevue

Froehlich was arrested on a warrant and arraigned before Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe by Chief Assistant United States Attorney John Sonnett.

At Sonnett's request, the soldier was ordered to Bellevue Hospital for observation. The prosecutor said that several months ago Froehlich received hospitalization on Governor's Island while suffering despondency with suicidal tendencies.

Froehlich, Sonnett said, was accused of conspiring with Ludwig to procure information from military publications available to soldiers but not ordinarily circulated among civilians.

Arrested At Hospital

The soldier went A. W. O. L. last September 13, Sonnett said, and was arrested at King's Park State Hospital on Long Island where, Sonnett said, his mother was a mental patient.

Froehlich was born in Dresden, Germany, came to the United States in 1923, became a citizen, and was drafted into the army last February.

Asked if he had anything to say, Froehlich replied: "All I can say is I was not aware of Mr. Ludwig's activities and anything I sold to him I did not with the intention"——

Interested In Bail

At this point Judge Coxe interrupted to explain that he was interested merely in the matter of bail and a future hearing and not on the merits of the charge.

Records showed the young man, unmarried, had been a clerk in the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, where his father was manager of the tourist service. When the offices were closed, the records showed, he went to the Trans-Ocean News Service, a German news bureau having no American connections. The bureau has since been closed on Government orders which charged it with being a German propaganda bureau.

Testifies In Spy Trial

While Froelich was being arrested, an F. B. I. counter-espionage agent was testifying at the trial of sixteen men in Brooklyn Federal Court on charges of espionage that Herman Lang, a defendant, told him that he (Lang) "was the only man who knew the American secret."

What the secret was, Harold Kennedy, United States Attorney, did not bring out immediately in his examination of the witness, William G. Sebold, who testified earlier he turned over his German espionage assignment to the F. B. I. and became a counter-espionage agent. Earlier in the three-week-old trial Kennedy accused Lang of selling details of the Norden bombsight to Germany.

Lang was at one time employed by Carl L. Norden, Inc., bombsight manufacturers, as a machinist and draftsman. Sebold testified he had several meetings with Lang, at one of which the bombsight was discussed.

Sebold said that Lang was reluctant to talk with him although Sebold relayed to him various code and pass words which he had from Germany via a German espionage radio with which United States agents corresponded, posing as German agents.

The witness identified a series of messages sent and received by the United States counter-espionage radio station in which arrangements were made for Lang's passage to Germany.

At Lang's Apartment

Sebold said his discussion of the bombsight with Lang at Lang's apartment was on July 11, 1940. At that point the case was recessed until tomorrow.

Earlier, a statement given to the F. B. I. by another defendant, Heinrich Carl Eilers, former steward on the United States Lines liner Manhattan and later on the liner America, was read into the record.

In this, Eilers said he had been approached to carry information from the United States to Europe—in his capacity as a steward—but that he had declined to become involved.

LOEW'S SHARE IN BRITISH FILM COMPANY TOLD

Schenck Says Investment in Gaumont Chain Is $3,000,000.

SEP 24 1941

TESTIFIES IN CLARK INQUIRY

Senator Downey Defends Movies; Asserts Hitler's Acts Make Propaganda Pale.

Washington, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's Inc., testified today that his company had a $3,500,000 investment in the Gaumont-British chain of theaters and owned interests in seven Australian and three Canadian theaters.

The testimony was given before a Senate sub-committee investigating alleged war propaganda in the movies. The committee previously had heard charges that the motion picture industry had a vital stake in a British victory in the war.

Mr. Schenck told a questioner, Senator Tobey, Republican, of New Hampshire, that he could not remember the names of any subsidiaries of Loew's except Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Senator Tobey declared, amid applause and some hissing:

"If you are Exhibit A of the average corporation director in this country, God save the stockholders."

Mr. Schenck testified after Senator Downey, Democrat, of California, had told the committee that the motion picture industry ought to be accorded the same freedom of expression as other agencies. Chairman Clark, Democrat, of Idaho, then took occasion to tell Mr. Downey that no member of the subcommittee favored censorship.

Loew's is interested in 129 theaters in the United States, the witness said, adding that it jointly operated fourteen others with other movie companies and individuals.

Attacks Schenck's Memory.

Mr. Tobey broke in to say that Mr. Schenck's memory seemed to be far clearer in what Tobey regarded as "less important" matters, than it was on the subsidiary companies. Mr. Schenck said he had been actively engaged in supervising the construction of many of the theaters, but the financial arrangements with the subsidiaries of Loew's were "nothing in my life."

Senator McFarland, Democrat, of Arizona, read to the committee a telegram from Harry Brand, West Coast advertising representative of Twentieth Century-Fox, denying testimony by Jimmy Fidler that the studio had attempted to influence his opinions as a movie reviewer after the firm had paid him $3,000 for making an advertising "trailer." Mr. Brand said in his telegram that Mr. Fidler had made "a deliberate attempt to distort the facts."

Mr. Brand charged that Mr. Fidler had attempted to get Brand to have Twentieth Century-Fox stars to purchase gowns from a shop in which Mrs. Fidler had a financial interest.

Alice Faye purchased a dress for several hundred dollars, Mr. Brand said, adding that "the first time she wore it, it fell apart."

Senator Downey, in his long statement, flatly disputed that movies were being used to spread war propaganda.

A Straw Man, Says Clark.

When Mr. Downey concluded, Chairman Clark told him that "in some ways you have built up a man of straw and proceeded to demolish it." No member of the committee and no witness before it, Mr. Clark contended, had suggested censorship. On the other hand, the chairman asserted, there ha dbeen complaints that the moving picture industry had been "made not free by virtue of monopolistic control."

"One kind of censorship might be just as vicious as the other," he told Mr. Downey.

Senator McFarland remarked that "this whole investigation is a straw investigation."

"We'll see," Senator Clark retorted. "It may be a straw in the wind."

There was prolonged applause in the crowded hearing room as Mr. Downey walked out.

Senator Clark brought out in questioning Mr. Schenck that of about 1,627,000 shares of Loew's common stock, Mr. Schenck and his family owned only 5,000 or 6,000.

No Vacation in Three Years.

"Is there any reason why you haven't acquired more stock?" he asked.

"Just the reason that a man who is too close to his own business hasn't got the confidence he should have, I guess," Mr. Schenck replied.

The witness testified that Loew's had gross assets of approximately $150,000,000, gross income exceeding $100,000,000 annually.

Mr. Schenck told Senator Tobey he had worked for three years without a day of vacation.

"I know my business; I know it awfully well," he continued, "and I don't consider it any lack of responsibility that I'm sitting here and unable to remember some corporate names."

Questioned by Mr. McFarland, Mr. Schenck said that when Loew's purchased a theater property it might set up a corporation to operate it for the sake of convenience while the stock was entirely owned by the parent company.

Hitler's Acts as Propaganda.

"The potent propaganda is not movies about Hitler," Senator Downey asserted in his statement, "it is Hitler himself. What script could arouse our animosity toward his philospophy as surely as the simple chart of the Nazi conquest? The facts themselves make propaganda pale."

Chairman Clark said that the subcommittee would pursue its announced intention of surveying the entire film industry to prove or discredit the charges that producers were foisting propaganda on the public in an effort to get the United States into war.

Senator Downey, however, questioned the use of "the ill-defined term of 'propaganda' as an excuse for censorship or harrassing investigation." Citing the constitutional guaranty of freedom of expression, he asserted:

"I believe that this same democratic guaranty covers such forms of expression as the moving pictures. I believe that the producers of these pictures share the same privilege with editors, soap box orators, radio commentators, clergymen, yes, even Senators—the privilege of airing their own views in their own way on problems of public concern.

"No Senator can control the kind of publicity that the movies may produce, nor can movie moguls find a national sounding board on the floor of the United States Senate. . . .

"It may be charged that the domination of film production by a few companies has resulted in a monopolistic situation, and that this cannot offer the same possibilities of diversity of opinion as a more competitive condition. Let me ask, if 500 men control an industry are they to have the right to free speech, but if the operation of a business is by fifty men are they to be denied protection of the Bill of Rights?"

UNION CHIEF URGES END OF NEUTRALITY

Shipyard Workers' Leader Asks Repeal of Act.

SEP 24 1941

Atlantic City, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—John Green of Collingswood, N. J., president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (C. I. O.), advocated repeal of the neutrality act in a speech today before 200 convention delegates representing 100,000 union members in all shipyards of the nation.

"Yes, we support President Roosevelt's foreign policy," Mr. Green said. "We agree with his pronouncements, with the eight-point program he and Winston Churchill gave to the world, and we agree with his actions to implement these pronouncements, and we say that there is no turning back. If the neutrality act stands in the way—and I believe it does stand in the way—let it be wiped off the statute books."

Mr. Green told the convention that American workers know in their hearts that unless we stop this spread of Nazism, this cursed system will eventually engulf us all, and the workers will be the first and last to suffer.

"Is there any American worker today so blind, so deaf, so unknowing as not to realize that the fate which Hitler imposed upon labor in Germany, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France is the same fate which he holds in store for us if he has his way with the world?

"Is there any so blissfully unconscious as to think that we can pursue our leisurely course in this country and live happily afterward while the rest of the world is under the heel of the Nazi tyrant? If there is such a one, I have never met him amongst the shipyard workers of the nation."

New York League Adopts Resolution Urging War

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (AP)—A resolution urging America's immediate entry into the war was adopted today by 125 men and women at a luncheon of the newly-formed New York City League for a Declared War.

The local league is affiliated with the Associated Leagues for a Declared War, which claims to have similar organizations in 223 communities in 37 states.

Ninety Sign Protest Against Intolerance

Urge Fullest Freedom For Debate Without Dragging In Other Issues

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Fullest freedom of debate on national policy without any effort "to pit religion against religion, race against race" was urged today in a statement signed by ninety Americans, including Wendell Willkie, Alfred M. Landon and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The statement, released under auspices of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, declared such attempts were "a betrayal of the treasured traditions of our democracy" and said that Americans should continue "their repudiation of appeal to prejudice wherever and by whomsoever made."

Among the signers were Columnists Hugh S. Johnson and Dorothy Thompson, Socialist Leader Norman Thomas, Ernest Weir, of the Weirton Steel Company; Labor Leaders William Green and Philip Murray and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York.

War Declaration Urged by Conant

Harvard President Says U. S. Delays Peace

CAMBRIDGE, Sept. 23 (AP)—President William Bryant Conant, opening Harvard University's college year today, declared that the United States, by failing to act with its full force in the war, was delaying the hour of final victory and ultimate peace.

"To my mind," said President Conant in a chapel address, "until Congress does declare war, we as a people are dwelling in an ambiguous half-way house.

"By failing to participate fully in an effort essential to our own safety, we are in effect letting others do our fighting for us. In my opinion, until we have declared war our national conscience will every day grow more disturbed."

Interventionists Won Isolation, Nye Says

That Group Redefined Monroe Doctrine, Senator Tells America First Rally

Newark, N. J., Sept. 23 (AP)—Senator Gerald P. Nye (Rep., N. D.) declared tonight that American niterventionists have redefined the Monroe Doctrine and "have won isolation by seeking for and asking for trouble."

The Senator told an America First Committee in a prepared speech that "as construed by American leadership today the Monroe Doctrine is an instrument which forbids non-Americans any interference on the American Continent, but which permits America to interfere anywhere in the world.

"It becomes now, in the hands of interventionists, an instrument to invite trouble for ourselves."

Air Force Claim Proved

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 23—High military officials said today that the Army Air Force had surpassed all expectations for performance during the Louisiana maneuvers and that only time stood between the United States and unchallengeable superiority in the air.

Combat craft ordered from the drawing boards only a few months ago and pilots fresh from training schools participated in the gigantic war games. They had the task of demonstrating whether, as military men had claimed, this country had the world's best air force in point of quality.

Storms Add Difficulty

Except for the absence of "live" ammunition the flying was done under conditions as nearly warlike as they could be made and authorities said they could not have asked for better performance either by the men or the machines.

In fact, they added, storms which flooded flying fields made the test much more difficult than planned and, consequently, the results were much better than the most optimistic had hoped for.

"Only Time Needed"

"We know now," one official said, "that we have the world's finest planes and our flying men are superb. All we need is time—time to turn out huge numbers of these planes to bring the quantity of our air force up to its quality and to train our young pilots in combat flying."

Gretest Depression Predicted By Wheeler

Senator Says It Will Make Last One Look Like Pink Tea By Comparison

Seattle, Sept. 23 (AP)—Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) predicted today a depression would follow the present war "which will make the last one look like a pink tea by comparison."

"I hate to think what's going to happen to these big coastal cities when the war is over," he told a civic club udience. "They've drawn in the workers by the tens of thousands from the Middle West."

Wheeler said some Montana businessmen had chided him over his stand against President Roosevelt's policies, expressing the belief it had kept war industries from his State.

"I told them we'd be better off in the long run," he asserted. "We'll have less trouble adjusting ourselves to conditions after the war."

SAYS ARMY NEEDS TRAINING OF YEAR

Gen. McNair Finds That Much Time Is Required To Prepare It "For Battle"

Cites Lack Of Equipment In Commenting On Louisiana Maneuvers

SEP 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Camp Polk, La., Sept. 23—Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, chief of the Army General Headquarters Staff, reviewing the maneuvers between the Second and Third armies in Louisiana, said today more than one year's training was needed o prepare the United States Army "for battle."

"The Germans were training for seven years," he said in a press conference. "We are on our first lap. We expect more time than one year to fit us for battle."

"If these troops—about 400,000 by the army's latest count—were completely equipped, they would acquit themselves better than troops in the World War, which is not saying too much," declared McNair, who has headed the training of the new army since its expansion more than a year ago.

Troops involved have been in training for the most part from six months to a year.

Equipment Shortages

General McNair said the army's principal shortages are in ammunition, radio equipment, weapons, planes and vehicles ranging from trucks to tanks, and added the army would continue "intensive training as long as time is given us."

The press conference was in expansion of prepared remarks McNair gave out after a critique for 1,000 higher officers of the first week's exercises. The four-day recess of the games ended tonight.

McNair said the "principal weakness" of the army training program was "in small-unit training," due fundamentally to inadequate leadership."

"We all realize," he continued, "that our officer personnel is not ideal in qualifications and experience. We can't expect to create such leadership overnight.

General Principles Criticized

Among general principles McNair criticized were: Some disregard of orders for complete blackouts in the field, improper disposition of troops and material for defense, lack of counter-attack in defensive actions, weakness in reconnaissance and protection of behind-the-line areas and lack of understanding or disregard of standing operation procedure.

"The outstanding strength of the army," he said, "is in the devotion, spirit and putoutiveness of the men in the ranks."

McNair said that in training of the armies after the maneuvers here, concentration will be on target practice. He added that attempts at realism in the current games had suffered because of lack of blank ammunition. Asked the reason for this, he said "at present blank ammunition doesn't exist in the United States."

Heroism Of Two Cited

General McNair praised the spirit of the men in the ranks. He cited as a "splendid example of devotion to duty" the deaths of Privates Wilford Wilson, of Oakdale, Ind., and Ernest E. White, of Gordon, W. Va., who drowned while trying to swim the swift, fifty-foot Cane river.

The two soldiers were among twenty who volunteered to brave the current to establish a pontoon bridge and permit an attack by Company B, One Hundred and fiftieth Infantry, Thirty-eighth Division.

General McNair described the act as "greater heroism than it would have been in actual battle."

SWEDISH SHIP IS SUNK

Freighter Ossian Sent Down By Aerial Torpedo

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Swedish freighter Ossian, 1,564 tons, has been sunk by an aerial torpedo from a British or Russian plane while traveling in a German convoy in the North Sea, marine circles said tonight.

They said the 49-year-old vessel, en route from Cuxhaven, Germany, t Rotterdam, went down near the Frie sian Islands with a loss of two lives

Marine sources also reported that the British freighter Newbury, 5,102 tons, was torpedoed recently in the north Atlantic.

Bomber Loses Aileions On Way To Britain But Finishes Hop

Wing Tip Also Breaks From Catalina In Dive Over Atlantic After Automatic Pilot Jams

SEP 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 23—A Catalina bomber completed a delivery flight to England with both ailerons and one wing tip missing after a 17,000-foot spiral dive over the Atlantic, Consolidated Aircraft Corporation reported today.

The company said the story was so amazing its release was delayed until confirmation could be obtained from the British Ministry of Information.

Automatic Pilot Jams

Half way across the Atlantic, while the seaplane bomber was cruising at 18,000 feet, the automatic pilot suddenly jammed with the starboard aileron, one of the flaps on the wings that give lateral control of the ship, full down.

The 30,000-pound craft went into a spiral dive. The strain was too great and the starboard aileron broke completely away. With it went the entire wing tip.

Then the other aileron broke loose and fluttered away. This saved the plane, the pilot reported, because it served to balance the bomber.

Joins Fleet On Patrol

Just 800 feet above the water the Catalina, with both pilots straining at the manual controls, swooped into level flight.

The ship, carrying a crew of six, was six hours from its destination.

The British reported the plane had been repaired and had joined a fleet of Catalinas on patrol duty in the Atlantic. A Catalina played a major role in the destruction of the German battleship Bismarck.

Canadian Pacific Liner Sunk Off Ireland During Birthday Fete For Chief Officer

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Torpedoing of the Canadian Pacific liner Beaverdale during a midnight party celebrating the captain's birthday wis disclosed today.

Marine circles reported that the 9,957-ton British ship was sunk by a submarine 300 miles off the Irish coast last April while the captain, whose name was not learned, was being toasted by fellow-officers. The crew was saved.

The loss in the North Atlantic of another ship carrying American supplies to England, the 4,414-ton Norwegian motor-ship freighter Segnedo, also was disclosed. No details were available.

In Montreal, Canadian Pacific Steamships officials said the Beaverdale was sunk last April.

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Fire was discovered today in a coal bunker of the 4,575-ton Greek freighter Odysseus as the ship, loaded with sulphur for the British Ministry of Shipping moved down New York Bay.

The ship anchored a half mile southeast of Bedloe's Island and asked assistance. A fireboat soon brought the fire under control.

Coast Guard Speeds To Rescue. Craft Believed British Arawak, Bound For Bahamas

Flagler Beach, Fla., Sept 23 (AP)—A wooden freighter, believed to be the 115-foot 201-ton British motorship Arawak, continued to burn fiercely twenty-eight miles off this coastal resort town, while Coast Guard boats sped to the rescue of fourteen persons who abandoned the vessel in a lifeboat.

The Arawak, built in 1938, left Jacksonville this morning for its home port of Nassau, Bahamas, and Coast Guardsmen said the description of the burning ship tallied with that of the British freighter.

When it left here, the Arawak carried nine crewmen, a married couple not immediately identified, two children, and a man who was a passenger. Officials of the British consulate declined comment.

Duke And Duchess Reach U. S. With Breezy, Detto And Pooky

Starting 6-Week Vacation To Canadian Ranch With Stops In Capital And Baltimore

SEP 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Miami, Sept. 23—The Duke of Windsor, starting a six weeks' vacation trip with his American-born Duchess, said today he wanted to withhold opinions about world matters until he had time to visit the United States and Canada.

"I want to observe world conditions during my trip over the United States and Canada before I say anything," the former king said in an impromptu radio broadcast shortly after the royal couple reached Miami in a chartered plane from the Bahamian capital of Nassau.

"I can speak for all my countrymen," the Duke added, "when I express to America the heartfelt thanks of Britain for all the moral and material support you are so lavishly giving to her."

The vacation for the Windsors will include visits to Washington, New York and Baltimore, the latter the former home of the Duchess, and a stay at the Duke's Canadian ranch.

The first day of their trip provided little of the rest and privacy the Windsors hoped to obtain by arranging a strictly unofficial stopover in Miami.

Crowds greeted them enthusiastically at the airport and at their hotel. They will continue tomorrow by train for Washington and a White House luncheon.

Other hundreds pressed around the couple as they went to visit their friend, Arthur V. Davis, of Pittsburgh, board chairman of the Aluminum Company of America, on his yacht Moja, which the Duke used for two summer week-end cruises.

The Duke also created a stir at the University of Miami, where he went to visit R. A. F. cadets undergoing advanced flight training under the direction of Pan American Airways instructors.

A party of seven aides and servants accompanied the couple, along with their three Cairn terriers, Breezy Detto and Pooky.

Duke to Boost Tourist Trade

Windsor to Take Time Out on Vacation Trip to Aid Bahama Islands.

Miami, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The Duke of Windsor, once super-salesman for the British empire, will take time out on his vacation trip through the United States and Canada to drum up tourist trade for the little Bahaman colony he now governs.

Miami, first overnight stop on the journey, planned a quiet welcome for him and the American-born Duchess on their arrival today aboard a chartered Pan American clipper from Nassau.

The Windsors plan to entrain tomorrow for Washington, where the Duke will discuss means of transporting tourists to Nassau, winter resort capital of the Bahama Islands. Tourist travel there boomed last season, Edward's first as Governor.

That will be aside from a social program that includes a White House luncheon and a reception at the British embassy.

The chief object of the trip, Edward said in Nassau, is to attend to business affairs at his ranch near Calgary, Alberta, which he has not seen for fourteen years. There he plans to try horseback riding again after years out of the saddle.

Although the return itinerary is uncertain, the Windsors may visit New York and Baltimore, the Duchess's birthplace, before completing the six-week holiday.

If he does go to New York, the abdicated monarch's reception is certain to be on a much quieter scale than his first visit in 1919 when, as Prince of Wales, he was greeted with showers of ticker tape and the cheers of thousands.

Edward's last trip to his ranch and to the eastern United States was in 1924 on an incognito visit.

The War Interpreted

By Dewitt MacKenzie

Developments of the past few days certainly must have forced British Premier Churchill and his advisers to give serious consideration to the idea of staging a modified invasion of the continent in the shape of big and thoroughly organized raids.

The government has refused to be stampeded by pressure of the English press into a premature full-dress invasion, because of the terrible risk of an Allied catastrophe, and military experts generally have agreed that this represented the course of wisdom. However, the gravity of the Russian position in the Ukraine calls for a major distraction to relieve the Nazi pressure against the Muscovites.

This is especially true since further heavy reverses, strengthening the possibility that Hitler may break into the Caucasus, might easily draw Japan and Bulgaria into the war against the Soviet. Even Turkey might feel compelled to grant Hitler military concessions which would multiply allied difficulties.

WOULD NEED EVERY WARSHIP

The danger of an attempt at a general invasion of western Europe lies in the fact that Britain would have to employ every warship she could lay her hands on. This massing of sea-power would present Hitler's Luftwaffe a never-to-be-forgotten target, and there is small doubt that he would fill the sky with warplanes from the eastern theater. A great naval disaster might mean the end of the war for Britain.

Heavy raids, however, could be made without such risk—and there's no telling where they might lead. It's always possible that beach-heads might be established on the French coast in sufficient strength to permit of more extensive operations. In any event, the Germans presumably would be compelled to divert warplanes, tanks and perhaps troops from the eastern theater in order to ensure that the Allies didn't develop the raids into a major operation.

SEP 24 1941

I am not trying to suggest that the Russians are on the point of collapse. There is, however, a very real danger that the Nazis may force their way into the Caucasus, thus jeopardizing the Allied position in the Middle East and the whole Mediterranean zone.

One would expect the Allies would figure it profitable to make a great effort, even with much risk, to liquidate this threat. Possibly they may find opportunity to create a diversion elsewhere, but only a very great challenge to his security could turn Hitler away from that drive to the Middle East.

Signs multiply that Japan is getting set for a possible invasion of Siberia, despite the lateness of the season. Highly reliable sources in Manila say that Nippon has sent at least a million troops to Manchukuo and Korea recently.

MAY ATTACK SIBERIA

It long has been apparent that Japan, while marking time with her drive southward in order to avoid trouble with America, still has figured that she might turn her energies against the Russians without drawing gunfire from Uncle Sam. Tokyo has been watching the Russo-Nazi war front with an eagle eye, ready to take advantage of any Russian adversity.

The deterrent has been the fact that Russia is Britain's ally, and that the United States is rendering the Soviet material aid. Japan is fearful that this combination of circumstances might still involve her in war with the United States. Still, this might not be enough to prevent a Japanese assault on Siberia if Red Marshal Budyenny's armies continue rolling back.

If the Allies can bridge this one contingency—the possibility of a Nazi break-through into the Caucasus—they will be sitting rather pretty for the winter. Here it should be said that the Russians themselves, aided by the weather, may turn the trick. The Germans still have a long stretch of territory to fight across to reach their objective.

All in all, the British will be trusting a lot to fortune if they don't stage a diversion greater than they can by bombing of German territory. This being so, it will be surprising if they don't make some special effort at this critical moment.

Army Enlists Silent Glider As Powerful War Weapon

SEP 24 '41

Motorless Ships Weigh 5000 Pounds or More; Hard to Shoot Down

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (The Special News Service)—Silent attack by air from great heights is the newest war weapon under development by the Army.

Gliders Watched

For years Army Air Corps officers have watched skilled pilots take gliders up to 10,000 feet or more and sail on wings of the wind for hundreds of miles. Many have remarked, "There is one of the answers to combined air and ground maneuvers."

Unfortunately, however, there was no money to develop this new air arm.

Now they are hurrying to develop it in the least possible time. More than 20 officers have been trained by experienced glider pilots at Elmira, N. Y., and Big Meadow, Va., in the art of flying without a prop—and it is an art—and more are going to school every month. The Army has ordered an undisclosed number of motorless planes.

Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, former chief of the Air Corps, said recently the Army will "have a glider force second to none and we will have it when we need it."

Business Ships

These are no ordinary gliders or seaplanes such as those which sportsmen fling around the sky in sheer enjoyment. They are business ships weighing 5000 pounds or more fully loaded. They are capable of carrying a squad of men with full equipment—250 pounds per man including parachutes—for distances up to 200 miles, perhaps more, depending on the wind and the skill of the pilot. Sixty-three per cent of a glider's weight is devoted to payload.

As a result, twice as many parachute troops can be carried in a glider as are carried in an airplane. They can either be scattered over a wide area as the glider swoops down, or be landed as a group.

In daytime the glider always is a good target for antiaircraft batteries because it has no reserve power to climb out of range or avoid enemy fighters. However, it can glide silently into a key area at night and there is little danger of a man being hurt, even if the ship crashes. Gliders land at 30 miles an hour or less and, barring a headon contact with a tree, the men would suffer little more than a few bruises.

Glider Trains

Single-place gliders and soaring planes are launched with a tow car or fast winch to whip them into the air. Troop-carrying gliders, however, are towed into the air in a glider-train by a plane with a high-powered motor—one of the trickiest jobs in aviation for the pilot of the towing ship. Frank Hawks brought glider towing into reality in 1930 when he flew from San Diego, Cal., to New York at the tail end of a tow rope.

It is possible to tow two or more fully-loaded gliders up to 10,000 feet with sufficiently high-powered planes, such as the new four-motored bombers. Then, over enemy territory, the glider pilots can slip the towing cable and drift down while the bomber proceeds on its mission.

Britain's Royal Air Force is experimenting with gliders which could cross the English Channel into France. The silent invaders, working in co-ordination with water-borne troops, long-range artillery fire, bombers and fighter planes sweeping across from England, might be able to accomplish what Germany says cannot be done—the invasion of France, Norway and the Low Countries.

Hard to Shoot Down

Both American and English fliers believe that the machine-gun bullets from a fighter plane would probably not be able to shoot down a glider unless the control cables were cut, the pilot killed or the tail shot off. Even under attack it could still sweep smoothly to earth or dodge into clouds, which are the natural fueling place for a glider in using upward-moving currents to climb.

Maj. Fred R. Dent, Jr., assistant chief of the aircraft laboratory at Wright Field, Dayton, O., one of the officers trained to glide, described his experience in the latest issue of the Air Corps News Letter. Two sailplanes were towed by a small plane to 4000 feet where Dent, with some trepidation, cut loose his tow rope and started out on his own.

He headed for the nearest black cloud and, flying by instruments, dived immediately into the reverse of a spin, spiraling upward to 8000 feet where his air fuel gave out. He dived out of the cloud and hunted another. This one carried him to 10,000 feet where thunder rumbled all around and thick ice formed on the wings and windshield. Four instruments froze p completely.

Gradually, however, the ice began o melt and the instruments began functioning again. He landed about 100 miles short of Williamsport, his destination.

Eire Tightens Belt for a Hard Winter

SEP 24 1941

Shortage of Coal Will Be Felt Most; DeValera Warns of Virtual Blockade

By MICHAEL ROONEY

DUBLIN—(Correspondence of the Special News Service)—Neutral Eire is tightening her belt for a hard winter.

Prime Minister DeValera has warned his country that because of its geographical situation it must suffer the effects of a virtual blockade.

"We are not going to go hungry," asserts Agricultural Minister James Ryan, "but there are a lot of things we may have to do without."

Most serious shortage may be of British coal. Stocks in the country are very low. Some merchants are unable to supply their customers with the meager ration of a quarter ton a month. The railways are feeling the pinch and services have been curtailed.

Something approaching dismay has been created by the declaration of the president of the British board of trade that "not a single ton of coal which could be used at home would be exported unless under overwhelming national considerations."

In this difficult situation the Eire government is directing an intense drive for increased production of peat, present in the Irish bogs in millions of tons. But it remains to be seen whether, in the absence of coal, peat can be produced in sufficient quantities to keep all the —home fires burning.

Petrol is still being imported in small quantities. Private motorists receive an average of about four gallons a month and the result is that most of the private cars are off the road. Dublin city bus services have been reduced. No bus now runs after 11 p.m., after which the city center is deserted.

Harvest prospects are good. Experts say there will be sufficient wheat to last throughout the winter, though there may have to be a mixture with other cereals to make bread, already of a slightly brownish color. There is a greater acreage under potatoes than for many years and a good crop seems assured.

Tea still is rationed at a half ounce a person a week. The sugar ration is one pound a person a week. Coffee is almost unobtainable. Cocoa is becoming scarce. Rice is doled out in small packets by shopkeepers who say they don't know where the next lot is coming from.

When present supplies of American tinned fruits are exhausted, there may be none to follow. We may have to eat our meat without salt, possibly without pepper.

Here are some other things the Irish housewife may have to do without in the near future:

Vinegar, sauces, chutneys, jellies, baking powders, dried fruits, paints and polishes and creams, paraffin—and every week adds new commodities to the list.

In short, as one leading Dublin businessman puts it, "It's goodbye to fancy fare and a lot of other things besides. But we won't be hungry and that's something to be thankful for."

Air-Force Commander Reported Dismissed—Subversive Issue Becomes Linked With Domestic Political Quarrel

SEP 25 1941

Chamber Rejects U. S. Loan For Economic Program In Resentment At Castillo's Charge Radical Party Figured In Plot

[By the Associated Press]

Antofagasta, Chile, Sept. 24 — German residents of Antofagasta crowded the airport office here today and thundered a "Heil Hitler" in farewell to their arrested leader, who was taken to Santiago for trial on charges of anti-Chilean activities.

The Nazi leader, a German named Gubernatis, harangued his followers in German before detectives hustled him aboard the plane.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 24 (AP) — Friederich von Schulz-Hausmann, former manager for the North German Lloyd Line in Chile, arrived in Argentina by air today to take up residence here.

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 24—The head of the Argentine air force was reported relieved of his command tonight in the midst of a growing dispute between acting President Ramon Castillo and the Chamber of Deputies over responsibility for a foiled uprising among army aviation officers.

Unconfirmed reports said Gen. Angel M. Zuloaga, the air-force commander, had been confined to his home, but the news agency Andi, in reporting his dismissal, said he had asked for it himself.

Does Not Admit Complicity

Zuloaga was quoted as saying he felt he could no longer count on the support of army officials.

Andi's informant said the general had not admitted complicity in any plot, but had considered himself offended by the army's attitude.

Castillo, acting President since July, 1940, when President Roberto Ortiz became ill, earlier had charged that Radical party members, Nationalists and "others" were involved in the conspiracy against the Government.

SEP 25 1941

Vigorous In Probe Of Nazis

This promptly caused loud protests from the Radicals, one of whom, Raul Damonte Taborda, was instrumental in the vigorous Congressional committee investigation of Nazi activities in Argentina.

The Radicals also used their dominant political weight in the Chamber of Deputies to show their resentment against Castillo by blocking House approval of a proposed $110,000,000 United States loan which Castillo wants for his economic program.

This angered the Conservative National Democrats, members of Castillo's party. They walked out and said they would not return to the chamber.

Thus the subversive issue in Argentina rapidly became linked with the domestic political quarrel which has existed ever since Castillo became acting President.

Asked Ortiz To Return

Last January the Radicals (actually Liberals) appealed to ailing President Ortiz to return to office, charging that Castillo was not pursuing liberal policies. But Ortiz is too ill to return.

His refusal to resign because of his health has caused fierce political fights and often gunplay. But when Ortiz did submit his resignation in August, 1940, the Congress refused to accept it.

Zuloaga, head of the Unied States-trained Argentine army air force, was made a general December 31, 1940, the only air commander to hold that rank.

The 59-year-old officer holds decorations from many governments and is one of Argentina's pioneer airmen. He made his first flight in a balloon over the Andes in 1915 and served as air attache at Washington in 1916.

Both For Nazi Probe

Both Radicals and Conservatives recently joined in approving a Congressional committee's recommendations that Nazi undercover groups be smashed in Argentina, a move expressing disapproval of the activities of German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann.

The President minimized the seriousness of the nipped uprising and said there was no intention to declare a state of siege. He did not identify the "others" involved in the threat to the Government, although a Congressional committee has charged Nazi elements were conspiring in Argentina.

Resents Blame On Party

Later a Radical spokesman expressed his party's resentment over Castillo's accusation against the party, and declared the Radicals would not vote for any administration measure until the political atmosphere had cleared.

This spokesman charged the Government with a veiled intention of trying to control next December's elections in Buenos Aires province, a pivotal section which usually determines the outcome of the Presidential elections, slated for next year.

One Radical deputy last night declared on the Chamber floor that Acting President Castillo himself had "joined in the totalitarian plotting." This was followed today by the President's counter-charge.

In widespread precautions against the suspected air force coup the Government ordered all military planes grounded until Saturday.

Plane Factory Occupied

Military occupation was extended to a warplane factory at Cordoba, in the heart of Argentina, as well as to every army airfield in the nation. These measures were intended to wipe out all traces of a plot in which a number of high aviation officers were said to have sought to assume power by seizure of army airfields.

The War Ministry ordered detonators of bombs removed and machine-gun ammunition at the airfields put under guard.

A Cabinet meeting tentatively scheduled for today or tomorrow to discuss a Congressional resolution censuring German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann was postponed until the War Minister, Gen. Juan Tonnazi, returns from Chile.

Court-Martial Planned

Court-martial proceedings impended against some twenty army aviation officers arrested yesterday in a swift move which officials said frustrated the plot. A lieutenant-colonel, a captain and a lieutenant were known to be among those arrested.

Leaves were denied for Buenos Aires police, two regiments of infantry and the army school for non-commissioned officers.

Check Missing Ammunition

Two United States bombers, coming from an independence celebration in Chile, landed this evening on the soldier-occupied El Palomar airfield near Buenos Aires despite efforts of officials to have them land on the civilian airdrome of Moron. The arrival was without incident.

Although civil and military authorities in Buenos Aires indicated the full extent of the conspiracy was not known, Lieut. Col. Maria Villaverde, chief of the press section of the War Ministry, disclosed the army had sent new commanders to the airfields to check on a quantity of missing ammunition. He indicated that investigations were now under way to determine the responsibility of officers in charge of munitions supplies.

The arrests were made at the airdromes of Cordoba and Parana, cities which have large German populations and which were the scenes last month of roundups of suspects in an alleged Nazi plot.

Special troop detachments remained on guard at all army airdromes and at the Cordoba factory, where the army makes Curtiss-model fighter planes.

Argentina Seizes Army Airports in Fear of Uprising

SEP 25 1941

Occupation Is Completed After Arrest of Young Aviation Officers

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 24.—Regular army troops completed the occupation of all military airports in the country today after arresting a number of young aviation officers in a series of swift moves apparently inspired by fear of an uprising against the government.

Official quarters declined to comment on the sudden developments, which caused a flurry of excitement last night in the Chamber of Deputies, but some sources linked the government's action with a current congressional investigation of Nazi activities in Argentina.

Raul Damonte Taborda, chairman of the committee conducting the inquiry, said he understood that the officers arrested "included some who have been plotting with a view to putting an end to the investigation."

Subversive Move Rumored.

Damonte Taborda made this assertion shortly after news reached the capital that troops had occupied military airdromes at the inland cities of Cordoba and Parana—both of which have large German populations—and were taking over airfields elsewhere.

The news came as a climax to rumors which spread through the chamber yesterday that a subversive movement was afoot in the three provinces of Entre Rios, Cordoba and Tucuman which would call for swift military action.

As the chamber ended its session late last night, while the nation's highest military authorities conferred in the capital, Eduardo Tessaire, a Radical Deputy, caused a furor by alleging that Acting President Ramon Castillo himself had "joined in totalitarian plotting."

Castillo earlier had denied rumors of unrest in the interior and had declared that the country, as a whole, was calm.

Other Airports Taken Over.

In addition to the airports at Parana and Cordoba where only last month suspects in an alleged Nazi plot was rounded up—the army was said to have taken over El Palomar Airfield just outside Buenos Aires, El Plumerillo in Mendoza, Coronel Pringles in Villa Mercedes and the military airplane factory at Cordoba.

Among those reported arrested were Lt. Col. Edmundo Sustaita, air corps officer at Cordoba; a Lt. Krauss at Parana and a Capt. Menendez, also at Parana.

No reason for the arrests was given in either official or press versions of developments. Col. Francisco Suarez, chief secretary of the War Office, was uncommunicative when questioned after leaving the conference of military leaders here last night.

"I am not authorized to speak—therefore I cannot confirm or deny any report," he replied to inquiries concerning a possible plot against the government.

Others at Conference.

Present at the conference with Col. Suarez were Rear Admiral Mario Fincati, Navy Minister and Acting Minister of War in the absence of Gen. Juan Tonazzi, now in Chile, and Gen. Angel Zuloaga, chief of the air force.
